"The President and the Prime Minister discussed the recent developments on the African continent. They welcomed the awakening among the people of Africa and the resurgent spirit of freedom which inspires millions all over the continent. They welcomed the attainment of independence by many nations of Africa and expressed the hope that such nations as are not yet free would achieve their freedom without further delay. They also welcomed the growing sense of kinship and solidarity among the people of Asia and Africa who are facing similar problems and are determined to solve these problems in a spirit of mutual co-operation and understanding.

"The President and the Prime Minister deplored the racial discrimination and the denial of fundamental human rights which are being practised as State policies in some parts of Africa. In particular, they expressed their sense of shock and profound regret at the recent large-scale killing of innocent people in the Union of South Africa. These events have shocked the conscience of civilized people all over the world and the President and the Prime Minister expressed the hope that the weight of world opinion would be brought to bear on the authorities responsible for the adoption and execution of such policies.

"The President and the Prime Minister reiterated their view that the question of Palestine should be solved in conformity with the provisions of the UN Charter, the resolutions of United Nations and the principles unanimously adopted at the Bandung Conference of 1955 for the peaceful settlement of the Palestine question. They expressed their concern at the situation in Algeria and re-iterated their view that the right of the Algerian people to self-determination and independence should be recognized and fully implemented.

"The President and the Prime Minister discussed problems relating to the economic development of under-developed countries. They agreed that these countries are facing problems of a similar nature and that it is to their advantage to co-operate with one another in their own interests and in the interests of the world as a whole.

"The President and the Prime Minister noted with pleasure that friendship and understanding between their two countries is growing day by day. This friendship and understanding is based not only on the sharing of common objectives in their approach to world problems but also on close co-operation in the economic and cultural spheres. The President and the Prime Minister look forward to continued co-operation between their two countries in all fields and to the further strengthening of the ties of friendship and understanding as a result of the present visit of President Nasser to India."

(The Times of India, Bombay and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 1560:INI:A]

C. India's Note To UN On Maintenance Of Stable Food Prices: In response to a questionnaire sent by the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, regarding measures to deal with fluctuations in primary commodity markets, the Government of India sent a Note on April 15 to the effect that it had achieved "a fair degree of success in its measures to keep foodgrain prices stable."

The Indian reply covered, among other commodities, cotton, oil-seeds, vegetable oils, jute, sugar, vanaspati, tea, coffee, rubber, tin, lead and zinc.

It said: "The rise in (foodgrain) prices in 1957 was of a considerably smaller order than in 1956. In 1958, the rise in prices was not as sharp as was apprehended in view of the unprecedented short-fall in production. In 1959 also, the prices have tended to be lower than those in 1958."

It described the policy of State trading in foodgrains thus: "In November, 1958, the Government decided upon a policy of State trading in foodgrains. The primary objective of the State trading policy is to maintain price levels which are fair to the producer and to the consumer, and to reduce to the minimum the spread between the prices received by the farmer and the prices paid by the consumer throughout the season and over an agricultural cycle.

"The ultimate pattern of State trading in foodgrains is to consist of a system which provides for the collection of the farm surpluses through Service Co-operatives at the village level and the channelling of the surpluses through the marketing co-operatives and the apex marketing co-operatives. In the interim period, the wholesale traders are to be permitted to function as licensed traders who will make purchases on their own behalf and shall pay specified minimum prices to the farmer.

"While the Government will have the right to acquire the whole or a portion of the stocks from the licensed traders at controlled prices, the traders will be at liberty to sell their remaining stocks to retailers at prices not exceeding the controlled prices.

"In the initial stages, State trading is confined only to two major cereals—rice and wheat. In order to ensure that the producers get the minimum prices, the Government will set up an agency for making direct purchases of foodgrains from producers who are desirous of selling their surplus produce to Government.

"The imports of foodgrains from abroad are entirely handled by the Government of India and these imported foodgrains are sold by Government at prescribed prices. There is no question of any fluctuation in their prices in the internal market except to the extent the Government issue prices may be revised.

"The Government has been making efforts to build up a substantial reserve stock of foodgrains mostly out of imported quantities. This reserve would help in stabilizing prices of foodgrains in the country and would also stand in good stead in meeting emergency situations caused by any crop failure due to climatic and other natural factors.

"Cotton: The floor and ceiling prices of cotton are revised every year in the light of the supply position of cotton and prices of competing crops. The object of periodical adjustments in the floor and ceiling prices is that while minimum prices should ensure a remunerative price to the cotton growers, maximum prices should act as a deterrent to the rising trend in prices and thereby safeguard the interests of the consumers. Thus, by fixing minimum and maximum prices, the producer is protected against a fall in the price below the minimum and the consumer is protected against a rise in price above the maximum.

"Oilseeds and Vegetable Oils: At present there is no direct control of prices of oilseeds and vegetable oils. However, the Government takes suitable indirect measures from time to time to maintain the prices of oilseeds and vegetable oils at reasonable levels.

"Jute: As a result of various measures taken by the Government, including the purchases made by the State Trading Corporation and exports of raw jute, the fall in raw jute prices was checked. Direct purchases of raw jute by the State Trading Corporation ended in April, 1959. During the 1958-59 season, jute prices had witnessed a heavy slump on account of a very substantial increase in the production of jute and mesta.

"Sugar: India's production is just sufficient to meet her needs and the steps taken with a view to keeping the internal position normal have no effect on exports or imports.

"Tea: Price is governed by the conditions of supply and demand.... Scarcity values or a difficult supply position does not obtain in the London market in respect of Indian teas.

"Coffee and Rubber: The price of raw rubber is controlled. As regards coffee, whenever there is any undue increase in the prices in the internal market, the Coffee Board tries to arrest such an increase by suitable means. No steps at Government level as such are taken to regulate coffee prices.

"Tin, Lead and Zinc: There is no indigenous production of tin and zinc; production of lead in the country is meagre in relation to demand. India has signified its willingness to participate in the proposed international study group for lead and zinc."

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2611:INI:B, 2613:INI:G, 3078:INI:G]

D. US Development Loan Fund's Two Loans: On April 20, the United States announced two loans to India totalling $18,400,000.

The loans made by DLF are for a large hydro-electric power project in Mysore State and to the Industrial Finance Corporation of India for re-lending to private firms in India.

The hydro-electric project, for which $8,400,000 has been allotted, is to be located in the Sharavathi river, about 235 miles north-west of Bangalore. The total cost of the project is estimated at $76,900,000. Purchases under this project loan would be world-wide.

The other loan of $10,000,000 carries a proviso that the funds are to be spent in the United States in all cases when loans from these funds are bigger than $100,000.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3143:INI:I]

E. World Bank Mission Report: The report of the International Economic Mission, sponsored by the World Bank President, Mr. Eugene Black, on development problems in India and Pakistan was released on April 19.

The Mission consisted of Sir Oliver Franks (Britain), Mr. Herman Abs (West Germany) and Mr. Allan Sproul (USA). They visited India and Pakistan in March, 1960.

According to their report, foreign aid on a considerable scale would have to be provided to India for her development programme. It estimated that India would need about Rs. 3,200 crores as external assistance to implement her Third Five-Year Plan.

The decision about how much aid should be provided was left to individual Governments to determine. But the following general propositions were advanced for consideration:

"(1) The Marshall Plan concept—embodying a fixed period of foreign assistance and designed to reach visible targets of economic recovery—is not applicable.

"(2) A substantial proportion of any aid provided should take the form of grants or loans not made strictly on commercial terms on a Government-to-Government basis.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"(3) Since a number of Governments will participate in providing assistance it will be important to ensure that the policies of the donor-Governments will respect to the scale, form and terms of aid provided should be adequately co-ordinated in order to avoid waste and friction.

"(4) Multilateral aid which is not tied to exports from a particular country provides the best way of getting the greatest benefit from a given volume of aid.

"(5) There will be need for discussions between the donor-and recipient-Governments, especially as the former must satisfy their Legislatures that the aid is well spent.

"(6) In the event of crop failures, additional foreign assistance would be necessary if economic progress is not to be completely checked.

"(7) The role of private foreign investment should not be underestimated although its immediate impact is not likely to be large. India and Pakistan should create conditions which will attract private foreign capital. At a later stage of development it should be possible to substitute the ordinary flow of private investment for the more exceptional forms of aid.

"(8) The industrial nations can assist the developing countries by removing the kind of barriers which restrict the export opportunities of the latter.

"(9) There is need for policies which would promote further economic co-operation between India and Pakistan. It should be possible to foster complementary trade and "reduce the danger of economic separatism," India and Pakistan should follow the trend towards international economic co-operation.

"(10) Since no foreign Government can give any advance assurance of the quantum of aid it can offer, it is necessary to establish flexibility in the Indian and Pakistan plans so that cut-backs in expenditure of lower priority can be made without disrupting the whole plans."

The Mission had a number of general comments to offer specifically on India's Third Plan. The main points of them were:

(a) Agriculture must get first priority together with fertilizer production. Additional investments should be diverted to agriculture if necessary. The unpredictable effect of changing Monsoon conditions upon a predominantly agricultural economy introduces into the Plan an element of chance which should be realistically assessed both by the Government of India and by the donor-Governments.

(b) The industrial programme contemplated was all right. But great care needed to be given to its phasing. The desirability of achieving the most efficient utilization of steel capacity required to be looked at when deciding upon the desirability of expanding capacity further. Again, coking coal output needed to keep pace with the steel and fertilizer programme. Efforts should be made to see that coal did not become a bottle-neck.

(c) The agricultural and industrial plans would impose heavy demands on technical and managerial skill. This was especially true of agriculture where extension activity should be selective rather than dispersed over the entire front.

(d) Both the public and the private sectors had a contribution to make.

(e) While much progress had been made in import-saving activities it was imperative to create a "state of export-mindedness." Top priority must be given to the investment of effort, money and talent in the export field where the development of markets took a considerable time. On the other hand, India's exports had tended to stagnate in recent years and the Mission reported that it had found no firm basis for confidence that export performance would materially improve in the near future. Export promotion would depend on securing an appropriate degree of control over domestic consumption through selective tax measures.

(f) Monetary policy should be used to a greater extent in restraining any build-up of inflationary pressures. The Mission suggested that there was scope for mopping up excess liquidity in the economic system and recommended consideration of the appropriateness of the present level of interest rates.

(g) In finalizing the Third Plan, it would be desirable to re-examine the importance of marginal projects. A manageable Plan was better than a big Plan.

(h) The Plan should in any case be flexible and capable of adjustment.

(i) The Plan would call for increased sacrifices in the form of taxation and savings. This presented a challenge to the political possibilities and the administrative efficiency of the Government. The Mission was, however, impressed by the calibre of the senior officials and prominent businessmen.

(j) The Mission noted the pressure of population growth on the economic scene.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 2613:INI:F, 2681:AOA:G, 3147:PAK:A]

IRAQ

A. Baghdad To Have The Most Powerful Radio Centre In West Asia: It was made known in Moscow on March 24 that the construction of a 400 kw radio centre, the most powerful in West Asia, would begin shortly in Baghdad.

The project, worked out by Soviet specialists, has been approved by the Government of Iraq.

The radio centre will have five home and foreign programmes. It will be built in two years on the banks of the Tigris under the technical supervision of Soviet engineers.

All the equipment for it will be supplied by the Soviet Union.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 2524:IRQ:B]

JAPAN

A. Agreement With South Korea On Fishermen Prisoners: An Agreement was reached between the representatives of Japan and South Korea in Tokyo on March 18 on the release of all fishermen detained by each other.

The Korean seizure of Japanese vessels for violations of the so-called Rhee Fishing Line, the sentences imposed on their crews and their continued detention after they had served their sentences had caused indignation in Tokyo and led to strong pressure being put on the Government to take a tough stand in the talks with South Korea which continued for seven months.

The Agreement was only partially satisfactory to the Japanese. Only 167 of 214 fishermen detained at Pusan would be repatriated immediately. The Koreans agreed in principle to return the others, who had not completed their sentences, later. Concurrently, Japan would return about 1,000 illegal entrants detained at Omura Camp in Kyushu.

It was reported that some of the 1,208 Koreans detained wished to be repatriated to North Korea, which might lead to complications.

Observers said that the strong condemnation by the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, of the Korean seizure of Japanese ships on the high seas was a factor that influenced the South Korean Government to agree to a settlement.

The Agreement was followed by the normalization of trade relations between the two countries. This was confirmed by an official communique issued in Seoul on March 30.

South Korea broke off trade relations with Japan in June, 1959 as a protest against the repatriation of Koreans from Japan to North Korea.

(The New York Times and The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2736:KRS:A]

B. IPI Conference: The ninth General Assembly of the International Press Institute (IPI) met in Tokyo from March 24 to 26 with an inaugural address by the Prime Minister, Mr. Nobusuke Kishi.

One hundred and sixty newspaper publishers, editors and journalists from 24 countries participated.

Mr. Kishi said: "Without peace and prosperity in Asia, which possesses more than half the world's population, we cannot expect world peace and prosperity."

He said that one of the important problems faced by Asia today was economic development and the improvement of living standards. The gap in economic development between the advanced industrial nations and the under-developed countries must be eliminated and true peace and prosperity should be achieved.

The Chairman of the IPI Executive Board, Mr. Urs Schwarz, in his speech, expressed the hope that the "dignified but forceful" voice of the IPI Conference in Japan would bring a change for the better in the attitude of the Indonesian and Turkish Governments, which, he indicated, were restricting the freedom of the Press.

Director's Report:

The IPI Director, Mr. E. J. B. Rose, also criticised Turkey for imprisoning journalists and for her Press policy.

He said: "After the wave of imprisonments culminating in the rejection of Mr. Ahmed Emim Yalman's (one of the founders of IPI) appeal, we decided that it was useless once again to protest to the Turkish Government. So we took the unusual step of appealing to the Press of the world and particularly to our members to protest individually on behalf of their Turkish colleagues.

"The result surprised and alarmed the Turkish Government. In almost every country where we have members, leading newspapers reproduced our appeal and wrote strong editorials critical of the Turkish Government's Press policy. The Turkish Minister of Justice took some time to think up a very weak story in denial and an apology has been issued from the Turkish embassies all over the world.

"But, meanwhile, Mr. Yalman has gone to prison at great danger to his health and he finds there 12 other Turkish editors who preferred imprisonment to submission. Mr. Adnan Menderes' Government is doing a grave disservice to Turkey's reputation and it may be that this Assembly will tell him so in no uncertain terms."

Commenting on threats to the Press in other areas, Mr. Rose said that Mr. Armand Gaspard had been sent as an Observer to Singapore in response to an appeal from the Editor of The Straits Times to investigate a threat to the Press of Singapore.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He said: "We have since appointed two correspondents as permanent Observers who report to us on any threat to Press freedom in the whole of South-East Asia.

"Later in the year (1959) we protested to the Governments of Ceylon and South Africa —in Ceylon, because of the black-out on news and comments following the murder of Mr. S. W. R. D. Bandaranaike, which was successful.

"In South Africa, we had no success, at any rate in the short-run. We protested against restrictions placed on an Editor which made it virtually impossible for him to function as an Editor and we protested against the expulsion from South Africa of a television correspondent.

"We particularly protested that both men were proceeded against by administrative fiat and in both cases we asked that they be given the protection of the courts—but in vain."

Commenting on the problems of an indigenous Press in Africa, he said: "In East Africa, we have been advising a new group of newspapers (publishing weeklies and dailies in Swahali and English in Kenya-Uganda and Tanganyika).

"These newspapers are at present run by Europeans but it is the intention of the owners gradually to transfer their editing and management to Africans. The IPI will be asked to help at a later stage in securing training for African journalists.

"In West Africa, discussions have been taking place on the possibilities for setting up an indigenous Press in the newly independent countries that were formerly French or British colonies. We have been helping in the preparation of an important conference which will be held in Dakar in May. During the year, Editors have joined the Institute for the first time from Ghana, Kenya and Northern Rhodesia."

U Nu's Speech:

The Premier-elect of Burma, U Nu, was the guest speaker at the afternoon session on March 24.

Speaking on "Democracy in the East," he emphasized that totalitarian control never served the cause of human dignity and freedom. The human race had learnt from bitter experience that totalitarianism, once imposed on a society, no matter for what reason, would refuse to give up its hold.

He added: "The lessons to be derived from the entire course of human history were: (1) there is no substitute for democracy as a system for regulating human affairs, if we wish to preserve human dignity and freedom; and (2) the fallacy of the concept that a period of totalitarian control is, in certain circumstances, necessary to create conditions for democracy to work."

Decisions:

Mr. Rose later outlined a plan for the establishment of an Asian Newspaper Centre. It would be set up with the help of Rockefeller Foundation (USA) and Asia Foundation (USA) as also of members and publishers.

He announced the decision of the Executive Board of IPI dissolving the Indonesian National Committee (on the ground that it had ceased to operate), postponing the creation of a South Korean Committee and rejecting an application from three Formosan newspapers for individual membership.

The General Assembly later split into sectional meetings. In the discussion that followed, there was sharp disagreement on the decisions on Korea and Formosa. The three Formosan journalists whose applications were rejected issued a statement that the Press in the Kuomintang-held island was free.

Before the Assembly concluded on March 26, it was announced that all the five members of the Executive Board whose terms had expired were re-elected. Mr. Donald Tyerman of The Economist, London, was chosen as the next Chairman in succession to Mr. Urs Schwarz.

It shelved the question of admitting television and radio members for three years.

It passed a resolution criticising the United Nations proposed draft Convention on the freedom of the Press as establishing restrictions in countries where Press freedom existed under the guise of extending it to countries where it was non-existent.

It was further decided to send a six-man ad hoc Committee to South Korea to investigate Press conditions there and an IPI Secretariat member to Formosa for the same purpose.

(The Hindu, Madras and The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2753:AOA:B]

C. Import Budget: The Government announced on March 31 that during the next six months (April-October, 1960) it would provide for an import budget of $3,268 million.

This was the largest import budget ever for Japan.

In the last six months of the 1959 financial year, the import budget amounted to $2,328 million.

The new budget provided for the import of goods worth $2,624 million and included $644 million for invisible import trade.

The rate of liberalization in the budget for imports of goods, excluding a reserve fund of $2,000 million was 40 per cent as compared with 31 per cent previously. This resulted from the addition of scrap steel, coffee beans and about 300 items to the list of goods which could be imported without prior allocation of foreign exchange, while about 250 items were added to the list of goods for which foreign exchange would be allocated automatically within certain limits.

A Government spokesman said that the Government had decided to provide for liberal imports of goods on the assumption that Japan's industrial production in the coming six months would increase at an annual rate of 11.8 per cent.

He added that Japan's balance of international payments for the next six months was expected to yield a surplus of $205 million.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2632:JAP:A]

JORDAN

A. Budget For 1960-61: The draft Budget for the financial year 1960-61 which began on April 1 was approved by the Cabinet late in the month of March.

Revenue was estimated at JD (Jordan Dinars) 35,224,000, including JD23,000,000 in foreign aid. Expenditure was estimated at JD34,000,000.

The largest item on the expenditure side was defence—of JD18,500,000. (One Dinar=£1)

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2610:JOR:A]

B. "Plot" To Assassinate Mr. H. Majali: Security authorities in Amman announced on March 27 that a plot to assassinate the Prime Minister, Mr. Haztaa Majali, and other officials during prayers on that day ending the Ramzan fast was foiled with the arrest of two "dangerous terrorists" who had confessed.

The Council of Ministers held an emergency meeting to discuss the new conspiracy against the regime. The police were investigating.

According to Security authorities, the two arrested men said that they had been encouraged by the former Deputy Foreign Minister, Mr. Abdullah Rimawi, and the ex-Chief of the General Staff, General Ali Nuwar, both of whom fled to Syria in 1957.

They were sentenced in absentia by a military court for attempting a coup d'etat against the Jordan regime.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3195:JOR:A]

MALAYA

A. Death of Tunku Abdul Rehman: Death occurred in Kuala Lumpur on April 1 of the Yang di Pertuan Agong (Paramount Ruler), Tunku Abdul Rehman. He was 65.

His full name was Tunku Abdul Rahmanibni Al-Marhum Tuanku Muhammad.

The shortened form of his name, Tunku Abdul Rehman, was almost the same as that of the Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rahman, but the two men were not related.

Tunku Abdul Rehman assumed office on September 2, 1957, just after Independence was achieved, and was half-way through his five-year term as the elected monarch when he died.

He was elected by the country's nine hereditary ruling Sultans, of whom he was one.

He was for 24 years head chieftain of Negri Sembilan State.

Born on August 24, 1895, he was educated in Malaya and, as a young man, had army and civil service experience. In 1925, he went to London, where he was called to the Bar three years later.

He was a devout Moslem and an authority on Islam.

On April 4, the Deputy Paramount Ruler, the Sultan of Selangor, was sworn-in as the acting Head of State at a brief ceremony in Kuala Lumpur.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 1577:MAL:A]

NEPAL

SUMMARY: King's Address To Parliament; Chinese Claim To Everest; Nepali Currency Enforced.

A. King's Address To Parliament: In his speech from the Throne delivered to both Houses of Parliament in Khatmandu on March 31, King Mahendra thanked Nepal's two neighbours—India and China—for increasing the quantum of their economic assistance and expressed the hope that the enhanced aid would speed up the development of Nepal.

The King surveyed his Government's achievements and policies so far but made no reference to the recently-concluded Sino-Nepalese Border Agreement.

However, he referred to the visit of the Nepalese Parliamentary delegation to India, the Nepalese Prime Minister's visits to China and India and the visit of the Nepalese Deputy Prime Minister (Gen. Subarna Sham-sher) to some South-East Asian countries and said that these had strengthened Nepal's friendship with those countries.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Referring to his own forthcoming State visit to Japan and USA, he said that it would strengthen Nepal's friendship with these countries.

The Government's policy of neutrality in foreign affairs was re-iterated by the King, who also condemned racial discrimination without specifically mentioning South African incidents.

A major part of the Address was devoted to the Government's achievements at home.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2822:NEP:A]

B. China's Territorial Claims On Nepal—Everest Among Them: The Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, told newsmen in Khatmandu on April 4 that China had claimed that Mount Everest belonged to her, but that Nepal had refused to entertain the claim.

He added that there had been some minor border disputes, but the claim on Everest was a new one and was made during his recent visit to Peking. Since Mr. Koirala had summarily rejected it, there was no discussion on it at that time. The extent of the claim is not known.

Mr. Koirala said that the Chinese claim might be discussed during Mr. Chou En-lai's visit to Khatmandu beginning on April 26.

He hoped that this claim as also other border disputes would be amicably settled through the machinery devised by the two Premiers in their recent Border Agreement (page 3265) for the delineation of the 500-mile-long border.

He said: "The Chinese said that Everest is a British name, and that there is no word for it in Nepalese though the Tibetan name, Chomolungma, has existed since long. I said the Nepalese name for it was Sagarmatha. The Chinese thought it was of recent origin."

He said that he regarded his visit to Peking as "fully successful."

He thought that the chances of a settlement of the Sino-Indian border dispute had brightened mainly because of "the impact of international opinion in the last few months." He had not discussed the Sino-Indian border dispute with anyone in China.

Discussions on the proposed Treaty of Peace and Friendship with China would be continued during Mr. Chou En-lai's visit on April 26.

Asked about his attitude to a Non-aggression Pact with China, he said, he was not hostile to any measure calculated to ensure peace and friendship, but he thought that such a Pact in itself was no guarantee of security. "I do not envisage any threat to Nepal from China but if Nepal is ever threatened from any quarter, what will save her is the fact that she will not be alone—rather than any Non-aggression Pact." In recent history, Non-aggression Pacts had been freely trampled upon.

In reply to another question, he derided any suggestion that his visit to China could have created any gulf between Nepal and India.

Referring to a Non-aggression Pact, he said that any aggression against Nepal would touch off a world war and in the event of aggression from China, Nepal would not be alone. In the present-day world, no nation, big or small, "can easily commit aggression." If it did, "the world mechanism" would be set in motion just as it did when Britain took military action against Egypt in 1956.

Everest, named after Sir George Everest, a former Surveyor-General of India, lies in the Himalayan range separating Nepal and Tibet. It was first conquered by Tenzing Norkay and Sir Edmund Hillary in 1953. An Indian expedition, led by Brig. Gyan Singh, is now trying to scale it.

Mr. Koirala told Mr. Chou En-lai during the talks that when Nepal had begun to grant permission to foreign expeditions to Everest from 1949 Peking had not protested nor had China voiced or indicated any disapproval of it. Moreover, he was reported to have said, Nepalese schools taught children that Sagarmatha (Everest) was their mountain.

He said that the Agreement with China to demilitarize 20 kilometres on either side of the frontier was a definite gain to Nepal.

A correspondent asked if it was really "wise" to contract this Agreement in view of the several administrative requirements like emergencies, and he replied that although no written provisions were there, in the event of internal emergencies Nepal could send armed personnel to border areas. The Agreement applied to normal conditions.

The Border Demilitarization Agreement had been entered into with China with the object of avoiding any panic in the area. Nepal could exercise her jurisdiction even in the face of this Agreement. Moreover, he did not fear any internal emergency in the frontier area.

About the Boundary Commission proposed under the Agreement, he said that its agreed decisions would be final. There would be a one-man Commission which, in its turn, would set up several committees entrusted with specific jobs.

Asked if he was prepared to publish the Nepalese frontier maps which he presented to the Chinese Prime Minister, he said it would not be in the public interest to do so.

Mr. Koirala declared that Nepal had no border dispute whatsoever with India and there was no case of any violation of Nepal's southern border.

Construction work in connexion with the Indian survey in Jalkundi in West Nepal Terai were fully authorized and, if any former Prime Minister (of Nepal) cast doubt on this matter, he was being deliberately unfair.

Mr. Koirala would not discuss in detail the differences of opinion on Everest with China, but authoritative sources said that Mr. Koirala was "taken aback" when the claim was advanced by Mr. Chou En-lai in the course of the talks in Peking.

The discussions then, these sources said, remained inconclusive and the two Prime Ministers agreed to take up the question of Everest later.

These sources thought that Everest would be "the height of accord or discord" between Nepal and China. Both the Prime Ministers were reported to have emphasized the "national value" they attached to the peak.

He could not say whether the Chinese claim related to the whole of the Everest range. He, however, added that Gauri Shanker, which also stands on the Nepal-Tibet frontier, had not been claimed.

According to usually reliable sources, one of the grounds for the Chinese claim is that pre-war British expeditions to Everest obtained permission from the authorities at Lhasa and blessings from the Dalai Lama. School primers in China also taught that Chomolungma belonged to China.

These sources, however, explained that as regards the pre-war British expeditions, the Nepalese Government, at that time, would not allow them to go through Nepal to the southern slopes of Everest. Expeditions had, therefore, to go through Tibet to reach Everest. The Nepal-Tibet boundary had been considered to pass through the summit of Everest.

United Democratic Front Charge:

The United Democratic Front, an Opposition alliance composed of the factions of the two former Prime Ministers, Dr. K. I. Singh and Mr. Tanka Prasad Acharya, and the Praja Tantrik Mahasabha of Mr. Ranganath Sharma, issued a statement in Khatmandu on April 1 charging that Nepal had not been able to act in an independent manner in her relations with China.

In a statement, Mr. Ranganath Sharma, Chairman of the Front, said that this was evident from the fact that a Sino-Nepalese Peace Treaty was not signed in Peking during Mr. B. P. Koirala's recent visit to Peking "even thought it was proposed by the Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai." The joint communique issued at the end of Sino-Nepalese talks in Peking had said that such a Treaty would be discussed and signed in Khatmandu during the Chinese Prime Minister's forthcoming visit to Nepal.

The Front, he added, welcomed the Koirala-Chou joint communique, but it had serious doubts about the success of the Border and Economic Agreements as it was of the view that these Agreements were dependent on the Peace Treaty.

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi and Hsinhua News)

[Prev. ref. 3265:NEP:A]

C. Nepali Currency Enforced: The Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, announced in the Pratinidhi Sabha (House of Representatives) in Khatmandu on April 12 that from the next day (April 13—Nepal's New Year Day) the Nepali currency would be enforced throughout the country and the Nepali rupee would be used for all official transactions.

This new measure, he said, was a big step towards currency reforms in the country.

The conversion rate from April 13 would be 160 Nepali rupees for 100 Indian rupees. (The present rate is 150 Nepali rupees for 100 Indian rupees.)

The Nepali rupee would also be freely convertible into Indian rupees.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

D. Mr. B. P. Koirala Re-elected Nepali Congress President: The Nepalese Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, was re-elected President of the Nepali Congress on April 4.

He secured 5,973 votes against his only opponent, Mr. Bhudeo Rai's 865 votes.

Mr. Bhudeo Rai represented that wing in the Nepali Congress which thought that the offices of the Prime Minister and President of the Nepali Congress should not be held by one person.

However, the victory of Mr. Koirala was regarded as more an indication of his hold on the party than defeat of the idea represented by his rival, Mr. Bhudeo Rai.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2690:NEP:A]

E. Aircraft Landing At 16,000 Feet High: A Swiss Air Force pilot, Mr. Ernst Sazer, and his co-pilot, Mr. Emil Wick, claimed a world record

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

for landing their single-engined Pilatus Porter aircraft at a height of 16,000 feet on April 5. They said that the previous best height was about 13,000 feet on the Alps, about five years ago.

Mr. Saxer, a member of the Swiss Dhaulagiri expedition, flew into Khatmandu on April 5 to collect mail and take fuel. He told newsmen that the landing on snow was free of incidents but "as a precaution, I used my oxygen mask and put it on while landing after making two dry runs."

He added that he had landed north of Dhaulagiri on a snowfield which was about 200 yards long. It was sufficient to take his plane, nicknamed Himalayan Yeti.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2715:NEP:F]

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: National Day Celebrations; Financial Talks With India; Credit Restrictions.

A. National Day Celebrations: Pakistan celebrated her National Day on March 23. Ceremonial parades were held at different places. At the Inter-Service parade in Karachi, the President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, took the salute.

Speaking on the occasion, F-M Ayub Khan said that Pakistan's armed forces could today be compared with the best in the world.

He spoke of the part the Army had played during the last 1½ years in helping the Administration to carry out its reforms. It had also laid a strong foundation on which the country could build its future.

Honours List:

According to a Gazette notification, the President approved a number of Pakistan Day awards.

The following were some of the persons honoured:

Hilal-I-Quaid-I-Azam: Mr. G. Ahmed, Chairman, Planning Commission; Khwaja Shahabuddin, Ambassador of Pakistan to UAR; Mr. Altaf Hussain, Editor, Dawn, Karachi; Mrs. S. M. Sharif, Secretary, Ministry of Education and ex officio Educational Adviser, Government of Pakistan.

The following, among other decorations, were also awarded: Hilal-I-Khidmat, Sitara-I-Pakistan, Sitara-I-Imtiaz, Sitara-I-Quaid-I-Azam, Sitara-I-Khidmat, Thamgha-I-Shujat and Thamgha-I-Pakistan.

President's Message To People:

Addressing the people of Pakistan over the radio on March 23, F-M Ayub Khan said that Pakistan's relations with India were improving and both countries had mutually resolved a few problems which had looked intractable in the past.

But, he added: "There is no real trust between India and Pakistan yet, and that can only be brought about if there is a satisfactory solution of the Kashmir dispute."

He said that the Kashmir issue had assumed still greater importance for Pakistan now that the water resources in West Pakistan had been appreciably reduced. It would be the Government's constant endeavour to attain a satisfactory solution of this problem.

Turning to internal problems, he said that the task of setting up suitable political, social, economic, educational and moral standards in the country was so tremendous and beyond the country's foreseeable resources that "we have to rely on and have the right to expect assistance from friendly countries."

Advanced nations had a duty and a moral obligation towards Pakistan "only if we inspire confidence by our conduct as a nation".

He then referred to Afghanistan and said that looking from a rational angle, Pakistan's relations with Afghanistan were easy to improve, yet they had become very intractable "because of our inability to get the authorities in Afghanistan to view these problems wisely and in terms of realism."

Despite these set-backs, he said, Pakistan would not stop trying to improve her relations with others. For some time past, the rulers of Afghanistan were making claims which amounted to either asking for a portion of Pakistan or having the right of interference in the internal affairs of Pakistan. This could not be tolerated under any circumstances.

This totally unjustifiable claim had now been loudly backed by the Russian leaders; but to Pakistan, its object was very clear. It was, first of all, to aggravate the problems in this part of the world, and secondly, to pave the way for the age-old attempt of the north to dominate the Indo-Pakistan subcontinent and the surrounding areas.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2618:PAK:A]

B. Indo-Pakistan Financial Talks —No Agreement: The Indian Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, arrived in Karachi on March 21 on his way to Rawalpindi for talks with the Pakistan Finance Minister, Mr. M. Shoaib, on certain outstanding financial issues between India and Pakistan arising out of Partition.

After attending the Pakistan National Day celebrations in Karachi on March 23, Mr. Desai proceeded to Rawalpindi.

Mr. Desai had talks with the President, F-M Ayub Khan, at a dinner on March 23. Only three other invitees were present. They were the Pakistan Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, the Finance Minister, Mr. Mohammed Shoaib, and the Commerce Minister, Mr. Hafizur Rehman.

No details of the talks were available, but according to informed sources, F-M Ayub Khan and Mr. Desai discussed a variety of subjects including closer economic relations between the two countries.

Before emplaning for Rawalpindi on March 24, Mr. Desai told newsmen in Karachi that he did not agree with the statement of F-M Ayub Khan that there could be no real trust between India and Pakistan so long as the Kashmir question was not satisfactorily solved.

He said: "Why should not there be trust and friendship even if we have some differences in some fields? No nation can have agreement on all matters. There is bound to be some divergences. Friendly atmosphere can prevail between our two countries even if there are some differences. Anyway, we do not feel the way the Pakistan President feels."

Answering questions, he said that he discussed with F-M Ayub Khan several questions relating to Indo-Pakistan relations and international problems on the night of March 23.

During a brief halt in Lahore on his way to Rawalpindi on March 24, Mr. Desai told newsmen that he was gratified to find a desire among Pakistanis for friendly ties with India.

He referred to the amicable solution of the border and Canal Waters disputes and said that if these disputes could be solved through discussions "we could also solve other major disputes in the same manner".

Mr. Desai arrived in Rawalpindi from Karachi on March 24. With him was the Finance Minister of Pakistan, Mr. M. Shoaib. Talks on outstanding financial issues began later in the day (March 24).

Officials of the two countries met earlier to pave the way for the Finance Ministers' talks.

According to Radio Pakistan, the officials had prepared two lists—one of agreed items and the other of those on which agreement had not been reached so far.

The Ministers were expected to take up the agreed list first.

No Agreement Reached:

It was announced on March 27 that India and Pakistan had failed to reach agreement.

A brief communique issued at the conclusion of the four-day talks said: "Some of the points which were outstanding were resolved, but a few points still remain before an overall settlement can be reached".

It added that the two Finance Ministers hoped to meet again in the near future to consider the matter further.

Mr. Desai told newsmen: "It is disappointing that we have not been able to come to an agreement."

Mr. Shoaib said: "I can only endorse the statement of Mr. Desai."

He, however, added that agreement had been reached "on a large number of items" and disagreement was only on a few items.

Important on the list of unagreed items were the value of defence capital works and the value of Income-tax at the time of the Partition.

The two Ministers were also understood to have failed to reach agreement on the mode of payment of the debts by either country to the other.

On March 26, Mr. Morarji Desai met Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan at the Government House in Peshawar.

Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan had come to Peshawar from his village of Utmanzai, 20 miles away, to meet Mr. Desai.

Mr. Desai, accompanied by Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan, later drove to Utmanzai to pay homage at the grave of Dr. Khan Saheb, brother of Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan.

(The Hindu Madras and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3121:INI:E]

C. Credit Restrictions: The State Bank of Pakistan decided on March 24 to take a number of selective credit control measures with a view to checking inflationary tendencies in the economy and curbing excessive credit expansion in certain sectors.

A Press Note said: "These measures are generally intended to safeguard against the risk of hoarding and cornering of stocks and thereby afford relief to the consumer.

"In this regard, it has been decided to restrict bank advances against imported manufactured goods comprising industrial machinery, iron and steel and advances against local or imported cotton yarn to the extent of 60 per cent of the value of such goods.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"However, cotton yarn intended for export will be exempted from the purview of this restriction."

The State Bank also directed the banks that they should restrict unsecured advances secured by guarantees to a maximum amount of Rs. 50,000 to any one party.

The banks were asked to adjust the existing advances in those categories to specified levels by June 30, 1960.

At the same time, the banks were cautioned that the Agreement in regard to advances against shares that was arrived at in January, 1960 should be strictly followed and that the limits allowed to brokers should not be increased.

This Agreement stipulated that advances against shares of newly-floated companies would be made by the Bank if 50 per cent cash was provided by the intending subscribers from their own resources and advances against shares of the already-established companies would be limited to not more than 60 per cent of the market value of the shares.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3208:PAK:C]

D. Khulna Newsprint Mill Goes Into Full Production: A Karachi message on March 27 said that the Khulna newsprint mill (in East Pakistan) had attained its full production. The mill began production eight months previously.

About 100 tons of newsprint was being produced every day by the plant. Samples of the newsprint produced at the mill were sent to the United States for analysis and a good report was received.

Foreign markets were being explored for the Khulna newsprint. The first consignment of 100 tons had been exported to Malaya, while another consignment of equal quantity would shortly be exported to Ceylon.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2879:PAK:B]

E. West Pakistan Government Servants' Relief Fund Ordinance: The West Pakistan Governor, Mr. Akhtar Hussain, promulgated an Ordinance on March 25 constituting a Benevolent Fund for the relief of Government servants in West Pakistan.

The constitution of this Fund is primarily aimed at providing financial assistance to Government servants, both gazetted and non-gazetted, and their families.

The Fund is proposed to be utilized for giving financial assistance to families of deceased Government servants and to those persons who may be invalidated out of service. Special grants will also be made to such Government servants who may be in distress.

The Government will subscribe an initial sum of Rs. 10,00,000 to that part of the Fund which deals with the non-gazetted Government servants. Two subsequent annual grants of Rs. 5,00,000 each will be added to it later.

Government servants will make a compulsory contribution to this Fund which will be deducted from their salaries. Gazetted officers will be required to contribute one per cent of their pay subject to a minimum of Rs. 2-8 per month and a maximum of Rs. 20 per month. Non-gazetted Government servants will pay a monthly contribution of as. 4 if their salary is below Rs. 50; as. 8 if their pay ranges between Rs. 50 and Rs. 99; Re. 1 if they are paid between Rs. 100 and Rs. 199; Rs. 2 if their salary is between Rs. 200 and Rs. 299; Rs. 3 if they are paid Rs. 300 to Rs. 399; Rs. 4 if paid between Rs. 400 and 499; and Rs. 5 if their pay is Rs. 500 or above.

Calculated on this basis, the monthly contributions in case of gazetted officers will come to nearly Rs. 30,000 and in case of non-gazetted staff to about Rs. 55,000.

The benefits admissible under this Fund will be in addition to the pensions, family pensions or gratuities awarded under the rules already governing the service conditions of Government servants.

With the introduction of the new Fund, the existing two Funds will not be retained. The money in balance will be credited to Provincial revenues on the abolition of these funds.

Donations to the Funds will also be accepted and income derived from investments made from the Fund will also be added to the contributions of the Fund.

The family of a Government servant, as defined in the context of this Ordinance, include parents, sisters and minor brothers, if residing with and wholly dependent upon him or her.

(Dawn, Karachi)

SINGAPORE

A. Japanese Investment: The Government announced on March 29 that two Japanese oil companies would establish an oil refinery in Singapore to be operated by a company set up locally with Japanese capital.

The companies concerned were the Maruzen Oil Company and Toyo Manks Kaisha.

The refinery will employ about 300 persons not counting those in sales and distribution services and will have an initial capacity of 20,000 barrels daily. The construction will begin on June 1, 1960. The intention is to have the refinery completed and in operation by November 1, 1961.

The Government has agreed to allow free duty on the import of crude oil and materials essential for the initial construction and for the operation of the refinery as well as benefits of the pioneer industry legislation, under which the company will be exempted from income-tax for five years.

Steel-rolling Mill Company Formed:

Two days after the deal with the oil companies was announced (March 31), the Government made public the formation of a limited company to establish a steel-rolling mill.

The company, with a capital of $5,000,000 (Malayan)—about £583,000—will be financed by Japanese and Singapore business interests.

The rolling mill will use local scrap, obtained principally from ship-breaking, in which the new company will also engage. It will give work to between 300 and 500 men, and the Government is preparing to find the land for both the steel mill and the ship-breaking yard.

The Government is faced with an almost desperate need for small industries to create employment. It has been talking of starting a steel mill, and there was talk of getting iron-ore from Indonesia for it. This has not materialized so far, and although substantial and growing quantities of iron-ore are being shipped to Japan from the east coast of Malaya, there is no mention of any of it coming to Singapore.

Lacking iron-ore, Singapore seems to have hit on a plan for making two industries with one blow on the anvil. She is starting a steel mill with scrap, and at the same time establishing a ship-breaking industry to supply the scrap. The new enterprise is small both in its capital and in the employment it will offer, but it will be a useful pilot project.

A larger steel mill might follow, after a survey has been made by United Nations technicians.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2632:JAP:B]

THAILAND

A. ECAFE Session: The UN Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East held its 16th annual session in Bangkok from March 9 to 21. About 200 delegates representing 24 nations attended.

The Prime Minister of Thailand, Field-Marshal Sarit Thanarat, inaugurated the session and expressed the hope that the ECAFE discussions would result in closer economic co-operation and understanding among the countries concerned.

He urged the nations of the ECAFE region to make "intra-regional co-operation the over-riding theme of all their future development efforts."

The Thai Foreign Minister, Mr. Thanat Khoman, was elected Chairman. Mr. Nityanand Kanungo (India) and Dr. P. F. Laguio (Philippines) were elected First Vice-Chairman and Second Vice-Chairman respectively. Singapore and Brunei were admitted as associate-members of ECAFE.

The Executive Secretary of ECAFE, U Nyun, said that while the industrialized countries had made substantial gains in their per capita incomes, Asian countries had remained practically on the same spot.

In spite of all efforts, he said, work for economic advancement was often nullified by the rapid growth of population and deteriorating terms of trade. More trade and more aid for long-term planning were essential for the countries of the region at this crucial stage of development.

He urged a regional approach to development projects.

The UN Under-Secretary for Economic and Social Affairs, Mr. Philippe de Seynes, suggested greater attention by Asian countries for producing more manufactured goods.

He expressed the hope that the industrial countries would abandon restrictive customs practices and "work out adjustments to a fresh development of international competition."

National Economic Problems:

Before the session split into Sectional meetings to discuss the reports of special ECAFE working parties and committees, the delegates explained their national economic problems and the issues facing the region.

An interesting proposal for the formation of an economic bloc of South-East Asian countries was made by Dr. P. F. Laguio (Philippines).

The new bloc would initially embrace Thailand, Malaya, South Viet-Nam and the Philippines.

The objectives of the bloc, according to him, would be to strengthen the economies of the member-countries and to provide a

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

machinery for counter-acting more effectively any harmful effects that economic measures taken by other countries might produce on the countries of the bloc.

The initial reaction to it among the countries concerned was said to be favourable.

In his speech, Mr. Nityanand Kanungo (India) criticized the annual report of ECAFE on the ground that adequate data had not been collected and included in it.

Almost all Asian delegates emphasized the need of finding stable markets for primary commodities. Population was another subject over which they were much exercised.

Hope was also expressed that the European Economic Community would not take any action in the field of external tariffs which might hamper or retard the exports of the ECAFE region.

Offers of continued aid to the countries of the region were made by USA, UK and USSR.

The session was apprised of the prospects held out by the Mekong Project which would benefit South Viet-Nam, Cambodia, Laos and Thailand, all of which bordered the strategically unexploited Mekong river.

Resolutions:

The session later adopted several resolutions on problems facing the region.

It emphasized the need for action through intra-regional co-operation and requested the Executive Secretary of ECAFE and the member-countries to investigate specific projects of a regional character.

It requested the member-countries also to initiate measures to study the possibilities of a suitable pattern of regional co-operation consistent with GATT.

It requested the Executive Secretary to explore practical measures for intra-regional co-operation, make suggestions to the Governments on regional projects and recommend to United Nations agencies to support such regional measures and projects.

While highlighting the needs of the countries of the region to find stable markets for their exports, it emphasized the importance of developing tourist trade and industries and proposed that 1961 be declared by the member-Governments as "Visit the Orient Year."

It asked the Secretariat to bear in mind the possibility that disarmament might release resources for economic development in its future studies.

About the Philippines proposal for a S-E Asian economic bloc, the Commission felt that the country-coverage should be wider and that such co-operation should be undertaken within the framework of ECAFE.

On economic planning, it endorsed the three-tier approach, namely, the Conference of Economic Planners, the Working Party and the Group of Experts.

It emphasized that the Asian Population Conference should seek practical solutions to population problems and pay attention to the problems in rural areas including unemployment.

The possibilities of joint industrial projects and the establishment of the research, demonstration and servicing institutes for industries on a regional basis were particularly emphasized.

In the field of transport development of highway transport and co-operative efforts by Governments through Study Weeks, such as "Highway Safety," on-the-spot study of construction of roads and bridges, were particularly emphasized. It requested the Secretariat to co-operate with the International Union of Official Travel Organizations and its Regional Commissions in the promotion of travel and tourism in the region.

On the Mekong Project, the United Kingdom Government offered an additional contribution of £110,000, Formosa offered cement valued at $100,000 (US) and Israel $20,000 (US) in cement. Japan offered a new contribution of $80,000 (US).

The Commission recognized the need for adequate and increasing allocation of funds for regional projects in its technical assistance programme.

India's offer to hold the 17th session of ECAFE was unanimously accepted.

The Chairman, Mr. Thanat Khoman, told a news conference later that the session set the tone for increased and intensive regional co-operation.

He urged the Commission to consider practical and concrete measures to translate into action the recommendations for joint projects, measures for stabilizing the prices of export commodities and other international means of speeding up the economic development of Asia.

ECAFE Survey:

Before the session closed on March 21, it adopted the ECAFE annual report (Survey).

The report noted with satisfaction the growth in foreign aid to the region last year.

It added: "If the hopes of obtaining savings from disarmament materialized, the task of meeting the capital needs of the less-developed countries would become less onerous and the possibilities of accelerating the economic development of the countries of the region would substantially increase."

The only disagreement arose when a French delegate suggested the re-wording of a section of the report on a forthcoming Asian Seminar on co-operatives and experimental farms to rule out a study of Russian State farms.

The Indian delegate objected, and France withdrew the suggestion.

The ECAFE Survey said:

"For the countries of the ECAFE region, 1959 was in general a year of improvement after the moderate set-back of the previous year, following adverse weather in the Autumn of 1957 and the slow-down of industrial progress in Japan and India.

"Not only did the volume of exports increase and prices improve in step with the recovery of industrial countries from the 1957-58 recession but also there was an all-round progress. Agricultural and industrial production established new records.

"Thanks to bumper harvests, the production of foodgrains, available mainly for consumption in 1959, was 11 per cent larger. Per capita availabilities of food were higher than in the previous year; there was more of rice, wheat and other cereals, and copra and oil, although a little less of sugar.

"Among the primary commercial crops and minerals, the trends were somewhat mixed; the output of rubber and iron-ore increased in response to industrial demand; the output of petroleum was in line with its long-term trend; and the output of jute followed favourable weather. Poor demand, on the other hand, was primarily responsible for the lower production of tin and tea, and adverse weather for that of cotton.

"Manufacturing production rose by 16 per cent in the first nine months of 1959 as compared with the first nine months of the previous year (1958). After a protracted recession, Japan's manufacturing production began to rise during the last quarter of 1958 and continued to climb rapidly in 1959, supported by a steadily increasing consumer demand, exports and investment in equipment and inventories. The gain in India was more modest as its textile industry remained in the doldrums, whereas the producer goods industries forged ahead. The newly industrializing countries, which did not suffer a set-back in 1958, continued to break new ground.

"The very large production gains proclaimed towards the end of 1958 in Mainland China were scaled down to a sizeable extent in the revisions officially announced in August, 1959, although the revised estimates still showed very large increases in absolute terms. The official results for 1959, announced in late January, 1960, indicated a further increase in agricultural and industrial production, although at a rate substantially lower than in 1958.

"As several countries of the region will be nearing the completion of their present development plans in 1960 or 1961, progress in achieving their production targets is also reviewed. There are inherent limitations in target-setting in predominantly private enterprise economies, and it is easier to measure actual results rather than the increase in production potentials that has been achieved by investment directed to the building up of economic and social overheads.

"However, one broad conclusion emerges. Most countries of the region are still some distance away from their foodgrain production goals, although results are relatively better for primary export products and manufactured goods. The problem of increasing foodgrain production in Asia is above all one of organization. It involves remodelling the largely subsistence rural economy and requires a re-organization of institutional factors such as land system, credit mechanism and marketing. The crux of the matter is to gather momentum on several fronts at the same time. Few countries of the region can feel satisfaction at the progress made in this regard.

"World trade, excluding that between Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union and Mainland China, recovered rather slowly from the recession. Exports of the ECAFE primary exporting countries, which had suffered more than those of the primary exporting countries elsewhere, continued to show a decline up to the end of the first quarter of 1959, but rose thereafter. Japan's exports reached a record height of $2.4 billion in the first nine months of 1959, 17 per cent above the corresponding period of 1958. The most striking feature of Japan's export growth was the substantial increase in its exports to the United States of manufactured consumer goods such as ready-made garments, plywood, toys, chinaware, radios, sewing machines and cameras.

"The primary exports of the region responded well on the whole to the economic recovery of the industrial countries. In the first half of 1959, exports of rubber and petroleum increased both in volume and prices, of iron-ore in volume only and of copra and tin in prices. However, there were several commodities—cotton, sugar, tea and rice—which yielded ground both in quantities exported and the prices obtained. Jute exports declined sharply in volume. The continuing decline in raw jute exports has created serious difficulties for Pakistan. Following the good harvests in the rice importing countries, the rice exporters of the region—Burma, Thailand, Cambodia and South Viet-Nam—faced increasing difficulties in the first half of the year and their rice stocks started moving only after prices were reduced in the second half of the year.

"Export prices increased on the whole owing to the sizeable price rises for rubber and copra, and import prices declined because of the fall in the prices of cereals and manufactured goods. The terms of trade improved. In the first and second quarters of 1959, they were about 7 and 15 per cent higher than in the fourth quarter of 1958 when they had again touched bottom in their downward slide from the peak levels of 1950-1951. They continued to rise in the third quarter, judging from the trends in commodity prices. Toward the end of the year, rubber prices continued to climb, copra prices had eased and manufactured goods' prices were slowly tending to rise. It appeared, therefore, that by the end of the year the steam had gone out of this upward recoil in terms of trade.

"Despite the improvement in production and increased availability of foreign exchange, effective monetary demand continued to exert pressure on prices. The inflationary elements were the increased expenditures on public and private investment and increased Government outlays on current needs. The main exceptions to the general inflationary trend were the region's rice exports (following the decline, in the first half of the year, in rice exports) and Pakistan (following reduced exports and fiscal retrenchment) where demand seemed to be either stationary or declining.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"To preserve internal stability and external balance, the Governments of the region resorted to varying financial policies and direct controls. Demand was kept down in Mainland China under a system of direct allocation of resources, rationing, price-fixation and Government procurement of major commodities. The most effective among the national approaches in other countries were the fiscal policies and quantitative controls on trade and payments. However, the fiscal measures were limited, on the revenue side, by relatively poor administrative machinery, low levels of per capita incomes and paucity of foreign exchange resources which restricted imports of goods with taxable potential and, on the expenditure side, by growing Government needs for defence, administration and social welfare. The Governments, in general, found it easier to incur deficits than to raise taxes, or to go to their central banks than to the money markets for funds. On occasions, they were also forced to cut down their development programmes. Since financial institutions are rudimentary and the greater part of money supply takes the form of cash, monetary policies, in general, remained less effective than fiscal policies in regulating effective demand in under-developed countries. Only a few countries, notably Japan and India, with a developed monetary infra-structure—Banks, insurance companies and security markets—employed all the traditional measures of monetary policy, viz., changes in re-discount rates and in reserve requirements against demand deposits, selective credit and moral suasion.

"The countries of the region, on the whole, were more successful in policies aimed at controlling foreign trade and exchange. Exports increased, the rise in imports was held under control, at least in the first half of the year, and there was more foreign aid. With the improvement in the foreign assets position, several countries of the region, including the Federation of Malaya, India and Japan, either relaxed or altogether abandoned restrictions discriminating against dollar imports. Measures were also taken, with some success, to stimulate private foreign investment.

"These traditional measures implementing financial policies were at times not properly co-ordinated. Budgetary deficits continued to defeat credit restraints, or exchange rates were changed without taking corresponding domestic measures. The Philippines Government provided an example of a concentrated deployment of a wide array of fiscal and monetary measures tending in the same direction. Formosa and Laos, on the other hand, found it difficult to maintain stability in their new exchange rates after devaluation in 1958.

"A vigorous attempt to hold under control an already serious situation was made in Indonesia which, on August 25, 1959, took a series of steps consisting of a partial demonetization of currency, a compulsory conversion of bank deposits into loans to the Government, a change in the exchange rate and in foreign exchange regulations and a salary slash for Government employees. Undoubtedly, some monetary and fiscal reform was necessary owing to the mounting domestic inflation which in turn stemmed from increased Budget deficits arising from the maintenance of law and order. It is still too early to attempt a full appraisal of the measures adopted. A preliminary assessment seems to indicate that the measures succeeded in stabilizing domestic prices, although the inflationary factors—public credit creation, restricted supplies and domestic commercial disorganization—continued to exert pressure. The new exchange rates retain their multiple character, quantitative restrictions continue and capital flight remains a major problem. In the fiscal field, the proposals to increase revenue have yet to be implemented. The Indonesian monetary measures, however, appear to have achieved the official objective of re-distributing resources in favour of State control, in line with the Government's policy of moving in the direction of a 'guided economy'.

"To sum up, for the region as a whole, there was an increase in aggregate resources in 1959, largely due to increases in both agricultural and industrial production, which more than made up for the fall in aggregate imports and for the diminution of domestic supplies represented by the rise in the region's exports.

"While most Governments increased both their consumption and investment, the increment in aggregate resources appeared adequate to carry these as well as increases in private investment and, in several countries, also consumption. As a result, price movements were for the most part mild (except in certain instances) and showed no marked movement up or down. Slightly over half the countries for which data are available showed price increases and just under half showed either price declines or no change. However, it can perhaps be affirmed that prices have had a long-term upward tendency in most countries in the region."

Foreign Trade Review:

A feature of the Survey is a review of the foreign trade of the primary exporting countries of the region in the light of world trends, covering a period of the three decades between 1928 and 1957.

It said: "Over this period, it was found that the demand and supply conditions affecting the primary commodities in the world market had had a more acute impact on the primary exporting countries of the ECAFE area so that they fell behind not only the industrial countries but also the rest of the primary exporting countries of the world, in the volume of exports and in their value measured in terms of manufactured goods. Long-term data on import unit values are not available for dependable computations of their terms of trade, individually or as a group. At any rate, the wide divergence in the price changes of major export commodities suggests sharply different—favourable or adverse—movements in the terms of trade for different primary exporting countries of the region. No doubt, there has been a deterioration in the terms of trade since 1951, but it is yet too early to make a proper assessment of it. The deterioration may either be a correction of the sharp rise during the Korean war boom, or it may represent the resumption of the downward tendencies in evidence before World War II, threatening also the improvement secured during the War.

"Another factor of crucial significance to the primary exporting countries of the region is the violent short-term fluctuations in the earnings of their primary exports. A study of the primary commodities in ECAFE export trade indicates that there has been great instability not only in terms of foreign exchange but also in terms of import capacity, since changes in import prices have been on the whole non-compensatory. The study also suggests that the composition of the primary commodities of the region is such that it renders the export proceeds of the region more susceptible to fluctuations than those of world primary commodities as a group. The region features predominantly in the trade in natural rubber—the most volatile of the primary commodities.

"Finally, the experience of ECAFE primary exports confirms the striking fact that the great improvement in the internal economic stability of the industrial countries since the pre-War period has not been associated with a commensurate reduction in the instability in export volume, prices and earnings of primary products in the post-war period. Indeed, neither the growth in output and income nor the increase in economic stability of the industrial countries of the world has resulted in a corresponding expansion or increased stability of trade in the primary commodities of the world.

"Imports, in the meantime, have grown faster than the export-based capacity to import. In the first instance, the ECAFE region—a net exporter of foodgrains in the 'twenties—has become a net importer. Secondly, almost all primary exporting countries of the region—many having achieved independence only after the end of World War II—have embarked on programmes of economic development and social welfare in response to the 'revolution of rising expectations' and have undertaken larger defence commitments. The altered patterns of their demand for imports and the relatively sluggish progress in their primary production have, in several instances, made the primary exporting countries of the region more dependent on the industrial countries than in the 'twenties for imports of staple foods for their growing populations and of raw materials for their growing industries. While the establishment of these industries has reduced their dependence on industrialized countries for the relatively simple manufactures such as textile products, the primary exporting countries are almost completely dependent upon industrialized countries to supply their increasing needs for capital goods imports to sustain their development programmes. It is this dependence which makes the gap between the purchasing power of the exports of these primary exporting countries and their import needs more distressing. They have remained more vulnerable than the industrial countries, since their economic growth is more critically dependent on their capacity to import than is the case with the industrial countries. Indeed, for several of them, even their present levels of living hang precariously on the prospects encountered by not more than two or three primary commodities in the world market.

"The study of these long-term trends leads inescapably to the conclusion that the chronic balance of payments difficulties of the primary exporting countries of the ECAFE region have not been caused by accidental or short-term factors but are the results of fundamental economic changes, that is, changes in the supply and demand factors in world production and trade. These difficulties in the post-War years have been alleviated to some extent by foreign assistance, but the primary exporting countries still find it necessary to deplete their external assets, increase foreign indebtedness, impose import restrictions or slow down on an otherwise technically and economically feasible rate of growth.

"Is this aggregate imbalance between what the ECAFE primary exporting countries need and what they are able to earn likely to continue, say, for the next 15 years or so? An attempt is made to answer this question in the light of projections of imports of primary commodities by industrial countries and corresponding primary export prospects of the ECAFE countries. It appears that, for the region as a whole and for most individual countries, only a slow rate of expansion of their traditional primary exports to industrial countries in relation to a rapid rise in their import needs can be foreseen. Because of this rather unfavourable outlook, a further assessment was made of the prospects of expanding exports of manufactured goods and service earnings and of developing alternative markets, and the conclusion was reached that the economic development can hardly be export-oriented for the region as a whole. A trend toward import substitution of food, other consumer goods, and even producer goods, appears unavoidable."

(The Times, London, The Hindu, Madras, The Statesman, Calcutta and UN Information Centre, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2652:AOA:A, 3181:THI:A]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10, Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95/-; Foreign Rs. 115/- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

May 7—13, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI No. 19

AFGHANISTAN

A. Ex-King Amanullah Dead: It was reported from Berne on April 26 that the former King of Afghanistan, Shah Amanullah, had died in a hospital in Switzerland.

He was ailing for several days.

(The Times, London)

BURMA

A. Mr. Chou En-lai's Visit: The Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, accompanied by the Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi, and a party of senior officials paid a goodwill visit to Rangoon from April 16 to 19 on their way to India.

The visit was on an invitation extended to him in March, 1960 by the then Burmese Premier, Gen. Ne Win.

The visitors were given a warm welcome.

Mr. Chou En-lai's visit coincided with Burma's Water Festival in which he and the other members of his party participated.

Later the same day (April 16), the visitors went on a cruise on the Rangoon river when Mr. Chou En-lai told Commodore Than Po that China was building submarines, but they were not yet atom-powered.

State Banquet:

At night (April 16), U Nu gave a State banquet in honour of Mr. Chou En-lai. Toasts to "everlasting friendship between Burma and China" were proposed by the two leaders.

U Nu said in his speech that he regarded Mr. Chou En-lai's visit to Burma "at this juncture both as a special gesture of goodwill and understanding and as a happy augury for the further development of good-neighbourly relations and fruitful co-operation between our two peoples."

He added: "The Union of Burma and the People's Republic of China cherish a sincere desire to maintain and consolidate their traditional friendship and to settle any disputes between them by means of peaceful negotiation without resorting to force. This desire, coupled with the devotion of our two countries to the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence, have enabled our countries to work out a mutually acceptable basis for the final settlement of the long outstanding and stubborn boundary question which they have inherited from history. It has also enabled them to lay down a solid foundation not only for the maintenance of everlasting peace and cordial friendship but also for the strengthening of good-neighbourly relations and friendly co-operation between them.

"Indeed, our two countries are now on the threshold of a new era of peace, good-neighbourly relations and close co-operation for mutual benefit."

Mr. Chou En-lai, in his reply, spoke of the growing friendship between the two countries and the recent Border Agreement (see page 3151) as an important event and said:

"Both our parties recognized that the northern section of the Sino-Burmese boundary was undelimited and that it should be delimited along the traditional customary line. With regard to the southern section of the Sino-Burmese boundary, even though the 1941 line which Britain, taking advantage of China's difficulties, delimited with China, had been formally recognized by the then Chinese Central Government, the Burmese Government understood the Chinese people's sentiments and agreed to link this question with other questions relevant to the boundary for an overall solution. The Chinese people waged struggles for decades against the forcible seizure by Britain of the area of Hpimaw, Gawlum and Kangfang. The Burmese Government, in a friendly manner, acknowledged that this area did not belong to Burma and should be returned to China.

"The Chinese Government, taking into consideration the practical needs of the Burmese side, agreed to turn over to Burma the Meng-Mao triangular area; and, in exchange, the Burmese Government agreed to make a corresponding adjustment in the 1941 line.

"The Chinese Government, in accordance with its consistent policy of opposing foreign prerogatives and respecting the sovereignty of other countries, renounced China's right of participation in mining enterprises at Lufang in Burma. It should also be mentioned that these were not completely without misunderstandings or even clashes on the border between the two countries while the two sides were seeking a friendly solution to the boundary question. This, however, did not hamper the joint efforts of our two Governments to settle the boundary question.

"Our two sides consistently maintained political foresight and constantly paid attention to upholding friendship between the two countries. This is the key to the ultimate settlement of the boundary question between the two countries....

"The Chinese Government and people are willing, together with the Burmese Government and people, to continue to act on the principles of the Bandung Conference, develop the Bandung spirit, strengthen and consolidate the unity of Asian and African countries, and support the just struggles of the Asian, African and Latin American peoples. China and Burma are both peace-loving countries. They are both engaged in long-term economic construction and stand in need of a peaceful international environment and of strengthened co-operation with their neighbours. Solidarity and co-operation are in the fundamental interests of our two peoples. I am convinced that the Chinese and Burmese peoples will certainly be able to continue to advance hand in hand."

The next two days (April 17 and 18) were utilized by the Chinese leaders for talks with Burmese leaders, courtesy calls and sight-seeing.

Joint Communique:

Before they left Rangoon for Delhi on April 19, a joint communique was signed by U Nu and Mr. Chou En-lai.

It said: "The Premiers held sincere talks on questions of common interest to both countries in a friendly, harmonious and frank atmosphere.

"Taking part also in the talks were, on the Chinese side: Vice-Premier Marshal Chen Yi, and Vice-Foreign Minister Chang Han-fu, and on the Burmese side: Foreign Minister Sao Hkun Hkio.

"The two Premiers pointed out with satisfaction that with the signing of the Treaty of Friendship and Mutual Non-aggression between the People's Republic of China and the Union of Burma and the Agreement between the Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the Union of Burma on the Question of the Boundary between the Two Countries, friendly co-operation between the two countries had entered a new stage.

"The two parties indicated their determination, in accordance with the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence jointly initiated by the two countries and the spirit and provisions of the above-mentioned Treaty and Agreement, to continue to adopt measures to further strengthen economic co-operation, develop trade and promote cultural and friendly ties between the two countries and to bring about as early as possible a complete and final settlement of the question of the boundary between the two countries.

"Premier Chou En-lai's visit to Rangoon coincided with the fifth anniversary of the Bandung Conference of historic significance. The two Premiers confirmed with pleasure that the development of Sino-Burmese friendly relations on the series of victories won by Asian and African peoples under the banners of independence, peace and friendship over the past five years fully proved the great vitality of the Bandung spirit and the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence.

"The two parties expressed the hope that the Asian and African countries would adhere to the Bandung spirit and work for the strengthening of the solidarity of the Asian and African peoples who are struggling for national independence and against racial discrimination, and condemned the repressive measures and use of force against the African peoples by some Governments.

"The two Premiers were firmly convinced that the safeguarding of peace is an important matter of common interest to all the people of the world. They expressed the hope that the Conference of the Government Heads of the Big Powers to be held in May this year would contribute to world peace and the relaxation of international tensions and held that the countries concerned should reach agreement speedily on the prohibition of nuclear weapons, general disarmament and other problems.

"Premier Chou En-lai, on behalf of the Chinese Government, invited Prime Minister U Nu to pay a friendly visit to China. Prime Minister U Nu accepted the invitation with pleasure and indicated that he would carry out the visit as early as possible."

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3151:CHI:A]

B. Border And Friendship Pacts Approved: Both Houses of Parliament approved on April 22 the Sino-Burmese Border Agreement and the Treaty of Friendship and Mutual Non-Aggression.

They were concluded during Gen. Ne Win's visit to Peking in January, 1960.

Under the terms of the Border Agreement, a Joint Commission is to be formed to survey the boundary for adjustments provided in the Agreement.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3151:CHI:A]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

CAMBODIA

A. New Cabinet Formed: A new Cabinet, headed by Mr. Pho Proeung, won a National Assembly vote of investiture, by 37 votes to one, with nine abstentions, on April 19.

The formation of the Cabinet was necessitated by the resignation of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as Prime Minister following the death of his father, King Norodom Suramarit.

Prince Norodom gave up office explaining that, having led successive Cabinets since 1955, he needed rest.

Observers in Pnom Penh said that the new Cabinet was "completely loyal" to Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

Mr. Pho Proeung, who headed the new Cabinet, also took over the Interior Ministry.

Other Cabinet members in charge of key Ministries were: Mr. Tep Phan (Foreign Affairs); Major-General Lon Nol (Defence); and Mr. Touch Kim (Finance).

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3287:CAM:A]

CEYLON

A. UNP Government Defeated: The United National Party (UNP) Government, headed by Mr. Dudley Senanayake, was defeated in the House of Representatives on April 22 in what amounted to a vote of censure.

It was exactly a month before that the Cabinet had been sworn-in (see page 3263).

Major Opposition parties, including the late Mr. S. W. R. D. Bandaranaike's Sri Lanka Freedom Party (SLFP) which emerged second largest in the General Elections, voted for the motion which took the form of an amendment to the Address of Thanks to the Governor-General's speech.

The motion was adopted by the House by 93 votes to 61, with one abstention, and the House adjourned till May 3.

The acceptance of the motion invalidated the other amendments proposed by individual parties.

The amended motion read: "We, the members of the House of Representatives, thank Your Excellency for the speech with which you have been pleased to open Parliament. We assure Your Excellency that we shall give our attention to all matters placed before us but regret that Your Excellency's Government does not command the confidence of this House."

Earlier, winding up the debate for the Government, the Prime Minister, Mr. Dudley Senanayake, told the House that he had assumed office rightfully as head of the largest party in Parliament.

He did not believe that the SLFP, depending as it did on the support of various other groups, would be able to give a stable administration and that was why he proposed to recommend the dissolution of Parliament and a second General Election if he was defeated.

He said that he did not believe that the road to socialism lay through nationalization. Some parties wanted nationalization of all means of production but that somehow led to "nationalization of the minds of men."

He would not wish man to sacrifice his complete freedom on the altar of an economic State.

He pleaded that the problems of language and of citizenship of Indian settlers should be taken out of party politics.

He proposed a round-table conference of all parties and communities to reach an amicable settlement of the official language problem which had embittered relations between the Tamil minority and the Sinhalese people.

[During the month he was in office, Mr. Senanayake had concentrated on solving economic problems, particularly the cost of living problem. His Government brought down the price of rationed rice from 45 cents a measure to 25 cents. He managed to persuade shipping companies to reduce freight rates by 15 per cent in order to help the trade to bring down the cost of consumer goods. These impressed the country but Parliamentarians questioned the sources from which the Government was expecting to find money to subsidize rationed rice.]

New Elections Ordered:

Immediately after the voting, the Prime Minister, Mr. Dudley Senanayake, went to the Governor-General, Sir Oliver Goonetilleke, and apprised him of the latest developments and "advised" him that since no party was in a position to provide a stable alternative Government, an early General Election might be held.

The Governor-General then conferred with leaders of other Opposition parties to ascertain whether the SLFP could form a stable Government.

Apparently, the Governor-General felt that the SLFP, did not have adequate support to form an alternative Government, for he summoned Mr. Dudley Senanayake again and told him that he had accepted his advice to dissolve Parliament.

Mr. Senanayake was also asked to continue in office until the Elections.

On April 23, it was formally announced that the Governor-General had decided to dissolve Parliament and to hold fresh elections on July 20.

This made Ceylon's fourth Parliament the shortest in her history. After the Election, it met for the first time on March 30 to elect the Speaker. It then met for the ceremonial opening by the Governor-General on April 6 and to debate the Governor-General's opening Address from April 19 to 22.

Opposition Leaders' Statement:

On April 24, leaders of Opposition parties issued the following statement:

"We are unanimous in expressing our regret that His Excellency has thought it fit to dissolve the present Parliament a little over a month after the last General Election. In view of the fact that all the Opposition parties barring the Mahajana Eksath Peramuna had informed His Excellency quite clearly that an alternative Government could be formed by the Sri Lanka Freedom Party and that there was a reasonable possibility of its continuing, the dissolution of Parliament cannot be treated as being in the best interests of the country, which has already suffered by the absence of an effective Government for many months."

The statement was signed by Mr. C. P. De Silva (Sri Lanka Freedom Party), Mr. S. J. V. Chelvanayakam (Federal Party), Dr. N. M. Perera (Trotskyist Lanka Sama Samaj Party), Dr. S. A. Wickremasinghe (Communist Party), Mr. J. D. Weerasekara (Lanka Prajathantrawadi Pakshava) and Mr. K. M. P. Rajaratna (Jatikavimukhti Peramuna).

(The Hindu, Madras and The Times of Ceylon, Colombo)

[Prev. ref. 3263:CEY:A, 3287:CEY:A]

CHINA

A. "Red Flag's" Call To Prepare for War: A statement issued by Red Flag, organ of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, called on the Socialist bloc of countries on April 22 to prepare for war and stated that the result of a nuclear conflict would be that "a civilization thousands of times higher than the capitalist system and with a truly beautiful future" would be created over the debris of a dead imperialism.

It said: "Under the condition of peaceful co-existence, there are still complicated and acute struggles in the political, economic and ideological field. Until the imperialist system and the exploiting classes come to an end, wars of one kind or another will always appear.

"Communists must make two preparations: one, for the development of the revolution and the other for a non-peaceful revolution."

It advised the Socialist countries to "master wherever possible more and more of such new techniques as atomic weapons and rocketry." The result of nuclear warfare would be the very speedy destruction of the imperialist monsters the world over and certainly not be the annihilation of mankind.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

B. Chinese Air Force "Third Strongest"—Adm. H. Felt's Opinion: Admiral Harry Felt, US Commander-in-Chief in the Pacific, said in a testimony to the US House of Representatives Appropriations Sub-Committee (released on April 27) that China's Air Force was about the third largest and strongest in the world today.

[This, by implication, meant that China's Air Force was at least as strong as that of Britain.]

He said: "From a military point of view, China's Air Force is getting better equipment and is about the third largest and strongest in the world today and includes modern jet aircraft. They are not as well trained as our people, nor as well trained as the Chinese on Taiwan (Formosa)."

Asked to describe the modernization of the Chinese communist Army, he replied: "The information we get is that it is, of course, a huge army, well trained and well equipped. They do not have atomics; we are pretty well convinced of that. I think their weakness is in logistics. They are dependent upon USSR completely, of course."

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3095:CHI:A]

INDIA

SUMMARY: Mr. Chou En-lai's Visit; New Road Reported Constructed By Chinese In Ladakh; India's New Border Map; Adjustments In Tax Levies; Southern Zonal Council Meeting; Committee To Examine Price Policy.

A. Mr. Chou En-lai's Visit: On the invitation of Mr. Nehru (contained in his letter dated February 5, 1960) to come to New Delhi for talks on the Sino-Indian border issue, the Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, accompanied by the Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

and other officials, arrived in New Delhi on April 19.

He was in New Delhi until the morning of April 26, and during these seven days, he had talks with Mr. Nehru on the border issue for a total period of 20 hours.

Mr. Chou En-lai also met India's Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, the Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, the Defence Minister, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, and others.

He held a news conference on the night of April 25 after the joint communique was issued on the talks.

He left for Khatmandu on April 26.

Joint Communique:

Mr. Nehru and Mr. Chou En-lai issued a joint communique on the evening of April 25. It reflected total disagreement on the Sino-Indian border issue.

It said: "The talks did not result in resolving the differences that had arisen."

Nevertheless, it was stated that it had been agreed that officials of the two Governments would examine historical and other factual material on the disputed borders and report by the end of September, 1960 to the respective Governments.

The first meeting of the officials would be held in Peking in June, 1960 and they would alternately meet in New Delhi and Peking thereafter.

The following is the text of the communique:

"At the invitation of the Prime Minister of India, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, His Excellency Mr. Chou En-lai, Premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, arrived in New Delhi on April 19 to discuss certain differences relating to the border areas which have arisen between the Government of India and the Government of the People's Republic of China.

"His Excellency Mr. Chou En-lai was accompanied by His Excellency Marshal Chen Yi, Vice-Premier of the People's Republic of China, His Excellency Mr. Chang Han-fu, Vice-Foreign Minister of China, and other officials of the Chinese Government. His Excellency the Premier and his party concluded their visit to India on the morning of April 26.

"The two Prime Ministers had several long, frank and friendly talks between themselves. Their Excellencies the Premier of the Chinese People's Republic and the Vice-Premier also had long talks with the President, the Vice-President and several senior Ministers of the Government of India.

"The two Prime Ministers explained fully their respective stands on the problems affecting the border areas. This led to a greater understanding of the views of the two Governments, but the talks did not result in resolving the differences that had arisen.

"The two Prime Ministers were of the opinion that further examination should take place by officials of the two sides of the factual material in the possession of both the Governments.

"The two Prime Ministers, therefore, agreed that officials of the two Governments should meet and examine, check and study all historical documents, records, accounts, maps and other material relevant to the boundary question, on which each side relied in support of its stand, and draw up a report for submission to the two Governments.

"This report would list the points on which there was agreement and the points on which there was disagreement or which should be examined more fully and clarified. This report should prove helpful towards further consideration of these problems by the two Governments.

"It was further agreed that the officials should meet from June to September, 1960 alternately in the capitals of the two countries. The first meeting should take place in Peking and the officials would report to the two Governments by the end of September, 1960.

"During the period of further examination of the factual material, every effort should be made by the parties to avoid friction and clashes in the border areas.

"Advantage was taken of the meeting by the two Prime Ministers to discuss certain other important problems in world affairs. The two Prime Ministers welcomed the forthcoming conference in Paris of the Heads of Governments and expressed the hope that this conference would help in lessening international tensions, in banning the production and use of nuclear weapons and in promoting disarmament."

Mr. Chou En-lai's Statement:

The failure of the talks was confirmed by Mr. Chou En-lai at a news conference on April 25 at which he also disclosed that he had invited Mr. Nehru to visit China at a time convenient to him.

Mr. Chou En-lai made the following statement at the news conference:

"At the invitation of Prime Minister Nehru, I have paid a friendly visit to India from April 19 to 25. I am pleased to have this opportunity to visit once again the great Republic of India and extend greetings to the great Indian people. During the visit, we have been accorded cordial welcome and hospitality by the Indian Government and Prime Minister Nehru. For this, Vice-Premier Chen Yi and I, as well as my other colleagues, wish to express our hearty thanks.

"The Chinese and Indian peoples are two great nations of Asia. From the remote past, there have always existed between the two peoples mutual friendship and mutual sympathy, but never mutual antagonism or aggression against each other. Since our two countries successively achieved Independence, particularly since we jointly initiated the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence, the profound friendship between the two peoples has undergone further development on a new basis.

"There is no basic conflict of interests between our two countries. Our two countries have every reason to remain friendly to each other for thousands and tens of thousands of years to come.

"During the past one year or two, although disputes have arisen between the two countries on the boundary question left over by history, our two peoples have nonetheless consistently cherished the desire to be friendly to each other. We are convinced that it is entirely possible to achieve, through peaceful consultations, a fair and reasonable settlement of the boundary question between the two countries. It is precisely with this conviction that we have come here.

"During the visit, Prime Minister Nehru and I have held many long discussions on matters of common interest, particularly the Sino-Indian boundary question. Our two sides expounded our respective stands and view-points on the boundary question, as well as our respective propositions for a settlement of this question. I am of the opinion that such discussions are conducive to the enhancing of mutual understanding.

"Vice-Premier Chen Yi, Vice-Minister Chang Han-fu and I have also met and held frank discussions separately with a number of Cabinet Ministers of the Indian Government.

"After seven days of talks, although, unlike what we expected, no agreement has been reached for the settlement of the boundary question, the two sides have unanimously agreed that officials of the two sides should meet and examine, check and study the factual material relevant to the boundary question and submit a report to the Governments of the two countries.

"Both sides have also agreed that while the officials of the two countries are holding meetings, all efforts should be made to avoid friction and clashes in the border areas. These agreements have been set forth in the joint communique of the two Prime Ministers.

"We hold that these agreements have a positive bearing on the maintenance of tranquillity on the border and on the continued search for avenues for a reasonable settlement of the boundary question.

"Through frankly exchanging views between the two Prime Ministers, I have found that the two sides not only share the common desire to maintain friendly relations between the two countries but also that, on the boundary question too, it is not impossible for the two sides to find common points or points of proximity which, in my view, can be broadly summarized into the following six points:

"(1) There exist disputes with regard to the boundary between the two sides.

"(2) There exists between the two countries a line of actual control up to which each side exercises administrative jurisdiction.

"(3) In determining the boundary between the two countries, certain geographical principles, such as watersheds, river valleys and mountain passes, should be equally applicable to all sectors of the boundary.

"(4) A settlement of the boundary question between the two countries should take into account the national feelings of the two peoples towards the Himalayas and the Karakoram mountains.

"(5) Pending a settlement of the boundary question between the two countries through discussions, both sides should keep to the line of actual control and should not put forward territorial claims as pre-conditions, but individual adjustments may be made.

"(6) In order to ensure tranquillity on the border so as to facilitate the discussions, both sides should continue to refrain from patrolling along all sectors of the boundary.

"Of course, there are now still distances between us and the Indian Government with regard to the above six points. However, I am of the opinion that as long as both sides continue consultations, it will not be difficult to narrow down and eliminate these distances. Once these common points are found, the two sides undoubtedly will have taken a big stride forward towards the reasonable settlement of the Sino-Indian boundary question.

"The Chinese Government has consistently maintained that since the Sino-Indian boundary has never been formally delimited, both the Chinese and Indian sides should seek a reasonable settlement of the boundary question between the two countries through peaceful and friendly consultations, taking into consideration the historical background and the present actualities, acting on the Five Principles jointly initiated by the two countries and adopting an attitude of mutual understanding and mutual accommodation.

"Pending this, both sides should maintain the present state of the boundary and not change it by unilateral action, let alone by force. Regarding some of the disputes, provisional agreements can be reached through negotiations.

"The Chinese Government holds that Sino-Indian friendship is of extremely great significance both to the 1,000 million people of the two countries and to Asian and world peace. This friendship should not be, nor can it be, jeopardized because of the temporary lack of a settlement of the Sino-Indian boundary question.

"Tomorrow (April 26), we shall bid farewell to the State leaders of India and the great Indian people. On the eve of my departure, I would like to state once again that the Chinese Government has unshakeable confidence in a settlement of the Sino-Indian boundary question and the strengthening of the friendship between the two countries, and that it will exert unremitting efforts to this end.

"In order to provide the Prime Ministers of the two countries with another opportunity for talks, in order to promote friendly relations between the two countries and reciprocate Prime Minister Nehru's kind hospitality, I have invited Prime Minister Nehru to visit China at a time convenient to him."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

News Conference:

At the news conference on the night of April 25, Mr. Chou En-lai expressed the hope that the "dark cloud" hanging over the relations between China and India would pass and that their present differences over the boundary question would prove to be only temporary.

He maintained that there was no basic conflict of interests between the two countries and said: "We have been friends for thousands of years and would remain friends for tens of thousands of years."

He asserted that China had no territorial claims to make on India or any other country. "We will never commit aggression against any country. At the same time, we will not tolerate aggression against us."

The differences between India and China over the eastern sector of the Himalayan boundary—along the MacMahon Line, he said, now appeared smaller than they were as a result of the talks between the two Prime Ministers and that the differences over the Aksaichin area in Ladakh seemed to be rather bigger. But, as China was prepared to accommodate the Indian point of view in the eastern sector, India should accommodate China in the western sector.

He re-iterated that the "so-called MacMahon Line was absolutely unacceptable to China."

He added: "Nevertheless, we are willing to maintain the present state of that sector of the boundary. We will not cross that line and in our negotiations with the Indian Government we have never put forward any territorial claims. Since we have adopted such an attitude of understanding and conciliation, the dispute regarding the eastern sector has become a smaller one in the talks between the two Prime Ministers in the last few days."

He confessed that the two Prime Ministers had not been able to arrive at an agreement on the boundary question. But, he hoped for the best. Both sides had unanimously agreed that their officials should study all the material. He believed that the question could be reasonably solved through peaceful consultations.

After explaining China's position with regard to the eastern and western sectors, he said: "We hope that after the officials of the two sides have examined and studied documents and maps as provided in the joint communique the Indian Government will take an attitude similar to that which the Chinese Government has taken towards the eastern sector, an attitude of mutual accommodation. In this way we believe a reasonable settlement of this question can be found."

Asked about Chinese claims on Bhutan and Sikkim, he said that China had no claims on Bhutan and Sikkim and added: "We respect India's relations with Bhutan and Sikkim."

With regard to the middle sector also, he said, there were disputes, but "they are disputes about individual areas."

Asked if it was true that China had claimed Mount Everest as belonging to China, he said: "The situation with regard to this question is not like what you have learnt from the papers. This is a topic between the Prime Ministers of China and Nepal. I have no intention to disclose the discussions between the two of us on this (held at Peking). I will wait till I get to Khatmandu to disclose anything on this question."

A correspondent asked whether Mr. Nehru and other Indian leaders had raised the question of Chinese aggression against India during these talks and did he think that officials of the two countries could resolve the fundamental differences on the border when the two Prime Ministers had failed to do so.

Mr. Chou En-lai replied that this question was never raised. If Mr. Nehru and other Indian leaders had raised the question it would have been neither friendly towards China nor in conformity with facts. "I can only say that the two friendly countries—India and China—have no intention to satisfy the desire of the Western countries on this question."

Asked whether the two Prime Ministers, apart from discussing the boundary question, had expressed any grievance against each other with special reference to events in Tibet and the political asylum granted to the Dalai Lama, he replied: "The Dalai Lama and his followers started a revolt in Tibet in an attempt to keep serfdom there, but that revolt failed, and after that the Dalai Lama and his followers fled to India. The political asylum given to them here was a normal international practice. We have no objection to it.

"But the activities of the Dalai Lama and his followers, since they came to India, have far exceeded the limits the Indian Government had promised to us. We were told that the Dalai Lama would not be allowed to carry on any political activity against China. But he has done so on a number of occasions within this country and without. This is a matter of deep regret to us."

He said that he would not have come to New Delhi without a sincere desire on his part to settle the dispute. If necessary, he and his colleagues would come again for the sake of enhancing friendship between the two countries.

Question: "Did you find Mr. Nehru a different man this time?"

Answer: "Both Mr. Nehru and myself showed a common desire for mutual friendship between the two countries. On the border question we expounded our respective view-points. Naturally, we have talked more about this question."

Farewell Message:

Mr. Chou En-lai and his party left New Delhi for Khatmandu on the morning of April 26. He was seen off at Palam airport by Mr. Nehru, Cabinet Ministers and others.

In a farewell message to Mr. Nehru on his departure, Mr. Chou En-lai said that he was convinced that "through continuous efforts by both sides, a reasonable settlement can certainly be found for the boundary question left over by history."

The following is the text of the message:

"Dear Mr. Prime Minister,

"As I end my friendly visit to your great country and am now leaving your land, please allow me, in my own name and that of Vice-Premier Chen Yi, to thank the Indian Government and Your Excellency once again for the hospitality accorded us. The great friendship between the 1,000 million people of China and India is everlasting and unshakeable. I am convinced that through continuous efforts by both sides, a reasonable settlement can certainly be found for the boundary question left over by history.

"With best wishes for the Government of the Republic of India, the Indian people and Your Excellency, Chou En-lai."

Mr. Nehru's Reactions:

At Palam airport on April 26, where he had gone to see off Mr. Chou En-lai, Mr. Nehru told newsmen in an informal chat that there was a vast difference on facts between the Indian and Chinese Governments on the border question and that the failure of the two sides to reach an agreement was "eloquent proof" of the position.

Referring to Mr. Chou En-lai's plea for "mutual accommodation" on the basis of "present actualities" in the western and eastern sectors, Mr. Nehru firmly declared that there could be no question of "barter" in these matters. Settled facts were settled facts. But since the two sides had different sets of facts their conclusions naturally differed.

He declared that he still stood by his earlier "historical view" regarding Chinese expansionism. The "high tension" which had existed on the border question had been lessened for the moment, but the "basic tension" still remained. The Chinese had sought to link their acceptance of the actual position in N-EFA with Indian recognition of the fact of Chinese occupation in Ladakh. The differences on the western sector constituted a big stumbling-block.

Mr. Chou En-lai's reference to Bhutan and Sikkim, he thought, was "good as a statement."

He did not think there would be any further clashes if there was the will to avoid incidents. No incident had, in fact, occurred during the past six months. It was understood that neither side would send out forward patrols. General directives might be issued in this regard but there could not be any precise rules.

Mr. Chou En-lai had said at his news conference that no Indian leader had accused China of "aggression and that to have done so would have been unfriendly." To this Mr. Nehru replied that if the Government of India had told the Chinese that they had come into Indian territory, it obviously meant that they had committed aggression.

Asked if he thought that officials of the two sides would be able to reach any agreement, he said that they were neither authorized nor competent to do so. The officials would merely collect material, sort it out, arrange it and present it to the two Governments. The current negotiations had revealed that we had a fair amount of material which the Chinese could not counter. Tibet and other larger questions were referred to in the talks, but they were not the subject of any lengthy discussion with Mr. Chou En-lai.

Asked about Mr. Chou En-lai's invitation to him to visit Peking, he said that the question of his visit did not arise now. "It will depend on developments and after the visit of the official team (envisaged in the joint communique) and what they report and the position then."

Question: "In view of the known capacity of the Chinese for protracting negotiations without reaching any settlement, do you think that our negotiations will also be protracted?"

Mr. Nehru: "I cannot say whether they will be protracted. They are protracted even at the present moment. I do not know about the future."

Question: "You had previously expressed your optimism that the dispute would be resolved by peaceful means. After these talks, do you still believe it will be resolved by peaceful means and that they will vacate aggression in Ladakh?"

Mr. Nehru: "I do not know what measure of optimism I had at any time. But one always tries for that (peaceful settlement) and trying for that is always good. We shall continue to try, and one cannot rule out the possibility of success."

Mr. Nehru's Statement In Parliament:

Mr. Nehru told the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on April 26 that his prolonged discussions with Mr. Chou En-lai on the border issue had come up against "the rock of entirely different sets of facts."

The basic difference in the facts, he said, was that while the Chinese claimed that they had been in "constructive and actual" occupation of the area in Ladakh for as long as 200 years, India had maintained that the Chinese troops had come into Indian territory in the last few years.

He added that during the talks the Chinese had frequently tried to equate the problem of the eastern sector of the border with that of the western sector. They argued that India had no right to the territory on the eastern sector to which she had advanced in the last few years.

This basic historical and factual disagree-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ment, which cropped up again and again during the talks, had led to a position where both sides were unable to convince each other and "we remain unconvinced." It was, however, ultimately agreed that the two sets of facts be investigated on the basis of the materials with both parties at the official level. The officials would confine their investigations to the study of facts on which there was difference of opinion and report if there was need for further inquiry.

Mr. Nehru had suggested that officials should undertake such an investigation immediately, but the Chinese did not have their material with them. It was, therefore, agreed that investigation should be made at Peking two months hence.

Mr. Nehru also referred to the six points mentioned by Mr. Chou En-lai at his news conference and said that the Chinese Premier had naturally given expression to his own point of view, which was not "very often our point of view."

Dealing with each point, Mr. Nehru accepted that there was a border dispute and that there was "a line of actual control, i.e., military control" of Indian territory by the Chinese. He also agreed that the water-shed principle was important but, he added, it did not lead anywhere.

He was of the view that Mr. Chou En-lai's reference to the "national feeling" of the two peoples was in response to the fact that the Himalayas were an intimate part of India's heritage. On their part, the Chinese were welcome to the Karakoram mountains.

Mr. Chou En-lai's fifth point, according to Mr. Nehru, was not very clear. Presumably, it meant that "we will not discuss anything unless territorial claims are accepted." He was not agreeable to this particular type of conditional approach.

Finally, Mr. Chou En-lai's sixth point regarding no patrolling of the boundary, he said, was not something that was agreed to. According to him, Indian patrols would be completely free to move about the border areas. In a border dispute, he had told the Chinese Premier, it was not difficult to have common points of proximity.

Asked by a member about the Chinese case, he said, the Chinese had claimed that from time immemorial, their border was from the Karakoram range to the Lanak La Pass. If that was accepted, a large area in Ladakh would be cut off. According to the Chinese, a large part of this area in the north belonged to the Sinkiang province of China and a smaller portion in the south to Tibet.

They had further maintained that since this was a difficult area India was only in constructive control of it, and China, on the other hand, had all along been in actual as well as constructive control. Throughout their talks and the earlier correspondence, the Chinese had not given their boundaries precisely as had been done from the Indian side.

Regarding Mr. Chou En-lai's invitation to him to visit Peking, he said that he would await the outcome of the officials' discussions before giving in answer.

Communist Party's Statement:

The Communist Party of India issued a statement in New Delhi on April 27 regretting that the recent talks between the Prime Ministers of India and China had not led to a solution of the border problem.

"However", it added, "these friendly talks embodying the sincere desire of the peoples of India and China of find a way to an understanding and settlement have undoubtedly been a constructive step and this cannot but prove beneficial to the future course of negotiations."

It welcomed the decision of the two Governments to continue discussons at official level and said it was confident that "a peaceful approach and friendly negotiations will ultimately bear fruit."

It also welcomed the agreement between the two Prime Ministers that every effort should be made by the two countries to avoid frictions and clashes in the border areas.

"These are the positive results of the talks and there is no reason, therefore, to think that the negotiations have broken down."

Mr. Chou En-lai On Mr. Nehru's Statement:

At a news conference in Khatmandu on April 28, Mr. Chou En-lai angrily thumped the table and said: "The Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, made a statement in the Indian Parliament after my departure from New Delhi which was not friendly to China."

He added that as long as he was in New Delhi, Mr. Nehru did not say anything, but when he left India Mr. Nehru made this "distressing statement" against the Chinese Government.

He said that he had great respect for Mr. Nehru and was, therefore, "distressed."

Mr. Chou's temper rose as Marshal Chen Yi, the Chinese Foreign Minister, intervened to say that China had been "wronged in the matter."

At this stage, the Nepalese Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, smilingly brought the news conference to an end by inviting Mr. Chou En-lai to sign the Sino-Nepalese Treaty of Peace and Friendship.

Mr. Chou En-lai was throughout derisive of questions put to him by Indian correspondents.

When one of them asked about the Chinese claim on Everest, he answered: "There is no loop-hole in it for you to drive a wedge."

But, at the Gauchar airport as he left Khatmandu on April 29 for Calcutta en route to Peking, Mr. Chou En-lai said that India and China would always remain friends.

As he shook hands with Mr. Harishwar Dayal, India's Ambassador in Khatmandu, at the airport, he said: "No matter what disputes our two countries have, India and China will always be friendly."

Mr. Dayal replied: "I hope so."

"The People's Daily" Reaction:

The Chinese Communist Party newspaper The People's Daily, expressed polite regret at the failure of the talks on April 27.

The Prime Ministers' discussions, it said, had, however, a "positive bearing on the maintenance of tranquillity on the border and on the continued search for avenues to a reasonable settlement of the boundary question."

Its 2,000-word mildly-phrased front page editorial was the first public comment in Peking on the result of the talks.

The two Prime Ministers, it said, could and should have reached agreement on the six points listed by Mr. Chou En-lai, which the Chinese side considered were "common points or points of proximity."

It neither blamed nor criticized India for failing to agree to these points. It accused "imperialism and reactionary forces in India" of trying unsuccessfully to obstruct the Prime Ministers' talks and to exert pressure on China to make "unilateral concessions."

(The Statesman, The Times of India and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3187:INI:A, 3214:INI:C, 3224:INI:A]

B. Another Road Reported Constructed In Ladakh By Chinese: According to reports reaching New Delhi, the Chinese have constructed a new strategic highway through Ladakh, west of the old Aksaichin Road. Portions of the road were, however, not yet completed.

The new road, it is said, branches off from the existing Tibet-Sinkiang highway. It bites deep into Indian territory and is obviously aimed at consolidating the "present actuality" of Chinese occupation in the area.

Following the development of this line of communication in addition to the old road, the Chinese are believed to have transferred the military control of the Aksaichin area from the Tibetan to the Sinkiang Regional Command.

It is possible that they have also developed one or two air-strips in the region.

The new road is reported to enter Indian territory in the north at the same point as the old Aksaichin Road, namely, Haji Langar. Thereafter, it turns due west and then south along the valley of the Qara Qash river and then south-west to the Ladak La Pass.

The road runs west-north-west into Sinkiang from Haji Langar to Malikshah and Shahidullah (near Suget Qarawal) and then north to Yarkand.

In the south, the highway crosses the Lanak La into Tibet and then joins the old Aksaichin Road to run down to Rudok on the eastern extremity of Lake Pangong.

A feeder road has also been constructed from Lanak La to the Kong Ka pass. The existence of this road and the fact that it is motorable was disclosed by Mr. Karam Singh last November.

The new highway traverses about 200 miles of Indian territory and cuts off an area of between 8,000 and 10,000 square miles. The alignment of the old Aksaichin Road through Ladakh is only half as long and the area on the far side of it only some 5,000 square miles.

The new road is probably aligned along an existing trail. Its construction has obviously been undertaken during the past year and more likely after the Kong Ka pass incident in October, 1959.

Mr. Nehru's Confirmation:

Speaking in both Houses of Parliament on April 29 during the debate on the Nehru-Chou En-lai joint communique of April 26, Mr. Nehru confirmed that the Chinese had built a new highway through Ladakh, west of the original Aksaichin Road some time in 1959 in the Newar areas of occupation in Ladakh.

He said that he had taken up this matter with Mr. Chou En-lai during his talks in New Delhi between April 19 and 25, but the latter had replied that he was not fully aware of this development.

He added that a reference to the new road was contained in some of the Notes published in the While Paper and in Mr. Karam Singh's statement on the Chang Chenmo incident of October 21, 1959 (page 3076).

[There is no reference, however, to the new road in any of the Government of India's Notes. Mr. Karam Singh's statement also merely says at two places that he was taken in a truck from the Chinese Kong Ka La post "to the scene of the (October 21) incident" (in the Chang Chenmo Valley) and again that he and the other Indian prisoners were taken in trucks from the Chinese post "to the place of handing over." In both cases, the distance involved probably did not exceed ten miles at the outside.]

The Chinese are reported to have built a feeder road from Lanak La to Kong Ka Pass. The new road, however, traverses about 200 miles of Indian territory. Its alignment is reported to folow the valey of the Qara Qash

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

river west and south of Haji Langar and then south-east to Lanak La.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3142:INI:B]

C. New Border Map: The Government of India published on April 18 a new map of India's northern frontier showing prominently its physical features.

Prepared by the Survey of India, the map supported India's contention that its border with China was based on the "water-shed" principle.

The water-shed runs all along the border except at a point near Migyitun in its eastern sector.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3116:INI:A]

D. Adjustments In Taxation Levies: Moving for consideration of the Finance Bill in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on April 20, the Central Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, announced several adjustments in the tax levies of the Budget affording a tax relief of Rs. 63,00,000 in basic and additional excise duties.

The modifications related to exposed cinematograph film, agricultural tractors, medium-sized motor-cars, staple fibre fabrics, cotton fents, cycle free-wheels and rims, internal combustion engines and electric motors, aluminium ingots and paper boards.

He said that the adjustments were designed to remove genuine hardships.

The following were the adjustments:

Exposed Cinematograph Film: "Substantial relief" was proposed to be given "by prescribing graduated rates of duty on a slab basis, the actual incidence going up with the number of prints." But the "effective rate" would not exceed 30 nP per metre. Educational films, children's films and films not exceeding 9.5 mm in width were to be exempted from the excise duty. The rate of duty per metre on exposed cinematograph feature film of a width of 30 mm or higher would be 10 nP on the first five prints, 15 nP on the next five prints, 20 nP on the next 15 prints, 25 nP on the next 25 prints and 30 nP on the balance of prints of each picture. Reprints of old releases, that is, prints cleared after 12 months immediately following the month of certification by the Central Board of Film Censors would be assessable at 15 nP per metre if they were of a width of 30 mm or higher. Proportionate reductions in respect of feature films below 30 mm in width and newsreels and shorts had also been made.

Agricultural Tractors: These were to be wholly exempted from the excise duty leviable on them following the "present practice on the customs side.

Motor Cars: The duty on medium-sized cars "of more than 16 hp but not more than 20 hp," was to be reduced from Rs. 3,000 per unit to Rs. 1,000. Certain other possible anomalies in the administration of the new tariff on motor vehicles, particularly commercial vehicles, were under examination and some further adjustments might be made.

Staple Fibre Fabrics: The compounded rates of duty were proposed to be reduced. The extent of the reduction would depend upon the number of looms and shifts. For factories employing not more than nine powerlooms, the rates had been reduced from Rs. 24 to Rs. 16 for the first shift, from Rs. 18 to Rs. 16 for the second shift and from Rs. 9 to Rs. 8 for the third shift. For factories employing more than nine but not more than 24 powerlooms the rates had been reduced from Rs. 40 to Rs. 25 for the first shift, from Rs. 28 to Rs. 25 for the second shift and from Rs. 16 to Rs. 15 for the third shift. For factories employing more than 24 powerlooms suitable adjustments in the lower slabs had also been made. The reduced rates would not be applicable to those who manufactured both staple fibre fabrics and art silk fabrics other than staple fibre fabrics.

Cotton Fents: It had been decided to assess as fents cloth measuring up to two and a quarter yards in length instead of the existing measure of two yards.

Cycle Free-wheels and Rims: Small producers whose output did not exceed 1,500 free-wheels and|or 1,000 rims in any one of the preceding 12 months would be allowed a concessional rate of duty, namely, half the impost proposed in the Bill.

Internal Combustion Engines & Electric Motors: Small-scale manufacturers would be given a discount of 20 per cent on the first 100 hp. and 10 per cent on the next 100 hp. cleared in any calendar month provided the total quantity produced in any of the 12 months immediately preceding the month in which clearance is made did not exceed 300 hp.

Aluminium Ingots: Those produced by remelting of old and duty-paid aluminium scraps would be exempted from excise duty. "If these were further processed into sheets and circles, they would have to pay only Rs. 200 per metric ton."

Paper Boards: The ceiling limit of production up to which exemption and a lower slab would apply was proposed to be raised from 3,000 tons to 5,000 tons. A further slab from 1,500 to 3,000 tons at 7 nP per lb had also been prescribed.

All these concessions would reduce the original estimate of revenue by Rs. 49,00,000 by way of excise duty and Rs. 14,00,000 by way of additional excise duty per annum. The changes were implemented by notification which came into effect immediately.

The following changes were also proposed in regard to direct taxation on co-operative societies:

The basic tax-free limit was proposed to be increased from Rs. 10,000 to Rs. 15,000 so that only the business profits in excess of Rs. 15,000 would be liable to income-tax;

Incomes derived by co-operative societies from their banking business and from the provision of credit facilities to their members, whether in the rural or the urban areas, were proposed to be included in the category of exempted incomes.

Specific exemption was to be granted to profits derived by a primary milk society which supplied the milk raised by its members to a federal milk society; and

Exemption to profits derived from the processing of agricultural produce was proposed not to be restricted to the extent to which the processing was ordinarily employed by the cultivator to make it fit to be taken to the market. The condition that processing should not involve the use of power will, however, continue.

(The Times of India, Bombay and The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3211:INI:A]

E. Southern Zonal Council Meeting: The Southern Zonal Council, consisting of the representatives of Andhra Pradesh, Mysore, Madras and Kerala met in New Delhi on April 16.

It was announced at the meeting that Kerala would join the common reserve police force for the Zone. The State Inspector-General of Police would discuss the details with the Inspectors-General of Police of the other three States who would meet to re-examine the common police scheme in view of Kerala's decisions.

[When the communists were in power in Kerala, the State Government had decided to keep out of the scheme.]

Commending the scheme, the Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, who presided over the Council, said that after Kerala had joined the common force, other States would not have to keep a large reserve force of their own. They would be able to draw upon the common force to meet any emergency.

The meeting discussed at length the report of the Ministerial Committee formed to consider the safeguards to be afforded to the linguistic minorities in the Southern Zone. The report, a unanimous document, was approved.

The Committee had accepted the various safeguards provided for linguistic minorities in the Government of India's memorandum on the subject.

The Council appointed a standing committee to discuss and solve the various other difficulties which might arise in implementing the safeguards proposed to be afforded to linguistic minorities.

The Zonal Council re-iterated the need for the speedy electrification of rural areas.

It passed a resolution requesting the Central Government and the Planning Commission to grant interest-free loans or outright subsidies for the implementation of the various rural electrification schemes. The quantum of assistance should be in proportion to the State's capacity in undertaking the task.

It referred the question of utilizing the waters of the river Siruvani in Kerala for drinking purposes in Coimbatore to the Chief Ministers of Madras and Kerala.

(The Times of India, New Delhi and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2081:INI:B, 2335:INI:B]

F. Committee To Examine Price Policy: The National Development Council appointed a 12-man Committee on April 17 to review the problems of price policy in relation to the Third Five-Year Plan.

The Committee consisted of the Chief Ministers of West Bengal (Dr. B. C. Roy), Madhya Pradesh (Dr. K. N. Katju), Uttar Pradesh (Dr. Sampurnanand); Bombay (Mr. Y. B. Chavan); Orissa (Mr. H. K. Mahtab); and the Finance Minister of Madras (Mr. C. Subramaniam); Central Ministers, Pandit G. B. Pant, Mr. Morarji Desai, Sardar Swaran Singh, Mr. G. L. Nanda, Mr. S. K. Patil, and the Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission, Mr. V. T. Krishnamachari, and Mr. Shriman Narain, Member of the Planning Commission.

Earlier, the Central Food and Agriculture Minister, Mr. S. K. Patil, gave the Council a review of the food situation and expressed confidence that prices of foodgrains would be maintained at reasonable levels and that beneficial effects would accrue during the next few months from the buffer-stocks which the Central Government proposed to build up.

The Council generally agreed that the basic remedy for holding the price line lay in stepping up production. It was felt that the import of strategic raw materials and commodities should be allowed and sizable buffer-stocks should be built up. The fiscal policy should be directed against inflation.

The consensus was that while there was no need for alarm, it was imperative that there should be vigilance.

(The Times of India, New Delhi and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3251:INI:A]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

May 7—13, 1960

G. Sangeet Natak Akademi Awards: The Sangeet Natak Akademi announced its awards for music, dance, drama and film for the year 1959-60 on March 30.

The following were the award winners:

Hindustani music—vocal: Ustad Altaf Husain Khan.

Hindustani music — instrumental (sitar): Ustad Wahid Khan.

Karnatak music—vocal: Madurai Mani Iyer.

Karnatak instrumental (veena): Sermadevi L. Subramanya Sastri.

Dance-creative: Uday Shankar.

Drama-acting (Gujerati): Ashraf Khan.

Drama-acting—(Marathi): Gopal Govind 'alias' Nanasaheb Phatak.

Drama-acting—(Malayalam): C. I. Parameswaran Pillai.

Film-acting: Chhabi Biswas.

The awards were presented on April 12.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2576:INI:G]

INDONESIA

A. Ban On Dutch Shipping: The Government ordered a total ban on Dutch shipping to and from Indonesia on April 14.

The order followed reports of Dutch preparations for a "naval flag show" in the West Irian waters in May, 1960. The Government condemned the preparations as "an act of provocation and intimidation."

According to Djakarta reports, the Dutch planned a naval exercise in the West Irian waters. In the exercises would be included the aircraft-carrier, Karel Doorman and two submarines along with other warships.

The Communications Minister, Mr. Abdul Mutalib, told newsmen on August 14 that the ban meant that all ships flying the Dutch flag would be prohibited from carrying passengers or cargo to and from Indonesian ports. The only exception would be Dutch ships en route to Indonesia with import cargoes and those loading cargoes on or before June 6.

He indicated that the action was in line with the directive of the Indonesian acting President, Dr. Djuanda, that the Government should continue to discriminate against Dutch shipping as long as the West Irian issue was not settled.

(Information Service Indonesia and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2947:IND:C]

B. Dutch Bank Nationalized: The Ministry of Finance announced on April 3 the nationalization of the former Dutch Escompto Bank in Djakarta.

The announcement was in line with the Government's policy to nationalize all Dutch-owned enterprises.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 2907:IND:B]

C. Export-Import Bank Loan: The US Export-Import Bank has formally agreed to loan 679,000,000 rupiahs to the Indonesian Government on a long-term basis on an interest of 4 per cent per annum.

The purpose of the loan is the development of Indonesia's national economy.

Its terms are within the framework of the Surplus Agricultural Commodities Agreement between USA and Indonesia.

(Information Service Indonesia)

[Prev. ref. 3194:IND:C and D]

IRAN

A. First Soviet Industrial Exhibition: The first Soviet Industrial Exhibition was opened in Baghdad on April 10.

The opening ceremony was attended by Members of the Iraqi Government headed by the Prime Minister, General Abdel Karim Kassem, high-ranking officers of the Iraqi Army, members of the diplomatic corps and Soviet specialists working at the Exhibition.

Inaugurating the Exhibition, the First Soviet Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. Anastas Mikoyan, said that the people of Iraq, who had cast off the shackles of colonialism, had a good friend in the Soviet Union in building up their new life.

Mr. Mikoyan devoted much of his speech to the history of the economic development of the Soviet Union from the first years of the October Revolution to the present day.

He expressed the hope that the Industrial Exhibition in Baghdad would be an important contribution to increased good relations between the people of Iraq and of the Soviet Union.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 2524:IRQ:B]

ISRAEL

A. Old Bundles Of Papyri Found In Dead Sea Region: Hebrew University scholars, who recently searched caves in the Judean wilderness for Dead Sea scrolls, reported on April 7 that they had found bundles of papyri, 19 centuries old, as well as four wooden markers believed to be charms to ward off evil spirits.

Summing up the results of their two-week expedition in the region of the Dead Sea, they said that some of the caves revealed evidence of occupation by Jewish rebels at the time of Simon Bar-Kochba, who led a rebellion against the Romans in 132-135 AD.

The papyri, dry as dust and tied with string, and the charms were found in the inner recess of a cave which showed evidence of occupation by Jewish rebels of the period. The evidence included 19 beautifully engraved copper vessels, a coin minted by Bar-Kochba and bearing his name and a strip of scroll on which archaeologists deciphered six lines from Chapter 15 of the Book of Psalms.

Dr. Yigal Yadin, who led one of the four teams of the expedition, said that the lettering resembled that on the scrolls found in Qumran cave 13 years ago.

Other finds included a second coin of the Bar-Kochba period, an arrow-head embedded in a cave entrance—evidence of an onslaught on the besieged rebels—and thousands of beads, copper mace heads and other remains dating back to about 5,000 years.

Israel Air Force helicopters carried out preliminary photographic missions to locate the almost invisible mouths of the caves.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3248:ISR:C]

JAPAN

A. Asian Film Festival: The seventh Asian Film Festival was inaugurated by the Prime Minister, Mr. Nobusuke Kishi, in Tokyo on April 5.

Twenty-eight features and 15 documentaries were entered in the Festival by seven countries—Formosa, Hong Kong, Indonesia, South Korea, Malaya, Singapore and Japan.

A panel of 13 judges decided the awards on April 9.

The awards were:

Best dramatic film—Back Door produced by Shaw Brothers of Hong Kong;

Best non-dramatic film—No Need To Be Poor produced by the Malayan Film Unit;

Best leading role (actor)—Kin Seung Koh of South Korea for his role in Romantic Papa produced by Shin Sang Ok Productions of Seoul;

Best supporting actress—Miss Guyang Lee of Hong Kong for her role in Devotion;

Best supporting actor—Leroy Salvador of the Philippines for his role in Bountiful Earth;

Best Director—Wang Tien Ling of Hong Kong for his movie All In The Family;

Best scenario—Wong Liu Chang of Hong Kong for All In The Family;

Best colour photography—Harug Takeono of Japan's Shockiku Company, for his film When a Woman Loves;

Best black and white photography—Steve Perez of the Philippines for I Accuse My Father, produced by Pera Pereb Corp;

Best film editor—Yoshitami Kuroiwa of Japan for his work on The Lost Alibi by Toho Company; and Best sound recording—Norimichi Iawa of Japan in The Samurai Vagabonds.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 374:PHI:A, 3281:UAR:A]

B. Thesis On New Elementary Particle: Prof. Akira Takeda of Tokyo University advanced on April 5 a new theory of matter based on the existence of a new elementary particle which he named "Ro" particle.

The new particle, according to it, is formed when two "Pi" mesons combine and is four times as heavy as a "Pi" meson.

The "Pi" meson was discovered by another Japanese scientist, Dr. Hideki Yukawa. Dr. Yukawa was later awarded the Nobel Prize.

Unlike the 11 varieties of elementary particles like protons and neutrons, the "Ro" particle exists in a high energy state of excitation, but its life is said to be very short.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

LEBANON

A. Development Programme: A Bill which was before Parliament at the beginning of April, 1960 provided for an extra-budgetary expenditure of £L151,430,000 on development works during 1960.

This is roughly equivalent to the £5,818,000 which Lebanon is receiving from the Iraq Petroleum Company in settlement of past claims for oil transit dues.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The amount will be spent mainly on water and electrification projects and on road-building—in addition to the £L41,600,000 allocated to construction work in the 1960 Budget approved in January, 1960.

The Five-Year Development Plan is still being surveyed by Lebanese technicians and by a French firm retained as consultants.

(£L 6.16=£1)

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2725:LEB:A]

MALAYA

A. New Paramount Ruler Elected: The Sultan of Selangor, Sir Hisamuddin Sulaiman Shah, was elected Yang di Pertuan Agong (Paramount Ruler) in Kuala Lumpur on August 14 by the nine Chiefs of the States of the Federation of Malaya.

He will hold office for five years.

He succeeded Tunku Abdul Rehman who died on April 1.

(The Straits Times, Singapore)

[Prev. ref. 3293:MAL:A]

B. Paramount Ruler's Address To Parliament: In his opening address to Parliament, the first since he took over office, the new Yang di Pertuan Agong (Paramount Ruler), the Sultan of Selangor, said on April 19 that the Government had planned to end the 11-year-old anti-communist emergency on July 31, 1960.

He spoke of the debt owed to the security forces—both Malayan and Commonwealth—for their sustained and courageous efforts in this regard over the years and said: "Many tributes have been paid to them and the list of honours and awards earned by them is in itself an epic of heroism and devotion to duty in their long and arduous struggle.

"Five or 10 years ago, the terror of murder and ambush was always present and no one could travel outside the town area without an escort. There were many dark periods when to most of us the prospects of victory seemed remote indeed.

"It has not been an easy victory and the cost has been dear both in lives and resources....

"It is already the conviction of the Government that there will not be real peace in this country until communist terrorism in every form is completely eliminated. Malaya can claim the distinction of having been the only country to have fought and conquered these forces of evil. It will remain a glittering period in our history. We have emerged from these times and tribulations strong, united, and undivided."

He warned, however, against subversion after the shooting war was over and said that the Government would introduce legislation giving it powers of "preventive detention" after repealing the emergency regulations.

He said that Malaya would continue to work for the formation of any organization for economic and cultural co-operation among the South-East Asian countries.

The Malayan Government would use its influence through United Nations for world disarmament and would "strive against imperialism in any form anywhere."

He also announced that the Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, would bring up at the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference in London in May the question of the recent South African riots in which many Africans were killed.

He said that the Government attached great value to Commonwealth ties, but the "Commonwealth partnership cannot bind us to the terrible implications of the policy of apartheid being pursued in defiance of all true feelings of humanity by the South African Government."

The financial outlook of the country was encouraging. The Government was preparing its Second Five-Year Development Plan.

In the field of commerce and industry, Malaya would support and foster primary products. Rubber development schemes would be undertaken to ensure the country's position as the world's largest producer of natural rubber. Increasing attention would also be given to the development of Malaya's tin industry, and the development of rural areas would be one of the important tasks of the Government this year.

(The Times, London and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2878:MAL:A]

C. Tengku Abdul Rehman On Aims Of Proposed South-East Asia Friendship And Economic Treaty: Addressing the annual session of the United Malay National Organization—premier constituent of the ruling Triple Alliance—in Kuala Lumpur on April 16, the Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, explained the aims of a South-East Asia Friendship and Economic Treaty alliance he had been advocating for some time.

He said that the alliance was not directed at anybody but was merely intended for the betterment of the people of the countries associated with the alliance.

Meanwhile, on April 9, reports from Baguio (Philippines) said that the representatives of Malaya and the Philippines had reached agreement on a six-point programme for the alliance.

The main points of the programme, according to the reports, were:

(1) It would be non-political, non-ideological, and not tied to any military alliance;

(2) It would adhere to the Bandung principles;

(3) It would seek economic development and a rise in living standards in South-East Asia through co-operation among its members;

(4) The Philippines and Malaya would ask Burma, Indonesia, South Viet-Nam, Laos, Cambodia and Thailand to co-sponsor the alliance;

(5) They would invite self-governing territories such as Singapore to join as associate-members; and

(6) Adhesion of other States would be left to a joint decision of the sponsoring States.

Tengku Abdul Rehman, who jointly sponsored the alliance with the Philippines President, Mr. Carlos Garcia, in 1959, said that though Malaya and some of her neighbouring countries were the principal producers of important commodities like rubber and tin, there was no proper organization to protect the prices of these commodities and, therefore, consumer countries had been able to "dictate the prices."

He said: "Whether or not there is co-operation such as the one I suggest, the producing countries in South-East Asia can, by acting together, influence the prices and protect their interests."

The proposed association envisaged mutual co-operation in similar fields such as shipping, civil aviation and in giving technical training to the nationals and officials of the member-countries.

He denied reports that the idea of co-operation had originated in Britain and America. "These allegations are completely unfounded."

If the alliance existed and was working successfully, "it is such countries as Britain and America that might be adversely affected."

Referring to the achievements of his Government, he said: "Within two years of Independence we have a reserve of about 200 million Malayan dollars in our treasury which is quite an extraordinary feat anywhere in the world."

Malaya had earned the full confidence and high respect of all other countries and as a result of this confidence foreign capital was pouring into the country for new industries.

Turning to foreign policy, he stated that Malaya had taken a leading role in United Nations on the question of communist aggression in Tibet and that his party had also participated in the recent New Delhi Convention against this aggression. This was in keeping with Malaya's independent foreign policy.

Referring to the Sharpeville massacre in South Africa he said that the whole world was shocked to hear of the cruelty perpetrated by the South African police on the people. Though the procedure of the Commonwealth Premiers' Conference did not allow one member to interfere in the internal affairs of another member country, "we cannot remain silent on the happenings in South Africa."

(The Straits Times, Singapore and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2528:PHI:C]

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: Col. G. A. Nasser's Visit; US Agricultural Commodities Agreement; US Delegation On Foreign Investment Climate; Trade Agreement With UAR; New Governors; Questionnaire By Constitution Commission; Municipal Administration Ordinance.

A. Col. G. A. Nasser's Visit: The President of United Arab Republic, Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser, arrived in Karachi on April 10 from Bombay on a six-day visit to Pakistan. He received a big welcome.

A 21-gun salute was fired as his aircraft landed. A hundred doves, symbolizing peace, were released.

The Pakistan President, Field-Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan, received Col. Nasser at the airport. Thousands of people thronged the airfield, while several thousands more lined the eight-mile route to the city.

Decorations Exchanged:

On the night of April 10, Col. G. A. Nasser was decorated with Pakistan's highest civil award—Nishan-e-Pakistan—by F-M Ayub Khan.

Col. Nasser returned the gesture by conferring UAR's highest award—Kladatat-al-Nil—on F-M Ayub Khan.

Awarding the Nishan-e-Pakistan to Col. Nasser, F-M Ayub Khan read the following citation:

"Mr. President, the Government and the people of Pakistan have the greatest respect for the way in which you have led your people to unity, progress and prosperity and greatly appreciate your sincere efforts to foster better relations between our two countries.

"We assure you, Your Excellency, that the people of Pakistan hold you and your country in the highest esteem.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"As a token of our heart-felt sentiments of cordiality and deep regard, we present to you, Mr. President, a Nishan in the Order of Pakistan, which is the highest civil award in Pakistan.

"With this token of our highest esteem, Mr. President, we wish to convey to you our earnest prayers for your health and happiness."

State Banquet:

Speaking at a State banquet given in his honour by F-M Ayub Khan in Karachi on the night of April 10, Col. G. A. Nasser said that the people of Pakistan "who are so close and so dear to us will realize their aspirations under wise leadership and will build a bright future, a future of freedom and prosperity".

He said that the Arab nation looked upon "the great experiment going on in Pakistan with great hope and encouragement."

He summed up Pakistan-UAR relations with the remark "that if the means should differ sometimes, our aims cannot but meet at the end."

He spoke of Afro-Asian solidarity and referred to Pakistan's support for the cause of the Palestine and Algerian people as factors which "can but unite our aims."

He said that the Arab nations had triumphed and continued to triumph despite all endeavours made to hamper their march.

Earlier, F-M Ayub Khan assured Col. Nasser that the people of Pakistan looked upon the Arabs as their brothers.

First Round Of Talks:

Col. G. A. Nasser and F-M Ayub Khan began their talks in Karachi on April 11.

In the morning (April 11), Col. Nasser laid a wreath on the tomb of Mr. Mohammed Ali Jinnah, the founder of Pakistan.

He also visited the Karachi Shipyard and Engineering Works of the Pakistan Industrial Development Corporation.

A preliminary communique issued in Karachi on April 11 on the talks between the two Presidents said that F-M Ayub Khan opened the discussion and surveyed the entire international field from the point of view of Pakistan, explaining the reasons why Pakistan followed a particular foreign policy.

The communique added: "President Nasser on his part did the same. He gave a complete exposition of the United Arab Republic's foreign policy."

It added that possibly further talks would be held between the two Presidents in Peshawar later.

Arrival In East Pakistan:

Col. G. A. Nasser arrived in Dacca by air from Karachi on a day's visit to East Pakistan on April 12.

Later, speaking at a public reception in Dacca, Col. Nasser expressed the hope that mutual sympathy and self-confidence among the peoples of Afro-Asian countries would "lead us through all our struggles."

He referred to the support given to Egypt by the Asian and African nations during the Anglo-French invasion of Egypt and said that that support enabled Egypt to defeat her enemies. "Whatever be our geographical positions, never again will our enemies be able to emerge victorious if we have the same self-reliance and bond of unity."

An address presented to Col. Nasser on the occasion referred to the bonds of friendship existing between the United Arab Republic and Pakistan.

Civic Reception In Dacca:

Replying to a civic address presented to him in Dacca on April 12, Col. G. A. Nasser thanked the people of Pakistan and other Asian and African countries for the sympathy and support extended to Egypt when she had been attacked by powerful enemies (UK, France and Israel) in 1956 (Suez crisis).

Britain and France, he added, had tried to strengthen Israel so that she could rule over the entire Arab world, but Egypt had been able, with this support, to defeat her enemies. The lesson of it all was that never again would such Powers be able to emerge victorious, if they—the Asian and African nations—continued to have the same spirit of mutual help and self-reliance.

In a tribute to F-M Ayub Khan, he said that Pakistan and UAR were travellers on the same path and he was very happy to find that Pakistan was being led on the right road by F-M Ayub Khan.

He added: "Relations between us are strong; they have to go from strength to strength. We cannot forget your support to us when artificial obstacles were being put in the way. There were always bonds of friendship as well as spiritual and moral ties that bound us."

Dacca University's Honour:

Dacca University conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws (Honoris Causa) on Col. Nasser at a special Convocation on April 13.

Addressing the Convocation, Col. Nasser said that the honour conferred on him represented an endeavour on the part of the newly-independent nations to develop intellectual relations among themselves.

Also, on April 13, Col. Nasser told a news conference in Dacca that the time had come for smaller and newly-independent nations of the world to establish cultural co-operation among themselves.

He emphasized the new responsibilities of the more advanced nations among the newly-independent countries to help consolidate their hard-won freedom by promoting the pace of development through their knowledge and technical know-how.

He said he feared that nations which were monopolizing learning would use it to dominate others. "Therefore, we have to develop education and learning in our countries in order to avoid being dominated by those countries."

In Lahore:

Later in the day (April 13), Col. Nasser arrived in Lahore.

Large crowds gave him a big welcome.

Address To Anjuman-e-Himayat-e-Islam:

Delivering the presidential address at the annual session of the Anjuman-e-Himayat-e-Islam in Lahore on April 14, Col. G. A. Nasser said that there was need for bringing Muslim countries closer together in order to prevent the imperialist Powers from exploiting and destroying their unity.

He said that unity was vital for the progress and prosperity of the Muslim world. The Muslim countries should meet together and devise plans to counteract and put a stop to the activities of the imperialists who were sowing seeds of dissension in order to disrupt the independence of the Muslim world.

If there was any aggression against his country it was also aggression against Pakistan. If UAR lost her freedom Pakistan would also lose her's, and if UAR was dominated by the imperialists, Pakistan would also be dominated by them.

Islam bound the two countries in spiritual bonds and expected that one would come to the rescue of the other in trouble.

Referring to his book Philosophy of Revolution in this connexion, he said that in it he had stressed the need for providing meeting grounds to the Muslim world to consider their problems and find out solutions. The Muslim countries could also strengthen the cultural and trade relations and thus contribute tremendously to mutual development.

Islam was a religion of peace, love and friendship, and by working on the principles of Islam, the whole Muslim world could be united. The Muslim countries were in need of a society which could protect Islam and make the people adopt Islamic ideology. This type of society could also play a prominent role in protecting the independence of Muslim countries.

Referring to the Suez war of 1956, he said that the people of UAR could not forget the moral support of the Pakistani people who, with one voice, had condemned the UK-French-Israeli aggression against Egypt. They could not also forget the demonstrations and monetary help given by the people of Pakistan then.

Speaking about Israel, he said, it was not a nation alone but a stronghold of imperialists. It was receiving an aid of $300,000,000, besides modern weapons, including tanks, planes and submarines from foreign countries. UAR was prepared for a total war against Israel, against all imperialists and against any Power which threatened her independence.

News Conference—No Mediation On Kashmir Issue:

Col. G. A. Nasser told a news conference in Rawalpindi on April 14 that he was opposed to the idea of the formation of an Islamic bloc in the world even for unitedly fighting the forces of imperialism as he did not believe in having religion as the basis of international politics.

He said that there were religious minorities in every country and if there were Muslim, or Christian, or Hindu blocs, it would cause misunderstandings among the minorities and adversely affect the solidarity of the respective countries.

The association of nations on the basis of religion would give rise to fanaticism and would not be helpful to world peace. Rival blocks of Christians, Zoroastrians, Hindus and so on would crop up and minorities would suffer at the hands of religious fanatics.

The United Arab Republic was working for world peace through a policy of non-alignment and neutrality. UAR supported 'summit' meetings because they could end the 'cold war'. "We support the ending of nuclear tests, disarmament and solution of problems which create fear problems like Palestine and Algeria."

Peace through co-operation among nations was essential to give under-developed countries a chance to raise their standards of living. "The big difference between the economic standards of developed countries and under-developed countries is not conducive to peace."

UAR believed that a disarmament agreement could release huge amounts of money, now spent on defence, for urgently needed assistance to under-developed countries.

He added that he had not offered to mediate in the Kashmir issue between India and Pakistan.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He said that he had been asked by Indian newspapermen during his tour of India whether he would mediate and bring about a settlement between India and Pakistan on the Kashmir issue and he had stated that UAR hoped for good relations between India and Pakistan but had not offered to mediate. What he said was that he was willing to offer his good offices if the two countries were willing to accept that (see page 3290).

He refused to be drawn into further discussion on the subject.

Citizens' Reception In Lahore:

The citizens of Lahore gave a civic reception to Col. G. A. Nasser on April 14.

Replying to the address of welcome, Col. Nasser said that the people of UAR would extend their moral support to the people of Pakistan if ever aggression was committed against them in the manner in which the people of Pakistan voiced their feelings in 1956 when Egypt had been attacked on the Suez issue.

Farewell Banquet In Peshawar:

In a speech at the farewell banquet given in his honour in Peshawar on the night of April 15, Col. G. A. Nasser said that his visit to Pakistan had convinced him that Pakistan and the United Arab Republic would collaborate with each other as close friends in future. "Brotherhood between the two countries should now be eternal and glorious."

He said: "I wish to stress that I return to my country filled with dear memories."

Earlier, F-M Ayub Khan said:

"I sincerely trust that your visit will build the edifice of closer understanding between Pakistan and UAR. We hope it will be followed by an increasing exchange of visits from other dignitaries from your country. Nothing helps more to foster closer understanding between nations than exchange of ideas at first hand among leaders.

"To us, therefore, the privilege of having you amidst us was of special significance. Your personal observations will have convinced you of the sincerity of the people of Pakistan towards you and your people, their warmth and esteem for you."

Final Round Of Talks:

The final round of talks between Col. G. A. Nasser and F-M Ayub Khan took place in Peshawar on April 15. They lasted 2½ hours.

The following day (April 16), Col. Nasser left Peshawar for Karachi on his way back home, and later in the day, he left Karachi for Cairo.

Joint Communique:

In a joint communique issued in Rawalpindi on April 16 at the end of Col. Nasser's visit, the two Presidents denounced racial discrimination in South Africa, welcomed the forthcoming 'summit' meeting and expressed hopes for its success in easing world tensions.

The communique said:

"Throughout these visits, the President was accorded a most cordial and enthusiastic reception, which was a tribute both to his outstanding personality and leadership and to the historic ties which united the two countries.

"At Karachi and Peshawar, talks were held between the two Presidents on the world situation in general and on problems of mutual and special interest. The discussions were held in an atmosphere of the greatest cordiality and understanding.

"The two Presidents noted with satisfaction the efforts which are being made by the Great Powers to seek relaxation of international tensions and expressed their earnest hope for the success of the forthcoming meeting of the Heads of States in May this year.

"They also lent full support to the current efforts towards disarmament and a ban on nuclear explosions. The two Presidents were, however, of the view that while by themselves these efforts were laudable and deserving of full support from every nation, it was imperative for a lasting world peace to ensure not only an easing of tensions but also an elimination of the causes which compel nations to seek armaments.

"In this context, the two Presidents reaffirmed their faith in the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of one country by another and deplored all actions which heighten tensions and dangers of conflict.

"The Presidents re-iterated their view that the question of Palestine should be resolved in keeping with the resolutions of United Nations and the principles unanimously adopted by the Afro-Asian Conference at Bandung for a peaceful settlement of the Palestine question.

"The two Presidents expressed their concern over the situation in Algeria and reiterated their views that the right of the Algerian people to self-determination and independence should be recognized and peacefully implemented, and that statesmanship rather than force should bring to an end the uninterrupted bloodshed which has marked the struggle in Algeria during the past several years.

"The two Presidents welcomed the emergence of newly-independent States in Africa and expressed the hope that other dependent nations in that continent would also be encouraged and enabled in the near future to join the comity of independent nations.

"They deplored the racial discrimination practised by certain countries in Africa which is not only unjust and degrading to a vast section of humanity but also carries within itself the seeds of discord and turmoil. They also expressed their sense of shock and abhorrence at the recent killings and acts of violence in South Africa.

"The two Presidents discussed at length the measures which UAR and Pakistan were taking in order to improve the economic conditions of the peoples of their two countries. They felt convinced that educational reforms, land reforms and industrialization were essential before newly-developed countries could become prosperous and strong.

"They explained to each other at length the methods of economic development and the nature of political institutions they were introducing in their respective countries.

"In conclusion, the two Presidents expressed their pleasure and satisfaction at the ever-increasing ties of cordial friendship and co-operation between Pakistan and UAR. This friendship and co-operation is inspired not only by the Islamic bonds of brotherhood which unite the two nations but is also born of identity of purposes and objectives, a common desire to promote peace and well-being not only in their own areas but also throughout the world.

"The desire for close co-operation between the two countries has already found practical expression in the field of culture and commerce. A Cultural Agreement has already been concluded between Pakistan and UAR and the delegations of the two countries are currently holding discussions to finalize a Trade Agreement.

"President Abdel Nasser of UAR has invited President Ayub Khan to visit UAR, and President Ayub Khan has accepted the invitation with much pleasure."

Speech At Cairo:

Addressing vast crowds within an hour of his return to Cairo on April 16, Col. G. A. Nasser spoke feelingly of the support of Indian leaders and people in the "battles" of the people of UAR.

He said that the warm welcome accorded to him in New Delhi made him feel as if he was in Damascus in the midst of Arab supporters. "I salute these (Indian) hard-working people, working laboriously for the development and industrialization of their country and struggling strenuously to solve their problems, to raise their standards of living."

For the first time since the Suez crisis, Col. Nasser, in his speech publicly bracketted together India and Pakistan for their friendliness and support for Arab causes and said that the friendly people of India and Pakistan were closely watching the struggles of the Arabs and stood by them.

He criticised the former Pakistan Prime Minister, Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy, who, he said, followed an anti-Egyptian policy during the Suez crisis; but, despite official antipathy, he said, the moral force of the Pakistani people ultimately triumphed in their support for Egypt.

He said that ironically enough, even as he was visiting Lahore, Mr. Suhrawardy was facing a trial on charges of corruption and bribery.

He paid a tribute to F-M Ayub Khan of Pakistan.

Referring to his talks with Mr. Nehru, he said: "In New Delhi, I heard the Indian leader, Mr. Nehru, sympathizing with you and supporting your aims. He spoke about Arab nationalism, Arab unity and your struggle for your freedom."

He said: "By repelling tripartite aggression, the Arab people of Port Said protected Asia and Africa from aggression and if the Arab people of Egypt had not been triumphant, such aggression would have forced its way again into Asia."

He went on: "I roamed over India from the north to the south and from the east to the west, and I heard and witnessed the Indian people supporting you and backing your battles.

"We have thus a weapon more effective than the atomic bomb—the power of Afro-Asian solidarity. To counter imperialist ambitions, we will use every means at our disposal to re-inforce the independence movement which continues to grow in Africa and Asia".

Iraqi Comment:

In Baghdad, the President of the People's Court, Col. Fadhel Abbas Mahdawi, referred on April 11 to the visit of Col. Nasser to Pakistan and alleged that Col. Nasser was co-operating with CENTO (Central Treaty Organization—of which Pakistan is a member) to plot against Iraq.

He added that Col. Nasser's visit to Pakistan had "exposed him once again".

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo, Dawn, Karachi and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 1278:PAK:A, 3289:INI:B]

B. US Agricultural Commodities Agreements: An Agreement providing for the purchase by the Government of Pakistan of 1,000,000 tons of American wheat and wheat products valued at $72,200,000, to be paid in Pakistani rupees, was signed in Karachi on April 11 by the Pakistan Finance Minister, Mr. M. Shoaib, and the American Ambassador, Mr. William Rountree.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A Supplementary Agreement was also signed for the purchase from America of other surplus agricultural commodities, such as cotton, tobacco and cottonseed oil, to the tune of $15,900,000.

These two are the latest in the chain of Agreements concluded between the Governments of Pakistan and the United States aiming at the development of a number of projects designed to promote balanced economic development with particular emphasis upon building up adequate food reserves.

These two Agreements would bring the total cost of American agricultural commodities made available to Pakistan, for Pakistani rupees, to $384,000,000.

Pakistani rupees paid in connexion with the purchase of American agricultural commodities would be mainly used on development projects in Pakistan and the residue for other mutually agreed purposes. In the past, rupee funds from this source have been utilized in financing a number of important development projects in Pakistan, such as the Karnafuli Hydro-electric Project, the Korangi Housing Scheme, the various health schemes in operation in the provinces and the establishment of training institutes for teachers.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3080:PAK:A]

C. US Delegation's Report On Foreign Investment In Pakistan: The five-man American delegation which spent six weeks early in 1960 touring East and West Pakistan said in a report released in Karachi on April 16 that the overall climate in Pakistan was relatively favourable for foreign investments.

The report described the staunch backing given by the present regime in Pakistan to private enterprise as one of the principal encouraging factors and said that Pakistan was in competition for investment of capital with the rest of the less developed countries of the world. The inducements it offered to foreign investors must be sufficiently attractive to meet this competition. Such did not appear to be the case notwithstanding the steps already undertaken by the Government in this direction.

The provision for a two-year tax holiday was, however, not sufficient. Pakistan should offer increased inducements in the form of a more liberal tax holiday for new investments whether from Pakistan or foreign sources.

The present tax rate of 55 per cent to 65 per cent including inter-corporate tax on the profits of industrial undertakings set up or commenced in Pakistan after June 30, 1959 was one of the highest tax rates in the world.

The historical philosophy of "control for the sake of control" of industry as set forth in many existing laws and regulations and "the apparent over-zealousness of the civil service in administering such laws and regulations is a deterrent factor."

It also noticed that the implementation of the policy of encouragement to foreign investors in the recent past had not always been of such a nature as to create a good name for Pakistan in the world-wide capital markets.

It also became conscious of the difficulties experienced by some foreign companies in getting permission to bring in foreign technical, executive or managerial personnel for their operation in Pakistan.

It received complaints that foreign technicians experienced difficulties in bringing in their private automobiles.

It, however, hoped that, in view of the overall policy of the Government, appropriate steps would be taken to correct any deficiencies which might exist.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3234:PAK:C]

D. US Wheat Purchase Authorizations: The US Department of Agriculture announced on April 2 further amendments to two wheat or wheat-flour purchase authorizations issued to Pakistan to provide for the purchase of an additional $6,856,000 worth (about 115,000 metric tons) of wheat or flour from the United States.

A previous authorization was amended to provide for the purchase of an additional $4,004,000 worth (about 65,000 metric tons), or a total of $10,087,000 worth (about 165,000 metric tons) of wheat, grade US No. 2 or better, in bulk, or wheat flour.

Only the following wheat would be eligible for the financing: (1) hard red spring of the sub-classes dark hard winter, hard winter and yellow hard winter; and (2) mixed wheat containing not more than 5 per cent of the classes of wheat (excluding durum) other than the classes specified in (1) and (2). Flour milled from durum wheat of the sub-classes hard amber, amber durum and durum, and red durum wheat would not be eligible.

About 92,000 metric tons previously authorized had been purchased.

Another authorization was amended to provide for the purchase of an additional $2,852,000 worth (about 50,000 metric tons) or a total of $11,413,000 worth (about 200,000 metric tons) of white wheat of the sub-classes hard wheat, soft white, white club and western white wheat, grade US No. 2 or better, in bulk or wheat flour (excluding flour milled from red durum wheat, and durum wheat of the sub-classes hard amber durum, amber durum and durum).

About 70,000 metric tons previously authorized had been purchased.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3080:PAK:A]

E. Inter-College Exchange Plan With USA To Be Continued: It was made known in Karachi on April 3 that a new Agreement had been signed by the Government of Pakistan and the United States International Co-operation Administration (ICA) Mission assuring the continuance of the Inter-College Exchange Programme.

Under the Agreement, American technical staffs from three US universities would continue their programmes at the Universities of Peshawar, Punjab and Dacca, and Pakistani teachers would continue to be sent to USA for advanced training.

The ICA would provide $1,050,000 to continue these programmes through October, 1961, with future assistance to be reviewed and considered prior to the expiration of the new Agreement.

The Agreement noted that the Inter-College Exchange Programme, initiated in 1954, was making progress and an important contribution to the joint efforts of the Government of Pakistan and the American Economic Mission to improve agriculture, education, commerce, natural resources and industry.

The Programme was designed to provide facilities and programmes of instruction which would become the basis for training able and qualified leaders in commerce, education, agriculture, engineering, home economics, social welfare, sociology and community life.

The joint programme of the Government of Pakistan and ICA has given 75 Pakistanis the opportunity of receiving advanced training in USA.

Since the Programme was started in 1954, ICA has obligated $7,599,000 in financial support of the Programme.

(Dawn, Karachi)

F. Canadian Aid For Shadiwal Project: It was made known in Karachi on April 6 that an Agreement had been signed between the Government of Canada and the Government of Pakistan under which the Canadian Government would contribute $3,500,000 towards the financing and construction of the Shadiwal Hydro-electric Project.

The Canadian contribution would be in the form of equipment and technical skill and some material.

The station would be situated near Shadiwal village, near Gujrat.

The power generated by the station would also be used for industrial and other purposes.

The Shadiwal Project envisages the generation of 12,000 kw of power for the operation of tube-wells to reclaim water-logged lands.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3249:PAK:B]

G. Trade Agreement With UAR: Pakistan and the United Arab Republic signed a Trade Agreement in Karachi on April 15. The Agreement came into force immediately and would be valid for one year.

The Agreement provided for the grant of most-favoured-nation treatment to each other in respect of commerce.

It also provided for the holding of exhibitions and trade fairs in each other's country.

The list of commodities to be imported and exported, subject to normal regulations, were appended to the Agreement.

The main items of interest were cement from UAR and jute from Pakistan.

The two Governments would also endeavour to promote trade in other items on the list.

Although the Agreement was of a general nature, it provided for the conclusion of such special arrangements for the exchange of commodities and promotion of trade as may be considered necessary from time to time by the two Governments.

In order to facilitate the implementation of the Agreement, the two Governments agreed to consult each other as and when necessary and to appoint one or more representatives to review the working of the Agreement, to examine the possibilities of increasing the trade, to amend the list of commodities to be imported and exported and to deal with any question arising out of or in relation to this Agreement.

Payments would be made in £ sterling and trade conducted, unless otherwise agreed to, through the normal trade channels.

This was the first Trade Agreement between UAR and Pakistan.

The Agreement contained a list of items exchangeable between the two countries which included, from Pakistan's side, sports goods, electric fans, surgical instruments, optical instruments, jute and raw wool, etc. From the side of UAR, the list included cotton, cotton yarn and textiles, phosphates and superphosphates, crude oil and products including gasoline, onions and potatoes, olive oil, heavy duty tyres, books, manuscripts and cinematograph films, etc.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 170:PAK:K]

H. New Governors For East And West Pakistan: The Government announced on April 11 the appointment of new Governors for East Pakistan and West Pakistan.

Lieut-General M. Azam Khan, Food and Agriculture Minister in the Presidential Cabinet, was appointed Governor of East Pakistan in place of Mr.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Zakir Hussain, who was proceeding on leave.

Nawab Amir Mohammad Khan of Kalabagh, Chairman of the Pakistan Industrial Development Corporation (PIDC), was appointed Governor of West Pakistan in place of Mr. Akhtar Hussain, who was also proceeding on leave.

Mr. Zakir Hussain and Mr. Akhtar Hussain were expected to join the Pakistan Cabinet after the expiry of their leave.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2139:PAK:G]

I. Constitution Commission Issues Questionnaire: The Constitution Commission set up by the President in February, 1960 released on April 16 an elaborate questionnaire on the general pattern of the future Constitution of Pakistan for eliciting public opinion.

The Commission fixed May 31 as the last date for receiving replies.

The questionnaire, among other things, sought public opinion on the nature and causes of the progressive failure of the parliamentary pattern of democratic government, its preference to presidential, parliamentary, federal or unitary form of government and unicameral or bicameral legislature.

There were also questions on the type of suffrage suitable for the country and choice between separate and joint electorates. People were also asked to discuss the distribution of powers, the pattern of the judiciary, and the powers of Governors of Provinces.

One question asked for opinion on "Droit Administratif" (administrative law), a system of administration followed in France regarding the relations of Government with its own public servants in matters of discipline.

The Commission also asked for suggestions on establishing "a democracy adaptable to changing circumstances and based on the Islamic principles of justice, equality and tolerance," and the special measures to assist Muslims in the study of the basic values of Islam and of their application to the changing conditions of life.

Opinions on the reservation of seats for women in the legislative assemblies, provision for Scheduled Castes and the procedure for the amendment of the Constitution were also asked for.

A 40-page annexure, released with the questionnaire contained, besides the terms of reference of the Constitution Commission, short notes on unitary, federal, parliamentary and presidential forms of government, checks and balances, and the veto powers.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3207:PAK:A]

J. Funds And Properties Of Political Parties Forfeited: A Martial Law Order issued in Dacca on April 13 said that assets, funds and other properties of East Pakistan's defunct political parties, which were seized on the promulgation of Martial Law on October 7, 1958, would be forfeited to the provincial administration.

The Order authorized district officials to deal with and dispose of such assets, funds and properties.

Any representation may either be rejected or referred for adjudication to district judges.

The Order also stipulated that moneys, securities or credits being used for purposes of a defunct political party shall be forfeited.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2618:PAK:B]

K. Restrictions On Movement Of Wheat In West Pakistan Removed: The West Pakistan Chief Secretary, Mr. M. Khurshid, announced in Lahore on April 1 the withdrawal of restrictions on the movement of wheat throughout the Province.

He told a news conference that the measure would benefit 30 per cent of the population.

As a result of the new policy, wheat and wheat products would move freely throughout the Province including Karachi. Monopoly procurement, purchase and handling of wheat by the Government would end. Price control on wheat would go and the Government depot-holders would no longer be required to deal in wheat and atta.

He said that exception had been made in the case of border areas where, within a 10-mile belt of border, the sale and purchase of wheat would be restricted to one maund at a time. Provisioning would continue till May 1. The margin of one month had been given to enable the trade to organize itself and pile up stocks for consumption in deficit areas.

The Government would, for the present, sit back and watch the situation as it developed following free movement of wheat. To deal with rocketing prices, the Government had already stocked 4,25,000 tons of wheat. The stocks, which would continue to be replenished would be kept at that level at a given time throughout the provinces.

Four Orders and several Martial Law Notifications were withdrawn on April 1 and three other Orders were amended with the withdrawal of the wheat control orders marking the end of a chapter in West Pakistan's food policy initiated 18 years ago when the Japanese threatened the food supplies of the sub-continent during World War II.

The "period of controls" saw the introduction of statutory rationing in the whole of the sub-continent. Since then, food supplies had been regulated through various Orders and Notifications.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3107:PAK:C]

L. Prison Terms On Charges Of High Treason: The Special Military Court in Karachi sentenced Khwaja Muzaffarul Haq, a former Minister in the West Pakistan Cabinet, on April 6 to 10 years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 60,000, or in default, to three more years' of rigorous imprisonment, on a charge of high treason.

Mr. Hashim Gazdar, a former Deputy Speaker in the Constituent Assembly and a former Mayor of Karachi, was sentenced to five years' rigorous imprisonment in the same case.

Mr. Ismail Burhani, also a former Minister in West Pakistan, and Mr. Aslam Moorad, an executive of an oil Company, were sentenced to eight years' rigorous imprisonment each.

Two others accused in the case—Haji Ismail and Rana Nasrullah—were acquitted.

Khwaja Muzaffarul Haq was arrested on September 9, 1959 along with Mr. Ismail Burhani and Mr. Aslam Moorad under Martial Law Regulations Nos. 24 and 55 and Section 121-A of the Penal Code. Mr. Hashim Gazdar was arrested two days later and the other accused were arrested in the same month.

The accused were tried by a Special Military Court. The trial was held in camera. No details of the charges against them were made public.

Announcing the judgment, the Court said that Mr. Hashim Gazdar was found guilty of two charges and the other three accused of four charges under Martial Law Regulations Nos. 24 and 55 and Section 121-A of the Penal Code.

Martial Law Regulation No. 24 reads: "No one, by word of mouth or in writing or by signals or otherwise, will spread reports calculated to create alarm or despondency among the public or any member thereof. Maximum punishment for the offence is 14 years' rigorous imprisonment."

Regulations No. 55 reads: "No person shall organize, convene or attend any meeting or procession of a political nature. Maximum punishment is seven years' rigorous imprisonment."

The Court recommended "A" Class for all the accused.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3172:PAK:G, 3222:PAK:D]

M. Municipal Administration Ordinance Promulgated: The President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, promulgated the Municipal Administration Ordinance on April 12 providing that no municipal committee shall consist of more than 30 elected members.

In addition, there shall be official and appointed members whose total number shall not exceed that of elected members.

In the matter of appointment of members, regard shall be had to the ability of persons to render service to the people, and due consideration shall be given to the representation of minorities and women and organizations concerned with agricultural, industrial or community development.

Each Committee shall have a chairman to be appointed by the Government, and a vice-chairman elected from among the elected members.

Any member absenting himself from three consecutive meetings of the committee will render himself liable to removal from its membership.

For every Municipal Committee there shall be a fund to be known as the municipal fund, and the Committee may, with the previous sanction of the Government, levy all or any of the taxes, rates, tolls and fees mentioned in one of the schedules to the Ordinance.

The Ordinance lays down the functions of the Committee in regard to public health, water supply and drainage, articles of food and drink, animals, town-planning, building-control, public safety, parks, gardens, education, social welfare and development.

The Ordinance consolidates and amends the law relating to municipal administration.

It extends to the whole of the country and will take effect, barring some provisions which come into force at once, in such areas on such dates as the Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, decide.

The Government may, in the prescribed manner, declare any urban area other than a cantonment to be a municipality and extend, curtail or otherwise alter the limit thereof, or declare that any urban area shall, from the date to be specified, cease to be a municipality.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2643:PAK:H]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10, Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95/-; Foreign Rs. 115/- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

May 14—20, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI No. 20

PAKISTAN

A. Supreme Court Accepts Mr. M. A. Khuhro's Appeal: The Supreme Court accepted Mr. M. A. Khuhro's appeal against the judgment of the Special Judge of Karachi on April 19 and quashed the conviction and the sentence against him.

Mr. Khuhro had been sentenced by the Special Judge to five years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 1,50,000 on a charge of attempting to sell a car in the black market.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2726:PAK:F, 3220:PAK:D]

B. New Tribe Found In East Pakistan Jungle: According to an announcement by the South-East Asia Treaty Organization in Bangkok on March 25, a Research Fellow of the Organization had discovered the existence of a new tribe in the jungles of East Pakistan.

The Research Fellow, Mr. Lucien Bernt (France), wrote in his report that these forgotten people were living in a land of paradise in the jungles at the mouth of the Ganges river in East Pakistan.

The tribe, known as Marmas, were virtually untouched and unspoiled by modern civilization.

Except for their pottery and clothing purchased from infrequent traders, there was nothing Mr. Bernt found in their articles resembling those of modern civilization.

He found the Marmas happy and peaceful. They believed in co-existence among themselves and with other tribes. Although they are primitive, they have their own alphabet and writings. About 97 per cent of them are literates in their own language.

(Bangkok Post)

SUDAN

A. Sugar Refinery Contract Awarded To Two German Firms: A contract for the construction of Sudan's first sugar refinery was awarded jointly to two German firms. It was signed in Khartoum on March 25.

Construction was to start immediately and was scheduled to be completed by the end of 1961.

The factory would be situated in the Geneid area of the Blue Nile Province, where sugar-cane plantations were being extended to supply the raw material. Its potential output of 60,000 tons a year would meet slightly under two-thirds of local requirements, now supplied mainly by Formosa, Egypt, Brazil and Belgium.

The signing of the contract was marked by an official ceremony during which the Minister of Commerce and Industry announced that the Government was planning a large expansion of sugar-cane cultivation and that at least one more sugar factory would be set up to make Sudan completely self-sufficient in this commodity.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 3208:SUD:A]

THAILAND

A. Air Chief's Death In Plane Crash: Air Chief Marshal Chalermkait Watanagura of Thailand, his wife and 16 others were killed on April 14 when their plane crashed in northern Formosa shortly after taking off for Bangkok.

Air Chief Marshal Chalermkait Watanagura had gone to Taipeh on April 10 for a four-day meeting with the Pacific area Air Chiefs as a guest of the Kuomintang Chinese Air Force.

The C54 plane in which he was travelling crashed into Mount Wu Tse, about three minutes after take-off.

Among the dead were Air Vice-Marshal Suan Chioaphaibool of Thailand and his wife.

(Bangkok Post and The Nation, Rangoon)

B. New Airfields Opened: The US Ambassador, Mr. U. Alexis Johnson, formally opened on March 21 three airfields in the north-eastern provinces of Korat, Ubolrathani and Udorathani.

The estimated cost of the airfields was £124,000,000 sterling, mostly American aid.

Mr. Alexis Johnson said: "The presence of these airfields will enable USA and Thailand's other S-EATO allies and friends to move quickly from anywhere in the Far East to re-inforce Thailand in case of threat."

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 2951:THI:A]

C. Foreign Investment: Capital investment in Thailand by overseas countries has greatly increased recently, with USA leading.

During the last eight months of 1959, according to the Thailand Investment Examination Committee, 172 firms, both Thai and foreign, applied for permission to build factories. Of these firms, 66 have had their applications approved.

The investment represented by these new enterprises totalled some 1,730 million bahts (£29 million)—920 million bahts by foreign firms and 810 million bahts by Thailand organizations. The projects included oil refineries, sugar refineries and textile and rubber shoe factories.

Recently, the Government made tax concessions to encourage foreign investment, and later it was announced that fresh moves were being made to increase the attraction of such investment. Among the chief countries in this sphere were USA, Japan, Western Germany, Denmark and the Netherlands.

(Far East Trade, London)

[Prev. ref. 730:THI:A]

TURKEY

A. Political Parties' Activities Banned For Three Months: It was announced in Ankara on April 18 that all political parties' activities had been banned for three months from that date.

This was done by a Committee of Investigation appointed on April 18 by the Turkish National Assembly.

The Committee, which consisted exclusively of members of the Government party, was instructed to investigate what the Government called the "destructive, illegitimate and illegal activities of the Opposition."

There was a stormy scene in the Turkish Assembly when the Committee was set up, with a free-for-all fight between Government and Opposition members.

One Deputy was suspended for 12 months for throwing an egg at the head of one of his opponents.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 925:TUR:A]

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Alleged Plot To Kill Col. G. A. Nasser: The Egyptian General Intelligence Agency announced in Cairo on April 20 that it had discovered a plot to kill the President, Col. G. A. Nasser, by Israeli spy rings.

A spokesman of the Agency said that the plot was to kill Col. Nasser by poisoning him at a banquet.

According to informed sources in Cairo, Col. Nasser was to have been poisoned at the banquet given in honour of King Mohammed of Morocco during his State visit to UAR in January, 1960.

The spokesman added that the spy rings had been operating for the past three years in UAR, Rome, Geneva, Munich, Zurich and Amsterdam.

Several arrests were made for interrogation.

A Greek waiter from an eating house which normally caters at official functions of the Presidency was arrested as the Israeli agent who allegedly attempted to implement the plan of poisoning.

The waiter reportedly "confessed" the details of the plot and handed over to the authorities a bottle of poison which he intended to use.

He was also reported to have handed over a wireless set provided to him by Israeli agents and a few bottles of invisible ink with which he had been corresponding with Israeli agents in Beirut.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 2127:UAR:E]

B. Oil Exports To USA: The Cairo paper Al Akhbar reported on April

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

4 that the United States would import 1,000,000 tons of crude oil from United Arab Republic.

Quoted by Cairo Radio, Al Akhbar said that on Agreement on the purchase of oil was concluded with an American private company and the first cargo was being loaded aboard a Norwegian tanker at the time the report was published.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3039:UAR:A]

C. US Aid For Syrian Region: The United States Ambassador in Cairo, Mr. G. Frederick Reinhardt, and the United Arab Republic's Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Abdel Hamid Ghaleb, signed on April 2 an Agreement extending US technical and economic assistance to the Syrian Region for the first time.

Since 1951, the Egyptian Region has received US aid amounting to $65,000,000.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 2698:UAR:B]

D. BOAC Resumes Regular Flights Through Cairo: The British Overseas Airways Corporation (BOAC) resumed on April 10 regular flights through Cairo for the first time since the Suez crisis. A Comet jet airliner landed at Cairo on its way from London to Bombay.

The United Arab Republic authorities gave the Comet an official welcome.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 1122:EGY:A]

E. UNEF Medal To Kumaon Regiment: Major-General P. S. Gyani, Commander of United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF), presented on March 31 the United Nations Emergency Force Medal to 992 officers and men of the 4th Battalion of the Kumaon Regiment—the largest of the component units of the Indian contingent serving with UNEF.

After taking the salute at a parade, Maj.-Gen. Gyani addressed the officers and men of the Regiment and said:

"You are now guardians of peace in this region. In this role, your duties are very difficult. It calls for long hours of vigilance both by day and by night and the ability to enforce action with restraint, alertness and goodwill, sometimes, at great personal risk. I am very happy to see that you have readily adapted yourselves to this role and have carried out your duties very well indeed. I am most impressed by your conduct both on and off duty and the very friendly relations you have established with other contingents of UNEF."

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2797:UAR:D]

F. US Loan: The United States and the United Arab Republic signed an Agreement in Cairo on March 26 providing for a loan of £(E) 16,000,000 to UAR from the United States.

The loan, part of which is from the proceeds of the sales of American agricultural products in UAR, is to be used for development projects and for purchase of tobacco seed, oils and corn from USA.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 2898:UAR:B]

G. New Building For Arab League In Cairo: The Arab League ceremoniously took possession of its new headquarters in Cairo on March 23. This is a nine-storey building across the road from the UAR Foreign Ministry.

As a military band played the national anthems of the 10 member-States, their flags were hoisted on the courtyard flagstaffs by their envoys, with the exception of Tunisia which, at present, has no diplomatic relations with UAR. The Tunisian flag was, however, hoisted by the League's Secretary-General, Mr. Abdul Khalek Hassouna, who also raised the Arab League's own green and white flag.

The site of the new headquarters was made available to the League by Egypt in 1954, and construction work had started in the following year.

The building is stated to have cost more than £325,000.

Hitherto, the League Secretariat had occupied a somewhat dilapidated old palace in the Bab el Louk district, with some departments overflowing into the surrounding office buildings.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3235:UAR:B]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Demonstrations In South Africa Against Pass Laws; African Conference; Mr. N. Khruschev Visits France; France Explodes Second Atom Bomb; British Budget.

A. Demonstrations In South Africa Against Pass Laws: Large crowds of Africans in South Africa demonstrated on March 21 at several places against the Pass Laws which oblige Africans to carry passes of identification. The demonstrations were directed by the Pan-Africanist Congress.

[The Pan-Africanist Congress is described as an "extreme" organization, whose watchword is "Africa for the Africans." Formed two years previously, it has accepted the "Accra Line", which aims at the creation of an African-ruled Socialist United States of Africa, south of the Sahara.]

The Pan-Africanist Congress had called on its 31,000 members to come out without their identity cards, which all Africans are required by law to carry, and to surrender themselves to the nearest police station.

A squadron of sabre jets dived over the heads of the crowds of thousands of demonstrators in a vain effort to cow them down.

The biggest demonstration was at the African township of Sharpeville, 30 miles from Johannesburg.

It was stated by the police that the crowd began to hurl stones. The police replied with rifle and Sten-gun fire. According to first estimates, 50 Africans, including women and children, were killed. It was stated later than the death roll was over 70.

The police rushed reinforcements, including Saracen armoured cars, to three trouble spots south of Johannesburg as demonstrations flared up. These trouble spots were Vereeniging, Sharpeville, Bophelon and Evaton.

The African section of the hospital in Vereeniging was crammed with casualties brought in non-stop by a shuttle service of ambulances. About 200 Africans were wounded in the firing.

Mr. H. Lawrence of the Progressive Party told the South African House of Assembly on March 21 that the police had also opened fire at the Langa African township, which is under the control of the Cape Town Municipality.

He said that a most serious situation had arisen in the country. According to information available while he was speaking, police had opened fire at Langa. He was informed that Sten-guns were being used and huts and cars had been burned.

Press reports said that at least six persons had been shot dead at Langa and 30 injured. The injured included four European women whose car was stoned. Seven buildings, including two schools, were said to have been destroyed by fire.

Violence had flared up at Langa after the police had ordered a large African meeting to break up.

Official figures of the casualties announced on the night of March 22 revealed that 72 Africans were shot dead by the police and 178 wounded in the rioting in the Johannesburg and Capetown areas.

Tension mounted on the night of March 23 in the African township of Nyanga, outside Capetown, when fires were started in the streets and road blocks were set up.

The police again opened fire on March 23 to disperse crowds who assembled in the streets of Langa, near Capetown.

One African was known to have been taken to hospital with bullet wounds.

On March 24, the police raided the offices of the African National Congress and some other organizations throughout the country.

Among other offices raided were those of the multi-racial group—the Congress of Democrats—the Federation of South African Women and the Natal Indian Congress.

Violence flared up again in South Africa on March 28. All churches, schools and administrative offices in one township were burned down and police clashed with the demonstrators in the heart of Capetown.

The police arrested another 34 members of the African National Congress, as 3,000 Army and Navy men ringed the African townships of Langa and Nyanga, near Capetown.

These arrests followed the detention of 224 people in the police swoop on March 30.

Also arrested on March 31 were several members of the Pan-Africanist Congress, the South African Coloured Peoples' Congress and the Coloured Peoples' Progressive Party.

Two Commissions To Enquire Into Trouble:

The South African Prime Minister, Dr. Hendrik Verwoerd, announced on March 23 that the Government had decided to appoint two one-man Commissions to inquire into the riots in African townships on March 21, one to look into what happened at Langa near Capetown, the other at Sharpeville and other places in Transvall.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The question of a Judicial Commission on the border aspects of the riots was under consideration.

State of Emergency:

The Governor-General, Mr. Charles Swart, proclaimed a State of Emergency in 80 of the 300 magisterial districts of the Union of South Africa on March 30 and ordered the mobilization of the Citizen Force (Territorials) as 30,000 Africans, in a mile-long column, marched on the police headquarters in Capetown demanding the release of more than 150 people arrested in the early hours of March 30 in various parts of the Union.

The Justice Minister, Mr. Francois Erasmus, told the House of Assembly in Capetown that the Emergency proclamation was made with retrospective effect from March 29.

The call-up of 18 Citizen Force units is for service in the "prevention or suppression of international disorder in the Union or in the preservation of life, health or property or the maintenance of essential services."

The mass arrests in cities and towns of the Union represented the latest political round-up since the events in 1956 preceding the treason trial which was still continuing.

Those arrested were told that they would be detained for at least 48 hours.

They included ex-Chief Albert Luthuli, Dr. G. M. Naicker (a former President of the Natal Indian Congress), Dr. A. H. Sadar (an Indian medical practitioner of Ladysmith, Natal), Mr. Peter Brown (National Chairman of the Liberal Party) and members of other parties including the Pan-Africanist Congress; Mrs. Helen Joseph (of the Federation of South African Women), Mr. John Brink (Chairman of the Liberal Party in Pretoria) and Mr. John Lang.

The State of Emergency was extended to 31 more districts on April 1.

The police opened fire on an African crowd in Durban on April 1. Three Africans were killed and three more injured. The Africans were marching towards a prison in a 'White' residential area.

At Bloemfontein, in Orange Free State, the police dispersed a crowd of Africans who were burning their pass-books. Several members of the African National Congress voluntarily gave themselves up to the police and were taken into custody. Some Africans were arrested by the police.

Pass Laws Suspended:

The South African police were told on March 26 that they should not ask Africans to produce their pass-books (passes of identity) and should not arrest Africans for non-possession of documents.

A statement issued by the police headquarters in Pretoria said that the move was made to "ease tensions" because Africans were afraid to carry passes "as a result of intimidation."

The South African Minister for Justice, Mr. Francois Erasmus, said that the relaxation regarding passes was a temporary one. The ban on public meetings in Transvaal and Natal would, however, be extended until the end of June, 1960.

On March 22, the Pan-Africanist Congress called on the South African Government to "halt forthwith the continued display of military strength by the police against unarmed people."

A statement issued by the Congress added: "Ours is a non-violent struggle. The opening of fire on unarmed peaceful demonstrators merely serves to confirm our contention that South Africa is a police State."

It said that the campaign was aimed at the abolition of pass laws. "Anything short of this is unacceptable to us."

Those taking part in the campaign, it said, had strict instructions to avoid violence. It ascribed the stoning of police to Government and police provocateurs. It went on to say that the Government, shocked by the realization of the extent of support commanded by the Congress, had tried hard to make the campaign unsuccessful.

The President-General of the banned African National Congress, ex-Chief Albert Luthuli, called on Africans and all other sections of the people on March 24 to observe Monday, March 28, as a day of mourning for those killed in the riots.

Mr. Luthuli said in a statement that the massacre of over 70 Africans and the wounding of some 300 engaged in peaceful demonstrations against pass laws which degraded the whole African nation had deeply shocked and outraged the civilized world and Christian conscience.

He said that the fact that no policeman was seriously injured showed that unwarranted force was used against unarmed people.

On March 26, he called upon Africans to burn their pass-books "in an orderly manner."

He added that the Government had evaded the issue of abolishing the pass laws by "merely suspending arrests for pass offences until further notice."

On March 28, cheering Africans made a bonfire of their pass-books in Johannesburg.

The Pan-Africanist Congress gave the South African Government until the night of March 29 to scrap the Pass Laws or face an intensified campaign from March 30. It threatened a complete stoppage of work.

A statement by the Congress said: "There can be no peace in this country until the demands of the African people are fully met."

Since the trouble began on March 21, thousands of Africans stayed away from work. On March 29, 95 per cent of African workers stayed away from work in Capetown.

South African Liberal Party's Stand:

The South African Liberal Party called for the resignation of the Government on March 22.

The Party's National Chairman, Mr. Peter Brown, issued a statement saying that the Prime Minister, Dr. Hendrik Verwoerd, and his Nationalist Government were "incompetent to deal with the problems of a mixed community in the climate of 1960."

The Transvaal Chairman of the Liberal Party, Mr. Jack Unterhalter, said in a statement:

"Without associating the Party in any way with the Pan-Africanist Congress and its anti-passes campaign, it is important for the people of South Africa to know and understand that the rioting and its dreadful toll are solely the result of apartheid policies and that events will become graver unless immediate steps are taken to repeal the oppressive laws bearing so heavily on the non-White population."

Dr. H. Verwoerd's Statement:

Making a statement in Parliament in Capetown on March 22, the South African Prime Minister, Dr. Hendrik Verwoerd, said that the riots could in no way be described as "reaction against the Government's apartheid policy and had nothing to do with passes."

He said that these disturbances were a periodic phenomenon and had nothing to do with poverty and low wages. During the past month, there had been similar trouble in the Belgian Congo, the Cameroons, Nyasaland and other countries. South Africa had been lucky, for it had been spared disturbances as big as those in other countries. He said that he was not even referring to the Mau Mau trouble in Kenya.

In 1946-47, when the United Party was in power, there were no fewer than 41 such disturbances, in which 52 people had been killed. He did not want to put the blame on the United Party but was merely trying to give the House some perspective to show that these disturbances were a periodic phenomenon.

His first duty, he said, was to thank the South African police on behalf of the House and the people for the courageous and efficient way they handled the situation. The police at times found it difficult to control themselves, but they had done so in an exemplary manner.

From some speeches in the House, there might have been a suggestion that the police used excessive force; but the suggestion was not definite and he would rather not reply to it.

He believed that the agitation behind the riots was planned on a nation-wide scale. The present wave of excitement among Africans drew much of its force and direction from the sustained attacks that had been made on the Government's policy over the past ten years.

Move To Ban African National Congress And Pan-African Congress:

The Unlawful Organizations Bill was given the first reading in the South African Parliament on March 28.

Under this law, the Governor-General can ban the African National Congress or the Pan-Africanist Congress or both.

The Bill also proposes to flog anyone who intimidated or encouraged any worker to stay away from work as a protest against the Pass Laws. Additional penalties are £500 fine or five years' imprisonment.

It also empowers the Governor-General to ban any other organization which, in his opinion, has been established to carry on the functions of the Pan-Africanist Congress or the African National Congress.

South African Government's Statement:

On March 25, the South African Government issued a statement in London saying that the African demonstrators at Sharpeville on March 21 "shot first and the police were forced to fire in self-defence to avoid even more tragic results."

It added: "According to factual information now available, the disturbances resulted from a planned demonstration of about

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

20,000 natives in which demonstrators attacked the police with assorted weapons, including fire-arms.

"The allegation of the Afro-Asian Group in United Nations in requesting a Security Council meeting that the demonstrators were unarmed and peaceful is, therefore, completely untrue.

"As recently as January 24, nine policemen (four Whites and five non-Whites) were brutally battered to death by a so-called unarmed mob of natives near Durban.

"An important contributing factor to these riots is the campaign of intimidation of otherwise peaceful natives. The Government is firm in its resolve that the police must maintain public order and ensure public safety, whoever threatens that safety.

"This is the duty of all Governments within their own countries and it cannot be shared or abrogated. To do otherwise would have catastrophic results for all countries, since it would be an invasion of sovereignty and a break-down of the authority of the Government in the exercise of their duty to maintain public order.

"A full judicial enquiry is being instituted to establish all the relevant facts."

International Reactions:

The US State Department said on March 22 that the United States regretted "the tragic loss of life" resulting from measures taken against Africans demonstrating in South Africa.

It issued a statement in which it said that USA deplored violence in all its forms. It expressed the hope that the African people of the Union "will be able to obtain redress for legitimate grievances by peaceful means."

The South African External Affairs Minister, Mr. Eric Louw, summoned the American Ambassador, Mr. Philip Crowe, on March 23 to express his Government's "concern" over the comment by the US State Department on the riots.

He told Mr. Crowe that by raising the matter, "he was not conceding the right of the United States Government to concern itself with the domestic affairs of South Africa."

But, he added, the Union Government found it necessary to express its concern at the fact that the State Department had authorized a Press statement without first acquainting itself with the full facts of the situation.

In India:

In New Delhi, an adjournment motion moved in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on March 23 on the happenings in South Africa was disallowed by the Speaker. But, the Speaker invited the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, to make a statement on the subject.

Mr. Nehru said that the large-scale killings of Africans near Capetown reminded him powerfully of the Jallianwala Bagh massacre.

[During the British regime in India early this century, the British, in an effort to crush the nationalist movement, had used brutal force, including military and police firing. One such firing occurred at Jallianwalla Bagh in the Punjab in 1919 in which more than 200 people were killed and several hundreds were wounded].

The conscience of the world, he said, particularly of Africa and Asia, was shocked. The killing in South Africa was not the end of an episode but a prelude to future conflict. It might almost affect the course of world history.

Africa, he said, was at present resurgent, proud and in a defiant mood after long centuries of suppression. Not only the people of South Africa but hundreds of millions of Africans and Asians would never accept the spirit of "racial mastery" behind these killings.

On March 28, the Lok Sabha (House of the People) unanimously adopted a resolution, sponsored by Mr. Nehru, deploring the South African killings and extending India's deep sympathy to the Africans "who have suffered from this firing and from the policy of racial discrimination and suppression of the African people in their own homeland."

The House, by way of an expression of its sympathy to the African community, stood in silence for a minute in memory of those killed in the South African firings.

The resolution read: "This House deplores and records its deep sorrow at the tragic incidents which occurred in Sharpeville and in the Langa township near Capetown in South Africa on March 21, 1960, resulting in the death of a large number of Africans from police firing. It sends its deep sympathy to the Africans who have suffered from this firing and from the policy of racial discrimination and the suppression of the African people in their own homeland."

The Indian National Congress—the party in power—issued a statement on March 24 expressing its sense of horror at the "wanton and brutal killings of Africans."

These killings, it said, were the evil fruits of the racial discrimination and segregation policy of the South African Government.

In Britain:

In the British House of Commons, after exchanges on the subject between the Opposition members and Ministers on March 24, the British Government tabled an official motion expressing the "deep sympathy" of the House with the people of South Africa at the events which arose from the civil disturbances in the Union.

This expression of the British Government's attitude to these events was formulated in the shape of an amendment to an Opposition motion tabled in the House on the same subject. The Opposition motion, under the heading of "South Africa Shootings", was in the following terms: "That this House deplores the shooting of demonstrations in the Union of South Africa, resulting in the killing and wounding of large numbers of people, and expresses its deep sympathy with the families of the dead and injured."

The Government amendment made the motion read as follows: "That this House, while recognizing that it has no responsibility or jurisdiction over the independent countries of the Commonwealth, at the same time wishes to record its deep sympathy with all the people of South Africa at the recent tragic events which have taken place at Vereeniging and Langa."

In reply to questions about the British attitude in the Security Council meeting on the situation in South Africa, the British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, made the following statement on March 30:

"As the House is aware, a meeting of the Security Council is at present taking place to decide what action to take on a request from a number of African and Asian countries that it consider the situation arising from the recent tragic events in the Union of South Africa.

"The United Kingdom representative has instructions not to oppose the discussion of the item requested by the African and Asian countries. We do, however, adhere to our view that, in accordance with Article 2(7) of the UN Charter, nothing in the Charter authorizes United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any State.

"It is the primary responsibility of the Security Council to promote the maintenance of international peace and security. We are in a very delicate situation. I am sure the House will join with me in hoping that the Security Council discussions will contribute to an alleviation of this situation."

The Executive Committees of the British Labour Party and the Trade Union Congress condemned the massacre of Africans.

The Labour Party renewed its call to Britons to show their sense of outrage by boycotting South African goods.

Thousands of people massed in Trafalgar Square in London on March 27 to protest against the shooting of Africans.

In Other Countries:

The Government of Nepal issued a statement on March 26 saying that the South African killings were "shocking".

The New Zealand Prime Minister, Mr. Walter Nash, said that the danger of the present situation in South Africa was not only grave for South Africa but for the whole continent, the Commonwealth and the world.

The Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Robert Menzies, asked Parliament in Canberra on March 31 to express its regret and distress at the loss of lives in the South African riots and its sympathy with those who had suffered.

He made this request while tabling an amendment to a resolution by the Opposition Labour Party which had criticised an earlier statement by Mr. Menzies.

Mr. Menzies said that he would like to make it clear that his Government had not in any sense endorsed the actions of the South African Government in this regard.

In Ottawa, the Canadian Prime Minister, Mr. John Diefenbaker, said that his Government had no sympathy for the policies of racial discrimination in South Africa or elsewhere.

He deplored the loss of life in the demonstrations by Africans and added that the Canadian Government felt that no beneficial purpose would be served at this time by a diplomatic protest or other action.

President G. A. Nasser of the United Arab Republic, who was in New Delhi at the time said in his address to members of the Indian Parliament on March 31: "We feel that the forces of good in the world will get stronger every day to play their role in removing the remnants of injustice still lurking in some parts of the globe."

He added: "The best example of that, my friends, can be seen in the recent outrages in South Africa where the policy of racial discrimination feels that it can spill blood in addition to destroying freedom. This ignorant policy has proved that it has no consideration for human dignity; it has proved that it has no consideration for the nature of the age we live in."

The Foreign Ministry of Ghana, in a statement on March 24, expressed shock at the events in South Africa.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

It added that the tragedy drew attention to the practice of a minority group discriminating against the majority of Union citizens.

In Nairobi, the Kenya Nationalist leader, Mr. Tom Mboya, said that there was no difference between South Africa and Nazi Germany and the Union should be treated accordingly.

He suggested that all Commonwealth Prime Ministers should vote South Africa out of the "family".

The Prime Minister of Malaya, Tengku Abdul Rehman, sent a telegram to the British Prime Minister, Mr. H. Macmillan, deploring the "inhuman brutality employed by the South African police against Africans."

He said that the killing of Africans was totally against the principles of human rights, justice and decency and should never have occurred in a Commonwealth country.

The Norwegian Foreign Minister, Mr. Halvard Lange, said in a statement on March 23 that the "terrible incidents in South Africa have shocked the Norwegian people."

He added: "The coloured peoples' peaceful demonstrations against racial discrimination and for the recognition of their human rights were met by police measures which cost many lives. These tragic events have aroused dismay and sorrow in Norway."

In the West Indies, the People's Progressive Party opened a Distress Fund for the dependents of men and women killed and injured in the riots.

In a statement, the Party expressed indignation at the unwarranted attacks on Africans.

King Mohammed V of Morocco issued a statement through a Palace spokesman in Rabat on March 26 to say that he considered the shooting of Africans as "a massacre inspired by racism and racial discrimination, constituting an attack not only on the Africans of South Africa but against all African people."

A spokesman of the Ethiopian Foreign Office said on March 28 that the killings in South Africa had endangered the peace and security of the African continent.

In Paris, the International League Against Racism and Anti-Semitism called on all anti-racists on March 23 to strengthen the economic boycott of South Africa.

The League (an international body which includes public figures, writers, artists and politicians of many countries) said that it "protested indignantly against the massacres which have been perpetrated against the Negro population of South Africa."

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass issued the following statement on March 24:

"The bloody events in the Union of South Africa are the consequences of the policy of racial discrimination against and oppression of millions of Africans which is pursued in that country."

Afro-Asian Nations Take Issue To Security Council:

The African group of countries in UN—Ethiopia, Ghana, Guinea, Liberia, Libya, Morocco, Sudan, Tunisia and the United Arab Republic—in a statement on March 23 said that they would refer the incident to the Security Council.

Their statement said that the action of the South African police was "a flagrant violation of the aims and principles of the United Nations Charter and a threat to the peace and security of Africa and the world."

Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld's View:

In the course of a news conference at UN Headquarters on March 24, the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, was questioned about a specific Article of the United Nations Charter prohibiting United Nations' interference in the domestic affairs of a member-State.

Mr. Hammarskjoeld noted that the precedent which had grown over the years in the General Assembly was to interpret this Article as not precluding a debate on such a matter but precluding direct intervention.

There could be no doubt of his personal feeling insofar as the humanitarian issues involved were concerned. But, those who argued that the South African disturbances obviously presented a test case for UN action were forgetting some of the limitations which the Charter had imposed on the world organization.

He said he recognized that an issue such as the South African disturbances did involve questions of human rights which were of UN concern under the broad purposes and principles of the Charter. But, he added, while United Nations was strong in purposes and principles, it was "very weak in procedures."

A message from UN Headquarters on March 26 said that an urgent meeting of the Security Council called at the request of the Asian-African Group to discuss the happenings in South Africa was postponed at South Africa's request.

Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge (USA), President of the Council for March, announced that the Council could meet on March 29.

Mr. Henry Martin, acting leader of the South African delegation in the absence of Mr. Brand Fourie, asked for the postponement in a letter to Mr. Lodge.

In his letter, Mr. Martin said that he had been instructed "to request that the Government of the Union of South Africa take part without the right to vote" in the Security Council discussion.

After receiving Mr. Martin's letter, Mr. Lodge announced the postponement.

On March 26, South Africa formally protested against the decision to call a meeting of the UN Security Council on the South African race riots.

The protest was delivered by the South African Ambassador in USA, Mr. W. C. Du Plessis, during a call on the United States Secretary of State, Mr. C. A. Herter.

A statement distributed to newsmen by Mr. Du Plessis as he left Mr. Herter's office said: "The question of the recent riots in South Africa is a domestic one and South Africa protests strongly against calling a Council meeting to discuss it. I emphasized to Mr. Herter that by calling such a meeting for the purpose of discussing the domestic affairs of a member-State, a precedent will undoubtedly be created which would enable the Council to discuss racial and other disturbances in any other country.

"I also stressed that a Council debate—even a debate on inscription (inscribing the topic on the agenda)—could have serious consequences in emboldening agitators—it could even be an incitement to further rioting.

"I now want to add that when such riots do take place it should be borne in mind that not only the rioters are human beings—the police too are.

"They already, in any country in the world, have a dangerous and delicate job to do and it is surely too much to expect from them to submit to being murdered by those who are intent upon upsetting law and order in South Africa. Nine of them, of both races, have been so murdered, quite recently.

"It matters little whether an attempt at incitement has its origin with those who think they can accomplish their purposes by passive resistance when they should know beforehand that such passive resistance may well explode into violence, as it did in South Africa, unfortunately resulting in the death and injury of many who were the dupes of the instigators.

"We in South Africa have a very difficult job to do actually dealing as we have to do with a miniature of the world's most pressing problem, namely how people of many races, different colours, different ways of life and different degrees of development, can co-exist peacefully. We think we will succeed in finding a solution to this, the greatest of problems. Surely it is not too much to ask that those in all countries of the world who do not share our responsibilties, just as they do not share in the tremendous exertion which this effort costs us, let us proceed unhindered."

Security Council Meeting:

The Security Council met on March 30 and decided to discuss the South African situation. It met at the request of the Asian-African Group at UN to consider the South African police shooting 10 days previously at Sharpeville in which 72 Africans were killed.

The South African delegation immediately withdrew from the Security Council table after protesting against the decision to put the item on the agenda.

The delegation, led by Mr. Brand Fourie, did not leave the Council Chamber but sat down in a row of seats normally used by diplomatic observers.

A letter from the 29-nation Asian-African Group had formally asked the Council to consider the situation "arising out of the large-scale killings of unarmed and peaceful demonstrators against racial discrimination and segregation in the Union of South Africa."

India's Permanent Representative at UN, Mr. C. S. Jha, in his speech at the opening session of the Security Council on March 30, said that large-scale killings and ruthless and violent suppression of African people by South Africa in pursuit of her racial policies were totally contrary to the UN Charter.

The Council, he said, owed it to itself and to humanity to act, and act decisively, to save the world from the grave danger of a conflagration.

[India, which is not a member of the Security Council, was allowed to speak at her request as one of the 29 Asian-African States which signed the letter to the President of the Security Council drawing attention to the mass killings in South Africa.]

Earlier, M Armand Berard (France) said that France had been

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"very much moved by the tragic events which have resulted in the shedding of so much blood in South Africa." But, he added, UN Charter provided no right for United Nations to intervene in matters essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of a State.

He concluded by expressing his doubt of the "juridical validity" of the Council to debate the matter.

Signor Edigio Ortona (Italy) said that events in South Africa justified serious consideration of the situation. They were a matter of fundamental importance in the structure of United Nations.

Mr. Arkady Sobolev (Soviet Union) said that there was no doubt of United Nations' competence to deal with South African events.

He added that UN had a duty to discover the point of view of the 29 African and Asian States, representing nearly one-third of the membership, who had drawn the Council's attention to the South African Government's measures of racial discrimination.

Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge (United States), President of the Security Council for March, said that the United States' view had been clearly expressed by the Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, who had said that his Government favoured Security Council discussion of the question.

"In taking this view," he said, "the United States is following the same policy it had adopted to the question of apartheid during the past five years."

It had been an established principle, he said, that "discussion does not constitute intervention in the internal matters of another State." The United States had adopted a similar line when the question of Tibet had been raised at the last session of the General Assembly.

Sir Claude Corea (Ceylon) said that the Asian-African Group was "anxious to have the fullest consideration" of the matter before the Council and, therefore, would not object to South Africa speaking first. However, he wanted to record his reservation about the procedure.

Mr. Lodge invited the representatives of South Africa, India, Ethiopia, Ghana, Pakistan, Guinea and Liberia—who had made a last-minute request for hearing—to take their seats at the Council table.

Mr. Lodge went on to say that it was a tradition of the Council that all remarks made at meetings should "be germane to the issue in hand."

He hoped that no issues, no matter how important, would be brought up that had no relation to the question before the Council.

S. African Delegate's Speech:

The South African delegate, Mr. Brand Fourie, then spoke.

He said that the recent police firing on Africans in Sharpeville and Langa, was the result of the threatening attitude adopted by the demonstrators who had fired first at the police.

"No Government," he said, "can allow itself to be threatened by a militant group of demonstrators."

He added that any interference from any source in the "enforcement of law could only have a deleterious effect on the observance of the rule of law."

He said that he had been instructed to record a "strong protest" at the decision to place the item on the agenda.

This was the first time the Council had decided to consider "purely local disturbances," and they had thereby created a dangerous precedent "which might in future re-affairs of member-States.

South Africa's observations, he said, were based on two legal principles:

(1) Any discussion would be in violation of the UN Charter. This basic principle was enshrined in the Charter.

(2) The debate would be in conflict with a decision taken at a session of the Council in San Francisco that gave the Council no right to intervene in the domestic affairs of any country.

He quoted a number of Charter regulations which, he said, supported his objection. Article II, paragraph 7 of the Charter provided "a fundamental guarantee" that there would be no intervention in the domestic affairs of member-States.

After his address, Mr. Fourie withdrew from the Council table as a protest against its decision to debate the riots.

A delegation spokesman, however, made it clear that the delegation had not walked out and were awaiting instructions from the Government.

Ecuador's Resolution:

On March 31, Ecuador tabled a draft resolution in the Security Council calling on South Africa to abandon its apartheid policy and requesting the UN Secretary-General to confer with the South African Government on the subject.

The Secretary-General was further asked to make arrangements to uphold the purposes and principles of the UN Charter and to report to the Security Council whenever necessary and appropriate.

The resolution asked the Security Council to deplore the disturbances in South Africa and to recognize that the situation had led to international friction and called upon the Union Government to take steps to bring about racial harmony and equality.

The resolution was drafted by the Asian-African member-States.

Before the introduction of the resolution, Britain and France counselled against any UN action that might aggravate the situation in South Africa.

During the debate which followed the introduction of the resolution, M Armand Berard of France spoke of the strong emotion which had been felt by the French people at the tragic events in South Africa.

Mr. Abdul Moneim Rifai (Jordan) said that the racial policy of South Africa was one which, if allowed to continue, would endanger peace in Africa and possibly "engulf other lands and peoples."

Mr. Alex Quaison-Sackey (Ghana) said that peace was indivisible and the Council had a duty to ensure that there would be "no international conflagration."

Mr. Sory Caba (Guinea) said that the whole world's attention was focussed today on South Africa which was the home of "injustice, oppression and colonial exploitation." The Union's racial policy created a dangerous situation and was a flagrant violation of the UN Charter.

He added: "It is the only country in the world where fundamental questions of human rights and justice are determined by the colour of the skin of the individual. The white people enjoy human respect and the security of laws. The population with a dark coloured skin are, on the other hand, despised and humiliated. Their lives are governed by a complex system of permits and passes. The only part they are asked to play in life is the part of forced labour."

Sir Pierson Dixon (UK) said that Britain recognized the indisputable right of any Government to maintain law and order within its own territories and was equally conscious of the deep feeling which the incidents of March 21 had aroused.

Britain, he added, was responsible for territories in Africa in which many races had their home and "the whole question of race relations touches the thoughts and conscience of my country."

He was anxious not to under-estimate the difficulties, or "to make exaggerated claims for our own policies." The problem of race adjustment was essentially a problem of relationships between human beings and "it is clear that this cannot be achieved without the common endeavours of the many individuals who make up the society."

The Security Council must approach this matter with strict regard to the limits in which it could give expression to its opinion.

During the debate on April 1, the South African representative, Mr. Brand Fourie, after once again challenging UN competence to intervene in the internal affairs of his country, said: "The Union Government would regard any resolution by the Council in regard to local disturbances which have taken place in South Africa in a serious light."

He added that its decision to discuss the disturbances in his country "is unprecedented and I am instructed once more to put the pertinent question why similar action has not been taken in regard to equally serious disturbances in many other parts of the world."

"If South Africa were to bring any of these matters to the Council for consideration, would her request also be acceded to?

"The Government of India is one of the group of 29 countries who asked the Council to take up this question. I may perhaps be permitted to ask why the very serious civil disturbances which took place in India in 1956 in which a large number of people were killed and wounded never came before the Council.

"I can enumerate a long list of such disturbances in practically all parts of the world. In the circumstances it is only natural for South Africa to ask whether the Council is henceforth to have a double standard of conduct and justice."

Resolution Adopted:

The Security Council adopted the Ecuador resolution on April 1. The voting was nine in favour and none against. Britain and France abstained.

Many of the Asian-African countries were dissatisfied with the wording of the resolution. Announcing this, the delegate of Ceylon, Sir Claude Corea, told the Security Council that they had, however, decided to support it.

The Tunisian delegate said that he was disappointed with the resolution in view of

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

the bloody and blind repression in South Africa.

He said he would, however, vote for it because it seemed that the Council did not favour stronger words.

In the course of the debate, the American delegate, Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, said that he was voting for the resolution because racial discrimination by Government action contributed to international tensions and might prove more destructive to mankind than political differences.

The Indian delegate, Mr. C. S. Jha, appealed to Britain and France to remember their own great traditions in the field of human rights and not to stand in the way of the Security Council expressing itself on a burning question of the day for purely legalistic reasons.

He said that the situation in South Africa was inextricably connected with racial policies which violated the Charter. That was the reason why it attracted the attention of the United Nations Assembly and other UN organs.

He added: "We think these policies are a danger to peace, and please, for God's sake, modify them and bring them into line with the principles of the Charter."

(UK High Commission and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi, The Times, London, The New York Times and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3183:AOA:A]

B. Conference Of African Countries: A Conference of 20 African countries opened in Accra, capital of Ghana, on April 7.

The countries represented at the Conference either by official Government delegations or by delegates from political and labour movements were: Ghana, Liberia, Guinea, Nigeria, French Togoland, Kenya, Zanzibar, Southern Cameroons, Sierra Leone, Sudan, Egypt, Ethiopia, Libya, Morocco, Somaliland, Southern Rhodesia, Tanganyika, Gambia, Basutoland and South-West Africa.

The Conference considered, among other things, South Africa's policy of racial discrimination and the second French atomic test in the Sahara.

Opening the Conference, the Prime Minister of Ghana, Dr. Kwame Nkrumah, said that only a United Africa could make the last vestiges of colonialism disappear and only a Union of African States would enable Africa to play a historic role in world affairs.

He said that so long as one inch of African soil remained under colonial rule, there would be strife and conflict in the African continent. Colonialism pursued a policy not only of 'divide and rule' but also of artificial territorial division of Africa.

On April 8, the Conference split into Committees to discuss direct action against French atomic tests in the Sahara and South Africa's apartheid policies.

Other matters discussed by the Committees included the boycott of French goods, freezing of French assets, possible economic and cultural boycott of South Africa and continued action by independent African States in United Nations.

Also under discussion was the question of the "Balkanization" of Africa, foreign bases in Africa and the tactics of colonial Powers.

Conference sources said that there would also be talks on the setting up of a Central Appeal Fund for the re-settlement of Algerian refugees.

The Conference ended on April 10.

Resolutions:

It passed several resolutions urging independent African States to consider severing diplomatic relations with South Africa and asking the British Commonwealth countries to expel South Africa from their community.

One resolution urged independent African States to consider economic sanctions against South Africa and all African peoples to consider boycotting South African goods.

Another resolution recommended independent African States to donate money to help the victims of racial repression in South Africa and provide other means of helping to counteract the effects of apartheid.

It condemned France for her "act of hostility" in exploding atom bombs in the Sahara and appealed to all Governments and organizations, particularly in Africa, to boycott French goods and freeze French assets.

It also urged the forthcoming 'summit' conference to stop further French atomic tests on African soil.

It recommended that the next Conference of independent African States be held in June, 1960 to consider forming an African Volunteer Corps to fight with the Algerian insurgents.

It urged all independent African States to recognize the Algerian "Provisional Government" and called on France to negotiate with it for complete Algerian independence.

The Soviet Association for Friendship with the Peoples of Africa, in a message of greetings to the Conference, said: "The Soviet Association expresses the hope that the present Conference in Accra, just as the coming second Afro-Asian Solidarity Conference in Conakry, will promote consolidation of the African peoples in the struggle for complete liberation of the African continent from the colonial yoke for the resurgence of Africa's age-old culture."

Mr. Tom Mboya's Appeal:

The African nationalist leader of Kenya, Mr. Tom Mboya, told the Conference on April 9: "We must concentrate on action and not words."

He added: "Our friends in Algeria and South Africa are not interested in philosophy. They want to know what we are going to do for them. They want something definite."

He suggested that April 15—"Africa Freedom Day"—should be marked by determined action for the freedom of the Kenya African leader, Mr. Jomo Kenyatta, now in forced residence in a remote area of Kenya Colony after serving five years of a seven-year term for managing the Mau Mau movement.

Dr. K. Nkrumah's Concluding Speech:

Delivering the closing speech of the Conference, the Premier of Ghana, Dr. Kwame Nkrumah, said that the winds now blowing through Africa were no ordinary winds but a hurricane. "The issue confronting the world today is the African question. The world must answer this question our way—the total liberation of Africa."

He added: "This is Africa's finest hour. There must be no hesitation. There certainly must be no vaccillation. The struggle is titanic, sacrifices are great, but it is through sacrifices and suffering that victory can be assured."

He urged the Conference to put into operation without delay its practical and concrete proposals. He told the delegates of dependent States to go back to their countries re-vitalized and resume the struggle with renewed vigour until victory was won.

Dr. Nkrumah announced that Ghana would give £10,000 to the Algerian insurgents.

It was also stated that Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia would give about £4,000 for the "victims of South African oppression." He also offered 30 scholarships for students from South Africa to study in Ethiopia.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2693:AOA:B, 2932:AOA:B]

C. Agreements For Creation Of Mali Federation: France and the representatives of French Sudan and Senegal (which make up the Mali Federation) signed on April 4 Agreements providing for French Sudan's and Senegal's independence within the French-African Community.

The Agreements were signed in Paris by the French Prime Minister, M. Michel Debre, the Prime Minister of French Sudan, Mr. Modibo Keita, and the Prime Minister of Senegal, Mr. Mamadou Dia.

These Agreements were expected to come into effect in June, 1960 after ratification by the Parliaments of the countries concerned.

The representatives of the three countries also initialled Agreements providing for co-operation between the Mali Federation and the French Republic in the fields of foreign policy, defence, economy and education.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2355:AOA:F]

D. Mr. N. Khruschev's Visit To France: The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, arrived in Paris on March 23 on a 12-day official visit. He was received at the airport by the President, Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Mr. Khruschev was accompanied by a party of 90 persons, including the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, other high officials, his wife, his three daughters and his son-in-law Mr. Alexei Adzhubey.

About 200,000 Parisians turned out in Spring sunshine to give a warm-hearted welcome to Mr. Khruschev.

In a speech at the airport, Mr. Khruschev said: "I am conscious of the fact that this visit can be fruitful as much for the development of Franco-Soviet relations as for the strengthening of peace which is equally of interest to our two peoples."

Welcoming Mr. Khruschev and his party at the airport, Gen. de Gaulle said that he was very happy to receive him as he came from a great country which stood by the side of France in the worst of wars.

He added: "You represent a people on which peace between men depends to a great extent. We are ready to listen to you and have you listen to us, to see you and to have you see us."

Banquet By General de Gaulle:

On the night of March 23, Gen. de Gaulle gave a banquet in honour of Mr. Khruschev.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In the course of a speech at the banquet, Mr. Khruschev said:

"We believe and hope that our acquaintance with France, meetings and talks with General de Gaulle will promote the development of co-operation and friendship between the Soviet Union and France and will lead to better understanding on vital international issues which are of interest for our countries.

"We believe that on the fundamental question of ensuring peace in Europe, the Soviet Union and France can find a common basis. Nearly all the military tempests and thunder-storms that raged over Europe enveloped both our people and the people of your country. In crucial moments our peoples fought together against the common enemy.

"Now the question is whether Europe should live under the threat of militarism, the threat of a new aggression, or become an example of peaceful co-existence and show to all mankind the way to peace.

"We are convinced that Europe can and must become a zone of fruitful, peaceful co-operation of States and that an effective system of collective security can and must be established in Europe.

"To remove the threat of militarism and aggression in Europe, it is necessary, in our opinion, to do away with the remnants of World War II and sign a Peace Treaty with Germany. Such an approach to the matter will not harm anybody, but all the former participants in the anti-Hitler coalition will gain just as the German people will, and what is more important, so will the cause of peace among nations.

"I firmly believe that if the Soviet Union and France together with other peace-loving countries exert joint efforts in order to safeguard peace and friendship between the peoples, the aim of peace in Europe and in the world will be attained."

Earlier, at the banquet, General de Gaulle said that if Mr. Khruschev was working for a detente and perhaps an agreement between nations, he would find France "resolved with all her strength towards world peace and international reconciliation."

He added: "It is a fact that France and the Soviet Union find themselves each in one of the two camps dividing the world, but perhaps there should be a beginning of co-operation between these two camps.

"If only we can establish peace between the States which are linked to yours and those which are linked to ours, what a light would flood the world.

Talks With Gen. de Gaulle:

Gen. de Gaulle and Mr. Khruschev had their first private talks before noon on March 23 at the Elysee Palace. Only two interpreters assisted in the talks, which lasted about half-an-hour.

The talks took place at an intimate luncheon given by Gen. de Gaulle for Mr. Khruschev and his wife.

Before their talks, Mr. Khruschev presented to Gen. de Gaulle models of the Soviet Moon rocket and of the latest Sputnik.

Civic Reception:

Mr. Khruschev was given a great ovation as he arrived at the City Hall of Paris to be honoured at a civic reception on March 23.

At the reception, Mr. Khruschev called for a Franco-Soviet alliance as a necessity to ensure the security of the two countries.

He spoke again of German re-militarization and observed that it was a dangerous thing to encourage it.

Press Luncheon:

Speaking at a Press luncheon in Paris on March 25, Mr. Khruschev said that Russia had no intention of splitting the front of the Western alliance before the "summit" conference.

He said: "For us, the essential aim of the next "summit" conference is to find a common language. The 'cold war' period is coming to an end and they must not regret it, but rejoice in it."

He called for a Peace Treaty with Germany.

He said that the existence of the two systems—capitalist and communist—must be recognized. The Soviet Union would be ready to co-operate with members of UN aid under-developed countries, but he favoured direct country-to-country aid.

Answering questions, he said he hoped that the problem of Algeria could be solved according to the self-determination plan announced by Gen. de Gaulle in September, 1959.

Asked whether the new States arising in Africa would soon become communist, he said that as a communist he looked forward to the time when all races—black, yellow, red and white—would turn to communism.

"All Christians would like to convert all Muslims. As a communist I cannot do worse than this by wishing to convert everybody to communism."

Asked what he thought about France's entry into the "Atomic Club", he said that he did not know what the "Atomic Club" was. "But we are full of respect for France and we are ready to discuss nuclear questions with the representatives of France, Great Britain and the United States."

Asked why he questioned the maintenance of the status quo in Berlin where the Western allies had only weak military forces, he said: "The military point of view does not matter. I have already said several times that the 11,000 men who are in Berlin are worth nothing. They are too few to prepare a war against us. If this is a question of preparing a war against us, we wish there were 20,000 men there, or even half a million. It would be easier to wipe them out and get them out of our way."

Meeting With Top Communist Leaders:

On March 25, Mr. Khruschev met France's two top communist leaders, M Thorez and M Duclos, in the two-roomed kitchen flat once used by Lenin in Paris.

Address To Franco-Soviet Friendship Group:

Speaking to members of the Parliamentary Franco-Soviet Friendship Group, whom he received in audience on March 25 at the French Foreign Ministry, Mr. Khruschev said:

"The advances, I would even say the courtship, which West Germany is making to France does not fill us with joy. It is a courtship which comprises many dangers.

"I tell you frankly, the possibility of a frontier change in favour of Germany on the eastern side is ruled out for ever. Germany will, therefore, seek in the final analysis a way out to the West. You will remember my words and you will say then that I was right."

Tour Of The Provinces:

Mr. Khruschev began a tour of the French Provinces on March 26, in the course of which he covered a distance of 1 800 miles.

He and his party visited several cities and towns, including Bordeaux, Marseilles, Dijon, the battle-fields of World War I at Verdun and Rheims.

He returned to Paris on March 31, and the following day, he began his final round of talks with Gen. de Gaulle. The talks which were conducted at the French President's country residence near Paris lasted two days.

News Conference:

Addressing a news conference at Rambouillet (near Paris) on April 2, Mr. Khruschev said that if the "summit" conference in May, 1960 did not result in a solution of the German problem Russia would sign a separate Treaty with East Germany. The whole of East German territory would then have complete sovereignty and all occupation rights would be null and void.

He said: "Here we are again friends; in these 11 days I have learned much about this country, and I am very happy. Our talks with General de Gaulle have dealt with various problems and we have spoken quite frankly.

"First, you want to know about our talks with General de Gaulle. These were good. I think we succeeded. We could not resolve all problems, but we covered much ground.

"My meetings with journalists have led to their asking many reactions. I liked France and its people very much, and we are very pleased with the reception given us.

"The Soviet Union has many achievements in economic fields. Why should we not unite our efforts? Why not enlarge our co-operation in the development of economy, science and technology?

"We have much to learn from each other and there should be no wrong in our exchanging experiences.

"We are ready to exchange our knowledge of peaceful use of nuclear energy. Let us act together to ban nuclear arms and destroy stocks.

"We are ahead in peaceful uses of atomic energy. Please draw on our experience. We are ready to help you."

Joint Communique:

In a joint communique released on April 2, Mr. Khruschev and Gen. de Gaulle said that disarmament was the most important and most urgent problem of the present times.

They expressed the hope that the current Geneva talks on disarmament would bring about certain points of agreement on the question of general disarmament under efficient international control.

They also agreed that all international questions now pending must be resolved not by the use of force, but by peaceful means and negotiations.

It said: "Gen. de Gaulle and Mr. Khruschev recognized that the gradual settlement of these questions on the basis of agreements following negotiations will have great importance for the maintenance and strengthening of peace and security in Europe and the world.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Mr. Khruschev invited General de Gaulle to pay an official visit to the Soviet Union. President de Gaulle accepted this invitation with pleasure; the date of the visit will be set later through diplomatic channels.

"During their discussions, the two sides examined the problem of the consolidation of peace in Europe to which they attach particular importance and expressed the conviction that the reinforcement of European security would meet the vital interests of the two countries as well as those of all other European peoples.

"The talks considered present international questions in the light of the forthcoming meeting between Heads of States or of Governments of the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France. They dealt with the development of Franco-Soviet relations.

"General de Gaulle and Mr. Khruschev noted with satisfaction that during the past few years, Franco-Soviet trade had developed favourably to the advantage of the two countries.

"The increase in trade between the two countries has been brought about largely by the conclusion of satisfactory long-term agreements.

"General de Gaulle and Mr. Khruschev judge it possible and opportune to aim at a substantial increase in trade between the two countries in the coming years. A long-term Commercial Agreement would satisfy this intention.

[The present Trade Agreement between the two countries is from 1960 to 1962.]

"It has been agreed that during 1960, experts will meet and negotiations will be carried out with a view to defining trade exchanges not only for 1962, the last year of the present Treaty, but also for the three following years. Thus, trade exchanges can be foreseen from the end of this year for five years to come including 1965.

"General de Gaulle and Mr. Khruschev indicated their intention of increasing exchanges in the field of scientific research and of peaceful uses of atomic energy.

"They are happy that they will be able to resume discussion at the next 'summit' conference with the President of the United States of America and the Prime Minister of Great Britain, a conference made possible by the lessening of international tensions.

"The two Governments hope that the results of the 'summit' conference will lead to a new lessening of international tensions."

Agreement On Exchange Of Scientific Information And Co-operation In Peaceful Uses Of Atomic Energy:

In another communique released on April 2, France and the Soviet Union agreed to exchange information and experts on oceanography, biology and different branches of medicine, including cancer research.

The communique, separate from the main one on results of the Franco-Soviet talks, made it clear that the exchanges would not involve atomic secrets.

It said that Gen. de Gaulle and Mr. Khruschev expressed satisfaction that "the development already achieved in the cultural and scientific fields between France and the Soviet Union underlines the important role which this relation plays in strengthening international understanding."

The French Atomic Energy Commission and the Soviet Government Committee for the Use of Atomic Energy had agreed on scientific co-operation in the fields of peaceful uses of atomic energy in 1960 and 1961.

This co-operation would use information not classified as secret. It would mainly involve problems of controlled fusion, high energy physics and theoretical and experimental physics. The co-operation would be in the form of exchanges of information and personnel.

Mr. Khruschev and his party returned to Moscow on April 3.

(The Times, London, Tass, The New York Times, The Hindu, Madras and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3175:INI:A, 3199:BUR:H, 3214:IND:D, 3230:IND:B]

E. France Explodes Second Atom Bomb: On April 1, France exploded her second atom bomb in the Sahara.

This test was not unexpected. For the second day running, restrictions had been placed on flights of aircraft over the test ground.

It was stated that the bomb which was exploded on April 1 was a plutonium device, smaller than the bomb exploded on February 13. The second bomb was set off on the ground. The first one was exploded from a steel tower.

A message from Paris on April 3 said that France need not set off any more atom bombs because she had already gathered sufficient information from the first two explosions.

French scientists, it said, could now start testing prototype tactical devices ordered by the Armed Forces Ministry. Although the power of the atom bomb triggered on April 1 was considerably less than that of the first French bomb of February 13, the same precautions were taken to avoid radio-active 'fall-out' and to control it effectively.

Forty minutes after the explosion, an officer from the French military staff flew in a helicopter over the "zero point" where the bomb had been exploded.

At the point of the explosion the sand was glazed. The bomb created an enormous crater whose dimensions and depth were not immediately disclosed.

From now on, the French Atomic Energy Centre, it was said, was ready to take "orders" for atomic material from the Armed Forces Ministry.

Authoritative sources indicated that France had nearly solved the problem of propelling and aiming ballistic missiles and the problem of a heat-r sistant nose-cone was apparently now under study.

It was also reported that the technicians had gained more knowledge from the first atomic test than they had hoped for. So, the latest test was a pure experiment. The first results obtained turned out to be totally usable and in line with calculations.

The Reggane experiment also provided an opportunity to use semi-permanent shelters much less expensive than those used in the first experiment. They would be used in ballistic missile firings near Tanezrouft in Algeria. The missiles would not be equipped with nuclear war-heads during tests.

Reggane, the "atomic city" in the desert, was to remain a permanent centre serving as a hub for future nuclear tests.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3208:AOA:A]

F. USA Puts New Earth Satellite Into Orbit: The United States put into orbit a new Earth satellite on April 1.

Weighing 270 lbs., it is equipped with two television cameras to send back pictures of the Earth's cloud cover.

It was launched from Cape Canaveral in a three-stage Thor-Able rocket.

It will go round the Earth once every 90 minutes at a height of 400 miles.

The satellite was named Tiros I—standing for "television and infra-red observation satellite".

Radio signals from the satellite were picked up late on the afternoon of April 1.

An official of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said that it was too early to determine the exact characteristics of the satellite's orbit, but he added: "It looks like a fairly good orbit."

Its TV cameras, both the size of a water glass, will take photographs of cloud patterns, which will be stored on a magnetic tape-recorder. The recorded photographs will be broadcast to the Earth each time Tiros I passes within range of two ground stations, one at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, and the other at Kaena Point, Hawaii.

Five hours after the launching, Dr. Harry Wexler, Chief Scientist of the US Weather Bureau, said that the signals coming back from Tiros were "enough to let us know that there is something good there."

The first identifiable photographs of the Earth taken by Tiros were presented to President Eisenhower on April 1.

The photographs showed clouds above the St. Lawrence estuary in Canada.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3185:AOA:G]

G. "Pioneer V" Sends More Information: It was stated in Washington on March 30 that the US artificial planet, Pioneer V, then 2,500,000 miles out in space, had sent back new information strengthening the theory that a "solar wind" charged with electricity can create chaos among radio communications on Earth.

This revelation was made by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) which released the first findings of the satellite.

It said that the data helped to confirm the existence of a "solar wind" of protons (positively charged electrified particles) which produced a turbulence as they mingled with the fringes of the Earth's atmosphere.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2679:AOA:A]

H. Sputnik III Re-enters Earth's Atmosphere And Burns Up: According to information available in Moscow, Russia's Sputnik III, launched in 1958, re-entered the Earth's atmosphere on April 8 and burned itself up.

Sputnik III had travelled more than 281,000,000 miles and its radio-transmitter, which was still working normally on April 3, had sent 127,000 signals back to the Earth. It completed more than 10,000 revolutions round the Earth.

The official Soviet news agency Tass made the following announcement on April 8:

"On April 6, 1960, the third Soviet Sputnik, launched on May 15, 1958, entered the dense layers of the atmosphere and ceased to exist.

"The Sputnik had been aloft for 691 days, covering over 448,000,000 kilometres during the period.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"The last radio signals from Sputnik III were picked up by observation stations on the territory of the Soviet Union on the morning of April 6, when it was making its 10,035th orbit and were registered till it left the zone of visibility of the Soviet observation net-work.

"According to calculations and the data of the last observations made in the Western hemisphere the Sputnik ceased its existence on the 10,037th circuit when its orbiting time was about 87 minutes.

"The Sputnik's programme of research and observations was fulfilled in full.'

In London, a spokesman for the Department of Industrial and Scientific Research said that the British trackers lost contact with Sputnik III on the morning of April 6.

American and Canadian tracking stations also lost contact with Sputnik III on April 6.

An official of the US Tracking Centre, the National Space Surveillance Control Centre at Bedford, Massachusetts, said on April 7 that Sputnik III had burned up in the Earth's atmosphere the previous day (April 6) between 0745 hours and 0945 hours GMT.

The satellite, which was 3.57 metres long and 1.73 metres wide, had supplied important scientific data on pressure, density and temperatures in the upper layers of the atmosphere, on cosmic rays, the Earth's magnetic field and the transmission of Hertzian waves in the ionosphere.

With the aid of a special apparatus placed in the Sputnik, it was learned that electric power totalling several tens of thousands of electron volts existed in the upper layers of the atmosphere.

(Tass and The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2075:AOA:A]

I. "Lunik I" Completes Circle Round Sun: It was announced in Moscow on April 2 that the Soviet satellite, Lunik I, launched on January 2, 1959, had completed its first revolution round the Sun. It took 450 days.

Towards the end of its fourth revolution in 1964, it was expected to be only a few million kilometres away from the Earth.

In theory, the satellite should continue to exist indefinitely in space.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 2477:AOA:A]

J. Solar Rays Push "Vanguard I" Satellite Slightly Off Course: The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) of America reported on March 24 that solar radiation had pushed Vanguard I satellite several kilometres off course during the two years it has been circling the Earth.

This new discovery of how sun-light affects orbiting vehicles ranks as another major scientific finding by Vanguard I.

Scientists of NASA noted that in recent months, Vanguard I was travelling slightly off its predicted course.

It was stated that this finding would be scientifically important in calculating orbits of future satellites.

(US Embassy, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 1991:AOA:A]

K. New Nuclear Particle Discovered In USSR: The Director of the High Energies Laboratory of the Joint Nuclear Research Institute in Dunba near Moscow, Prof. Dmitry Blokhintsev, revealed on March 24 that a new nuclear particle—anti-sigma minus hyperon—had been discovered by a group of scientists at the High Energies Laboratory.

The group consisted of Prof. Wang Kang-chang of China, and other Soviet physicists and scientists of North Viet-Nam, China, North Korea, Poland, Rumania and Czechoslovakia.

The discovery of this particle has added substantially to the scientific conception of the world of "elementary particles." This was the first instance that a charged anti-hyperon was observed.

The discovery of the new particle was preceded by extensive experimental work which involved the study of 40,000 pictures taken by means of a propane bubble chamber bombarded in a synchrophasotron.

Giving details of the new particle in an interview in Moscow on March 25, Prof. Blokhintsev said that it was positively charged and had a mass of about 2,300 electron masses.

The life-time of the new nuclear particle is about one-ten billionth of a second. After that, it splits into an anti-neutron and a positively charged meson with a mass of 273 electron masses.

The existence of the new particle was foreseen by theoretical physicists, but until now it had defied discovery.

The anti-hyperon is a rare nuclear particle. To discover it physicists of the Joint Nuclear Research Institute had to analyse tens of thousands of photographs of particle tracks obtained by means of a propane bubble chamber.

He added that by studying the new particle, physicists would be able to make a closer approach to the evolution of a perfect theory of elementary particles, gain an insight into their structure and the laws governing their mutual transformations. "The development of this knowledge will undoubtedly lead to important practical results."

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3280:INI:K]

L. British Budget For 1960-61: Britain's Budget for the financial year 1960-61, presented to the House of Commons on April 4 by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Derick Heathcoat-Amory, showed a surplus of £304,000,000.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory estimated revenue at £5,980,000,000 and expenditure at £5,676,000,000. Defence would cost £1,630,000,000 and the National Health Service £583,000,000.

Speaking on the Budget proposals, Mr. Heathcoat-Amory told the House of Commons that the aim was "to consolidate and fortify our prosperity".

Looking at the economy as a whole, he said, there was some danger that expansionary forces already present could lead to overloading.

The following were the Budget proposals:

(1) A 2d increase on a packet of 20 cigarettes at present costing 3sh 11d.

(2) Reduction of 12sh a gallon on imported heavy wines and light wines imported in bottles. This would mean that bottles of sherry and port would be about 2sh cheaper.

(3) Cinema theatre tax abolished because of falling audiences.

(4) Tax on Company profits increased from 10 per cent to 12½ per cent.

(5) More monthly prizes in the Premium Bonds draw, including some of £5,000. Till now, the top prizes have been £1,000. The bonds are a form of saving which do not give their holders any interest but qualify every month for "numbers" prizes. To encourage saving, there would also be a new issue of five per cent Defence Bonds.

(6) Taxation from now on to be imposed on the "golden handshakes"—large lump sums of money paid over by firms to directors and top executives on retirement as compensation for loss of office. Till now, these have been tax-free.

"Hobby farmers" are also hit. These are businessmen who buy farms and set the losses incurred against the profits of their real business as a way of cutting taxation. From now on, these losses would be allowed only if the farming or other trading is carried on on a commercial basis with a reasonable expectation of profit.

(7) Abolition of the 3d duty on a pack of playing cards.

(8) A new income-tax allowance of £40 a year for widows and widowers responsible for young children and with no house-keeper. The allowance for dependent relatives was increased from £75 a year.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2681:AOA:H]

M. West Germany-Belgium Agreement On Storing War Material In Each Other's Territory: West Germany and Belgium agreed on March 28 to store military equipment and material on each other's territory. The Agreement was concluded by the Defence Ministries of the two countries.

A communique issued at the conclusion of the talks between the West German Defence Minister, Mr. Franz Josef Strauss, and the Belgian Defence Minister, Mr. Arthur Gilson, said that the two countries had signed an Agreement under which each country would maintain depots of the other's war materials. For the depots on Belgian territory, all personnel except some administrative specialists would be Belgian.

It added that the Agreement had been arrived at in the light of common obligations of the two countries as members of the Atlantic Alliance and with a view to promoting greater harmony between them.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

N. Congress Of Commonwealth And Empire Chambers Of Commerce Recommendations: The 20th Congress of the Commonwealth and Empire Chambers of Commerce, which met in Canberra, reported on April 8 that liberalization and expansion of intra-Commonwealth trade was a basic need for the raising of living standards of all peoples in the Commonwealth.

It adopted 63 recommendations from four Committees on a wide range of trade and Commonwealth problems.

In adopting the report of the Committee on Industry and Commerce, it warmly supported the industrial development and economic growth of the under-developed countries of the Commonwealth.

The recommendations included that Chambers of Commerce in the Commonwealth countries should urge their Governments to make periodic reviews of the levels of tariff protection and their consequence.

It supported the principle of GATT and said that it was in the interests of all countries as well as the international trading community to work for the reduction of agricultural protectionism. Energetic efforts should be made to counter-act the emergence of State trading or bilateral arrangements between certain communist countries and members of the Commonwealth—a growing threat to intra-Commonwealth trade.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

It adopted another Committee's report which expressed concern at the levels of external tariffs of the European Economic Community and its policies concerning agricultural and other primary products.

It expressed concern over the possible adverse effects on other countries presented by possibility of economic warfare as a result of the division of Europe into the Inner Six, Outer Seven and the remaining countries.

The South African and Canadian delegations abstained from voting on a proposal that member-Chambers and Associations should urge the teaching of English and told the final plenary session that they could not support this item as their countries were bilingual.

A further recommendation adopted urged the speeding-up of the institution of decimal currency systems throughout the Commonwealth.

Another recommendation was that a Commonwealth Investment Guarantee Scheme should be set up to provide adequate insurance against risks associated with any political instability which might develop in the Commonwealth.

A report from the Committee on Constitutional, Educational and Social questions viewed with concern the tendency in many countries to enact legislation which deprived the citizen of his fundamental right to justice from a court of law.

(The Times, London and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2294:AOA:B]

O. Mr. E. Black's Report To The UN Economic And Social Council On Indus Canal Waters Question: The President of the World Bank, Mr. Eugene Black, reported to the United Nations Economic and Social Council on April 7 on the Indus Canal Waters question as follows:

"Almost eight years ago, I reported to this Council that the Bank had taken an initiative in seeking a solution of the Indus Waters dispute between India and Pakistan. I referred to this dispute as a knotty problem. This phrase turned out to be an understatement. The Bank has, in fact, been engaged in studies and discussions of the problem with the two Governments ever since.

"Now, however, I think we are near the end of this process. The solution which the two Governments have accepted in principle includes vast engineering works to effect an equitable division of the river waters. The plan will take ten years to carry out and will cost in all about $1,000,000,000.

"It has been clear from the outset that external assistance would be needed on a considerable scale to help finance this plan. The Bank was, therefore, glad to be able to announce at the beginning of February that offers had been made by friendly Governments to contribute over $600,000,000 in grants and loans toward the cost of the project. The Governments concerned are Australia, Canada, West Germany, New Zealand, United Kingdom and United States, and the highest tribute should be paid to their generosity.

"I also want to pay tribute to the man who has carried the burden of this difficult negotiation for the past eight years. He is my colleague, Mr. W. A. B. Iliff, a Vice-President of the Bank. Throughout the negotiation, he has shown great understanding, patience and restraint, and we cannot praise his services too highly".

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3225:INI:D]

P. ICAO Endorses American Short-range Navigational System For World Airlines: The 87-member International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), Conference, which met in Montreal, endorsed on April 8 the United States VOR-DMET short-range navigational system as standard for world airlines in preference to Britain's DECCA system.

The decision followed a similar vote by a panel of air navigational experts of the 12-nation Air Navigation Commission on March 15.

In 1959 also, ICAO turned down the British system in favour of the American system with a 24 to nil vote and 11 abstentions. Britain withdrew claiming that the DECCA system had not been given a fair trial.

At its March, 1960 meeting, Britain, Norway and Canada opposed the decision, but USA and six other countries voted in favour.

Earlier, the DECCA Navigator Company called for side-by-side comparison of the two systems by a competent independent authority. It said that a report by the United States Federal Aviation Agency, which criticised the DECCA system was subjective, since it contained two quantitative data and the evaluation was one of opinion rather than of fact.

At the meeting on April 8, Britain, France and Canada opposed the US system.

The final decision had been hanging fire for more than a year.

Voting for it with the United States were Venezuela, Spain, the Philippines, Japan, Brazil, Argentina, West Germany, Guatemala, Italy, the Lebanon, the Netherlands, Portugal and the United Arab Republic.

South Africa, Australia, Denmark and India did not vote.

In London, a DECCA Company spokesman said that the decision to endorse the United States VOR-DMET system in preference to Britain's DECCA system was a result of American economic pressure.

He added: "We are fully aware of the efforts the United States has made with many Governments, especially in the past six months, to get their support at all costs.

"Obviously she had a fair measure of success though she only just obtained the necessary two-thirds' majority.

"This Council decision was not made on technical grounds. Not one of the 13 nations supporting the United States has had experience with VOR-DMET.

"It has not been demonstrated to them that VOR-DMET can meet the requirements of the future.

"This decision by the Council does not affect problems of air traffic control in congested areas. These problems remain and grow daily more acute. VOR-DMET cannot solve these problems, despite the Council decision."

(The New York Times and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 1340:AOA:K]

Q. Annual Session Of UN Commission On Human Rights: The annual session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights began in Geneva on February 29.

The topics before the session included the right of asylum, prevention of religious discrimination and ways of eradicating racial prejudices.

Other questions on the agenda were: UN advisory services in the field of human rights, freedom from arbitrary arrest, freedom of information and a proposal for national advisory committees on human rights.

Regarding religious discrimination and anti-Semitism, the discussions were based on the report of the Sub-Commission on the Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities.

In January, 1960, the Sub-Commission had approved a set of principles on religious freedom. It had also condemned the recent anti-Semitic manifestations and had asked the Human Rights Commission to take similar action.

Where advisory services in the field of human rights were concerned, the Commission had before it a report of the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, telling of the success of UN's programme of seminars.

The report showed that three seminars were organized for 1960—in Tokyo, Vienna and Addis Ababa—and plans were underway for three more in 1961.

On freedom from arbitrary arrest, the Commission would receive a definitive report in 1961 from a four-member Committee charged with preparing a Study on the subject.

The Committee would assemble material from official and non-governmental sources, and had so far prepared 50 country monographs. Twenty-three of these included comments from Governments and had been issued as Working Papers. The remaining 27 were submitted for Governmental comment.

The Committee was composed of representatives from Argentina, Belgium, Ceylon and the Philippines. Although Ceylon had ceased to be a member of the Commission on December 31, 1959, she was especially invited to continue the work on the Committee.

In the course of its regular review of developments affecting freedom of information, the Commission considered a memorandum by the UN Secretary-General informing it of relevant decisions during the past year by the Economic and Social Council, and also of the activities being undertaken by UNESCO.

Among other things, UNESCO invited comments by United Nations on a proposal by the Government of Cuba to hold an international conference in Havana to study ways of improving international transmission of news.

Regarding national advisory committees on human rights, a proposal had been submitted by Mr. R. S. S. Gunewardene of Ceylon, Chairman of the Commission in 1959.

Mr. Gunewardene recalled earlier consideration given to the matter by the Commission and the Economic and Social Council and said that the establishment of such committees "properly instituted and consisting of prominent personalities" would be of great assistance to Governments in an advisory capacity.

He presented a resolution under which States would be invited to consider setting them up and would be asked to report to the Commission's 1962 session.

The 18 members of the Commission were: Argentina, Austria, Belgium, China, Denmark, France, India, Iraq, Lebanon, Mexico, Pakistan, the Philippines, Poland, Ukraine, USSR, United Kingdom, United States and Venezuela.

The session ended on March 18.

Decisions:

According to a Press release from the UN Information Centre in New Delhi on April 1, the text of a Draft Declaration on the Right of Asylum had been approved by the Commission.

The vote was 12 to none, with Poland, Ukraine and USSR abstaining.

The representatives of Iraq, Lebanon and Venezuela, who were absent at the time, said that they would have voted in favour of the Draft Declaration had they been present.

The Commission also unanimously adopted a resolution condemning the manifestations fo anti-Semitism and other forms of racial prejudice and religious intolerance and urging that steps be taken to prevent such acts and to punish their perpetrators.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Draft Declaration would go to the Economic and Social Council this Summer after it had been circulated to Governments for their comments.

The Commission adopted a resolution asking for observations on the Declaration in general and on Article 3 in particular.

Article 3 deals with such matters as "rejection at the frontier" and compelling people to return to or remain in territory where their life or liberty is threatened.

It read: "No one seeking or enjoying asylum in accordance with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights should, except for over-riding reasons of national security or safeguarding of the population, be subjected to measures such as rejection at the frontier, return or expulsion which would result in compelling him to return to or remain in a territory if there is well-founded fear of persecution endangering his life, physical integrity or liberty in that territory.

"In cases where a State decides to apply any of the above-mentioned measures, it should consider the possibility of the grant of provisional asylum under such conditions as it may deem appropriate, to enable the persons thus endangered to seek asylum in another country."

The five Articles of the Draft Declaration are presented as principles on which Governments should base their practices "without prejudice to existing instruments dealing with asylum."

In its preamble, the Declaration recall the relevant paragraphs in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the General Assembly in 1948.

Other points covered in the five Articles include the obligation of people enjoying asylum not to engage in "activities contrary to the purpose and principles of United Nations" and the concern of the international community with the situation of people who are forced to leave a country "because of persecution or well-founded fears of persecution."

In this connexion, it says: "Where a country finds difficulty in continuing to grant asylum, States, individually or jointly, or through United Nations, should consider in a spirit of international solidarity appropriate measures to lighten the burden of the country granting asylum."

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2513:AOA:D, 2729:AOA:B]

R. WHO Report On Malaria: At a special ceremony in Geneva on April 7 to mark its 12th birthday, the World Health Organization (WHO) announced that more than half the world's population of 2,800,000,000 lived under the threat—real or potential—of malaria.

But, in countries totalling between a quarter and a third of the world's population, it said, the figure of about 250,000,000 malaria cases occurring annually until 1950 had been reduced by 30 per cent at the end of 1955 and by a further 20 per cent by the end of 1957.

In the same period, death from malaria fell from 2,500,000 a year to 1,000,000, according to a recent estimate.

To meet its responsibilities in the fight against the disease until the end of 1961, WHO said, it needed about $8,000,000.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2921:AOA:M]

S. British Museum Acquires Bernard Shaw's Papers: It was made known in New Delhi on April 20 that the British Museum had acquired two extensive and important groups of literary papers of George Bernard Shaw, who died in 1950.

Three institutions to which Shaw left his estate—the National Gallery of Ireland, the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and the British Museum—jointly decided that they could best honour the memory of their benefactor and at the same time serve the interests of scholarship by selling his literary manuscripts as a whole to the British Museum, where they could all be kept together in association with the correspondence and papers he had already bequeathed to the Museum.

This transaction was completed at a price which took into account the fact that the proceeds of the sale of Shaw's papers as works of national importance were exempt from estate duty.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3137:AOA:O]

SPORT

A. National Athletic Championships: The 25th National Athletic Championships sponsored by the Amateur Athletic Federation of India were held in New Delhi between February 25 and 28, 1960.

Milkha Singh achieved a feat perhaps unparalleled in the annals of Indian athletics. He won the 100, 200 and 400 metres in record timings.

The following are some of the important results:

MEN

100 Metres: Milkha Singh 1—time 10.4 secs; T. R. Joshi 2—time 10.6 secs; Makhan Singh 3—time 10.7 secs. Owing to wind velocity of 3.0 metres per second, the record of 10.4 secs was not recognized. Milkha Singh equalled the National record of 10.6 secs in semi-final set by L. Pinto (Bombay) in 1953.

200 Metres: Milkha Singh 1—time 20.8 secs—New record; Makhan Singh 2—time 21.4 secs; Karnail Singh 3—time 22.2 secs.

400 Metres: Milkha Singh 1—time 46.1 secs—New record; Daljit Singh 2—time 48.2 secs; A. Silveria 3—time 48.4 secs.

800 Metres: Daljit Singh 1—time 1 min. 52.2 secs—new record; Amrit Pal 2—time 1 min. 52.6 secs; Babu Singh 3—time 1 min. 53.6 secs.

3,000 Metres Steeplechase: Pan Singh 1—time 9 mins. 7.8 secs—new record; Chuni Lal 2—time 9 mins. 25.6 secs; Harbans Lal 3—time 9 mins. 41.8 secs.

110 Metres Hurdles: Jagmohan Singh 1—time 14.5 secs—equals National record; Siri Chand 2—time 14.8 secs; Gurnam Singh 3—time 15.1 secs.

400 Metres Hurdles: W. N. Usmani 1—time 53.5 secs; Jagdev Singh 2—time 54.3 secs; Ganpat Ram 3—time 54.7 secs.

Marathon Race: Lal Chand 1—time 2 hrs. 28 mins. 22.4 secs—new record; Dass 2—time 2 hrs. 36 mins. 59.2 secs; Prem Singh 3—time 2 hrs. 37 mins. 6.2 secs.

High Jump: Ajit Singh 1—6 ft. 4 in; Saranjit Singh 2—6 ft. 4 in; Raghbir Singh 3—6 ft. 2 in.

Long Jump: B. V. Satyanarayana 1—23 ft. 5½ in; C. Sankaran 2—22 ft. 8¼ in; Shadi Lal 3—22 ft. 6 in.

Hop, Step and Jump: Kehar Singh 1—50 ft. 3¾ in; Mohinder Singh 2—49 ft. 8½ in; Raj Kumar 3—49 ft. 5¾ in.

Pole Vault: A. Ramachandran 1—13 ft. 1 in—new record; Gurdip Singh 2—12 ft. 9 in; Bob Forse Gren 3—12 ft. 9 in.

Shot Put: Parduman Singh 1—48 ft. 6¼ in; D. Irani 2—48 ft. 2¾ in; Ishwar Singh 3—48 ft.

Discus Throw: Balkar Singh 1—154 ft. ½ in; Parduman Singh 2—151 ft. 7½ in; Baldev Singh 3—145 ft. 7½ in.

Javelin Throw: Avtar Singh 1—201 ft. 4 in—new record; Mohinder Singh 2—195 ft. 6 in; Govind Ram 3—184 ft. 9 in.

Hammer Throw: Hardev Singh 1—166 ft; Devi Dayal 2—161 ft. 4½ in; Duli Chand 3—154 ft. 7 in.

Decathlon: Gurbachan Singh 1—5,973 points—new record; Lashkar Singh 2—5,560 points; Ujjagar Singh 3—5,261 points.

WOMEN

100 Metres: Stephie D'Souza 1—12.3 secs, equals National record; C. Pais 2—12.8 secs; Marie Brown 3—13.1 secs. The National record is 12.3 secs. set up by M. D'Souza in 1954 and S. D'Souza in 1959.

80 Metres Hurdles: P. Pais 1—12.4 secs; Siloo Mistry 2—26.5 secs; Marie Brown 3—27.0 secs.

80 Metres Hurdles: C. Pias 1—12.4 secs; V. Peters 2—12.5 secs; Deanna Syme 3—12.6 secs.

High Jump: R. M. Vanjakshi 1—4 ft. 10 in; Deanna Syme 2—4 ft. 10 in; G. Broughton 3—4 ft. 7 in.

Long Jump: Deanna Syme 1—16 ft. 5½ in; Marie Brown 2—16 ft. 1 in; R. M. Vanjakshi 3—15 ft. 7½ in.

Shot Put: Kunjama 1—34 ft. 2½ in; E. J. Davenport 2—34 ft. 1¾ in; C. O. Connel 3—32 ft.

Discus Throw: Man Mohini Oberoi 1—120 ft. ½ in, new record; C. O. Connel 2—108 ft. 7 in; Indra Mohini Oberoi 3—103 ft. 5 in.

Javelin Throw: E. J. Davenport 1—145 ft. 5 in, new record; Indra Mohini Oberoi 2—126 ft. 2 in; Kunjama 3—107 ft.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 732:SPO:C]

B. India-South Viet-Nam Table-Tennis Tests: A Table-Tennis Team from South Viet-Nam came to India and played five Test Matches between March 7 and April 10, 1960. India won the series by three Tests to two.

In the first Test played in Madras on March 7, India beat South Viet-Nam by 5 games to 1; in the second Test played in Trivandrum on March 13, India beat South Viet-Nam by 5 games to 2; in the third Test at Bombay on March 20, South Viet-Nam beat India by 5 games to 4; in the fourth Test at Delhi on April 3, India beat South Viet-Nam by 5 games to 2; and in the fifth Test played at Patna on April 10, South Viet-Nam beat India by 5 games to 2.

(Table-Tennis Federation of India)

[Prev. ref. 2498:SPO:A, 3138:SPO:B]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10 Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95|-; Foreign Rs. 115|- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

76449

May 21—27, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 21

INDIA

SUMMARY: President's Order On Union's Official Language; Scheduled Areas And Scheduled Tribes Commission; Madras-Andhra Pradesh Border Areas Exchange; US Loan For Thermal Plant; INTUC Annual Session; National Income; State Film Awards For 1959.

A. Hindi As Union's Official Language—President's Order: The President issued an Order on April 29 broadly accepting the recommendations of the Parliamentary Committee on Official Language and directing that after 1965 Hindi should be the principal official language of the Union and English should continue as an "associate" language.

Copies of the President's Order on the report of the Parliamentary Committee were presented to both Houses of Parliament by the Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, on April 29.

The President, in his Order, directed that "no restrictions are to be imposed, for the present, on the use of the English language for any of the official purposes of the Union."

He said: "The extent to which Hindi can be used in addition to English will depend largely on the effectiveness of the priority measures. The plan for the actual use of Hindi in addition to English will need to be reviewed and adjusted from time to time in the light of experience.'

It was left to the Home Ministry to prepare and implement a programme concerned with the plans or preparatory measures for facilitating the progressive use of Hindi in addition to English for the purposes of the Union as provided in the Constitution.

He directed that the Home Ministry should take necessary action in consultation with the Union Public Services Commission for the introduction of Hindi as "an alternative medium for examinations for recruitment to all-India Services and higher Central Services."

It was, however, clarified that "for the present only an optional Hindi language paper may be introduced." Such candidates as were selected and had qualified in this paper might be exempted from appearance and passing at the Hindi departmental test after recruitment.

The President concurred with the recommendation of the Parliamentary Committee that training in Hindi might be obligatory for Central Government employees who were below 45 years. This would, however, not apply to employees belonging to Class III grade industrial establishments and workcharged staff.

He directed that the international form of numerals be adopted uniformly in all publications, technical, statistical, including the Budget literature of the Government of India. A uniform basic policy should be adopted for the use of Devnagari numerals in addition to international numerals in the Hindi publications of the Central Ministries."

The President accepted the recommendation that the functioning of the Supreme Court should eventually be in Hindi. But, it was pointed out that this would "require appropriate action only when the time comes for the change-over."

In respect of the language of the High Courts, he urged that the Ministry of Law might undertake necessary legislation in their case to provide for the use "optionally of Hindi and other official languages of the States for purposes of judgments, decrees and orders, with the previous consent of the President."

The Order also contained the President's directive in regard to terminology, administrative manuals and other procedural literature, training of administrative personnel in the Hindi medium, propagation of Hindi, recruitment of local officials to Central Government departments, training establishments, language of Acts and Bills and preparatory measures for a change-over in the field of law.

Regarding the language of Acts and Bills, he directed that the Ministry of Law "may in due course initiate necessary legislation by providing the various Hindi translations of parliamentary legislation which may continue to be in English." Arrangements "may be made by the Ministry of Law for providing translations of parliamentary legislation into regional languages."

He asked the Central Education Ministry to constitute a Standing Commission for the evolution of scientific and technical terminology in Hindi as suggested by the Committee.

He also directed the same Ministry to review the work done so far and evolve a terminology in accordance with the general principles accepted by the Committee.

In the field of science and technology, the terms in international use should be adopted with the minimum change, i.e., the basewords should be those at present in use in international terminology although the derivatives may be Indianized to the extent necessary.

The Education Ministry was also directed to formulate proposals for making arrangements to co-ordinate the work of preparation of Hindi terminology.

The Ministry of Education would take early steps to evolve a standard key-board for Hindi typewriters.

States' Laws:

Dealing with the Committee's suggestion that a Hindi translation be provided of Bills passed by State legislatures in a language other than Hindi, the Order said that legislation might be initiated for the publication of a Hindi translation of State Bills, Acts and other statutory instruments along with the text in the official language of the State.

About the recruitment to local offices of the Central Government departments, the Parliamentary Committee had recommended that these offices should use Hindi for their internal working and the respective regional languages in their public dealings in the respective regions.

In formulating the plan for the progressive use of Hindi in addition to English in their local offices, the Central Government departments should keep in view the need for providing facilities to the local public by making available to them forms and departmental literature for their use in the regional language in as large a measure as practicable.

In the opinion of the Parliamentary Committee, the staff structure of the administrative agencies and departments of the Central Government should be reviewed and decentralized on a regional basis, and the recruitment methods and qualifications may have to be revised suitably.

The Order said that the suggestion may be accepted in principle, without introducing any domicile qualifications, in regard to categories of posts in local offices of which the incumbents are now ordinarily liable to transfer outside the region.

The Parliamentary Committee had agreed with the recommendation of the Commission that the Central Government would be justified in prescribing a reasonable measure of knowledge of Hindi language as a qualification for entering the Services, provided sufficiently long notice was given and the measure of linguistic ability prescribed was moderate, any deficiency being made good by further in-service training.

This recommendation might be applied for the present in regard to recruitment in the local offices of the Central Government departments in the Hindi-speaking areas only, and not in the local offices in non-Hindi speaking area. But these directions would not apply to the offices under the Indian Audit and Accounts Department.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2638:INI:H]

B. Scheduled Areas And Scheduled Tribes Commission Appointed: The President of India appointed on April 29 an 11-member Commission, under the chairmanship of Mr. U. N. Dhebar, to report on the administration of the Scheduled Areas and the welfare of the Scheduled Tribes as provided in the Constitution.

The members of the Commission, besides Mr. Dhebar, are: Mr. D. Basumatari, Mr. H. C. Heda, Mr. Jaipal Singh, Mr. T. Sanganna, Mr. Manikyalal Verma, Mr. Narayan Rao Wadiwa, Mr. Subodh Hansda (all MPs), Mr. D. J. Naik, Mr. Dharam Dev Shastri and Dr. Verrier Elwin.

The Commission was asked to submit its report before December 31, 1960.

The Commission was asked to report on:

(a) The administration of the Scheduled Areas under the Fifth Schedule of the Constitution and, in particular, on (i) the functioning of the Tribes Advisory Council: (ii) the laws applicable to Scheduled Areas and the exercise by the Governors concerned of powers under paragraph 5 of the Fifth Schedule: and (iii) the principles to be followed in declaring any territory to be, or to form part of a Scheduled Area or directing that any territory shall cease to be or cease to form part of a Scheduled Area:

(b) The welfare of the Scheduled Tribes in the States and, in particular, whether the development plans in relation to matters connected with the welfare of Scheduled Tribes require any alteration in respect of objectives, priorities or details of working: and

(c) Any other matter connected with the administration of Scheduled Areas or the welfare of the Scheduled Tribes in the States which may hereafter be specifically referred to the Commission for investigation and report.

[Article 339 of the Constitution under which the Commission has been appointed says: "The President may, at any time, and shall at the expiration of 10 years from the commencement of this Constitution, by Order, appoint a Commission to report on the administration of the Scheduled Areas and the welfare of the Scheduled Tribes in the States."]

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3053:INI:G]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

C. Madras-Andhra Pradesh Boundaries Act—Areas Transferred: The border adjustments legislation, recently adopted by Parliament, following a six-year dispute between Madras and Andhra Pradesh, came into force on April 1, with the transfer of 286 villages of Andhra's Chittoor district to Chingleput district of Madras State, and a similar area from Madras State to Andhra Pradesh.

According to the Madras-Andhra Pradesh Boundaries Act, Tiruttani and areas to the east comprising 286 villages were added to Chingleput district and 34 villages and parts of Palmaner forest area of Chittoor district of Andhra Pradesh were transferred to North Arcot district. Three villages of Krishnagiri taluk in Salem district and 148 villages in Chingleput district were transferred from Madras to Andhra Pradesh.

As a result of this, a population of 2,40,357 (2,03,689 from Tiruttani. 142 from Puttur and 36,526 from Chittoor taluks and other places) were transferred from Andhra Pradesh to Madras State. About 95,546 persons were transferred from Madras State to Andhra Pradesh. This included 49,709 from Ponneri and 802 from three villages in Krishnagiri taluk.

The total area of the places transferred to Madras was 405.15 square miles, while the area transferred from Madras to Andhra was 326.39 square miles. The net increase in the number of villages in Madras State was 167 and the net increase in the population was estimated at 1,44,811.

The approximate increase in the area in Madras as a result of the implementation of the legislation was 78.76 square miles.

Out of the transferred population to Madras, 1,58,043 were Tamils and 77.274 were Telugus and 5,040 belong to other language groups.

Special provision was made to administer the Aranlar Project.

Out of the 34 villages benefited by this Project 13 are in Andhra and 21 in Madras.

Madras State will have an additional seat in the Rajya Sabha (Council of States).

Though the Madras Legislative Assembly's strength is raised from 205 to 206 to include the representative from Ramakrishnarajupet in the next General Elections, constituencies in border districts would be so delimited that the present strength of 205 would continue to remain unaltered.

There is to be no change in respect of other legislative bodies of Andhra and Madras States.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2669:INI:T]

D. Role of Press In Indo-Pakistan Relations—Information Consultative Committee's Decisions: The Indo-Pakistan Information Consultative Committee which met in New Delhi on April 28 issued a joint communique on April 29 re-iterating that the Press in both countries should observe 'voluntary restraint' in publishing news and try to promote friendly relations between them.

The communique prescribed 12 "don'ts" to achieve the proper implementation of a joint Press Code.

These "don'ts," among other things, stated that the Press should avoid dissemination of news calculated to undermine relations between the majority and minority communities in the two countries, refuse to give currency to mischievous opinions of individuals or organizations which roused communal passions and exclude rigorously opinions directed against the territorial sovereignty of the other or purporting to incite war.

The communique welcomed the "distinct improvement and greater understanding" that had come to mark the relations between the two countries since the assumption of office by President Ayub Khan in Pakistan.

It said: "The Indo-Pakistan Information Consultative Committee met in New Delhi on April 27 and 28, 1960. The Pakistan delegation was led by the Minister for National Reconstruction and Information of the Government of Pakistan, Mr. Z. A. Bhutto, while the Indian delegation was led by Dr. B. V. Keskar, Minister for Information and Broadcasting of the Government of India.

"The Committee reviewed the working of the Indo-Pakistan Agreement of 1948 and the Prime Ministers' Agreement of 1950 in relation to the information media.

"The Committee recognized the vital role that the Press, radio and other information media could play in promoting greater understanding and in helping the Governments concerned to resolve outstanding disputes in a peaceful and friendly manner.

"The Committee felt that the common attitude of the two countries should be to promote and encourage objective and helpful treatment of material, particularly that relating to subjects in dispute and to ensure that its presentation reflects the attitude of friendly countries resolved to remain friendly.

"The Committee, whose members include representatives of the Press of Pakistan and India, examined in detail the Joint Press Code which was adopted by the All-India Newspaper Editors' Conference and the Pakistan Newspaper Editors' Conference in 1950, and in view of the desire of the Press in both countries to assist in the promotion and maintenance of friendly relations, adopted the following resolution re-affirming and enlarging the principles governing the Code.

"Noting the common desire of the Press of both countries to exercise restraint and to assist in the maintenance and promotion of friendly relations between India and Pakistan;

"Recalling that an Indo-Pakistan Joint Press Code had been adopted in May, 1950 to facilitate further implementation of the Indo-Pakistan Agreement;

"Re-iterates that the Press in both countries observe voluntary restraint in publishing matter concerning both countries;

"(a) by avoiding dissemination of news calculated to undermine relations between the majority and minority communities in the two countries;

"(b) by refusing to give currency to mischievous opinions of individuals of organizations likely to rouse communal passions or create a sense of insecurity among members of the minority community;

"(c) by excluding rigorously from the Press of each country opinions directed against the territorial sovereignty of the other or purporting to incite war;

"(d) by seeking through normal Press channels or Government agencies verification of news of communal incidents before it is published;

"(e) by exercising due care and caution in publication of reports of communal incidents;

"(f) by avoiding alarming headlines for reports of communal incidents;

"(g) by avoiding publication of pictures, poems and cartoons likely to excite communal passions;

"(h) by affording full facilities to Governments for correction or contradiction of published reports;

"(i) by examining objectively outstanding problems between the two countries with a view to promoting just and amicable solutions;

"(j) by confining comment to the merits of the problem or problems in dispute and not making such a problem or problems the basis of a general attack on the two Governments;

"(k) by eschewing personal, contumacious or scurrilous attacks on the respected leaders of either country or the religion, culture and faith of the people of both countries; and

"(l) by avoiding historical controversies which may create or revive bitterness between the two countries."

Mr. Z. A. Bhutto On Press In Pakistan: Pakistan's Minister for National Reconstruction and Information, Mr. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, told a news conference in New Delhi on April 28 that the "trend" in the Press in India and Pakistan at present for promoting better relations between the two countries was a 'good one.'

He expressed optimism that this trend would be maintained and further developed through mutual co-operation.

Asked if there was a 'fear atmosphere' now for the Press in Pakistan since the imposition of Martial Law, he said that the Martial Law regime in Pakistan was of a "benign form."

He added: "The Press in Pakistan criticises the Government in a constructive way. We have not indulged in any witch-hunt."

A correspondent: "You did indulge in witch-hunting in the case of The Pakistan Times." [The Pakistan Times published from Lahore was forcibly taken over by the Martial Law Administration in 1959 and sold by public auction to an industrialist—Page 2651.]

Mr. Bhuttto said that it was not a case of witch-hunt or curbing the freedom of the Press. The 'facts of the case' were such that the Government had to take this action. "The original owner of the paper is a very contented man now."

In reply to a question about the restrictions imposed on the Press in Pakistan in a recent ordinance, Mr. Bhutto said that there was sound reason for doing so to prevent 'undesirable people' from running newspapers. He claimed that the Press in Pakistan had a 'great deal of latitude.'

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2895:PAK:E]

E. US Loan For Thermal Plant: On April 25, the United States announced her decision to give India a new Rs. 34.8-crore loan for a 250,000-kw thermal power plant to be located in the public sector. The plant would be constructed near the bank of the Damodar river near Chandrapura, 200 miles west of Calcutta.

The dollar component of this loan—amounting to Rs. 14.3 crores—would come from the US Development Loan Fund. The remaining Rs. 20.5 crores would be loaned out of the sale proceeds of agricultural commodities supplied to India under PL 480.

The loan would carry an interest rate of 3½ per cent and would be paid back—in Indian rupees—in 20 years.

Announcing the loan, Mr. C. Tyler-Wood, Minister for Economic Affairs in the US Embassy in New Delhi, emphasized two points. First, over 50 per cent of the loan's dollar component would be freed from the provisions of the new DLF policy requiring that its funds be used for procuring supplies in USA alone. Secondly, this was the largest Indo-American economic project to be financed entirely with US assistance.

The Chandrapura plant would include two thermal turbo-generators, which would be the largest in India. The first generator unit would be completed by the end of 1963 and the second three months later.

The Damodar Valley Corporation (DVC) would administer and construct the new plant, while an American firm would give guidance on engineering and construction work.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Chandrapura plant is part of DVC's plan to meet the area's anticipated power requirements. When completed it would be one of the biggest sources of electric power in the country.

It is estimated that the demand for electric power in the area will increase from 309,000 kw to 1,164,000 kw by the end of the Third Five-Year Plan.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3291:INI:D]

F. Diplomatic Appointments: It was announced on April 27 that Mr. Y. K. Puri, Joint Secretary in the Ministry of External Affairs, had been appointed High Commissioner for India in Malaya and concurrently as Commissioner for the Government of India in Singapore with extension of his jurisdiction to Sarawak, British North Borneo and Brunei.

He would take up his new post in August, 1960.

Mr. Lalji Mehrotra, Ambassador of India in Rangoon, was appointed as Ambassador to Japan, succeeding Mr. C. P. N. Singh.

(External Affairs Ministry, India)

[Prev. ref. 2559:INI:C]

G. All-India Bank Employees' Association's Conference On Its Charter Of Demands: The four-day Conference of the All-India Bank Employees' Association, which concluded in Hyderabad on April 23, passed a resolution to pursue the charter of demands of the employees through the National Tribunal.

The resolution, however, expressed the "resentment and indignation" of the bank employees against the action of the Government in appointing a Tribunal to inquire into their demands instead of a Commission which, it said, was contrary to the assurance held out by Government earlier.

It said that any fight now would only mean a fight against the machinery (Tribunal) and not in furtherance of the charter of demands.

The other consideration which prompted the Conference to decide in favour of pursuing the charter of demands through the Tribunal was, it said, "the need for forging unity among the employees of banks in public and private sectors, now that the disputes of both had been referred to a Tribunal."

The Conference also passed resolutions demanding nationalization of banks, recommending amalgamation of small banks, urging reference of the bonus dispute to a Tribunal and demanding that the State Bank and co-operative banks be brought under the scope of the Industrial Disputes Act for the purpose of settlement of disputes concerning the employees.

The Conference elected Mr. A. C. Karkar (UP) as President, Mr. G. N. Trikannad (Bombay) and Mr. P. R. Bhatia (Punjab) as Vice-Presidents, and Mr. Prabhat Kar (Madhya Pradesh) as General Secretary.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3203:INI:M]

H. INTUC Annual Session: Inaugurating the eleventh annual session of the Indian National Trade Union Congress (INTUC) in New Delhi on April 24, the Congress President, Mr. N. Sanjiva Reddy, regretted that some trade unions were being misled and were ignoring the national interests.

He congratulated INTUC for the work it was doing in mobilizing all workers and expressed the hope that it would ultimately emerge as the sole representative body of all labour in the country.

Both the Congress and INTUC, he said, stood for the same objectives—that of removing poverty and improving the living standards of the people. These common aims had helped both organizations to co-ordinate their activities in many spheres.

Mr. G. Ramanujam's Presidential Address:

The President of INTUC, Mr. G. Ramanujam, in his speech, demanded that the Government should black-list employers as also trade unions who failed to accept "voluntary arbitration" for settling industrial disputes.

He added: "Individual employers do not show any desire to honour the terms of the Code of Discipline and, when confronted by labour, they do not hesitate to tell them that they will have their own way, code or no code. This attitude to the Code is particularly pronounced in regard to the clause in the Code which expressly binds down the parties to refer to voluntary arbitration all unresolved disputes."

The principle of voluntary arbitration, he said, should also be applied to the public sector. Once the Government undertook the management of an industry, it had to be treated just as any other industrial employer. "The INTUC cannot countenance Government claiming any privilege as an employer in the public sector which is not available to the employer in the private sector."

The National Productivity Council and its regional branches, he felt, were a mere "managerial show or a Government show, with no real participation by labour, which is only nominally represented on them, even though labour is a very important factor in productivity."

He suggested that auditing should be nationalized. "These days there is nothing absolutely private about that (private) sector as it is the people who are the real employers of all employees and they should also be satisfied and not merely the shareholders."

On the increase in the national income following the first two Five-Year Plans, he said that the Planning Commission should conduct a survey to find out how the increase had been distributed among the people belonging to the different income groups. That would help the people to know to what extent the socialist objectives accepted by the country were reflected in the distribution of the increase in national income.

Annual Report:

In his annual report, the General Secretary of INTUC, Mr. S. R. Vasavada, said that many employers had still not begun to appreciate the need to maintain happy relations with their workers. Employers moved High Courts or the Supreme Court in industrial disputes. The question of bonus continued to agitate the minds of workers.

During the year under review, Mr. Vasavada said, INTUC's affiliated unions recruited 59,756 new members. The INTUC had now a membership of 14,00,579 with 1,246 unions.

The report, which gives industry-wise organizational membership as on February 25, 1960, showed that INTUC had a membership of 3,32,000 in textiles, 3,12,000 in plantations and 1,59,000 in transport.

The membership on Pradesh-wise basis included: Assam 2,55,000, Bengal 1,88,000, Gujarat 1,59,000, Bihar 1,44,000 and Bombay 1,42,000.

The INTUC had industrial federations in the textile, mining, plantation, sugar mills, cement, transport, dock, defence, iron and steel and petroleum industries. It had now decided to set up industrial federations in the electricity, chemicals, printing and paper industries.

Resolutions:

On April 25, the INTUC passed a resolution on the Third Five-Year Plan criticising the public sector for not being "an ideal employer" in that it claimed privileges vis-a-vis labour, which were not enjoyed by the private sector.

The resolution suggested the appointment of evaluation and implementation machinery to assess periodically the progress in the implementation of the policies and programmes concerning labour laid down in the Plan and suggest effective measures for the implementation of these policies.

While noting the achievements of the Plans in the field of labour, it expressed the view that several objectives of the Plans had not been fulfilled. The omissions were glaring in respect of non-acceptance of the principle of voluntary arbitration by employers both in the public and private sectors, the failure to set up any enforcement machinery and accept tripartite agreements as directives binding on tribunals and establish the workers' rights to a fair wage.

It urged the Planning Commission and Parliament to ensure that the Third Plan aimed at an equitable distribution of the national income and that the working class got its due share in the increased national wealth resulting from increased production and productivity.

Thirteen other resolutions on various aspects of the labour problem were also adopted. Two of the resolutions condemned "the South African massacre" and "Chinese aggression."

By another resolution, the INTUC said that the remedy to the problem of industrial wages lay in the stabilization of the price level.

It said: "While this Conference adheres to automatic adjustment of wages with the cost of living....it firmly believes that the real remedy lies in the stabilization and, if possible, reduction of prices."

It regretted that attempts were being made "in certain quarters" to resile from the agreement reached at the Indian Labour Conference on the norm for the fixation of "need-based" minimum of a fair wage. In a developing economy, it was the social responsibility of the State to see to it that a due share in the increase in national income was given to labour.

Another resolution expressed regret at the delay in the implementation of the remaining recommendations of the second Central Pay Commission.

It expressed the view that the Pay Commission's report should have been treated as an award and implemented fully. If any modifications were considered necessary, they should have been brought about only after agreement between the parties concerned.

It regretted that even the recommendations accepted by the Government had not been implemented fully.

While urging extension of the benefits of the recommendations to employees of the State Governments and local bodies it noted with satisfaction that the Pay Commission had supported the principle of arbitration for solution of disputes.

It hoped that the Government would accept this principle without any reservation.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Drawing attention to the problem of unemployment by another resolution, the INTUC said that national planning should aim at the full utilization of "the huge man-power" resources of the country.

It urged the Planning Commission to "re-orientate" its approach to planning with a view to effectively tackling the problems of unemployment and under-employment.

In a resolution on "Industrial Relations," it urged the parties to an industrial dispute to resort to negotiations. If negotiations failed they should go in for voluntary arbitration; adjudication should be the last resort.

It said that the "revival of the Labour Appellate Tribunal will lead to further delay in the settlement of industrial disputes."

It also urged that the procedure about appeals to the Supreme Court be simplified to ensure the speedy end of disputes.

By other resolutions, the INTUC urged the implementation of the recommendations of the textile and cement wage boards and the constitution of wage boards for other major industries like jute and plantations.

New Office-Bearers:

The following were elected office-bearers for 1960-61 on April 5:

Mr. Michael John (President); Mr. G. Ramanujam, Dr. (Mrs.) Maitreyee Bose, Mr. Kashinath Pandey, Mr. Ramsinghbhai Verma and Mr. B. K. Nair (Vice-Presidents); Mr. S. R. Vasavada (General Secretary); and Mr. P. K. Sawant (Treasurer).

Industrial Federations' Meetings:

Earlier, the following Industrial Federations under INTUC held their meetings: the Indian National Textile Workers' Federation, Indian National Cement Workers' Federation, Indian National Jute Workers' Federation, National Federation of Petroleum Workers, Indian National Mine-workers' Federation, Indian National Defence Workers' Federation, Indian National Iron and Steel Workers' Federation and Indian National Sugar Workers' Federation.

The INTUC President, Mr. G. Ramanujam, attended all the meetings.

The Indian National Petroleum Workers' Federation passed a resolution protesting against the decision of the Central Government in recognizing the A-ITUC-dominated All-India Federation of Petroleum Workers for the purpose of sending labour representatives to the meeting of the International Petroleum Committee of ILO at Geneva.

The resolution recorded that the Government had failed to take cognizance of the existence of the new nationalist union and had lost sight of the fact that the National Federation of Petroleum Workers was the most representative organization of petroleum workers of the country.

At the meeting of the Indian National Defence Workers' Federation, Mr. G. Ramanujam and Mr. S. R. Vasavada, while referring to the Central Pay Commission's report, advised the workers not to be led away by the propaganda of the reactionary forces which were trying to disturb the economy of the country and take interest in the construction work of the organization. They expressed the hope that the Government would find out some settlement in consultation with the workers' representatives regarding the Pay Commission report and its implementation.

The meeting of the Indian National Mine-workers' Federation was held under the presidentship of Mr. Michael John MP.

The General Secretary of the Federation expressed dissatisfaction at the way the sanctity of the awards and agreements was flouted by the employers.

He informed the members present that the Federation was opposed to any further extension of the Coal Award to consider which question the Government of India had convened a meeting of the Industrial Committee on April 28, 1960.

Four new federations were inaugurated in the following industries: chemical, electricity, paper and printing.

(The Hindustan Times and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2503:INI:E]

I. National Income In 1958-59: The national income of India at 1948-49 prices was Rs. 11,690 crores in 1958-59 and Rs. 10,890 crores in 1957-58, compared to Rs. 10,480 crores in 1955-56.

The per capita income at 1948-49 prices was placed at Rs. 293.6, Rs. 277.1 and Rs. 273.6 in 1958-59, 1957-58 and 1955-56 respectively.

This was revealed in the seventh issue of the Annual Paper on National Income just released by the Central Statistical Organization.

The estimates for 1957-58 included in this paper were based on the detailed method of estimation followed for the earlier years and showed a slight upward revision over the preliminary estimates published in 1959.

The estimates for 1958-59, though still preliminary and based on partial material, also underwent minor upward changes compared to the 'quick' estimates released in October 1959.

Unlike 1957-58, which recorded a slight decline in national income as a result of a fall in the agricultural output, the rise in national income at the 1948-49 prices during 1958-59 over the preceding year worked out at Rs. 800 crores in which the share of 'agriculture' amounted to Rs. 570 crores. In other words, the national income rose by 7.3 per cent in 1958-59 over the 1957-58 figure.

The following table indicates the trend of national income and per capita income at 1958-59 prices during the past 11 years:

Year		National income (or net national output) at 1948-49 prices (in crores of rupees)	Per capita income (or net output) at 1948-49 prices (in rupees)
1948-49	..	8,650	246.9
1949-50	..	8,820	248.6
1950-51	..	8,850	246.3
1951-52	..	9,100	250.1
1952-53	..	9,460	256.6
1953-54	..	10,030	268.7
1954-55	..	10,280	271.9
1955-56	..	10,480	273.6
1956-57	..	11,000	283.5
1957-58	..	10,890	277.1
1958-59	..	11,690	293.6

(Preliminary)

The figures showed a rise in national income in real terms of 11.5 per cent during the first three years of the Second Five-Year Plan, viz. 1956-57 to 1958-59, as against 18.4 per cent rise in national income over the First Five-Year Plan, viz. 1951-52 to 1955-56.

The corresponding rise in per capita income during the two periods was 7.3 and 11.1 per cent respectively.

Expressed at current prices, the national income stood at Rs. 12,470 crores in 1958-59 and Rs. 11,400 crores in 1957-58 as against Rs. 9,980 crores in 1955-56, the per capita income at current prices being Rs. 313.2, Rs. 290.1 and Rs. 260.6 respectively for the three years.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3214:INI:B]

J. State Film Awards For 1959: The Vice-President, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan, distributed the 1959 State awards for films to producers, directors and artistes in New Delhi on May 1.

The President's Gold Medal for the best feature film was won by Mr. Satyajit Ray, producer and director of Apur Sansar. Mr. Ray also won cash prizes of Rs. 20,000 as producer and Rs. 5,000 as director.

Mr. Pravin Desai of Rupalaya, Bombay, won the All-India Certificate of Merit and a cash prize of Rs. 10,000 for the production of Heera Moti, adjudged the second best Hindi film. Mr. Krishan Chopra, the director, was given a cash prize of Rs. 2,500.

The other awards included the President's Silver Medal and Certificates of Merit for films made in Telugu, Tamil and Bengali.

The following were the all-India awards:

Feature Films: (1) Apur Sansar (Bengali)—President's Gold Medal as the best film and a cash prize of Rs. 20,000 to its producer and Rs. 5,000 to its director; (2) Heera Moti (Hindi)—All-India Certificate of Merit as the second best film and a cash prize of Rs. 10,000 to its producer and Rs. 2,500 to its director; (3) Sujata (Hindi)—All-India Certificate of Merit as the third best film.

Children's Films: Banyan Deer (English)—All-India Certificate of Merit.

Documentary Films: (1) Kathakali—All-India Certificate of Merit and a cash prize of Rs. 2,000 to its producer and Rs. 500 to its director; (2) Mayurakshi Dam—All-India Certificate of Merit.

The following were the regional awards:

Hindi: Anari—President's Silver Medal.

Bengali: Bicharak—Certificate of Merit.

Assamese: Puberun—President's Silver Medal.

Tamil: (1) Bagapirivinai—President's Silver Medal; (2) Veerapandya Kattabomman—Certificate of Merit; (3) Kalyana Parisu—Certificate of Merit.

Telugu: (1) Naminabantu—President's Silver Medal; (2) Veerapandya Kattabomman—ficate of Merit; (3) Jaya Bheri—Certificate of Merit.

Kannada: Jagat Jyothi Basaweswara—Certificate of Merit.

Malayalam: Chaturangam—Certificate of Merit.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2604:INI:P]

INDONESIA

SUMMARY: Text Of Economic Co-operation Agreement With USSR; Oil Agreement With Japanese Firm; Geologists' Seminar; Dutch Plan For West Irian.

A. Economic Agreement With USSR: The following is the text of the Agreement on Economic and Technical Co-operation concluded between Indonesia and the Soviet Union on February 28 and signed in Djakarta during the visit of the Soviet Premier, Mr. N. Khruschev (see page 3230):

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

May 21—27, 1960

"Based on the friendly relations existing between the Republic of Indonesia and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and taking into account the experience of economic and technical co-operation in the fulfilment of the General Agreement signed on September, 15, 1959, both the Governments have agreed on the conclusion of a second General Agreement aimed at further assistance in the overall economic development of Indonesia. This Agreement is based on mutual benefit, equality, respect for the sovereignties and non-interference in the domestic affairs of the parties concerned.

"Article 1: The Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics agrees to co-operate with the Government of the Republic of Indonesia in the construction of industrial enterprises and other projects, including industrial projects on iron and steel, other non-ferrous metal projects, chemical industries, projects in use of atomic energy for peaceful purposes, projects in the textile industry and agricultural projects necessary for the overall economic development of the Republic of Indonesia.

"The quantity and nature of such and other enterprises and projects, the construction of which will be carried out with the assistance of USSR, will be determined at the latest stage by common agreement between both parties after taking into consideration the results of surveys and exploration undertaken by the Soviet organizations in co-operation with Indonesian organizations.

"Article 2: At the request of the Government of the Republic of Indonesia, Soviet Organizations will, in co-operation with Indonesian organizations, carry out surveys and explorations on the enterprises and projects that are to be constructed in the Republic of Indonesia with the assistance of USSR.

"The list, number and time-limits for the surveys and explorations, as well as the nature of participation of both parties in the above work, will be determined in additional Agreements which will be concluded in conformity with the present General Agreement.

"The Soviet Organizations will provide the Indonesian side with the corresponding consultations on the basis of the information gained as a result of the above surveys and research.

"Article 3: Soviet Organisations, apart from carrying out the surveys and research provided in Article 2, are ready to execute designs on the industrial enterprises to be built with the assistance of the Soviet Union, to supply these enterprises with equipment and materials which are not available in the Republic of Indonesia, and to render technical assistance in the construction (consultations and supervision), assembling and adjustments of the equipment and in commissioning the enterprises for which purpose they shall send Soviet specialists and skilled workers to the Republic of Indonesia, for such period and in such numbers as shall be agreed by both parties. The Soviet Organizations are also ready to render assistance to training Indonesian specialists for work at the enterprises that are to be built with the assistance of USSR by training them locally and also by training them at similar Soviet enterprises.

"The volume of supplies of equipment and material and the technical assistance in connexion with the construction of the enterprises envisaged in Article 1 will be agreed in each specific case between the parties and will be determined in additional agreements to be concluded in conformity with the present General Agreement.

"Article 4: Soviet Organizations will give to the Indonesian side the technical documentation, information and licences necessary to organize the production of the corresponding products at the enterprises built in conformity with the present General Agreement. The transfer of the said documentation and the necessary licences for production is to be carried out free of charge, the Indonesian side paying only the actual expenses incurred by the Soviet Organizations in preparing the documentation.

"The documentation and licences to be transferred shall be used only for the purposes of manufacturing the above-mentioned products within the territory of the Republic of Indonesia.

"Article 5: The Government of USSR shall give the Government of the Republic of Indonesia a credit to the amount of US $250 million at 2.5 per cent interest per annum with the right of using the credit within seven years in payment for the designs executed by the Soviet Organizations and the equipment and materials supplied to Indonesia by USSR, required for the enterprises that are to be built with the assistance of the Soviet Union, under the present General Agreement.

"Article 6: The Government of the Republic of Indonesia shall repay the credit to be given under Article 5 separately for each enterprise and project in a period of twelve years by equal annual instalments starting one year after the fulfilment of the complete deliveries from USSR of equipments and materials for a specific enterprise or project.

"Interest on the credit shall be computed from the date of the utilization of the corresponding part of the credit and shall be paid within the first quarter of the year following the year for which it has been computed.

"Article 7: Repayment of the credit and payment of the interest on it shall be effected by the Government of the Republic of Indonesia by supplies to the Soviet Union of Indonesian goods and/or in £ sterling as well as other convertible currencies on agreements between the State Bank of USSR and the Bank of Indonesia.

"Three months in advance of the coming year of the repayment of the credit and the payment of interest on it, both parties shall agree for each calendar year the nomenclature and price of the goods, as well as their quantities and time of delivery.

"When repayment of the credit and payment of interest on it are made in £ sterling or other free convertible currency, the conversion of £ sterling or other free convertible currency into US dollars shall be effected on parity at the day of payment.

"Article 8: For the purpose of observing the use and repayment of the credit and the payment of interest on it, the State Bank of USSR and the Bank of Indonesia shall open a special credit account and jointly establish the technical procedure for the administration of the said account and payments on credits.

"Article 9: The expenses of the Soviet side incurred in sending Soviet specialists and skilled workers to the Republic of Indonesia and in receiving in USSR Indonesian citizens for training and practical work shall be paid by the Government of the Republic of Indonesia in Indonesian rupiahs by depositing corresponding sums to the special account which the State Bank of USSR shall open in the Bank of Indonesia in favour of the Soviet Organizations providing such services. The money from this account may be used for the current expenses of the Soviet Organizations in the Republic of Indonesia and also, in agreement between the State Bank of USSR and the Bank of Indonesia, for other payments.

"In the event of a change in the parity of Indonesian rupiahs in relation to the US dollar, the rate of which at the present is 45 Indonesian rupiahs to the dollar, the State Bank of USSR and the Bank of Indonesia shall effect the corresponding recalculation of the balance on the special account mentioned in this Article.

"Article 10: The execution of the surveys, research and designs, the supply of equipment and materials, the sending of Soviet specialists to the Republic of Indonesia and the training of Indonesian citizens in USSR, provided by this General Agreement, shall be carried out by Soviet Organizations on the basis of contracts concluded with the Indonesian Organizations authorized by the Indonesian Government.

"These contracts shall specifically determine the volumes, prices, delivery period and other stipulations of the supply of equipment and materials and of services under this General Agreement.

"The present General Agreement is subject to ratification according to existing rules and procedures in the respective countries and will enter into force on the date of the exchange of Instruments of Ratification which shall take place in Moscow."

(Information Service Indonesia)

[Prev. ref. 3230:IND:A]

B. Oil Agreement With Japanese Firm: An Agreement on the joint exploitation of oil-fields in North Sumatra was concluded in Djakarta on April 7 between the Japanese Oil Development Group and Indonesian Government-owned Permina Oil Company.

Under the Agreement, Japan would supply equipment and technical services worth 18,000 million yen as a development loan. Permina would provide about 15,000 million yen worth of man-power and locally available materials.

Japan would receive part of the crude oil produced in North Sumatra over the next ten years.

The Agreement also provided for the establishment of a Committee to determine the amount of production, and another Committee for the suspension of development. The former would meet in Djakarta every year and the latter in Tokyo every two years.

Geologists' Seminar:

Meanwhile, a Seminar of Indonesian and foreign geologists held in Bandung advised the Government that oil production in the Republic would start to fall in seven to 10 years if new exploration work was not immediately begun.

The work being done now, the geologists reported, was based on the results of exploration conducted 20 years ago.

Oil came to 33 per cent of the value of Indonesia's total exports, and to maintain and increase production there had to be more exploration and investment.

The Seminar also suggested the establishment of a tin smelter on the Java Sea Island of Banka, and systematic exploration of other islands known to contain tin.

It said that there was a good chance of radio-active ores being found in Sumatra and Borneo, and on islands east of the Celebes.

(Information Service Indonesia)

[Prev. ref. 2947:IND:B, 3215:IND:B]

C. Dutch Plan For West Irian: The Netherlands Minister of the Interior, Mr. E. H. Toxopeus, told Parliament at The Hague on April 6 that a Council with a majority of Papua members would be established in Dutch-controlled West New Guinea (West Irian) shortly which could be the beginning of self-government for the colony. The Government was not yet able to fix a date for her independence.

[Indonesia has consistently claimed West Irian as part of its territory since achieving Independence 12 years ago.]

He added that the aircraft-carrier Karel Doorman, with two destroyers, would visit West New Guinea this year "with the express intention of emphasizing that the Government was not abandoning the territory.

The announcement regarding the aircraft-carrier's visit has since led to the Indonesian Government's decision banning Dutch shipping to and from Indonesia. (See page 2947).

On April 27, it was officially announced at The Hague that Holland would send jet fighters and troops "in view of the aggressive

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

elements in Indonesia's foreign policy and the strengthening of the military potential of Indonesia."

The announcement said that the Government had decided to improve air reconnaissance and increase the ground forces.

The Dutch Army said that conscripts would be sent to New Guinea for about 12 months. Officers and NCOs would stay for longer periods of up to three years.

Djakarta Reaction:

The same day (April 27), a spokesman of the Government-sponsored National Front for the Liberation of West Irian described the Dutch moves as an 'act of war.'

The Dutch action, he added, was also an infringement of the 12 miles of territorial waters claimed by Indonesia.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 2434:IND:B]

IRAQ

A. Cultural And Scientific Exchanges With USSR: An Agreement for Cultural and Scientific Exchanges in 1960 between USSR and Iraq was signed in Moscow on April 20.

The Agreement envisages a further increase in the exchange of scientists, teachers, students, artists, sportsmen, tourists as well as films, books, radio and television programmes, etc.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3125:IRQ:B]

JAPAN

A. Export Ship-building Target: The Ship-builders' Association announced in Tokyo on April 5 that it had set a target of 500,000 gross tons for its export ship-building, in terms of orders, in the current financial year which began on April 1.

It said that orders for export ship-building received by Japanese dockyards in the past financial year amounted to 360,000 tons.

The current target had been set on the assumption that total orders for new ship-building in the world during the year would be about 3,000,000 tons. Japanese yards hoped to receive a third of the total which they believed would be split equally between the domestic and oversea owners.

Special assistance from the Government would be needed to help Japanese ship-yards attain their export target.

The measures they were urging the Government to take included the easing of the deferred payment terms providing for the payment of 80 per cent of the contract price over eight years and the reduction of steel prices to the world market level.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2576:JAP:A]

B. Population: The Statistics Bureau of the Prime Minister's office announced on December 26,1959 that Japan's population as of October 1, 1959 stood at 92,970,000.

The increase in the country's population between October, 1958 and September, 1959 was 960,000 as compared with 920,00 registered in the previous one-year period.

Japan had the fifth largest population in the world and the density of its population ranked fourth.

The men-women ratio was 96 to 100.

(Embassy of Japan, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 1881:JAP:B]

KOREA (South)

SUMMARY: Riots In Many Towns; Martial Law Imposed; Dr. Syngman Rhee Gives Up Party Post; Move To Amend Constitution; Resignations From Government And Ruling Party; Dr. Syngman Rhee Resigns From Presidentship.

A. Riots In Many Towns—Dr. Syngman Rhee Resigns: The return of Dr. Syngman Rhee as President for a fourth term at the Elections held on March 15 set off a wave of riots which swept many towns resulting in the announcement of his resignation on April 25.

Over 200 persons died in police firings and other violent incidents during mass demonstrations organized to protest against what was described as "rigged" Elections.

Alongside the mass demonstrations, in which students participated in large numbers, the opposition Democratic Party sought to challenge the validity of the Elections in courts of law.

In documents submitted to the courts of law, the Democratic Party listed six reasons why the Elections should be nullified. These were: (1) advancing the election day by two months from its original date; (2) refusal by local election committees to accept the registration of Opposition observers at voting and counting-stations; (3) "fixing" of ballot boxes; (4) voting in teams allegedly organized by the ruling Liberals; (5) changing ballot boxes; and (6) dishonest counting.

Matters came to a head on April 19 when Martial Law was proclaimed in Seoul, Pusan, Taegu, Kwangju and Taejon.

Earlier in the day (April 19), the police opened fire several times on crowds marching to the residence of Dr. Rhee.

Several thousands of demonstrators clashed with the police in Pusan, the second largest city. In Taegu, students paraded the streets denouncing the conduct of presidential elections.

An infantry division, preceded by a company of tanks, was brought into Seoul to restore order.

The crowds which cheered the demonstrators also shouted greetings to the soldiers, as if indicating that they were not opposed to the Army but that their quarrel was with Dr. Rhee's regime and the police and with election methods.

Meanwhile, the American Embassy in Seoul, in an unprecedented statement on April 19, urged a settlement of what it termed "justifiable grievances" and called for the restoration of law and order through the efforts of both the Government and the demonstrators.

It said: "The Embassy deplores any resort to violence or to measures that induced resort to violence.

"It is earnestly hoped that both the demonstrators and the authorities will seriously consider the consequences of their actions with a view to restoring law and order and settling immediately justifiable grievances towards which the demonstrations are directed."

Dr. S. Rhee's Statement:

On April 20, the Cabinet held a day-long session to consider the crisis, but decisions yielding to popular demands were not forthcoming.

Dr. Syngman Rhee then issued the following statement:

"The violence of yesterday's (April 19) demonstration was a great shock to me and other officials of the Government. It is almost unbelievable that any element of patriotic Korean people, to whom I have devoted my life, could act in such a way.

"However, this is not the time to discuss causes or to attempt the founding of the blame. The first task is the full restoration of law and order so that the necessity for Martial Law no longer exists. To that end, I call upon all Korean people to display their patriotism and to follow the instructions of responsible authorities.

"Once civil processes are back to normal the Government will devote its maximum energy to the investigation of these disturbances. Those who are guilty can be assured of punishment. Those with major grievances can be certain of redress.

"My own heart is heavy with the burden of the lives that have been lost, the wounds that have been suffered, the blood that has been shed and the damage that has been done.

"We deeply and especially regret that two Americans were among the wounded. I can only hope that all of our people will have learned an important lesson from this terrible experience and that we can go forward together as a united people, faithful to the principles of law of order and of justice."

Cabinet's Resignation:

On April 21, the Cabinet resigned, leaving it to Dr. S. Rhee to resolve the crisis alone. The Ministers gave up office after owning responsibility for the riots.

While the Ministers waited in the Executive Mansion to meet President Rhee, the US Ambassador, Mr. Walter P. McConaughty, was conferring with Dr. Rhee to press America's plea for more democracy as the solution to Korea's troubles.

South Korea's Vice-President, Mr. John M. Chang, who was the leader of the Opposition Democratic Party, said that the Cabinet's resignation was not enough and repeated his demand for new elections.

[Mr. Chang, whose vice-presidential term would expire in August, 1960 was defeated in the disputed March, 1960 election by Dr. Rhee's protege, Mr. Lee Ki Poong.]

Mr. Chang also rejected the idea of a new coalition Cabinet of his Democrats and Dr. Rhee's Liberals—a suggestion of newsmen.

A group of 13 senior politicians, including a former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, also appealed to Dr. Rhee to lift the Martial Law, release all students and "respect the will of the people."

On April 22, South Korea's National Assembly met and violence erupted almost immediately between the supporters and opponents of Dr. Rhee.

Almost simultaneously, a new anti-Government demonstration broke out in Inchon, the big port city 30 miles west of Seoul.

The Assembly which was called to meet in an extraordinary session to deal with the crisis posed by the civilian revolt, set up

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

May 21—27, 1960

a 20-member Special Committee to investigate the national unrest, consider the legality of Martial Law and take steps to ease the tension.

Dr. Rhee Steps Down From Presidency:

On April 23, Dr. Rhee, who had been ruling Korea for the last 12 years, agreed to step down and become the symbolic Head of State.

Seoul reports said that the Government and Opposition members also agreed to work out amendments to the Constitution to allow for a "responsible Cabinet system headed by a Prime Minister."

Dr. Rhee's running mate in the controversial election, Mr. Lee Ki Poong, renounced his elections as Vice-President. He said that the proposed new system of Government made a Vice-President unnecessary.

He announced that the Republic would now have a Prime Minister and a Cabinet formed from "all conservative parties".

A senior Liberal Party member, Mr. Yi Jai Pak, announced that Dr. Rhee would disband his Liberal Party shortly to pave the way for the formation of a unified conservative party in South Korea.

However, unrest continued.

On April 24, Dr. Rhee asked a senior statesman, Mr. Huh Chung, to form a care-taker Government preliminary to the establishment of a Cabinet system of Government.

The announcement came after Dr. Rhee (85) said that he was resigning as supreme leader of the ruling Liberal Party but was remaining Chief Executive of the Republic.

In a statement he issued on April 24, Dr. Rhee said: "I have come to think that it will be better for me as President to divorce myself from the Party and seek to serve the nation solely as its Chief Executive, as the head of its administration."

Mr. Huh Chung (65), regarded as one of South Korea's ablest administrators, said in an interview that Dr. Rhee had asked him to form a care-taker Cabinet to last two or three months "until a responsible Cabinet system is established."

The new care-taker Cabinet, he added, would "leave the necessary process for the Constitution revision to the National Assembly."

Still, anti-Government riots spread to many areas and 41 members of the ruling Liberal Party resigned from it on April 25 depriving it of the overall majority it had in the National Assembly for the last eight years.

Dr. S. Rhee Resigns:

There was a fresh flare-up in Seoul on April 26 and the new disorders forced Dr. Rhee, the only President the 12-year-old Republic had known, to resign from office.

The announcement posted on the wall of the National Assembly touched off thousands of "hurrahs" and street-dancing and applause.

The National Assembly unanimously passed resolutions calling for Dr. Rhee's definite resignation, new free elections and a constitutional amendment giving the nation a Cabinet system of Government.

Mr. Huh Chung became interim President until the new Elections could be held.

(The New York Times, The Times, London and The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3271:KRS:A]

LEBANON

A. Amendment Of Electoral Law: The Chamber of Deputies approved on April 20 an urgent Bill amending the Electoral Law, enlarging the Chamber from 66 to 99 Deputies and providing for secret ballot in the Elections for the first time.

General Elections were expected to begin in May, 1960.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

MALAYA

A. Cost Of Emergency: More than 12,000 persons were killed in the 12 years of the Emergency—as the fight against the Communist rebels is called—which is to end officially on July 31.

[The announcement on ending the Emergency on July 31 was contained in the Paramount Ruler's Address to Parliament on April 18.]

According to Government sources, the communist rebels alone have had nearly 7,000 killed and 3,000 wounded. In addition, about 2,700 have surrendered.

Nearly 2,500 civilians were killed and another 800 listed as missing. The regular and auxiliary police and military forces lost nearly 1,900 killed and another 2,500 wounded.

The cost in money was great. Emergency expenditure this year alone was put at about £6,500,000—this is lower than in previous years—and much of it must continue after the Emergency has ended, for example, on the police forces, propaganda and some public work.

It was on June 16, 1948 that three Chinese cycled up to the office of a rubber estate near Sungei Siput, in Perak, and shot its European manager; and on another estate, a few miles away, 12 Chinese shot the European manager and his young European assistant. It was these three murders, coupled with two more of Chinese on the same day (June 16, 1948) in other parts of the country that led the High Commissioner in Malaya to declare a State of Emergency in parts of Perak and Johore. The next day (June 17, 1948) he extended the Emergency regulations to the whole country.

The Emergency led to years of restriction of movement through curfews and by other means. Until not long ago, every village on the main trunk road running north to south was guarded by barricades at which vehicles had to halt and settlements were surrounded with wire fences. These did not prevent food reaching the communist terrorists in the jungle, and in time community kitchens were established at which rationed rice was cooked and distributed. [Cooked rice could not be kept to be passed on by sympathizers to the men and women in the jungle.]

As the Government forces got the upper hand, successive areas were declared "white", which meant that they were freed of restrictions, though it did not always mean that they were free of terrorists. By this year (1960), more than four-fifths of Malaya had been declared 'white' and the armed communists, whose numbers must have reached 11,000 or more, had been reduced to a few hundred astride the Thai border. They may lie low there a long time yet, but they have no effect on the rest of Malaya.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3306:MAL:B]

NEPAL

A. Mr. Chou En-lai's Visit: The Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, accompanied by the Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi, and others arrived in Khatmandu on a three-day visit on April 26.

The Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, was the first to receive Mr. Chou En-lai.

After the usual inspection of the parade and formal introductions, the Premier, Mr. Koirala, spoke welcoming the Chinese Premier and his colleagues.

Recalling Mr. Chou En-lai's visit to Nepal three years ago (in 1957), Mr. Koirala expressed the hope that Mr. Chou En-lai's present "friendly visit will advance the cause of our traditional friendship" as his own (Mr. Koirala's) recent visit to Peking had done.

Mr. Chou En-lai replied: "Since the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and Nepal the traditional friendship between the two countries has undergone a new development."

The Boundary Agreement between Nepal and China and economic aid, he said, not only added a new page to the annals of Sino-Nepalese friendly co-operation but also "set a good example for Asian countries to live together in friendship on the basis of the Five Principles."

Both Mr. Koirala and Mr. Chou En-lai ended their speeches commending the principles of Panch Shila.

Civic Reception:

Replying to a civic reception accorded to him in Khatmandu the same day (April 26), Mr. Chou En-lai warned the people of Nepal against "imperialist schemes to sow dissensions" among the Asian and African countries.

He said: "Friendly co-operation between Nepal and China cannot be undermined by any force on earth.

"China is walking on two legs, namely, industrial and agricultural development along with the development of heavy industries.

"China is a poor country and is striving to lift herself from poverty. Asian-African people are also doing the same."

He said that both Nepal and China had suffered from "colonialist aggression and plunder and economically we are lagging behind Western countries by a hundred years."

He called upon all Asian-African people to strive and catch up with Western countries industrially.

Tibet-Nepal Road Favoured:

Speaking at a reception given to him by the Association of Nepalese Traders of Lhasa in Khatmandu on April 26, Mr. Chou En-lai expressed the hope that a direct road between Tibet and Nepal would be built soon facilitating direct communications between the two countries.

China, he said, had great interest in developing not only the trade between Nepal and Tibet but also between Nepal and the whole of China.

Next day (April 27), both Mr. B. P. Koirala and Mr. Chou En-lai went to Pokhara and returned to Khatmandu on April 28.

Address To Members Of Parliament:

Mr. Chou En-lai told members of the Nepalese Parliament on April 28 that the Chinese Government and

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

people "warmly welcome and fully support" Nepal's policy of neutrality.

He said that Nepal's policy of neutrality was not only in the interests of Nepal's peaceful development and smooth implementation of her Five-Year Economic Plan but also in the interests of the noble cause of preserving Asian solidarity. "The prosperity and strength of Nepal, like those of other Asian and African countries, are a powerful support for our country."

Sino-Nepalese relations, especially since the signing of the Border and Economic Aid Agreements, he said, were an example of peaceful co-existence between countries following different social systems.

He added: "Aggressive imperialist circles are intensifying armament expansion and war preparations while swearing by peace. These circles are trying their utmost to prevent agreement between the East and the West on major international questions.

"What calls for particular attention is the fact that fostered by aggressive imperialist circles the militarist forces which launched World War II are reviving and posing fresh threats to world peace and security. All this shows that the upholding of world peace is still an arduous task. It is necessary for all peace-loving countries and peoples to further strengthen their solidarity and go on making uninterrupted and still greater efforts".

Peace And Friendship Treaty:

Nepal and China signed a Peace and Friendship Treaty on April 28 re-affirming the faith of the two countries in the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence.

The Treaty also aimed at developing economic and cultural ties in a spirit of friendship and co-operation in accordance with the principles of equality, mutual benefit and non-interference in each other's internal affairs.

It recognized and respected the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of the two countries.

It is broadly on the lines of the Chinese draft, except that a clause committing the signatories to pledge that they would not commit aggression on each other and keep away from military alliances was deleted at Nepal's instance.

Nepal considered the clause superfluous in view of the adherence of both the countries to the Five Principles of co-existence which have been re-affirmed in the new Treaty. It is recognized in the Treaty, which will be valid for ten years after ratification, that Nepal and China base their relations on the principles of equality and mutual benefit and recognize the principle of non-interference in each other's internal affairs.

It provided for the solution of disputes through peaceful negotiations.

Joint Communique:

In a joint communique also signed on April 28, the two Premiers, Mr. Chou En-lai and Mr. B. P. Koirala, expressed their conviction that in order to build up a better atmosphere for mutual co-operation all outstanding issues between nations should be settled through peaceful negotiations and all nations must refrain from acts or threats or aggression or use of force against territorial integrity or political independence of each other's country.

They were happy to note that the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence and the Bandung spirit were playing a more and more important role in guiding relations among nations.

They pledged firm support to the South African people's struggle against racial discrimination.

They hoped that the forthcoming 'summit' conference would reach speedy agreements so as to promote further relaxation of international tensions.

They expressed deep sympathy with the Asian, African and other peoples in their struggle against colonialism and for winning and safeguarding national independence.

News Conference:

Addressing a news conference in Khatmandu on April 28 after signing the Peace and Friendship Treaty and the joint communique, Mr. Chou En-lai said that discussions between China and Nepal on Everest would continue.

The Chinese maps, he said, showed the mountain to be in China, but he was prepared to accept the Nepalese map (prepared by India) with the boundary drawn along the peak.

[During the talks in Peking in March, 1960 between the Chinese and Nepalese Prime Ministers, China claimed that her boundary ran to 5½ miles from the peak of Everest to its southern base up to the Sherpa village of Namche Bazar. Mr. Chou En-lai was said to have told Mr. Koirala at Pokhara on April 27 that China would not insist on expeditions to Everest securing the permission of both the countries as long as they approached the summit through Nepal. Authoritative indications are that a solution of the Evrest question would be a 'summit' compromise on the basis of "actuality of jurisdiction." To support their theory of "actuality of jurisdiction" in respect of Everest, the Chinese pointed out that the Rongbuk monastery on the northern side of Everest at 17,000 feet has always been under Tibetan authority. Its Head Lama fled the monastery recently and crossed into Nepal. The monastery on the southern side at the Kumbh glacier similarly has always been under Nepalese control.]

Mr. Chou En-lai said that Everest was a British name and was an "imposition" on it. He would rather have the mountain named Sagarmatha (its Nepalese name).

He said that there was actually no boundary dispute between Nepal and China. Only the frontier had to be scientifically delineated.

Asked how many square miles of territory was in dispute, he said that the area of divergence between the Chinese and Nepalese maps was small. "If Nepal wants all that area, China will have no objection."

(The Times of India, The Statesman and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3264:CHI:A, 3294:NEP:B]

B. Economic Aid From Britain: The British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, told the House of Commons on April 19 that the United Kingdom would make a grant of £1,000,000 to Nepal.

He said: "I am glad to say that agreement has been reached with the Nepalese Government for the United Kingdom Government to provide a programme of economic aid for Nepal to the value of £1,000,000, which the United Kingdom Government expects to be committed to over five years. As a first instalment of this programme, Parliament is being asked to approve a provision in the main estimates of the Foreign Office grants and services vote for expenditure in 1960-61 of £160,000 on the provision of diesel generating sets, hydro-electric equipment, road works, vehicles and other items."

He said that Nepal was a country with which the British Crown had had an extremely long, honourable and cordial association. The country had been receiving a certain amount of technical assistance from the United Kingdom under the Colombo Plan but her needs, however, went considerably beyond what she had been receiving hitherto.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

PAKISTAN

A. Trade Agreement With Yugoslavia: A Trade Agreement more comprehensive than the earlier two Agreements and providing the most-favoured-nation treatment to each other in respect of commerce was signed between Pakistan and Yugoslavia in Karachi on April 18.

It provides for payments in £ sterling. There are also provisions which would enable exchange of goods in specified quantities on bilateral or triangular basis just as the two Governments mutually agreed to do.

The Agreement covers 59 Yugoslav items of import into Pakistan and 38 Pakistani items of export to Yugoslavia.

The items Pakistan will import from Yugoslavia include agricultural machinery, iron and steel products, engineering equipment, electrical goods, non-ferrous metals, rolling stock, chemicals, dyes, hydro and thermal power plants, textile machinery and equipment for shipyards and harbours.

Pakistan in turn will export items like raw jute, cotton products, hides and skins, tea, ready-made garments, newsprint and sports goods.

A special feature of the Agreement, which is valid for one year, is that it also provides for technical co-operation.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3171:PAK:C]

B. Decimal Coinage From January 1, 1961: The Finance Minister, Mr. Mohammed Shoaib, told newsmen at Hyderabad on April 23 that the present coinage would cease to be legal tender after January 1, 1962.

The Government, he added: would introduce decimal coinage throughout the country in all probability from the beginning of 1961.

The present coins of Re. 1, annas 8 and annas 4 denominations would continue to be legal tender during the whole of 1961 but would be gradually withdrawn so that the decimal system would become fully operative from 1962.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3234:PAK:E]

C. Recognition Of Trade Unions Made Compulsory—Ordinance Regulates Labour-Employer Relations: The Government promulgated the Trade Unions (Amendment) Ordinance, 1960 on April 25 making it obligatory on employers to recognize registered trade unions which enjoy the confidence of the largest number of members in an industrial undertaking.

The Ordinance also reduced from 50 per cent to 25 per cent the proportion of officers of a trade union who may be elected from among persons who are not actually employed or engaged in the industry with which the trade union is concerned.

Malpractices on the part both of employers and recognized trade unions were also defined

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

and made punishable with a view to their elimination.

The Ordinance required the employer to recognize a trade union which fulfils the following among other conditions: (1) It should be a registered union; (2) All its ordinary members should be workmen employed in the industry; (3) It should enjoy the confidence of a larger number of workmen in the industrial concern than is enjoyed by any other trade union in that establishment, provided that this number is not less than 10 per cent of the total number of workmen.

A trade union which has not received recognition from an employer within three months from the date of application may apply to an industrial court for recognition by the employer.

If the industrial court is satisfied that the trade union fulfils the conditions for recognition, it shall direct its recognition by the employer. If the employer or employers fail to comply with the orders of the court, he or they will be punishable with a fine which may extend to Rs. 2,000.

The recognized trade union will have the right to negotiate with the employer on the terms of employment and conditions of work.

It will also have the right to display notices in the premises where its members are employed.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2692:PAK:F, 3012:PAK:F]

SUDAN

A. Trade Protocol With USSR: It was officially announced in Moscow that a Trade Protocol between USSR and Sudan envisaging a further expansion of reciprocal deliveries in 1960 was signed in Khartoum on April 16.

The Soviet Union will export to Sudan various kinds of equipment and machinery, rolled ferrous metals, sawn timber, chemical fertilizers, cotton fabrics, sugar and other goods in exchange for cotton and some other traditional Sudanese export goods.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 2619:SUD:A]

TURKEY

A. Accord On Cyprus Draft Constitution: Archbishop Makarios announced in Nicosia on April 3 that agreement had been reached between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots on the Republic's Draft Constitution.

He told newsmen after conferring with the Greek and Turkish members of the Constitutional Commission: "All outstanding questions on the Republic's Draft Constitution have been settled."

An authoritative source in Nicosia said: "The Constitution is ready in substance. There will be one more meeting of the Sub-Committee and then a final meeting of the full Commission will approve the final Draft this week."

Earlier, Greek and Turkish Cypriot and British representatives held talks on British bases which brought a new crisis to the long-drawn Anglo-Cypriot negotiations.

The talks concerned the last-minute compromise proposal put forward by the Turkish Cypriot leader, Dr. Fahdil Kutchuk, who proposed that the 120 square miles which Britain intended to retain under her sovereignty as military base areas be cut to 100 square miles."

Archbishop Makarios was prepared to give only 80 square miles.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3197:TUR:A]

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Land Distribution In The Syrian Region: A Press release from the United Arab Republic Embassy in New Delhi on April 14 said that the Executive Minister of Agrarian Reform in the Northern Region (Syria), Sayed Ahmed Geneidy, had distributed title deeds for land among 2,015 additional beneficiaries in the villages of Hijana and Betareia in the Province of Damascus.

The number of families to benefit in both the villages amounted to 293 and the area of land which was requisitioned amounted to 267,480 dunums.

The ceremony of distribution took place at the village of Hijana, 27 kilometres from Damascus City.

Sayed Ahmed Geneidy urged the villagers to take good care of the land. The Ministry's experts would provide them with all the information and guidance required for the cultivation of the land. The agricultural co-operative societies in the area would spare no efforts to help them.

He added that the Ministry of Agrarian Reform, in collaboration with other Ministries, would do their best to provide the people with all their requirements in order to create the socialist democratic and co-operative society announced by President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

(UAR Embassy, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2327:SYR:A]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Attempt On Life Of Dr. H. Verwoerd And Further Developments In South Africa; Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Conference; Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld On Freedom Of Passage Through Suez Canal; British Guiana To Have Self-Government; Merger Of Two Somalilands.

A. Further Developments In South Africa—Attempt To Kill Dr. Hendrik Verwoerd: An attempt was made in Johannesburg on April 9 to assassinate Dr. Hendrik Verwoerd, the South African Prime Minister. He was wounded in the neck and cheek by shots fired by a white man who was later arrested.

The attempt was made at the official opening of the Union Exposition in Johannesburg—his first public appearance since the State of Emergency was declared in the Union on March 30.

He was shot in the face as he sat in a VIP box at the Exposition. A white man was seized by onlookers and taken to a police station.

The alleged assailant was said to be a middle-aged man, believed to be a farmer from Petersburg in northern Transvaal, and a member of one of the Committees of Witwatersrand Agricultural Society which was staging the Union Exposition.

A medical bulletin issued on April 10 on Dr. Verwoerd's health said that his condition was satisfactory and there was no need for an immediate operation to remove the two bullets embedded in his head.

He was removed from Johannesburg to Pretoria on April 10 where he was said to be resting comfortably.

It was reported on April 17 that Dr. Verwoerd would suffer no permanent injury or any disfigurement. The two bullets still in his head were in soft parts and could do no further damage. No operation for their removal was considered necessary at this stage. It would be performed at a later and more convenient time.

It was also said that Dr. Verwoerd would retain his hearing. His brain had not in any way been damaged. No part of his body had been paralysed and all his senses were functioning normally.

In his first statement on April 16 since the attempt on his life, Dr. Verwoerd thanked all those who had offered their sympathies to him and to his family.

He said that the people should be told that the worst had passed.

Personal Grudge—Reason:

The Johannesburg correspondent of The Daily Sketch, London, said on April 14 that personal grudge based on family reasons and not political reasons was behind the assassination attempt on Dr. Verwoerd.

He wrote: "David Pratt, the wealthy 47-year-old farmer held for the shooting, had a stormy interview with Dr. Verwoerd only a few months ago.

"Pratt was desperately trying to see his second wife, the daughter of a wealthy Dutch Cabinet Minister and industrialist, who had left him and is now living in the Netherlands with their two children. Pratt tried to visit her in the Netherlands. But he was refused entry.

"He appealed to the South African Government. Eventually, he saw Dr. Verwoerd himself and pleaded for Government help to get into Holland. Dr. Verwoerd refused. Pratt lost his temper. There was a stormy scene in Dr. Verwoerd's office."

Two African Political Parties Banned:

The South African Governor-General, Mr. C. E. Swart, signed a proclamation on April 8 banning two African parties in the Union—the African National Congress and the Pan-Africanist Congress—and many leaders of both the organizations were arrested.

The ban would remain in force for one year.

In a new series of raids early in the morning of April 8, the police arrested more than a hundred persons including Indians and Africans.

The police swoop which lasted 4½ hours covered Johannesburg, Capetown, Durban, Port Elizabeth and Pretoria.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The police were said to have seized a number of documents.

The Pan-Africanist Congress decided to intensify its campaign against the Pass Laws.

Strike By African Workers:

The stay-at-home strike by Africans in the two townships of Langa and Nyanga entered the third week on April 4. The Pan-Africanist Congress had warned Africans not to go to work. Commerce and industry in Capetown were beginning to feel the effects of the strike.

Ships were being diverted from Capetown to Port Elizabeth because of absenteeism among African stevedores.

On April 25, the South African police disclosed that the official casualty figures since the disturbances began in the Union on March 21 were 83 non-whites killed, and 365 non-whites and two whites injured.

Three non-white policemen were killed and 26 injured and 60 white policemen were injured between March 21 and April 9.

The British House of Commons approved without a vote on April 8 a private member's motion deploring the racial policies of the South African Government.

Pan-Africanist Congress Aims:

The President of the Pan-Africanist Congress, Mr. Mangaliso Sobukwe, told a Johannesburg court on April 14 that the main aim of his organization was the "complete overthrow of white domination."

He said that the Pan-Africanist Congress which had 200,000 members, aimed at establishing a non-racial democracy in South Africa as well as throughout the whole African continent.

Mr. Sobukwe, who was appearing in court with 22 other Africans on charges of incitement under the Pass Laws, said that the Pan-Africanist Congress had decided to bring about the immediate abolition of the Pass Laws because it was the immediate need and demand of the African people.

Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld's Views:

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, told a news conference at UN Headquarters on April 8 that South African goodwill could overcome difficulties arising from United Nations concern with the Union's internal affairs in the present racial troubles.

He said: "I think we can discard the question of Article 2(7) of the UN Charter and look at it as a question of goodwill. If such goodwill does exist, I think Article 2(7) difficulties may be overcome and I have to believe in the goodwill of member-nations and in their wish to take seriously what are the most serious reactions among member-countries in UN. Sometimes, the hope for this kind of reaction is frustrated, but it is a hope which is undying."

[Article 2(7) bars United Nations from interfering in the internal affairs of a member-State.]

Most of the questions directed at him concerned events in South Africa since the Security Council adopted a resolution calling on the Union to abandon apartheid.

[That resolution had requested the UN Secretary-General "in consultation with the Government of the Union to make such arrangements as would adequately help in upholding the purposes and principles of the Charter and to report to the Security Council whenever necessary and appropriate."]

He made it clear to the news conference that he was treating the question as "a matter of urgency." "The Security Council handled this matter as one of urgency. That lays down the law for me too, and I can assure you that even without the news which has arrived (of continuing unrest), I would follow the lead given by the Security Council. On the other hand, there are certain time intervals unavoidable in developments of this type, and I have to accept them as a realist. I think the Security Council does the same, whatever its feelings are.

"I have no reason to pass any judgment on what has happened in the last few days after the passage of the resolution. What I would most definitely say, on the other hand, is that the developments are not what you would call a breaking point which would cause me to wash my hands and report back to the Security Council.

"My task is to do what the Security Council has requested me to do—to consult with a view to practical arrangements within the framework of the authority of the Secretary-General."

(UN Information Centre and UK High Commission, New Delhi, The Times, London, The Hindu, Madras and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3311:AOA:A]

B. Afro-Asian Peoples' Solidarity Conference: The Second Afro-Asian Peoples' Solidarity Conference began in Conakry (Guinea) on April 11. About 200 delegates were present.

Inaugurating the Conference, the President of the Republic of Guinea, Mr. Sekou Toure, said that the Afro-Asian States had the right to take part in the forthcoming East-West 'summit' conference.

He declared: "In the name of hundreds of millions of men, we feel fully entitled to consider ourselves as parties responsible for the conduct of world affairs and having the right to take an active part in resolutions that would benefit the international community."

He denounced imperialist exploitation and said that there could be no balance in the world as long as there were rich nations and poor nations, as long as there were exploiters and the exploited.

He added: "We represent here a universe of hunger, misery and ignorance to whom any kind of human right has been denied by imperialism which has exploited us as an immense reservoir of goods and men."

He condemned the South African Government's racial policy and the French nuclear tests in the Sahara and said:

"We have the right to ask what the international organizations are doing and have done so far in the face of such a situation which strikes at our legitimate and unanimous aspirations. The imperialists want at any price to drag us into the tensions of the world, while all that we want is peaceful co-existence and positive neutrality, the only way to lessen international tensions. We intend to see that the management of Asian and African affairs returns to the hands of the people of Asia and Africa, without any coercion or intervention."

He called for a minute's silence to express the Conference's indignation over the happenings in South Africa. The delegates then stood in silence.

Secretariat's Appeal:

The Permanent Secretariat of the Afro-Asian Solidarity Conference issued on April 11 an appeal to the people of Africa and Asia on the occasion of the opening of the Conference.

The appeal said that the forces of imperialism were now surrendering before the struggle of the countries of Africa and Asia. World public opinion now recognized the right of the peoples to free themselves.

Since the first Afro-Asian Peoples' Conference was convened, the peoples of the two continents had achieved major victories and many colonies and dependent countries, including Guinea, had won their freedom.

The appeal called for efforts to ensure peace and for an agreement on total disarmament.

It also called on the people to stand united to fight the remnants of imperialism in Africa and Asia and to put an end to racial discrimination in all its forms and to create conditions favourable to the development of the countries which had won freedom.

The appeal ended by calling for closer solidarity between the countries and peoples of Africa and Asia.

Other Speeches:

Addressing the Conference on April 11, Mr. Tennyson Makiwane, a member of the National Executive of the African National Congress, predicted that there would be a revolution in South Africa.

He said: "Revolution will and must come in South Africa whether peacefully or by violence. Victory will be ours."

The Basutoland delegate, Mr. G. M. Kolluandgn, also condemned South African racial policies and demanded that legislative and Governmental powers be transferred to the people of South Africa.

Prof. Masaharu Satanaka, leader of the Japanese delegation, violently denounced the US-Japan Mutual Security Treaty in a speech calling for the immediate withdrawal of all US forces from Japan, Okinawa, Formosa and South Korea.

[Mr. Satanaka is the Executive Director of the Japan Council against Atomic and Hydrogen Bombs and Director-General of the Japan-Korean Association.]

He also called for the admission of China to United Nations and the peaceful re-unification of Korea and Viet-Nam.

He said that the US-Japan Treaty would make Japan the catspaw of American imperialism and added: "In spite of the Japanese Government's easy assurance, United States' forces stationed in Japan are secretly equipped with nuclear armaments.

He said that nuclear missiles such as Nike and Hawk had been brought into Okinawa which was being turned into the strongest US nuclear base in the Far East.

"We want to go steadily on the way to strict neutrality, hand in hand with our brothers and sisters of the other Afro-Asian nations."

The Iranian delegate, Dr. A. Etebar, President of the Provisional Committee for Afro-Asian Friendship, stressed the increasing importance of the African and Asian countries in United Nations.

He added: "I state that the time is not far off when the entire African territory will be free. Africa will belong exclusively to Africans and her people will be guided and governed only by Africans."

Dr. I. W. C. Thambiah, Secretary of the Afro-Asian Solidarity Association of Ceylon, said that Asian

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

neutrals should not be called "uncommitted nations."

He said: "We are fully committed to the cause of peace."

The North Korean delegate, Mr. Han Suliya, asked the Conference to support the drive for the withdrawal of United States forces from South Korea.

He accused the imperialists of introducing atomic weapons into South Korea, threatening the Far East.

He urged free travel in South and North Korea.

Three Drafting Committees Appointed:

The Conference began drafting a series of resolutions on April 12 to be submitted to the final plenary session on April 14.

Three drafting Committees—Political, Economic and Cultural—were formed, and they were to frame resolutions on the basis of the four-point agenda of the Conference.

The points were: (1) complete liquidation of imperialism and colonialism in Africa and Asia; (2) economic development problems; (3) problems of cultural and social development in the two continents; and (4) strengthening of the Afro-Asian solidarity movement.

Representation In 'Summit' Talks Urged:

The Secretary-General of the Permanent Secretariat of the Afro-Asian Solidarity Committee, Mr. Yousseff el Sebai (United Arab Republic), called for a voice for the Afro-Asian nations at the 'summit' conference on April 12.

He said that no 'summit' of mighty Powers possessed of nuclear and other destructive weapons could bring about lasting peace if the people of Africa and Asia were not represented in it.

For example, he said, it was preposterous to ignore the 650,000,000 people in China.

He urged Afro-Asians to strengthen their struggle for establishing peace and de-nuclearized zones in Africa, Asia and the Pacific Ocean as a constructive step towards the greatest and noblest objective of humanity, namely the achievement of general and complete disarmament.

Resolutions:

The Conference ended on April 15 after passing a number of resolutions.

It called on all Afro-Asian countries to start an immediate boycott of South African goods and examine the question of severing diplomatic relations with South Africa in protest against her policies of racial segregation.

It proposed that the Afro-Asian Group at United Nations should ask the world organization to impose economic sanctions against South Africa as a practical measure to force the Union Government to end apartheid.

A resolution condemning the savage massacre of unarmed demonstrators at Sharpeville said that the events in South Africa were "a serious threat to peace not only in Africa but the whole world."

It recommended that June 27, 1960 should be named South Africa Independence Day—a day on which the Afro-Asian people should stage demonstrations against apartheid.

It called on Afro-Asian peoples to mobilize world opinion and campaign for the total isolation of South Africa in the international arena.

It also said that the South African problem should be placed on the agenda of the next 'summit' conference in May, 1960.

The resolution on Algeria lauded the Algerian peoples' "historic struggle for freedom" and the constructive proposals of the "Provisional" Government and denounced France's "obstinate refusal" to apply the principle of self-determination in Algeria.

The economic resolution called for the economic liberation of newly-independent nations, stepping up of industrialization, co-operative marketing and increased trade between Afro-Asian nations.

It stressed that the struggle for complete economic independence was the cardinal task of Asian and African nations which have won political independence.

By another resolution, the Conference expressed its strong opposition to military pacts and alignments.

It passed another resolution asking Britain to recognize the independence of three of its African Protectorates—Basutoland, Bechuanaland and Swaziland.

In a series of social resolutions, the Conference recommended that the Afro-Asian countries should institute laws setting the minimum marriage age for girls at 18 years, opposing polygamy by all means and abolishing prostitution.

On the question of youth welfare, it recommended the organization of sports and cultural and arts festivals for Afro-Asian youth.

It urged the independent African and Asian States to give economic, social and scientific help to under-developed States in their respective continents.

Final Statement:

The Conference also adopted a "final statement" declaring that the Afro-Asian nations held out a fraternal hand to all men.

The statement said: "Our long trials have taught us to tell friend from foe.

"We, the people of Africa and Asia, state that our national independence can be the object of no blackmail.

"Our liberty means that we intend to dispose fully of our resources and possibilities and wish to end exploitation, monopolies, misery and humiliation.

"Our struggle is at the same time the struggle for world peace.

"Thus, the peoples of Asia and Africa energetically oppose military pacts and alignments and attempts to destroy through nuclear warfare all the best that human genius has given humanity."

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo, The Hindu, Madras and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2546:UAR:B]

C. Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld On Freedom Of Passage Through The Suez Canal: At a news conference at United Nations Headquarters on April 8, a question was addressed to the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, regarding the unloading of the Greek ship Astypalea detained in Port Said, and Mr. Hammarskjoeld made the following statement:

"The stand of United Nations on freedom of passage through the Suez Canal for all has often been stated and re-affirmed. It remains unchanged. However, all through the years since the late 'forties, its implementation has met with obstacles related to unresolved political problems of the area. I have considered it my duty to make unrelenting efforts to improve the situation. In some cases, these efforts have been based on requests from the UN General Assembly or the Security Council. In general, they have been on my own initiative. The set-backs for these efforts which I have encountered have been explained by varying circumstances, but, in my view, so far not by attitudes which should discourage me from continuing.

"The situation created by the detention of the Greek ship Astypalea and its latest developments, which go against the principles upheld by United Nations, should be seen in the light of these considerations. The difficulties of achieving full implementation of the principle, in the present circumstances, render necessary renewed efforts to arrive at workable practices. Such efforts will be pursued by United Nations."

UAR Ships Boycotted In New York Port:

Cairo Radio reported on April 19 that the UAR Ambassador in Washington had sent a protest to the US Government over the dockers' boycott of the UAR ship Cleopatra in the port of New York.

It also said that the International Union of Arab Workers' Trade Unions had sent a telegram to the American Dockers' Union protesting against the boycott of Cleopatra.

The telegram said that similar measures would be taken against American ships in Arab ports.

Syrian dockers on April 20 picketed five American ships in the port of Latakia, according to the President of the Federation of Syrian Trade Unions.

Three of the American ships were freighters and the other two tankers.

It was announced in Cairo on April 25 that Egyptian dock workers had decided to boycott American cargo-ships and oil tankers from the midnight of April 29.

Observers in Cairo said that the boycott would have a "dragging effect" on the West European economy which depended largely on Middle East oil supplies.

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi and The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 3198:UAR:B]

D. British Guiana To Have Full Internal Self-Government: At the conclusion of the British Guiana Constitutional Conference in London on March 31, it was announced that the British Government had accepted the principle of independence for British Guiana.

It had also agreed that in August, 1961, a new Constitution should be introduced in Guiana giving her full internal self-government, subject to the satisfactory functioning of transitional arrangements for the administration and control of the police and the conclusion of certain arrangements relating to the public services.

Defence and External Affairs would remain the responsibility of the United Kingdom Government, but certain powers relating to external trade would be delegated to the Guiana Government.

The Conference was convened by the British Government to consider what measures of constitutional advance should take place in British Guiana after the present Legislature completes its normal four-year term of office in August, 1961.

New Constitution:

Certain members of the British Guiana delegation, however, had entered reservations. Subject to these, the Conference concluded that the changes to take effect in August,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

1961 provided a workable pattern for the constitutional advance of British Guiana.

The 1961 Constitution will provide for a bicameral Legislature, consisting of a fully elected Legislative Assembly with up to 35 members, and a nominated Senate with 13 members. The power vested in the Queen-in-Council to legislate by an Order-in-Council will be retained, but the United Kingdom Secretary of State for the Colonies gave an assurance that it was not his intention to advise that this power should be exercised except for enacting constitutional instruments or to deal with grave emergencies.

The Executive will be a Council of Ministers presided over by a Premier. The Governor will appoint as Premier the leader of the majority party in the Legislative Assembly and will appoint the other Ministers on the advice of the Premier. The Governor will act upon the advice of Ministers in assenting, or refusing to assent, to Bills except where the reserved subjects are affected.

The British Guiana delegation had asked that the control of the police and internal security should become the sole responsibility of an elected Minister, but it was eventually agreed that the responsibility in this field should be transferred gradually.

It was proposed that an Advisory Police Council should be set up immediately, and that within six months after its establishment, the Governor would appoint a Minister to discharge the functions in relation to the police now performed by the Chief Secretary.

Not later than 12 months after the establishment of the Police Council, the Governor will forward to the Secretary of State reports by himself and by the Ministers on the working of the arrangements. The Secretary of State will then decide whether the August, 1961 Constitution should provide for the Governor's powers in relation to the Police to pass to a British Guiana Minister. Thus, if the interim arrangements work well, complete internal self-government in 1961 becomes a possibility.

The United Kingdom has also undertaken that if, not earlier than two years after the first General Elections under the new Constitution, or upon it being decided that the Federation of the West Indies should attain independence, the British Guiana Legislature passes a resolution asking the United Kingdom Government to grant independence to British Guiana, the United Kingdom Government will call a conference to consider when it would be practicable to implement this request.

A proviso is made that a decision that the West Indies should attain independence would not be regarded as giving grounds for considering a change in the British Guiana Constitution until the latter had been in effect for at least a year.

Background—Land And People:

Constitutional advances in British Guiana in 1943 and 1945 were followed in 1953 by the introduction of a new and advanced Constitution which provided for universal adult suffrage, a bicameral Legislature and a Ministerial system of Government. A General Election held in April, 1953 resulted in the People's Progressive Party (PPP), led by Dr. Cheddi Jagan, winning 18 of the 24 elected seats in the House of Assembly.

Six months later, the United Kingdom Government found it necessary to suspend the Constitution to prevent communist subversion of the British Guiana Government and a dangerous crisis both in public order and in economic affairs.

In December, 1956, after an interim period during which the Legislature and Executive Council consisted entirely of official and nominated members, provision was made for a Legislature which would once more include elected members. A General Election was held in August, 1957, and in the following month (September, 1957) five elected members of PPP, which was again the majority party, were appointed to the Executive Council and given ministerial responsibility. Dr. Jagan became Minister of Trade and Industry.

The British Guiana delegation to the London Conference included Dr. Jagan, and was representative of the main political parties and independent political opinion in the territory.

British Guiana—the "Land of Waters"—is a territory 83,000 square miles in area on the mainland of South America, bounded by Venezuela, Brazil and Surinam. Its economy depends largely on the production and processing of sugar, rice and bauxite, which together account for 90 per cent of her exports.

The population, estimated at 539,940 at the end of 1958, is multi-racial, with East Indians—descendants of immigrants from the Indian sub-continent—accounting for just under half, people of African descent for about a third and smaller groups of people of mixed blood—Amerindians, Chinese, Portuguese and other Europeans. The majority live on the low-lying coastal strip, and it is here that the staple crops of sugar and rice are grown.

While British Guiana has resources of land, timber and minerals (including manganese, diamonds and gold as well as bauxite), their exploitation presents a number of difficulties. The coastal strip has to be constantly guarded against the encroachment of the sea on the one side and the threat of flooding from the river systems on the other; the extensive area of forest, covering more than four-fifths of the country, is still largely impenetrable; and much of the savannah grazing land is of poor quality because of mineral deficiencies in the soil.

Moreover, the terrain makes road-building difficult and, while the many rivers form a natural system of communications, they are impeded by rapids above the tide-way.

In spite of these difficulties and the recent recession in world markets for primary commodities, considerable progress has been made since World War II (under the stimulus of long-term development plans) in developing the economy and improving the social services.

Large-scale drainage and irrigation schemes carried out since 1945 have made available 48,000 acres of new land for cultivation and provided the main water control for a further 130,000 acres. Rice production has increased from 64,500 tons in 1946 to a record 100,500 tons in 1958. Export of sugar has increased from 242,000 tons in 1952 to 300,000 in 1958, and of timber from 928,000 cubic ft. to 1,541,000 cubic ft.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2598:AOA:C]

E. Merger Of Two Somalilands: A joint communique issued in Mogadiscio (Somalia) at the end of a nine-day Unification Conference between leaders and parliamentarians of the two Somalias said that the two territories would merge on July 1, 1960 in accordance with the unanimous vote of their Parliaments.

The communique said that the new Somalia Republic would have a single democratic parliamentary Government. The Somalia Legislative Assembly and the Somalia Protectorate's Legislative Council would merge into a single National Assembly on July 1 and elect the President of the Republic.

A coalition Government would be formed with all the important parties in both territories in it.

Mogadiscio will be the capital of the new Republic.

The national territory would comprise Somaliland's two administrative regions and Somalia's six regions, the whole divided into eight administrative regions.

(The Times, London and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3316:AOA:C]

F. Evolution Of Non-Self-Governing Territories: One of the main findings of a special report approved in the middle of April by the UN General Assembly's Committee on Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories, which ended its annual session at UN Headquarters on April 12, was that the most significant feature in the evolution of non-self-governing territories during the first 10 years of the existence of United Nations was the reduction of their number from 74 in 1946 to 55 in 1956.

In addition to the special report on progress in the territories during the ten-year period, the Committee approved two other reports—one a triennial review of economic conditions in the territories and the other on its own work during the session.

While noting the attainment of independence or self-government by many territories the Committee said that it was not unconscious of the aspirations of millions of persons who were still dependent.

It expressed confidence, however, that the transition period would be "smooth, constructive and purposeful."

It said: "The Committee is aware that the trends and events which occurred at the beginning of the period, mainly in Asia, are continuing at the present time, mainly in Africa, and that these bear far more profoundly on the attainment by the peoples concerned of the objective of self-government than anything in the technical fields of development.

"However, the Committee is also aware that the countries administering the territories, and others alike seem agreed that the peoples of the non-self-governing territories are entitled to complete independence or, if they prefer, to some form of full self-government freely chosen by them, and that it will be for them to determine their future status.

"The Committee is confident that the knowledge that their ultimate destiny is for them to choose will encourage the inhabitants of the territories to multiply many times their own efforts to build a new and prosperous future for themselves during a period of smooth, constructive and purposeful transition."

In conducting the ten-year review, it was said, the Committee was acting in accordance with proposals first put forward by the General Assembly in 1955. In that year, the Assembly expressed the belief that an examination of progress in the territories to ascertain the extent to which they were advancing towards the goals set in the UN Charter "would be highly desirable." In 1957, the Assembly requested the preparation of a progress report by the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, in collaboration with the UN specialized agencies.

In 1959, the Assembly asked the Committee on Non-Self-Governing Territories to examine the 3,000-page progress report and to submit its observations and conclusions in order to assist the Assembly in its own consideration of the report at its 1960 session.

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3261:AOA:K]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10, Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95/-; Foreign Rs. 115/- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

May 28—June 3, 1960

Regd. No. D-727

Vol. VI. No. 22

AFGHANISTAN

A. Setting Up Of "Azad Afghan Radio" Alleged: The Pakistan Press reported on May 4 that a new radio station which identified itself as "Azad Afghan Radio" was being heard in Rawalpindi, Peshawar and other towns in West Pakistan during the preceding week.

The reports said that these broadcasts were apparently beamed to listeners in Afghanistan "because so far this station had been referring to that country as 'our country'".

The station was said to be very weak and it was audible only for a very short time in Rawalpindi late in the evening on 63.2 metres short-wave. "All the programmes so far have been in Pushtu between 8.30 p.m. and 9.30 p.m. It appears that the station broadcasts three programmes daily."

It was also reported that the station had been repeatedly appealing to its listeners "to beware of the fast-spreading Russian influence in the country and to take effective steps to put an end to it."

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3239:AFG:A]

BURMA

A. Consultative Committee On State-hood And Privileges Appointed: The Government appointed a five-man Committee on April 29 which would advise the Administration on, among other things, conferring State-hood for Mons and Arakan and on steps to end any abuse of privilege by men in authority.

The Committee, headed by the former President, Dr. Ba U, consisted of a former Chief Justice, U Thein Maung; a retired judge, U Ohn Pe; and former Ministers, U Tin and U Chit Thoung.

An official communique listed the following as the Committee's terms of reference:

"(1) In his policy speech in Parliament on April 5, the Prime Minister, U Nu, had said that State-hood would be given to both the Mons and the Arakanese if they expressed a desire for States of their own. The Consultative Committee is requested to advise the Government on how best the Prime Minister's promise can be implemented.

"(2) During the ten years after Independence, the Prime Minister, Ministers and Parliamentary Secretaries had often misused the privileges which accrued to them as members of the Government. There had been instances, for example, of Government transport and broadcasting facilities being used either for political organizations or for personal purposes. As these practices are contradictory to the principles of democracy, the Government would like to ban them forthwith. The Consultative Committee is, therefore, requested to advise the Government on when and how much of the privileges should be taken advantage of by the Prime Minister, Ministers and Parliamentary Secretaries, and when they should not be.

"(3) As a result of the disturbed conditions obtaining throughout the country soon after Independence, Acts which suppress the democratic rights of the people had been enacted. Among them, there may be Acts which are no longer desirable either in whole or in part in the light of the present conditions. The Consultative Committee is requested to advise the Government which Acts should be repealed and which amended.

"(4) The Committee is requested to advise the Government on how to create and empower a permanent Elections Commission and with what responsibilities.

"(5) The Prime Minister considers that Parliament should be summoned three times a year and not twice, as has been the case hitherto."

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3275:BUR:A]

CAMBODIA

A. Mr. Chou En-lai's Visit: The Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, paid a State visit to Pnom Penh from May 5 to 9.

Mr. Chou En-lai, who was accompanied by the Chinese Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi, was given a warm reception.

On arrival, the distinguished visitors were greeted at the airport by Prince Norodom Sihanouk who had recently retired as Prime Minister but still headed the Government party.

In his speech at the airport, Mr. Chou En-lai said: "The friendly relations between our two countries have never been so close as today. There has been a tremendous development in these relations since my first visit in 1956, including the strengthening of economic co-operation between our two countries, and I hope that this present visit would further strengthen our friendship."

On his recent visit to Burma, India and Nepal, he said that he saw that all Asian people desired to strengthen solidarity with their neighbouring countries. He added: "No force can undermine the friendly solidarity of the Asian peoples."

During his visit, he formally opened three Chinese aid projects—a plywood factory, a radio station and a textile mill.

Addressing a mass rally in Pnom Penh on May 6, Mr. Chou En-lai pledged "the unfailing support of the 650 million Chinese in Cambodia's struggle to maintain her national independence."

Marshal Chen Yi said that Prince Norodom's policy of neutralism was "in conformity with justice, and China supports it."

State Banquet:

Mr. Chou En-lai's engagements included a State banquet given in his honour on May 5 by Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

On the occasion, Prince Norodom told the Chinese Premier of his and his people's last and highest hope in "rapprochement and future co-operation" among the Big Powers like China, United States, Soviet Union and India and not merely in "consultations" among them.

In an implied reference to neighbouring South Viet-Nam, he said that "nations of secondary importance" which in the past had suffered from colonialism "are now becoming imperialistic and expansionist in their way of doing things and repeatedly conducting bellicose provocations."

He said that his country "is willing to rely on the respect and friendship of her two great friends—China and India." He hoped that India and China, for the sake of their common goodwill, would soon find a satisfactory solution to their border dispute. "Our hopes are justifiable," he said, "because a similar problem that existed between China and Burma has been so successfully solved."

In his speech, Mr. Chou En-lai referred to "the tremendous development of friendly relations" between China and Cambodia on the basis of the Five Principles of co-existence.

[The visit of Mr. Chou En-lai coincided with a Cambodian allegation that South Viet-Namese armed bands had encroached on Cambodian off-shore islands.]

At State receptions and talks with newsmen, Mr. Chou En-lai expressed support to the Cambodian Government in any step it took to end these encroachments.

It was stated that the issue was discussed by Mr. Chou En-lai in his talks with Prince Norodom and the Prime Minister, Mr. Pho Proeung.

Communique:

On May 8, the two Premiers signed a joint communique which was read out by Mr. Chou En-lai to a cheering crowd.

According to the communique, the two countries agreed to develop further the economic and cultural relations between them.

It said that Mr. Chou En-lai had emphasized that China and Cambodia strongly condemned the aims of neighbouring countries to expand their territories by force of arms.

[This was seen as an indirect reference to the Cambodian-South Viet-Namese dispute.]

Co-operation between the Chinese People's Republic and the Kingdom of Cambodia, it said, was an example of good relations between nations with different political systems.

It called on the Chinese in Cambodia to obey local laws.

It said that Prince Norodom and Mr. Pho Proeung had accepted an invitation to visit China but no date had been set.

News Conference:

Mr. Chou En-lai told a news conference on May 8 that China could not consider an invitation to attend a world conference on disarmament while she was still not a member of UN.

In a conversation with American newsmen, he predicted that he might one day go to USA but added: "I do not know the date."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Asked by an American correspondent whether he would accept an invitation from President Eisenhower, he described it as a "strange question."

He added: "The US Government has up to now no intention of recognizing the Government of China. It is very difficult to answer this question."

But he thanked the questioner and said that he hoped the query reflected the good wishes of the American people.

He backed Cambodia in her dispute with South Viet-Nam over her rights to a number of off-shore islands and said: "These islands all belong to the Kingdom of Cambodia."

He linked Cambodia's claim to the off-shore islands with China's fight for the off-shore islands of Quemoy, Matsu and the nationalist Chinese stronghold of Formosa.

(Hsinhua News)

[Prev. ref. 2431:CAM:A]

INDIA

SUMMARY: Maharashtra And Gujerat States Inaugurated; CPI National Council On Nehru-Chou En-lai Talks And 'Summit' Conference; Insurance During 1958; STC's Working During 1958-59; All-India Law And Order Conference.

A. Maharashtra And Gujerat States Inaugurated: Two new States — Maharashtra and Gujerat — were born at the stroke of midnight on April 30-May 1 to become the 14th and 15th units of the Indian Union.

Maharashtra came into being at a simple ceremony at Raj Bhavan in Bombay when the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, formally switched on a neon-sign map of the new State to the strains of shahnai.

In Ahmedabad city, a pyro-technic display heralded the birth of Gujerat.

As Mr. Nehru inaugurated the new State of Maharashtra, temple and church bells pealed, sirens were sounded and ships and trains blew whistles.

Mr. Nehru congratulated the people of Maharashtra on achieving their cherished goal and said that he had come to Bombay not to launch the new State but give effect to the wishes of the people of Maharashtra expressed through the country's Parliament.

He asked the people to remember that they were part of the great country of India. Maharashtra was an old kingdom and it had now emerged in a new shape and form for enriching the life of the land. Their prosperity was linked with the prosperity of India. It was the duty of everyone to strive to advance the interests of the country as a whole.

He described Maharashtra as "the strong arm of India on whose courage and hard work the country could depend upon both in times of peace and in emergencies."

The Governor, Mr. Sri Prakasa, welcomed the emergence of Maharashtra with the words: "It is our fond aspiration that we might prove worthy of the tasks that are being entrusted to us today."

The old Maharashtra, he said, was re-born in a "new and beautiful modern form as an integral part of India."

He held out an assurance to all non-Marathi-speaking citizens of the State and all those who had come from other constituents of the Indian Union and had settled there that it would be the foremost concern of the Government to look after their interests and welfare. "Let no sad thoughts trouble their minds that their position will not now be the same as before."

Bombay Re-organization Bill:

The Lok Sabha (House of the People) passed the Bombay Re-organization Bill on April 19.

The Bill provided for the bifurcation of the existing Bombay State into the States of Maharashtra and Gujerat.

Only one member, Mr. M. S. Aney, a member from Nagpur, opposed the Bill on the ground that it had not provided for the creation of a third State in the Vidarbha region to which he belonged.

Earlier, during a seven-hour debate on the Bill, members belonging to all parties spoke in support of the Bill.

The Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, in his reply to the debate, wished the two new States "happiness, progress, peace and advance."

He paid a tribute to the former Congress President, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, who had first asked for a re-opening of the issue and added that concrete shape to the aspiration of both the Maharashtrian and Gujerati peoples was given by the Chief Minister of Bombay, Mr. Y. B. Chavan, and Dr. Jivraj Mehta (who later became the Chief Minister of Gujerat.)"

One lesson that stood out prominently in all this, he said, was that any object could be gained through peaceful means and not through violence. The Bill, as reported by the Joint Select Committee, fully reflected the opinion of the Bombay legislature not only in principle but also in detail.

He reminded the House that linguistic frenzy could lead to disaster and hoped that it would now be possible to build up a process of synthesis.

The Rajya Sabha (Council of States) passed the Bill on April 23.

The President of India gave his assent to the Bill and remitted it to the Government on April 25.

The Bill thus became an Act bringing into existence the States of Maharashtra and Gujerat from May 1.

The Act was notified in a Gazette of India Extraordinary on April 26.

Provisions Of Bill:

The Act provides for the creation of a new State of Gujerat comprising the following territories of the State of Bombay: Banaskantha, Mehsana, Sabarkantha, Ahmedabad, Kaira Panchmahals, Baroda, Broach, Surat, Dangs, Amreli, Surendranagar, Rajkot, Jamnagar, Junagadh, Bhavnagar and Kutch districts; and the villages in Umbergaon taluka in Thana district, the villages in Nawapur and Nandurbar talukas of West Khandesh district and the villages in Akkalkuwa and Taloda talukas of West Khandesh district.

These territories would cease to form a part of the State of Bombay and the residuary State of Bombay would form the new State of Maharashtra.

The State of Maharashtra would be allotted 19 seats and the State of Gujerat 11 seats in the Rajya Sabha (Council of States).

Maharashtra would be allotted 44 seats and Gujerat 22 seats in the Lok Sabha (House of the People).

The total number of seats to be filled by persons chosen by direct election in the Legislative Assemblies of Maharashtra of Gujerat would be 264 and 132 respectively.

The duration of the Assemblies would be five years.

The Speaker and Deputy Speaker of the Maharashtra Legislative Assembly would be the Speaker and Deputy Speaker of the Bombay Legislative Assembly before May 1.

The Gujerat Legislative Assembly would choose two members from that Assembly to be its Speaker and Deputy Speaker respectively.

The Legislative Council of Maharashtra would consist of 78 seats and its Chairman would be chosen by the Maharashtra Legislative Council from among its members.

An Election Commission would determine the number of seats to be reserved for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes in the two Legislative Assemblies.

Provision is made for a separate High Court for Gujerat and the High Court of Bombay would become the High Court for Maharashtra.

The provisions of this Act would have effect notwithstanding anything inconsistent contained in any other law. If any difficulty arose in giving effect to the Act's provisions the President could, by order, do anything consistent with such provisions which he considered necessary.

The Act makes provision for the apportionment of assets and liabilities between the States of Maharashtra and Gujerat.

It also provides that a permanent Bench of the Maharashtra High Court be situated in Nagpur.

The Bill was placed before the Bombay Legislature on March 5, and after a debate from March 14 to 18, a resolution approving the Bill with certain amendments was passed on March 18.

The Bill was introduced in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on March 28 and was referred to a Joint Select Committee on April 1. The Rajya Sabha (Council of States) concurred in the reference of the Bill to a Joint Select Committee on April 7, 1960.

The Joint Select Committee reported on the Bill on April 21.

Joint Select Committee's Report:

The Joint Select Committee on the Bill recommended that in accordance with the resolution adopted by the Bombay State Legislature, there should be a permanent Bench of the Maharashtra High Court at Nagpur consisting of at least three judges.

It also recommended that the residuary State of Bombay be known as Maharashtra.

The report of the Committee was presented to both Houses of Parliament on April 21.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Committee felt that the representation of the State of Maharashtra in the Council of States (Rajya Sabha) in accordance with the population of the proposed State should be raised from 18 to 19.

It also recommended that on the expiration of the duration of the newly-created Assembly of Gujerat, the strength of that Assembly ought to be increased to 154 from 132 and that the Election Commission should be empowered to delimit the Assembly constituencies of the State.

Other suggestions put forward by the Committee were that there should be a provision enabling the Government of Gujerat to constitute any time after 'the appointed day' a State Finance Corporation if they so desire, and a provision to enable the State Government of Bombay to prepare a scheme for the re-organization of the Bombay State Road Transport Corporation even before the appointed day.

The Committee agreed with the view of the Bombay Legislature that for the purpose of election to the Bar Council of Gujerat the period for which a lawyer had practised in the High Court of Saurashtra should also be taken into account as also the period for which a lawyer had practised in the Judicial Commissioner's Court at Kutch.

It recommended an amendment to the Fifth Schedule of the Bill to provide for the delimitation of the three Council constituencies of Maharashtra State by including Rajura district in them along with the Bhandara and Chanda districts of those constituencies.

It agreed with the recommendation of the Bombay Legislature that pleaders should be given the right to practise for one year instead of six months in the courts they are now practising.

It accepted the recommendation of the Bombay Legislature to amend the Multi-Unit Co-operative Societies Act so that if the Board of Directors of any Society, specified in the Schedule, unanimously agreed upon a scheme for organization of the Society and the State Government certified the scheme before May 1, 1960, the scheme should be binding on all the shareholders and creditors of the Society subject to such further adjustments as might be made later.

In pursuance of this change, the Committee added one more Schedule to the Bill increasing their number from 12 to 13.

It recommended the amendment of the Bill to give power to the Central Government to add any institution to the Schedule dealing with institutions, giving common facilities to the two States till such time as the two States might agree or as fixed by the Central Government.

It further recommended the dropping of eight institutions from this Schedule as similar facilities existed in both States, and the addition of five institutions.

Minutes Of Dissent:

A minute of dissent signed by Mr. S. A. Dange (Com.), Mr. Lalji Pendse (Ind.), Mr. B. K. Gaikwad (Rep.), Mr. N. G. Goray (P-SP), Mr. S. V. Parulekar (Com.) and Mr. U. L. Patil (Jan Sangh) took objection to the borders as defined in the Bill because "many Marathi-speaking villages which ought to be in the State of Maharashtra are being transferred to Gujerat."

The signatories regretted that the Pataskar formula of taking the village as the unit had not been accepted in the case of the bifurcation of the present Bombay State. The areas specifically mentioned as Marathi-speaking which had been transferred to the new State of Gujerat were 17 villages of Umbergaon taluk of Thana district, the whole district of Dangs and the Marathi-speaking tracts in Dharampur and Bansda.

Their second objection was to the transfer of certain Marathi-speaking villages to Gujerat on account of the Ukai Project, which they felt was not necessary for Gujerat "either for the supply of power or for the supply of water."

Objection was also taken to the financial provision in the Bill that the deficit of the State of Gujerat should be paid from the surplus of Bombay city.

In another minute of dissent submitted by Mr. M. S. Sugandhi (Ind.), the adoption of the name of Maharashtra by the new State was opposed as the State did not wholly consist of people who were Marathi-speaking. Until the Kannada-speaking areas were separated from it, the new State should be called Bombay.

In a third minute of dissent, Mr. P. R. Patel (Mahagujerat Janta Parishad) demanded the inclusion of the whole of Umbergaon taluk and some villages of Dahanu taluk on the western coast in Gujerat.

Mr. M. V. Rangachari's Award On Finances:

The new State of Gujerat would receive from Maharashtra State in one instalment a sum of Rs. 50,55,00,000 for enabling the new State to construct its capital and balance its budgets for the next ten years.

The amount, representing the present value of payment to be made to Gujerat State, was arrived at after the application of the compromise formula suggested by Mr. M. V. Rangachari, a former Special Secretary in the Central Finance Ministry.

Mr. Rangachari's help was sought by the Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, when the Finance Committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. P. C. Bhattacharya, Chairman of the State Bank of India, failed to arrive at a conclusion in regard to the annual revenue deficit of the new State.

The total amount payable to Gujerat State, under Mr. Rangachari's formula, of Rs. 55,96,00,000, included Rs. 10 crores for the construction of the capital.

A sum of Rs. 12,16,00,000 would be paid to the new State from the Maharashtra Government's share in the Union excise duties and Estate duty. The rest of the amount—Rs. 33,80,00,000—was payable from the third to tenth year after the inception of the State.

Since Maharashtra State is paying the amount in one instalment, the present value of payment was calculated after deducting interest at 3½ per cent. This value came to Rs. 28,39,00,000.

The differences in the Bhattacharya Committee in estimating the annual revenue deficit of Gujerat related to two items: (i) Sinking Fund and depreciation charges on public loans and provision for re-payment of Central loans; and (ii) transfer to the State Road Fund.

Two members of the Committee—Mr. V. T. Deejia and Mr. V. Isvaran—had expressed the view that in accordance with the present budgetary practices of Bombay State, the two items should remain in the revenue account and the deficit of Gujerat should accordingly be estimated at Rs. 9,35,00,000 for 1960-61 and Rs. 9,14,00,000 for the following year.

The other two members of the Committee—Mr. S. G. Barve and Mr. M. P. Yardi—had expressed a different view. They had held that the two items were not of an obligatory type which should be charged on revenue account in the computation of the deficit and should, therefore, be excluded and the deficit of Gujerat be estimated at Rs. 4,45,00,000 for 1960-61 and As. 4,32,00,000 for the following year.

The Bombay Government referred the problem to the Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, who, after discussing the matter with the Bombay Chief Minister, Mr. Y. B. Chavan, and the Finance Minister, Dr. Jivraj Mehta, advised that the issue might be settled on the principles suggested by Mr. Rangachari. The Bombay Government accepted the advice.

The principles put forth by Mr. Rangachari were that the amount required for an amortization of public loans should be allowed in working out the deficit of Gujerat State, but no provision need be made for the amortization of any loan taken from the Centre.

In regard to the transfer of the State Road Fund, the provision should be omitted that any expenditure debitable to the revenue budget which was at present met from the Fund should be included in working out the deficit of the new State.

For the purpose of working out the deficit from the third year onward, the figures for 1961-62 were taken as the base.

The Award was incorporated in the Bombay Re-organization Bill, 1960, which was presented before the Bombay Legislative Assembly on March 8.

The annual revenue deficit of the new Gujerat State was assessed at Rs. 6 crores in the first three years, tapering down to Rs. 2.09 crores at the end of the ten-year period.

The assets of the composite State of Bombay would be divided according to the population ratio, which works out roughly at two to one. Maharashtra getting a two-thirds' share and Gujerat one-third.

The public debts of the present Bombay State would be borne by the two new States not on the population ratio but on the basis of capital outlays and expenditure in the respective States. (Gujerat's public debt, determined on the basis of capital outlay, would be more than it would be on the basis of population.)

To avoid any future political embarrassment to the newly-created States, a method was found for the immediate settlement of the dispute between Bombay and Gujerat on this question.

For the first two years, Gujerat's deficit of nearly Rs. 12 crores would be adjusted from Bombay's shares of certain Central levies, such as income-tax, excise, estate duty, tax on railway passenger fares and duties on sugar, tobacco and textile. This would mean that the Centre would allocate to Gujerat Rs. 12 crores for that period in excess of its normal share and that Maharashtra State would get correspondingly less.

The balance of the next eight years' deficit was proposed to be made good to Gujarat on the basis of an immediate financial settlement.

This was proposed to be achieved by certain adjustments in the division of assets and liabilities of the two new States.

For the purpose of re-imbursing Gujerat, the total amount to be paid in the remaining eight years was fixed at a little over Rs. 28 crores, taking into consideration the interest that would accrue on it at the current rate.

In terms of the settlement, Gujerat would get a little over Rs. 14 crores in excess of its share in the assets of the composite Bombay State. Similarly, the liability of Gujerat in the public debt of composite Bombay would be scaled down by about Rs. 14 crores.

The settlement of the total revenue deficit of Gujerat arrived at in this manner at the very inception of the two States would leave no room for any future controversy on this subject.

The Bill requires Gujerat to create a special Revenue Reserve Fund to the extent of the financial benefits that would accrue to it by the adjustments in the assets and liabilities of the two States.

The annual deficits of Gujerat would be met by yearly withdrawal from this Fund. The anticipated deficits of Gujerat, mentioned in the Bill were: 1962-63—Rs. 6.12 crores; 1963-64—Rs. 5.85 crores; 1964-65—Rs. 5.61 crores; 1965-66—Rs. 5.26 crores; 1966-67—Rs. 4.33 crores; 1967-68—Rs. 3.40 crores and 1968-69—Rs. 2.09 crores.

Maharashtra Cabinet:

The first Cabinet of Maharashtra State was sworn-in in Bombay on May 1.

The entire proceedings were conducted in Marathi.

The oaths of office and secrecy were administered in Marathi by the Governor, Mr. Sri Prakasa, Mr. Shantilal Shah was the only one among the 26 members of the Ministry to take his oath in a language other than Marathi, namely, Hindi.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Chief Minister, Mr. Y. B. Chavan, later announced that Marathi would be the official language of the new State.

The following was the list of Ministers and Deputy Ministers with their portfolios:

Ministers:

Mr. Y. B. Chavan—Chief Minister in charge of General Administration, Home, Planning and Industries;

Mr. M. S. Kannamwar (Vidarbha)—Buildings and Communications;

Mr. Shantilal H. Shah (Bombay City)—Law, Judiciary and Labour;

Mr. Vasantrao P. Naik (Vidarbha)—Revenue;

Mr. B. G. Gadhe (Marathwada)—Rural Development and Forests;

Mr. S. K. Wankhede (Vidarbha)—Finance;

Mr. D. S. Desai—Education;

Mr. S. G. Kazi (Vidarbha)—Civil Supplies, Housing, Printing Presses, Wages and Fisheries;

Mr. T. S. Bhadre—Co-operation;

Mr. P. K. Savant—Minister for Agriculture;

Dr. T. R. Naravane (Bombay City)—Prohibition and Social Welfare;

Mr. S. B. Chavan (Marathwada)—Irrigation and Power;

Mr. H. J. H. Talyarkhan (Bombay City)—Public Health, Small Savings and Tourism; and

Mr. D. Z. Palaspagar (Vidarbha)—Urban Development.

Deputy Ministers:

Dr. Bhaskar R. Patel—Prohibition;

Mrs. Nirmala Raje Bhosale—Education;

Mr. Devisingh V. Chauhan—Buildings and Communications;

Mr. S. R. Patil—Sarvodaya, Forests, Labourers' Societies and Khar Land Development;

Mr. G. D. Patil—Industries;

Dr. N. N. Kailas—Co-operation;

Mr. M. D. Choudhari—Revenue;

Mr. Y. J. Mohite—Home;

Mr. Madangopal J. Agarwal—Public Health;

Mr. N. U. Deshmukh—Irrigation and Power;

Mr. Narendra M. Tidke—Rural Development; and

Mr. Madhusudan A. Vairale—Agriculture.

Mr. Y. B. Chavan's Policy Statement:

Making his first policy pronouncement on assumption of office as the Chief Minister of Maharashtra, Mr. Y. B. Chavan, announced the Government's decision to replace English by Marathi as the State's official language.

He said that the change-over would be made with due regard to efficiency and dispatch of work. A Directorate of Language would be immediately set up to initiate the process.

He re-iterated his assurance to the people of Vidarbha, Marathwada, Konkan and the scarcity areas of the State that their interests would be jealously safeguarded by the Government. The Government would endeavour not only to maintain but also to enhance the importance of the city of Nagpur.

He repeated his assurance that the State Government would strive to the utmost to maintain the cosmopolitan character of Greater Bombay and to devote its closest attention to the city's development.

He also declared that neo-Buddhists in the State would be treated on par with the Scheduled Castes for all purposes, "except those which impinge on the provisions of the Constitution."

Gujerat High Court:

The President of India directed on April 29 that the principal seat of the new High Court of Gujerat would be at Ahmedabad and that the Court would begin functioning from May 1.

Mr. Justice Sunderlal Trikamlal Desai, a senior judge of the Bombay High Court, was appointed the first Chief Justice of the new State of Gujerat.

The other judges of the Gujerat High Court would be: Mr. Justice K. T. Desai; Mr. Justice N. M. Miabhoy; Mr. Justice J. M. Shelat and Mr. Justice V. B. Raju.

Governor Of Gujerat:

It was announced on April 25 that Nawab Mehdi Nawaz Jung, formerly a member of the Andhra Pradesh Cabinet, had been appointed as first Governor of Gujerat.

A senior High Court Judge, Mr. S. T. Desai, deputed specially for the purpose by a Presidential Order, administered the oaths of office and secrecy to Nawab Mehdi Nawaz Jung on May 1.

Later, the Governor Nawab Mehdi Nawaz Jung, administered the oaths of office and secrecy to the Chief Minister, Dr. Jivraj Mehta.

The Governor warmly shook hands with the Chief Minister and wished him god-speed in his new responsibility.

After Dr. Mehta, the Ministers and the Deputy Ministers received their oaths of office and secrecy.

Gujerat Cabinet:

On April 30, Dr. Jivraj Mehta (73) was unanimously elected leader of the Congress Legislature Party in the new State of Gujerat at a meeting of the Party held in Ahmedabad.

An announcement from Raj Bhavan on May 1 said that the Governor on the advice of the Chief Minister had appointed the following to be members of the Gujerat Cabinet for the portfolios mentioned against their names:

Ministers:

Dr. Jivraj Mehta—Chief Minister, who will also be in charge of General Administration, Planning and Finance;

Mr. Rasiklal Parikh—Home, Information, Accommodation, Control and Medium and Minor Ports;

Mr. Ratubhai Adani—Co-operation, Sarvodaya, Cottage Industries, Community Projects, Panchayats, District Local Boards, Housing, Roads, Irrigation and Labour;

Mr. Maneklal Shah—Rural Welfare, Health, Fisheries, Printing Presses, Civil Supplies, Municipalities, Road Transport, Industries, Electricity and Jails.

Mr. Hitendra Desai—Law and Judiciary, Education, Agriculture, Forests, Prohibition, Excise, Social Welfare and Rehabilitation.

Deputy Ministers:

Mr. P. B. Thakkar—Roads, Buildings, Housing and Ports;

Mr. Jaswantlal Shah—Co-operatives, Sarvodaya, Community Projects and Cottage Industries;

Mr. Chhotubhai Patel—Road Transport Industries and Electricity;

Mr. Bahadurbhai Patel—Agriculture and Forests;

Mr. Maldevji Oldedra—Finance;

Mr. A. A. Jasdenwalla—Land, Accommodation, Control and Jails;

Mrs. Urmila Bhatt—Prohibition, Excise, Social Welfare and Rehabilitation; and Mrs. Kamlaben Patel—Health and Fisheries.

(The Times of India, Bombay and New Delhi, The Statesman, Calcutta and New Delhi and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3084:INI:C, 3085:INI:C]

B. CPI National Council On Nehru-Chou En-lai Talks And "Summit" Conference: The Communist Party's National Council which ended its five-day session in Calcutta on May 12, adopted lengthy resolutions on the Nehru-Chou En-lai talks, the 'summit' conference, the Manipur agitation and the release of long-term political prisoners in West Bengal, Tamil Nad and Andhra.

The Council granted leave for three months to Mr. Ajoy Ghosh, General Secretary of the CPI, on grounds of health. During this period, Mr. E. M. S. Namboodiripad would act as General Secretary of the Party.

Mr. Ghosh had been the Party's General Secretary since 1951.

The Council decided that the All-India Congress of the Party would be held near Vijayawada (in Andhra) from January 16 to 26, 1961. The various State conferences were to be concluded in the first week of October, 1960. During the middle of October, 1960, the National Council would meet to finalize the political resolution and the annual report to be presented to the Party Congress. The Council discussed the political situation but did not adopt any resolution.

The Council elected a Commission consisting of Mr. S. A. Dange, Mr. E. M. S. Namboodiripad, Mr. P. Ramamurty, Mr. P. Sundarayya, Mr. H. Adhikari, Mr. P. C. Joshi and Mr. Bhupesh Gupta to prepare a draft programme for discussion at the Party Congress to be held near Vijayawada.

The Council noted with satisfaction that as a result of the recent talks between the Prime Ministers of India and China there "has been some lessening of tensions in the relations between the two countries."

It added: "Although it is a matter of regret that a solution has not been found in these talks to the India-China border dispute the decisions of the two Governments to continue discussions at official level and to take measures to avoid any further incidents and maintain tranquillity in the border areas are undoubtedly positive achievements of the talks between the two Prime Ministers."

Whatever the present difficulties, it said, the Council was confident that with goodwill and friendly discussion, a peaceful solution of the border dispute would surely be found.

It warned that there were powerful forces, both within the country and outside, who were interested in keeping the dispute between the two countries alive. Ever since the issue came to the forefront, these forces had spared no effort to embitter relations and prevent every move in the direction of peaceful negotiation. They had exploited the tragic developments not only to pull India and China apart but also to assail even India's policy of peace and non-alignment. In fact, attacks against India-China friendship were an "integral part of their wider destructive strategy against Afro-Asian solidarity and world peace."

It further noted that the talks between Mr. Nehru and Mr. Chou En-lai had made the imperialists abroad and reactionaries at home

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

more desperate and there was no doubt that they would try all possible means to spoil the atmosphere and frustrate discussions and negotiations.

It regretted that certain utterances coming from official quarters were sometimes found to be out of tune with India's basic policy of peaceful negotiations and were taken advantage of by the reactionary forces to further their ends. "In this situation, great responsibilities devolve on our people in defending the policy of peaceful negotiations on the India-China border dispute, as also the larger cause of India's policy of peace and non-alignment."

In the resolution on the 'summit' conference, the Council expressed the hope that the conference would lead to early initial agreements on total and universal disarmament.

Referring to Manipur, the Council's resolution condemned the "repression which has been unleashed against the people of Manipur for their having dared to voice the demand for a responsible Government."

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3300:INI:A]

C. Diplomatic Appointments: The External Affairs Ministry announced in New Delhi on May 6 that Mr. S. N. Haksar, till recently India's Ambassador to Afghanistan, had been appointed Ambassador to Italy and concurrently Minister to Albania.

It was also announced that Mr. Jagan Nath Dhamija, Commissioner for India in Mauritius, had been appointed Ambassador of India to Afghanistan.

(The External Affairs Ministry, India)

[Prev. ref. 463:INI:D, 1344:INI:C]

D. "INS Talwar" Commissioned: India received a new anti-submarine frigate into her Navy at a ceremony at Birkenhead (England) on April 26.

The vessel is the 2,545-ton INS Talwar. She was officially commissioned at the docks of the builders, Cammell Laird & Co, Ltd., one of Britain's leading ship-building firms.

INS Talwar is the second of her type to be commissioned for the Indian Navy. Primarily, she is designed as an anti-submarine vessel with surface action and a speed of 30 knots.

A few days later, the ship sailed for Portsmouth to commence her equipment trials, after which she would spend a brief period working up before sailing for Indian waters.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3121:INI:J]

E. Mahi Project Inaugurated: The foundation-stone of the Mahi irrigation and power project in Rajasthan was laid at Banswara on May 7 by the Central Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai.

The project is estimated to cost Rs. 20 crores.

A lake that will be formed by the construction of a dam across the Mahi river as part of the project will be named after the late Mr. Jamnalal Bajaj, one of the leaders of the Freedom Movement and an associate of Mahatma Gandhi.

The dam will be 200 ft. high from the river bed and 1,500 ft. long. With nine small power houses on the Mahi hydel canal system. It will generate 40,000 kw of power.

It will irrigate 68,000 acres in Rajasthan and 5,00,000 acres in Gujerat.

The Rajasthan Irrigation Minister, Mr. Bhika Bhai, said that the project was conceived 60 years ago in 1900 by an Irrigation Commission and a preliminary survey was carried out in 1929.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3244:INI:J]

F. Insurance Business In 1958: According to figures given in the Indian Insurance Year-Book for 1959, the net premium income in India in all classes of general insurance business of Indian insurers increased from Rs. 10.96 crores in 1957 to Rs. 12.96 crores in 1958. In 1958, Rs. 4.36 crores was earned from fire insurance, Rs. 2.59 crores from marine insurance and Rs. 6.01 crores from miscellaneous insurance.

In the case of non-Indian insurers, the net premium income in India was also higher in 1958 than in 1957 in fire and miscellaneous insurance business, but it was lower in marine insurance. The corresponding figures in their case in 1958 were a total of Rs. 7.19 crores, of which Rs. 3.22 crores related to fire, Rs. 1.72 crores to marine and Rs. 2.25 crores to miscellaneous insurance.

The net premium income outside India of Indian insurers, which was also higher in 1958 than in 1957, except in the case of fire insurance, amounted to Rs. 12.02 crores in 1958, of which Rs. 6.65 crores was earned from fire insurance, Rs. 2.36 crores from marine insurance and Rs. 3.01 crores from miscellaneous insurance.

The index number of general insurance business in India for 1958 recorded a rise of 6.1 as against a rise of 0.5 for 1957.

The gross premiums written direct in India in the classes of fire, marine and miscellaneous insurance business were Rs. 7.94 crores, Rs. 4.37 crores and Rs. 7.72 crores respectively, amounting in all to Rs. 20.03 crores for Indian insurers, and Rs. 4.68 crores, Rs. 2.32 crores and Rs. 2.63 crores respectively amounting in all to Rs. 9.63 crores for non-Indian insurers. The gross premiums written direct outside India by Indian insurers were estimated at Rs. 2.19 crores, Rs. 1.72 crores and Rs. 2.74 crores in the three classes.

In respect of fire insurance business, Indian insurers spent 33 per cent of their total gross premium income in India on expenses, taxes and miscellaneous out-go, 14 per cent on commission and 36 per cent was absorbed by claims payable, leaving a balance of 17 per cent. The corresponding figures for the non-Indian insurers in respect of their Indian business were 34 per cent, 14 per cent and 23 per cent, leaving a balance of over 28 per cent.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2873:INI:H]

G. State Trading Corporation's Working During 1958-59: According to its report for 1958-59, the State Trading Corporation, recorded a substantial increase in its trading activities during the year ended June, 30, 1959, with the turn-over rising to Rs. 35.95 crores from Rs. 28.58 crores in the previous year.

It said: "The effort to diversify foreign trade and cultivate new markets and provide facilities for business contacts, particularly with countries which believe in bilateral trading and practise State trading, was maintained and expanded with commendable vigour and satisfactory results."

It indicated that the Corporation hoped to step up its exports of iron-ore, manganese ore and handloom products besides certain other articles during the year.

The Corporation's experience in regard to cement exports showed that India was "in a position" to serve the cement requirements of markets in South-East Asia, West Africa and East Africa, "provided continuing surpluses are available in the country for export at reasonable prices."

Of the turn-over of Rs. 35.95 crores during the year, exports amounted to Rs. 22.36 crores and imports to Rs. 13.59 crores. Among the major items registering an increase on the export list were iron-ore, tobacco, gunnies and woollen fabrics. New items were shellac and raw jute.

On the import side, non-ferrous metals, caustic soda and muriate of potash accounted for the major portion of the increase. Among new items brought under the import list were newsprint, insulators for Government projects and sodium sulphate.

The net profit of the Corporation during the year was over Rs. 1,28,00,000 against Rs. 1,05,00,000 in 1957-58.

The overall picture of the Corporation's trade with organizations in the countries with whom bilateral trading arrangements were in force showed that the imports, taking the value of the licences issued, were of the order of Rs. 13.75 crores, while the export contracts aggregated to Rs. 14.50 crores. The imports covered a wide variety of goods, machinery, industrial raw materials and equipment, while the exports included oil, spices, hides and skins, mica, tea, coffee and gunnies.

In view of the increasing turn-over, the Corporation's authorized capital was raised to Rs. 5 crores and issued capital Rs. 2 crores.

It noted that the Corporation was able to enter into a bulk deal with Japan for salt exports and that a fillip was given to handloom exports, particularly to markets in USA.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev ref. 1751:INI:D]

H. All-India Law And Order Conference: The All-India Law and Order Conference was held for two days in Patna on April 15 and 16.

Mr. M. C. Setalvad, Attorney-General of India, presided. It was convened by the Indian Council of Public Affairs.

It adopted the reports of its Legal and Administrative Committee and Socio-Economic Committee, suggesting long-term and short-term measures to deal with the problem of law and order in the country.

The reports contained the views of some High Court judges and leading lawyers, who participated in the Committee meetings.

The report of the Legal and Administrative Committee held that if crime was detected but allowed to go unpunished, it would flourish. It would also flourish if innocent people were punished.

It suggested the re-organization and reformation of the police force which had to play an important role in the detection of crime. It disapproved of uninformed criticism of the police force which tended to affect its morale in the interests of law and order and also recommended the strengthening of the police force.

It said: "There are instances when a Government servant was found guilty of having committed a crime by a court of law and sentenced, but the Government gave direction that he need not serve the sentence imposed on him. Interference by the executive authority with the administration of justice was also noticed. A judicial secretary, who had written a letter to a magistrate to grant bail to a person and who was convicted for contempt by a High Court, was subsequently raised as a High Court judge. Persons in responsible positions and authority should conduct themselves properly; otherwise maintenance of law and order would be an impossibility.

"There should be an independent judiciary without which there would be no law and order. It should be borne in mind that what is necessary these days is not what the decision is, but how the decision is arrived at and how justice is meted out. The litigan's and lawyers should be convinced that justice has been done in their cases. Steps should be taken to enable litigants to have cheap and speedy relief and that procedural matters should be drastically curtailed without sacrificing the principle of natural justice."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

It suggested that there should be a Committee to study the reasons of various crimes and give suggestions for their prevention. Politicians should refrain from interfering in the proper functioning of the administrative and judicial machineries and some way should be found to bring to book such high officials, Ministers and legislators who indulged in unfair practices.

The Socio-Economic Committee, in its report, deprecated the practice of double standards of morality by a number of people, including political leaders, which was not conducive to discipline. Many leaders advocating the cause of basic education invariably put their own children in missionary schools.

On the question of employer-employee relations, it recommended that there should be increasing association on a voluntary basis between the representatives of management and of labour and every encouragement should be given to settle industrial disputes on a voluntary basis.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2614:INI:J]

I. Cancer Research Survey: The findings of a Survey by the Indian Cancer Research Centre in Bombay were made public on May 5.

According to the Survey, investigations showed that smokers were at a greater risk than non-smokers, the risk increasing with the number of cigarettes smoked.

Other inferences were: "(1) The problem of lung cancer is not of a big magnitude in the country; and (2) the habit of chewing pan was significantly associated with cancer of the mouth and tongue."

It added: "In India, smoking of cigarettes is confined mainly to urban areas. The modes of smoking among the rural people are hookah, chilum or bidi. Smoke inhaled from the hookah and the chilum is filtered through water or a wet piece of cloth and harmful substances in smoke do not probably enter the mouth and respiratory passages.

"In the case of bidi, it is likely that particles of smoke do not reach the bronchi and lungs and are deposited at the back of the tongue and the upper part of the throat."

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 2099:INI:D]

INDONESIA

A. Demonstration At Dutch Mission: Demonstrators raising anti-Dutch slogans broke into the Dutch Mission in Djakarta on May 6 smashing windows and tearing down the Dutch flag and portraits of Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

The demonstrators were carrying banners reading: "Drive the Dutch out of West Irian" and "Seize all Dutch property."

They hurled stones which broke the windows of the Mission and smashed the windscreen of a car.

They also tore down the Dutch coat-of-arms from the front of the building, ripped away the blue panel of the red, white and blue Dutch flag and hoisted it again as the red and white Indonesian flag.

The demonstrators were protesting against the Dutch decision to re-inforce their troops in West Irian.

They dispersed five minutes before troops, police and commandos armed with rifles and light machine-guns arrived and threw a cordon around the Mission.

A Dutch Mission spokesman said: "This is a serious incident. A great deal of damage has been done, though we don't know the precise value."

An Indonesian Foreign Office spokesman said that the Government "regrets the incident very much" and an investigation would be made.

On May 7, the Indonesian Government apologized to Holland for the demonstrations.

Foreign Office officials said that compensation would be paid to the Dutch for the damage.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3305:IND:A]

B. Elections In 1962: The acting President and First Minister, Dr. A. Djuanda, said in Djakarta on April 20 that elections to Parliament would be held by the end of 1962.

Dr. Djuanda, who was speaking to a gathering of senior civil and military officials, said that in the context of existing security conditions, there was no possibility of elections earlier.

As regards the general internal situation in the country, he said that "one should get rid of thoughts that tend to give the impression that the country is in turmoil. There is no reason to make ourselves pessimistic in facing the present situation."

He expressed confidence that "in the years to come progress in the economic and political fields is bound to be made much more than in years past."

(Information Service Indonesia)

[Prev. ref. 3269:IND:A]

C. Death Penalty For US Flier: A special military court in Djakarta sentenced to death on April 30 a US pilot, Allan Lawrence Pope, for flying bombing missions for the Indonesian rebel forces.

He was shot down over Ambon Island during the peak of the anti-Government revolt in 1958.

The presiding Judge, Colonel Sardjono, said that Pope, a 31-year old native of Miami, Florida, had been found guilty of all the three charges levelled against him—aiding an enemy of the State during the rebellion, carrying arms for the rebels and attacking Indonesian Government forces and people.

A veteran of the Korean War, Pope was employed by the Formosa Civil Air Transport Company when he joined the rebel movement in April, 1958. He was captured by Government forces when his B-26 plane was shot down on a bombing flight over the Celebes the following month (May, 1958).

Pope was expected to appeal to the President, Dr. Sukarno, against the sentence.

[No death sentence has so far been carried out in Indonesia, and only the President has power to commute it to life or lesser imprisonment.]

Reading the 50-page verdict, Judge Sardjono rejected a defence contention that Pope had caused no casualties among Indonesians during his attacks and was not attempting to bomb a Government naval convoy when he was shot down.

He also rejected a defence plea that Pope was aiding an enemy State at war and should therefore, be given prisoner-of-war treatment under the Geneva Convention.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2045:IND:A]

D. Re-issue Of High Denomination Notes: The Bank of Indonesia announced in Djakarta on May 3 that the Government had decided to re-issue 500 and 1,000 rupiah denomination notes which had been banned from circulation from August, 1959.

A statement by the Bank gave no reasons for the measure.

High denomination notes were devalued to ten per cent of their original value in 1959 by the Government in a measure to forestall mounting inflationary pressures on Indonesian currency.

Despite the measure, inflationary tendencies continued. Currency now in circulation is about 7,000 million rupiahs more than in August, 1959 and amounts to 373,000 million rupiahs.

(Information Service Indonesia)

[Prev. ref. 2874:IND:B]

IRAN

A. CENTO Council Meeting—Move For Joint Command: The Council of Ministers of the Central Treaty Organization (CENTO) began its eighth meeting in Tehran on April 28.

The US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, attended as an Observer. [USA is not a full member of CENTO but is a member of the main Committees of the organization.]

The meeting opened with a message from the Shah of Iran, read by the Court Minister, Mr. Hussein Ali, warmly welcoming the "distinguished" delegates to the Council.

The message said: "It is a matter of history that CENTO has met the immediate needs of uprooting subversion and infiltration and provided long-term planning for economy and defence."

Pakistan's Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, told the Council that Pakistan "could not ignore certain recent developments across our northern and north-eastern borders."

He added: "If these were left unchecked without counter-measures to safeguard Pakistan's independence, they might come to assume serious dimensions.

"It is in this context that the need for increasing the defensive potential of regional countries of CENTO assumes great importance."

The British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, outlined a three-point plan for the promotion of world peace.

The three objectives, he said, were: "Genuine progress towards comprehensive disarmament; an agreement to suspend nuclear tests—both under international control; and concrete indications that the Great Powers would not intervene in the internal affairs of other countries."

Addressing the representatives of Iran, Pakistan, Turkey and USA, he warned that the countries of the world had to stand together to be secure. "We know that to secure a relaxation of tensions, it is folly to negotiate from weakness. There is a long road to be travelled over, which requires patience, steadiness and wisdom of purpose. We must, on the one hand, insist on respect for our freedom to associate ourselves in defensive organizations such as CENTO, whose purpose is furthering the security and prosperity of our peoples, and, on the other, we must be positive and, indeed, bold in our initiatives to bring about better understanding between nations and groups of nations and thus promote peace and justice in the world."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The CENTO Secretary-General, Mr. M. O. A. Baig (Pakistan) said: "Since we last met in Washington in October, 1959, there has been on the whole a lessening of tensions between rival forces contesting the future of the world.

"The facts of geography and its consequences, however, remain with us...Our hopes to a considerable extent, now rest on finding a practical system of disarmament in which nuclear disarmament and disarmament in conventional weapons must both be controlled in such a way that in the end a balance of power is struck that will encourage peace of mind and peace in action.

"Meanwhile, we have to remember that the ambition of the land-locked heart of communism to reach out to the warm seas and the world beyond is inevitable, and it would be dangerous for us to fail to realize the driving geo-political forces behind the Soviet expansion."

He said that the success of Western alliances depended essentially on US strength.

Mr. Baig told newsmen later that all archives of the former Baghdad Pact had been returned to CENTO by the present Iraqi Government and that most of the Baghdad Pact property was at present in Ankara. "The Iraqis own certain property themselves and have claimed one-sixth. All our files and records have been returned. Nothing was destroyed during the riots and nothing of any significance is missing."

The Foreign Ministers attending the Council took the opportunity on April 29 to outline their Governments' view on East-West relations.

The American Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, dealt at length with the Berlin problem and East-West relations on the eve of the 'summit' conference, and once more assured the small nations that not only would they be informed but would eventually be consulted by the 'summit' talks members if it was a question of their interests.

Regarding Berlin, Mr. Herter was reported (by an informed source) to have said that the question was to "defuse" the bomb without sacrificing the freedom of the Berlin population.

The CENTO Secretary-General, Mr. M.O.A. Baig, said that all delegations were agreed on the policy to be followed during the 'summit' conference and had expressed their confidence in Britain and USA who would be their "spokesmen at the 'summit'. There was no question of giving the CENTO region countries more complete and modern weapons than they already had.

Communique:

A communique issued after the final session on April 30 said that hostile propaganda campaigns directed from outside the CENTO area were "inconsistent with the declared purpose of the detente."

It expressed deep concern that questions at issue between the members and their neighbours were sometimes used by outside Powers to interfere in their internal affairs, increasing international tensions as in the recent Soviet statement on Pakhtoonistan.

The West would pay full regard to the interests of their allies at the 'summit' talks. "Member-countries will be kept informed of such discussions."

The newly-created Permanent Military Deputies Group "has done much useful work in a short time with regard to the problem of the command structure, and their studies on this subject are continuing."

It added: "Mr. C. A. Herter and Mr Selwyn Lloyd gave an account of the work being done in preparation for the 'summit' conference and an account of the work of conferences on the suspension of nuclear tests and on disarmament.

"The Council noted these reports with approval and expressed support for efforts being made to secure the easing of tensions. The Council expressed the hope that the Nuclear Tests Conference in Geneva would reach a solution providing for the suspension of these tests under adequate international control and that the Disarmament Conference would also make real progress.

"Mr. Selwyn Lloyd and Mr. C. A. Herter made it clear that all these discussions with the Government of the Soviet Union would be conducted by the Western Powers with full regard to the interests of their allies in CENTO and the other regional organizations and within the general frame-work of the security of the 'free world'.

"The member-countries will be kept informed of the 'summit' discussions. The Council agreed that the efforts to ease tensions should be genuine and should be expressed not only in words but should also be demonstrated by deeds. The Council re-affirmed its belief that the 'free' countries of the world must maintain their strength and solidarity, as expressed particularly in the regional organization to which they belong.

"The need for this was clear. For instance, hostile propaganda campaigns were directed from outside CENTO area against particular countries and this was inconsistent with the declared purpose of the detente.

"The Council re-affirmed the admiration express in its Declaration at the Council meeting in October, 1959, in Washington for the spirit in which the Iranian nation has shown her resistance to a subversive and hostile propaganda. Participating States re-affirmed their intention to maintain friendly relations with all neighbouring States, based on mutual interest and respect.

"It believes that all questions at issue between them and their neighbours can best be solved by discussion as between equals.

"It is a matter of deep concern to it that such questions are sometimes used by outside Powers as a means of interfering in the internal affairs of other countries and increasing international tensions and subversion, as for example, by the recent Soviet statement on 'Pakhtoonistan'....

"The growth of technical co-operation between the participating States was noticed with satisfaction. Help is being given to the regional countries surveying and developing their natural resources."

Sardar Md. Naim's Comment:

The Foreign Minister of Afghanistan, Sardar Mohammed Naim Khan, said in Kabul on May 5 that "the statesmen of the Central Treaty Organization (CENTO) would have done better to study the real nature of the Pakhtoonistan problem" rather than decrying it.

He said that the CENTO Foreign Ministers should have shown concern over the oppressive action of Pakistan in depriving the people of Pakhtoonistan of their rights.

He added that the Pakhtoonistan issue was in reality the right of 7,000,000 Afghans now under foreign domination to choose their own destiny. "It is regrettable that we heard the voice of slavery instead of the voice of freedom."

(Dawn, Karachi, and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref 3171:PAK:B]

B. Earthquake In Lar And Garash: An earthquake shattered two south Iranian towns of Lar and Garash on April 25. First estimates placed the casualties at about 3,000 persons killed.

A Red Cross telegram from Lar said that 500 bodies had been recovered, including those of 300 school children. Only one policeman survived out of the entire police force in Lar. Not a single wall stood intact.

Lar, a town with a population of 17,000, was as completely ruined as was the Moroccan town of Agadir in which 12,000 died only eight weeks earlier (page 3260).

Lar, a tobacco and cotton centre, is 170 miles south-east of Shiraz, and about 80 miles from the Persian Gulf.

The Governor, Mr. Nosrat Gharib, who himself lost everything, sat in bare feet and rags in a field to wire Tehran by mobile transmitter for troops, medicine and tents.

He said: "Everybody is suffering."

He added that another tremor had struck the near-by town of Garash, killing and injuring many people. Garash is 12 miles south of Lar.

Later estimates put the fatal casualties at between "several hundreds" and 3,000.

[An earthquake on July 1, 1957, which shattered villages over a radius of about 60 miles round the 18,600-foot extinct volcano of Demavand, in the Caspian Sea region of Iran, about 50 miles north-east of Tehran, had killed about 2,000 people.]

(The Hindu, Madras and Tehran Journal)

[Prev. ref. 3260:AOA:E]

IRAQ

A. Major-Gen. Ghazi Daghistani Released: It was disclosed in Baghdad on April 28 that Major-General Ghazi Daghistani, a former Iraqi Deputy Chief of Staff under Nuri es Said's Government, who was sentenced to death at the treason and corruption trial in 1958, had been released from prison.

His release on April 27 was the result of three special amnesties reducing by 35 per cent the terms of all prisoners sentenced by the Baghdad People's Court.

Maj-Gen. Daghistani's death sentence was commuted to three years' imprisonment in March, 1960, when the Prime Minister, Gen. Abdel Karim Kassem, commuted the sentences on eight persons.

Maj-Gen. Daghistani was sentenced to death in November, 1958 for plotting with Israel and Turkey to overthrow the Syrian regime. The trial followed the coup d'etat in July, 1958, in which Mr. Nuri es Said and King Feisal were killed and General Kassem came to power.

(Baghdad Radio)

[Prev. ref. 3281:IRQ:C]

A Correction: On page 3305, the story of the Russian Exhibition in Baghdad went under IRAN. The error is regretted.

[Editor.—AR.]

ISRAEL

A. Socialist International Council Session: The Council of the Socialist International began its session in Haifa (Israel) on April 27.

Sharp condemnation of racial discrimination was expressed at the inaugural session.

The Chairman, Mr. Alsing Anderson (Denmark), declared: "I deeply deplore the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

sinister outbursts of racial discrimination which we see in different parts of the world. We condemn such acts, whether they are committed by irresponsible persons, or by responsible Governments."

More than 80 delegates from 29 countries attended the session.

The British Labour Party leader, Mr. Hugh Gaitskell, speaking at the inaugural session, pleaded that India and China should be included as soon as possible in the disarmament talks.

He said: "The time has come for the West, with the help of the Soviet Union, to make a great effort to break down the barriers which keep China apart from the rest of the world. Unless special steps are taken to prevent it, the spread of nuclear weapons to more and more countries is surely inevitable. France is the latest recruit, but is China far behind?"

He said that left on her own, China, whose population in 20 years might be 1,000,000,000, was likely to be a force disturbing the status quo. China and India, the two countries with the largest populations in the world, were not members of the Disarmament Conferences. "Why should we assume that they will sign on the dotted line an agreement which they have had no part in negotiating?"

The 'summit' conference in May, 1960 should reach agreement on establishing a zone of controlled disarmament in Central Europe without awaiting general world-wide disarmamen'. This would be a valuable pilot plan. He could not feel that the West German Government would be justified in continuing to oppose this.

Other Speeches:

Mr. Masinde Muliro, President of the Kenya National Party, urged the Socialists to help Africans win their independence.

He demanded that Nationalist African parties should be supported by financial and material aid, even to the extent of supplying them with type-writers, printing presses and loud-speaker vans.

Mr. H. V. Kamath of the Praja-Socialist Party of India protested against "Chinese aggression" in Asia and said that China had conquered large areas in India and was trying to change the shape of Tibet by transferring to it 5,000,000 Chinese.

He added: "It seems China is clamouring for top position in the world on the eve of the 'summit' conference."

Though he supported China's admission to United Nations he did not refer to a suggestion made earlier by the British Labour Party leader, Mr. Hugh Gaitskell, that China should participate in a Disarmament Conference.

He warned that there were signs of intensification of the 'cold war' in Asia in contrast with a decrease of tensions in Europe.

He protested against atomic experiments and denounced "excess of apartheid policy in South Africa."

Resolution On Democratic Socialism:

A resolution intended to promote democratic socialism in Asia and Africa was adopted by the Council on April 28.

The resolution provided for a series of plans expected to help the pooling of ideas and closer ties between Socialists of Asia and Africa and those in other parts of the world.

Among these measures were the organization of seminars, exchange of study groups and publications and despatch of young socialist volunteers. There would also be promotion of joint conferences.

Key speeches at the day's session were those of Mr. Asoke Mehta, Chairman of the Praja-Socialist Party of India on "Tasks of Social Democracy in Asia" and another by Nepal's Minister of Development, Mr. Tulsi Giri, on "The Economic Challenge in Asia."

Other Resolutions:

On April 29, the session passed a resolution welcoming the recent developments in South Korea.

The resolution said: "The Council welcomes the determination of Asian people to foster democratic rights and institutions as recently witnessed in South Korea and hopes that interruptions of democratic functioning will be of a temporary character."

Another clause in the resolution said that the division of Korea and Viet-Nam must not be accepted as permanent.

A suggestion by Mr. F. Yamaguchi of the Socialist Democratic Party of Japan to denounce military alliances between the Big Powers and Asian countries fell through.

The resolution on the 'summit' conference warned Socialists to be on their guard against facile optimism. Despite the improvement in the international atmosphere, there were not enough indications to prove that the Great Powers were ready to adopt more flexible policies .

It called on the South African Government to change its apartheid policy "before it is too late" and seek a non-racial solution of its problem "based on freedom, equality and the brotherhood of man."

Mr. D. Ben-Gurion's Dinner:

The day preceding the opening of the session (on April 26), the Israeli Prime Minister, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, gave a dinner in honour of the delegates.

In a speech at the dinner, Mr. Ben-Gurion, urged Socialist leaders to aid the young countries of Asia and Africa as an expression of the mutual obligation of the members of one family.

He described as of the highest priority the problem of the tremendous gap between the wealthy and highly developed countries in Europe and Asia and the poor nations now awakening to independence in Asia and Africa.

(Tel Aviv Radio, The Hindu, Madras and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2811:AOA:F]

JAPAN

A. Japanese Embassy Official Expelled From Poland: The First Secretary of the Japanese Embassy in Warsaw, Mr. Hishashi Dosho, was declared persona non grata by the Polish Foreign Ministry on April 27 for allegedly buying State secrets and was ordered to leave Poland as soon as possible.

The official Polish news agency PAP said that the Foreign Ministry had informed the Japanese Ambassador, Mr. Suburo Ohta, that Mr. Dosho's activities were contrary to recognized diplomatic practice.

It added: "Mr. Dosho established regular contacts with certain Polish citizens from whom, in exchange for payment in dollars, he obtained information and documents constituting State secrets. He was caught while collecting this material."

This was the first time that a Japanese diplomat had been expelled from Poland. Mr. Dosho had been in Warsaw since the opening of the Embassy.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 1360:JAP:A]

KOREA (North)

A. Protest To UN Command: During a Military Armistice Commission meeting held in Pan Mun Jon on May 4 at the request of North Korea, the chief North Korean delegate, Maj.-Gen. Joo Chang Joon, alleged that the UN Command in South Korea had introduced Honest Johns (rockets) in an attempt to suppress the people's uprising in South Korea.

He demanded the immediate withdrawal of all new type weapons introduced into South Korea in violation of the Armistice Agreement.

The chief UN delegate, Maj.-Gen. Marion Dawson (USA), said that further discussion of the subject was a waste of time as the UN Command had made its position clear.

The UN Command claimed that the weapons were brought in solely for defensive purposes to restore the unfavourable military situation.

The North Korean side also demanded the withdrawal of all UN troops from South Korea.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2447:KRS:B]

KOREA (South)

A. Vice-President-Elect (Mr. Lee Ki Poong) Dies In Suicide Pact: In a dramatic ending to the regime of Dr. Syngman Rhee (for background see page 3328), the Vice-President-elect, Mr. Lee Ki Poong, and his family died in a suicide pact on April 28 in a house near Dr. Rhee's residence where they had been hiding since the anti-Government demonstrations had intensified.

Mr. Lee (64) was Dr. Rhee's closest associate and chosen successor.

Mr. Lee, his wife and their youngest son were shot by the eldest son, Lieut. Lee Kon Suk (adopted son of Dr. Rhee) who then killed himself.

Mr. Lee had competed unsuccessfully for the Vice-Presidency in 1956 against the Opposition leader, Mr. Chang Myun; on March 15, 1960 he won an overwhelming victory in the elections generally believed to be fraudulent. This sparked off the demonstrations and bloodshed which led to the regime's final undoing.

As a symbol of the Government's corrupt and authoritarian policies, Mr. Lee was a special target for popular anger. He reputedly controlled the oppressive Liberal Party machine and the police.

Governors Dismissed:

On April 30, the Government announced the dismissal of all the ten provincial Governors and the Mayor of Seoul. The officials concerned had all tendered their resignations in the wake of the fall of Dr. Syngman Rhee's regime.

Besides, several senior police officers were also relieved of their posts.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

On May 3, the acting President, Mr. Hu Chung, announced that his "care-taker Government" would continue the anti-communist policy of the previous Government and would carry out "revolutionary political reform by unrevolutionary methods."

He said that the United States had offered "advice" during the recent riots as a "friend and ally."

He added that the North Korean charges of "intervention" by USA were false. "At no time did the American Government intervene in the internal affairs of South Korea in any improper manner."

He added that those responsible for the March 15 election "will be prosecuted and punished."

"Care-taker Government's" Policy Statement:

In his first policy statement before the National Assembly, Mr. Hu Chung said on May 6 that his "care-taker Government" would clean up the corruption and irregularities of the previous regime and punish those leaders who were responsible for them.

He appealed for the Assembly's co-operation towards the establishment of a sound democratic Government in Korea.

He added: "Without the co-operation of the nation the 'caretaker Government' cannot accomplish its mission."

Cabinet Personnel:

Meanwhile, Mr. Hu Chung appointed the following Ministers to his Cabinet:

Mr. Lee Pyong Do—Education;

Mr. Chun Taik Bo—Commerce and Industry;

Mr. Kim Sung Jin—Public Health and Welfare;

Mr. Yoong Ho Pyong—Finance;

Mr. Suk Sang Ok—Transport;

Mr. Chun Yal Yong—Reconstruction;

General Lee Chang Bean—Defence;

Mr. Lee Hai Ik—Agriculture and Forestries; and Mr. Oh Chung Soo—Communications.

The role of the Education Minister, it was stated, was crucial in view of the students' part in the recent crisis.

(The New York Times and The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3271:KRS:A]

B. Population Control: The Public Health and Welfare Minister, Dr. Kim Sung Jin, said on May 3 that he had instructed his Ministry to start working on legislation to introduce birth-control.

This was the first official move for birth-control in the history of the country whose population of 23,000,000 was increasing by about 500,000 annually.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 1962:MAL:A]

LEBANON

A. Parliament Dissolved: The Lebanese Parliament was dissolved on May 4 by a decree.

This decision was taken at a Cabinet meeting lasting 6-1|2 hours.

The Lebanese Chamber of Deputies, dissolved by the President, General Fuad Chehab, was elected in 1957 and was normally to have remained in office until 1961.

But the Electoral Reform Law raising the number of deputies from 66 to 99 caused the Government to use its constitutional prerogative and to propose to the Head of the State the dissolution of Parliament.

It was proposed to hold the next General Elections in June and July, 1960. The decree of dissolution fixed the Election in the First Region of the country for June 12.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 1564:LEB:A]

MALAYA

A. Constitution Amendment Bill Passed: The House of Representatives, after three days of stormy debate, adopted on April 25 by a two-thirds' majority, the Constitution Amendment Bill conferring special powers on Parliament "to deal with action prejudicial to its definition of security."

Introducing the amending Bill in the House on April 22, the Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. Abdul Razak, said that its aim was to prevent anti-social and subversive elements from impairing the welfare of the country. There had been 12 years of Emergency and the situation demanded that the Government should assume this responsibility of defence.

The main argument was over the clauses which would enable Parliament to legislate for preventive detention and provide for judges to be appointed primarily on the advice of the Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, spoke of the dangers to Malaya if Parliament was not given the special powers asked for.

He said: "I want to warn this House and the decent, law-abiding people in this country that unless this amendment goes through, I don't know what is going to happen. Terrorism, murder, arson, kidnapping—every form of crime—will hold sway. It is in the interests of this country to protect the innocent people of this country. It is the determination of my party and my determination as well to see that the Bill goes through."

The second reading of the Bill was passed by 76 votes to 24 (in a House of 104), one Opposition member and three Independents voting with the Government.

The Government then introduced a motion to limit the debate on the final stages of the Bill and when the Opposition protests had been out-voted, the Socialist Front and the People's Progressive Party members left the Chamber. Only the Pan-Malayan Islamic Party of the main Opposition parties remained to record a final vote, the count then being 75 to 13.

The definition of one type of sedition was: when "any substantial body of persons" promoted "feelings of ill-will and hostility between different races or other classes of the population", and the Government added to this the words "likely to cause violence."

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 1549:MAL:A, 1622:MAL:A]

B. Motion On "Apartheid" In South Africa: The House of Representatives adopted on April 26 a Government motion condemning the apartheid policy of South Africa and supporting the Government in "whatever positive action" it considered appropriate to take in the matter.

The motion, presented to the House by the Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, read:

"That this House, while fully recognizing the responsibility of the South African Government for its own internal policies and administration, nevertheless, consistent with the Federation Government's attitude in respect of violations of the fundamental principles of human rights, as exemplified by its stand on Tibet, expresses abhorrence at the shooting of, and the violence used against, the Africans by the South African police in pursuance of the apartheid policy and fully supports whatever positive action the Government considers appropriate in the matter."

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3311:AOA:A]

C. Proposal For Stock Exchange: The Finance Minister, Mr. Tan Siew Sin, in a statement issued on April 28, said that a move had been made to establish a fully operative stock exchange at Kuala Lumpur.

At present, the nearest stock exchange is in Singapore.

He said that with the co-operation of the Bank Negara Tanah Melayu (Central Bank) arrangements had been concluded for the Kuala Lumpur share-brokers to meet in the clearing house of the Central Bank each afternoon from Monday to Friday at 4 p.m. local time. The first meeting was held on May 9.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2436:MAL:C]

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: Canada's Aid; Decision On Disposal Of Evacuee Property; Land Reforms In "Azad Kashmir"; Tea Exports; Press Ordinance.

A. Canada's Aid Under Colombo Plan: It was announced in the Canadian House of Commons by the External Affairs Minister, Mr. Howard Green, on April 27 that Canada would be contributing to Pakistan $15,000,000 under the Colombo Plan in 1960.

He said that these funds could be used for commodities and equipment to help in Pakistan's economic development programme. The money would be spent in the following manner: $3,730,00 for industrial metals such as tin plate, aluminium, steel and sheet metals; $3,650,000 for wheat to relieve food shortages; $3,010,000 for fertilizers to help increase Pakistan's agricultural production; $60,000 for economic and engineering studies of capital projects on which Pakistan had requested Canada's help; $4,550,000 for special capital projects now being considered by the two Governments.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3249:PAK:B]

B. Disposal Of Evacuee Property —Decision Reached: A Press Note issued in Karachi on May 4 said that the Chief Settlement Commissioners had decided, with the approval of the Central Government, on the manner of disposal of evacuee property converted to some other use after August 14, 1947.

A general principle was laid down that the property would be disposed of according to the use to which it was being put on December 20, 1958.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The following broad principles were laid down by the Chief Settlement Commissioner for the guidance of Settlement authorities:

"A house, shop or small industrial concern converted into a school, college or a hostel, may be transferred to the person or authority running the school, college or hostel if the institution had been duly recognized by the Educational authorities concerned. A vacant building site in possession of the institution, if required as a playground for the institution, may also be transferred along with it. The price to be charged for the building and the vacant buildings site would be the prevailing market value."

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2897:PAK:I]

C. Land Reforms In "Azad Kashmir" Announced: Land reforms were announced in "Azad Kashmir" on May 2 with the promulgation of the Jammu and Kashmir Land Reforms Act, 1960 by the "Azad Kashmir" Government.

The Act came into force on April 30, 1960.

Under the Act, all types of jagirs were abolished without compensation.

The maximum limit of holding of land was fixed at 500 acres of cultivated and 1,000 acres of uncultivated land. The subsistence holding was fixed at 12-1|2 acres.

The Act also placed restriction on the partibility of a joint holding with an area equal or less than that of a subsistence holding. It also restricted a joint holding from partition if the partition reduced the holding of a co-sharer to below the limit of a subsistence holding.

Orchards could not be partitioned if such partition reduced a part thereof to less than one acre.

Similarly, no alienation of any portion of a holding by sale, or mortgage or gift would be permissible if such alienation reduced the size of the land to below the subsistence limit.

Announcing the reforms at a news conference, the "Azad Kashmir" President, Mr. K. H. Khurshid, said that the reforms concerned the proprietory rights of more than 20,000 occupancy tenants for the first time after more than a century of Dogra occupation.

He added that by introducing these reforms, an increase of about Rs. 2,50,000 in revenue would be effected and consequently, a boost in food production.

Referring to compensation, he said that compensation may, however, be considered only in deserving cases.

Adequate provision was made in the Act to reasonably compensate the owners whose land would be resumed and a fund created for this purpose from the proceeds of the sale of the resumed land. Compensation for land resumed would not, in any case, exceed Rs. 75 per kanal.

Contravention of the provision of the Land Reforms Act was made punishable with rigorous imprisonment extending to seven years with fine.

It was announced in Muzaffarabad on May 2 that the 'Azad Kashmir' Government had appointed a Commission to enforce the Land Reforms Act.

The Commission, known as the "Azad Jammu and Kashmir Land Commission," was brought into being with the Financial Commissioner as its ex-officio Chairman.

The Commission was empowered to nominate one of its members to be the Land Commissioner for the implementation of the Act.

The Commission may, on application of a land-owner, allow him to transfer by way of gift 50 kanals to each of his female dependents, but the total gift could not exceed 150 kanals.

Transfer of land made in any manner on or after January 24, 1959 by any person holding an area of 500 acres of cultivated land and 1,000 acres of uncultivated land, would be deemed void.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2495:PAK:B]

D. Tea Exports During 1959-60: It was stated in Karachi on May 1 that Pakistan exported 210,000 lbs of tea during March, 1960, bringing the total export for the season 1959-60 to 17,200,000 lbs.

Total tea production during the season amounted to 57,000,000 lbs.

The average price obtaining at the internal auctions held in March, 1960 was Rs. 2.14.2 per lb, which was Rs. 0.14.9 lower than the average price ruling during the February auctions, but was higher than the price prevailing at the beginning of the season.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2897:PAK:E]

E. Warsak Power House Generator (First) Commissioned: The first generator of the Warsak Power House capable of producing 40,000 kw of electric energy, was commissioned on May 5 and the electric current started flowing into the West Pakistan main grid via the Warsak-Wah transmission lines.

The production of this generator alone equalled the total output of the Malakand and Rasul power houses. This was the first time in the history of the Kabul river that it was being harnessed for power production in Pakistan.

The remaining three generators went into production, each after two weeks' interval. As a result, 160,000 kilowatts of electric power was available by June, 1960.

The Warsak Power House would enable Pakistan to save a large amount of foreign exchange incurred on fuel oil, etc.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 516:PAK:D, 3309:PAK:F]

F. Press Ordinance: The President, F-M Ayub Khan, promulgated the Press and Publications Ordinance on April 27 giving sweeping powers to the Administration over the conduct of the Press.

The Ordinance, which came into force immediately, provided for security deposits ranging from Rs. 500 to Rs. 10,000. The Government was also empowered to forfeit security deposits and, in certain cases, to prohibit printing presses from publishing books or newspapers.

It included among "objectionable material" writings "bringing into hatred or contempt the Government established by law in Pakistan" and those which "oppose recruitment to the Army or the police force or which may undermine their discipline."

It also defined "objectionable material" as matter "tending to encourage the commission of an offence of murder or violence"; reports of crimes of violence or sex reproduced in a manner which was likely to excite unhealthy curiosity or lead to imitation; "directly or indirectly condemning the creation of Pakistan or advocating the curtailment or abolition of the sovereignty of Pakistan in respect of all or any of its territories; bringing into hatred or contempt the Government established by law in Pakistan or any class or section of citizens of Pakistan; and creating feelings of enmity between the people of the two Wings of Pakistan."

In covered "indecent, obscene, scurrilous defamatory and rumour-mongering information circulated to cause public alarm, frustration or despondency."

Under the Rules included in the Ordinance, a publisher, before obtaining a declaration, would have to show that he had the financial resources required for the regular publication of a newspaper.

The editor of a paper would be required to possess "reasonable educational qualifications, or adequate training or experience in journalism."

A publisher going abroad for more than three months would have to name a person to take his place.

It debarred foreign nationals from having any proprietory interest in any newspaper in Pakistan.

It conferred powers on the Government to seize or destroy published news-sheets and to detain packages and prohibit transmission of packages by post.

Contravention of the provisions of the Ordinance would be punishable with a fine of Rs. 2,000 and simple imprisonment not exceeding six months.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2895:PAK:E]

G. Food Rationing Ended In West Pakistan: Food rationing ended all over West Pakistan at midnight on April 30.

All ration cards would henceforth be valid only for drawing sugar as no wheat would now be issued on them.

According to latest statistics, Government has about 4,00,000 tons of wheat in reserve which will be utilized for keeping the prices at a "reasonable level." Wheat stocks are expected to go up by another 1,00,000 tons by the end of May, 1960. These reserves have been built up from imported wheat which the International Co-operation Administration of USA supplied to Pakistan under the Point-4 Aid Programme.

Food Ministry sources hoped that de-rationing would not cause any embarrassing problem and everything would proceed smoothly.

The crucial period for the new wheat policy will be September and October, 1960 when the country experiences a general wheat shortage.

As an official of the Food Ministry put it: "If the Government can face these two months successfully the new food policy will get along smoothly."

He said that it was a matter of striking once. If the Government succeeded in striking successfully at the first place where shortage occurred, the trader would behave for all time to come. The moment the Government was fully equipped to meet every emergency there was no reason for any apprehension.

Rationing of wheat and wheat products was introduced during World War II, 18 years ago.

The free movement and sale of wheat and its products aim at bringing about uniformity of prices throughout the province, giving an incentive to free trade in wheat in the country.

The West Pakistan Government informed all the flour mills in the province on April 30 that they could purchase as much imported

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

wheat as required by them from Government reserves.

The step was taken to keep the mills in full production according to their milling capacity.

A Press Note issued by the Director of Civil Supplies, Karachi, on April 30 said: "Wheat trade in Karachi will now be absolutely free and traders can deal in wheat and its products without any licence.

"The Government hopes that there would be a visible demonstration of the fact that the stocks do not go underground and no artificial shortages are created. The Government will keenly watch the position and, if necessary, will not hesitate to promulgate and enforce anti-hoarding measures, to curb undue rise in prices and other anti-social activities and take over stocks of wheat."

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3107:PAK:C]

H. Pakistan And Indian Writers' Conference: A Conference called by the Pakistan-Hindi Writers' Meet and sponsored by a non-official organization—Punjab Literary League—ended in Lahore on April 30.

According to a Lahore report, the Conference might be 'the beginning of cultural solidarity between India and Pakistan'.

Messages wishing the Conference success were sent, among others, by the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, the Vice-President, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan, and the Cultural Affairs Minister, Mr. Humayun Kabir.

The Conference, which was attended by 60 writers of India and Pakistan, unanimously recommended a series of measures for adoption by the Governments of India and Pakistan to promote the common literary and cultural heritage of the sub-continent and to bring about intimate cultural understanding and intercourse between the two countries.

The writers suggested to both the Governments to allow exchange of books and periodicals on a barter basis so that foreign exchange restrictions would not come in the way of exchange of thoughts and views.

One of the resolutions passed by the Conference urged the Governments of India and Pakistan to adopt a Copyright Agreement to protect the interests of writers in both the countries.

Another resolution suggested exchange of stusents, writers and artistes delegations.

It also passed a resolution calling on writers to make greater efforts to foster better literary and cultural relations between the two countries.

Speaking on this resolution, Dr. Syed Mohammed Abdullah (Pakistan) said it was heartening to note that feelings of goodwill were replacing those of ill-will that pervaded writings in both countries following Partition and the communal riots.

He added that writers should desist from criticizing religious leaders and ridiculing religious and national traditions of the people of either country.

Another Pakistani delegate, Prof. Hameed Ahmed Khan, pleaded for the teaching of Sanskrit and Hindi in Pakistani universities. He expressed regret that Sanskrit, which was the source of many regional languages, was being neglected in Pakistan.

He complained that the rich library of Sanskrit literature in the Punjab University at Lahore was not being used.

Speaking on behalf of Indian writers, Mr. Attique Siddiqui said that Urdu was steadily regaining the ground it had lost in India immediately after Partition.

He added that conditions in India were now congenial for the development of Urdu.

On the concluding day (April 30), the Conference passed a resolution urging the Indian History Congress and the Pakistan History Society to hold a joint session.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2527:PAK:H]

SINGAPORE

A. Rubber Association Formed: A pan-Malayan organization controlling the rubber trade and embracing all races on equal terms was formed in Singapore on May 1.

The organization, called the Rubber Association of Singapore and Malaya, was representative of all sections of the Malayan rubber trade.

Its main object is to improve the rubber trade and support, or oppose, legislative or other measures concerning the industry. It will also regulate business and enforce rules. A completely new departure from the Constitution provided for a full-time executive officer, known as the Permanent Vice-chairman, following the pattern of the London Rubber Trade Association.

Eventually, the Association would take over from the Singapore Chamber of Commerce Rubber Association the responsibility of the clearing house, which last year handled f.o.b. tenders worth Malayan $460,200,000, representing 1,37,000 tons of rubber.

Besides the Singapore Chamber of Commerce Rubber Association, the other two sponsoring bodies were the Rubber Trade Association of Singapore representing the Chinese dealers and the Federation Rubber Trade Associations of the Federation of Malaya.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 884:SGP:B, 2194:MAL:C]

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. New Five-Year Oil Policy: A Press release from the UAR Embassy in New Delhi on April 21 gave details of a new five-year oil policy to ensure self-sufficiency in oil.

The policy for the next five years, it said, had been worked out in co-operation with the companies now operating in both Regions of the Republic. The policy would not only ensure self-sufficiency in all petroleum products, except gas-oil, but would also provide a surplus for export.

Under this policy, as much as 120,000 tons of benzine would be converted into chemicals. No exploration or prospecting equipment would be imported over the next five years, adequate supplies of such equipment having already been imported as part of the first Oil Development Plan. The only exception would be the import of two rigs for drilling.

It had also been planned to set up a new plant for the production of fuel oil.

The Agrud-Cairo pipe-line would be replaced by ten-inch pipes, thus enhancing its transportation capacity to about 2,000,000 tons per annum.

It had also been decided to set up a new plant at the Alexandria refinery of a total productive capacity of 1,000,000 tons per annum.

(UAR Embassy, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2677:UAR:A, 2742:UAR:C, 2766:UAR:A, 2952:UAR:B]

B. Afro-Asian Economic Conference: The second Afro-Asian Economic Conference began in Cairo on April 30.

Over 30 delegations were present. Russia, which attended the first Afro-Asian Economic Conference in Cairo in 1958 as a full member with voting rights, was not given full membership at this Conference. Instead, seven Central Asian Republics were invited as associate-members without voting rights.

The Conference Secretariat evidently made this decision in deference to objections by some member-countries, particularly the Philippines. At the first Conference, the Philippines' delegation withdrew as a protest against the inclusion of Russia in the Afro-Asian Group.

The eight-member Indian delegation was led by Mr. Madan Mohan Ruia, a former President of the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry.

Inaugurating the Conference, the UAR President, Col. G. A. Nasser, warned the delegates against "imperialistic methods of economic warfare."

He said that the Bandung Spirit was now stronger than ever and that the impact of Afro-Asian solidarity was being felt throughout the world.

Economic Co-operation Charter:

The Conference unanimously approved a Charter which aimed at increased economic co-operation among the countries of Asia and Africa.

The Charter of the Afro-Asian Chambers of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture also called for better understanding and "cordial relations" among the peoples of Africa and Asia and aimed at fostering collaboration among such national Chambers and similar institutions.

It provided that membership should be open to countries which took part in the 1955 Bandung Conference as well as any other independent sovereign country with the seat of its Central Government situated in Africa or Asia.

[Foreign observers noted that this clause excluded the Soviet Union from the organization. But, the Soviet Union attended the Conference and apparently skirted the obstacle by sending delegates from eight Asian Soviet Socialist Republics, which were entitled to membership.]

The Charter also established that the organization would consist of a Conference Council and Centre which would be located in Cairo for a period of four years. The organization's official language would be English.

On May 3, the Chinese delegation walked out in protest against the election of the leader of the Indonesian delegation as senior Vice-Chairman of the proposed Afro-Asian Economic Council.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Chinese delegation said that they had no objection to Indonesia as such being represented, but they alleged that the leader of the Indonesian delegation, Mr. Sheikh Sobhan, followed an "obstructionist" policy.

The Pakistan delegation proposed the name of Indonesia for senior Vice-Chairmanship though it had earlier been agreed to in the lobbies that India's name be proposed. China and Sudan, in turn, proposed India's name, but Mr. Madan Mohan Rula, leader of the Indian delegation, said that he was withdrawing in view of the contest for the post and proposed Sudan's name.

The ballot resulted in a tie of 13 votes each for both Indonesia and Sudan, but the Egyptian Chairman of the Conference refused to exercise his casting vote and ordered a second ballot in which Indonesia secured 13 votes and the Sudan 12 as one delegate returned a blank ballot paper. The Chinese delegation then staged a walk-out.

Angry exchanges took place between the Chinese and UAR delegations when China objected to the proposal to create an Afro-Asian Investment Fund as an "imperialist trap." UAR which, with other members, drew up the proposal, vehemently replied to the Chinese charges.

Russia was shut out completely from the membership of the Council when the Steering Committee turned down the application of nine Asian Republics of the Soviet Union to become affiliated members on the ground that they were not independent States. These Republics had originally been invited by the Conference Secretariat as affiliated members. A Chinese delegate made a spirited speech for the inclusion of Russia but with no success.

India, which is a full member of the Conference, was voted a member of the Council.

The Conference dispersed on May 3 after launching a 38-nation organization for Afro-Asian Economic Co-operation to study plans for closer team work in the two continents.

The four-day session adopted resolutions on the promotion of mutual aid and trade in the "Bandung spirit" and the establishment of an Afro-Asian Investment Agency to secure economic independence for the countries in the area.

Mr. Mohammed Rushdy (United Arab Republic) became the President of the new organization with unanimous approval.

(The Times of India, Bombay and The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 2420:UAR:A]

C. Two Ministers Resign: It was announced in Cairo on May 2 that President G. A. Nasser had accepted the resignations of Mr. Amin Nafuri, UAR Minister of Communications, and of Mr. Ahmed Abdel Kerim, Minister for Municipal Affairs.

The reasons for the resignations were not immediately known.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 3132:UAR:B]

VIET-NAM (RVN)

A. Appeal For Reforms: A group calling itself the Committee for Progress and Liberty asked President Ngo Dinh Diem to receive a petition which condemned many aspects of the administration, economic and defence policy.

A spokesman for the Committee, Mr. Tran Van Van, said that its members were protesting against "undemocratic" elections in 1959, continuing arrests which have "filled the gaols to overflowing," and the stifling of the Press and public opinion.

The petitioners wanted reform in the administrative machine, which they said was paralysed by nepotism and corruption and was at the mercy of decisions handed down by "the group at the top."

The Committee complained that the army, which should be the Republic's shield against communism, was weak and demoralized by the one-party system. Even the economy was distorted by politics.

Among the 18 people who signed the petition, nine were former Ministers. Some of the signatories claimed to be leaders of Roman Catholic opinion. Others represented the Cao Dai and Hoa Hao religious sects, which have between 500,000 and 800,000 followers.

According to observers, the Committee represented a disgruntled section of the professional and land-owning classes. The members emphasized that their aims were the same as the President's, namely, to preserve Viet-Nam from communism and to create a prosperous and democratic society. They objected not to the principles of the regime but to its methods.

Mr. Tran Van Van denied that the Committee had been influenced by developments in South Korea, but added: "If the Government does not quickly alter its policies there will be an explosion in Viet-Nam."

(The Times of Viet-Nam, Saigon)

[Prev. ref. 2127:RVN:A]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Law Of The Seas Conference; NATO Ministerial Council Meeting; Gen. de Gaulle's Visit To USA.

A. International (Second) Conference On The Law Of The Seas: The International Conference on the Law of the Seas opened in Geneva on March 17.

Representatives of 88 countries took part in the Conference.

The only item on the agenda was the interrelated problem of the width of the territorial sea and the breadth of fishery limits to be recognized internationally.

Prince Wan Waithayakon (Thailand) was elected President of the Conference.

In his speech, Prince Wan said: "Although we are faced with a most difficult task, it is my firm conviction that our problems are not insuperable.

"Let us summon all our resources of wisdom, skill, patience and conciliation to ensure that within the time we have, we reach agreement on a solution which will accord with the dictates of justice and reason and meet the practical needs of the situation."

The Soviet delegate, Mr. Grigory Tunkin, raised the question of the participation of China, East Germany, North Viet-Nam, North Korea and Mongolia in the Conference.

He said that the absence of delegates from these countries was "a flagrant and gross violation of international law" and was "against the most elementary common sense." "An absurd situation has been created which will affect the universal character of the norms which are to be worked out by the Conference."

The US delegate, Mr. Arthur Dean, said that Mr. Tunkin's speech was not in order since participation in the Conference had been decided on by a vote at the UN General Assembly.

The West German representative, Mr. Peter Pfeiffer, protested against Mr. Tunkin's reference to East Germany and said that it was not a sovereign State.

Delegates from South Viet-Nam and Formosa also protested against Mr. Tunkin's speech.

At the opening session, Mr. Constantin Stavropoulos, UN Legal Adviser, reported that Britain had, in the past few days, ratified the Convention on the High Seas and on the conservation of their living resources, and had notified the UN Secretary-General of her intention to ratify the Convention on the Continental Shelf as soon as the necessary domestic legislation had been enacted.

Mr. John Hare, British Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries, before leaving London for Geneva had said on March 16 that Britain would abide by a majority decision of the Conference.

He had added: "Of course, I cannot say if Iceland will agree to a majority decision. If a decision is reached in favour of Iceland, Britain will go along with it."

Asked if a decision taken by the Conference would become international law, he said: "It would most certainly influence the International Court of Justice."

Asked about the Soviet plan that each State should be free to determine its own territorial waters within the limits of three to 12 miles, he said: "That was a Mexican idea. I do not think it would work. There would be maritime chaos if every country were to decide her own fishing limits."

Three Proposals:

The Times, London, carried the following despatch from Geneva on March 20:

"So far as can be foreseen, the Conference will be required to adopt one of three or four competing proposals. The absence of agreement, most delegations recognize, will mean chaos over the breadth of territorial waters and the fishing rights of coastal States and others.

"The proposals are summarized as follows:

"(1) Russia, from Tsarist times, has favoured a territorial belt of 12 miles. If it were generally adopted it would turn many narrow waterways (at present opened to unhindered international traffic) into restricted, sovereign territorial sea. The Straits of Dover might thus become the sovereign domain of Britain and France; the Gulf of Aqaba is another case in point. It is possible that the exponents of the 12-mile belt have not understood to where it might lead them. Mexico has proposed a variation under which States would have the option to claim from three miles or more up to 12 miles.

"(2) A United States' suggestion for a 'six-plus-six' belt—six miles of territorial sea and an additional six miles in which the coastal State has fishing rights—with a safeguard that those countries which have traditionally and historically fished in these waters should be allowed to continue to do so. The United States has long fished in Canadian waters.

"(3) A Canadian plan for six miles of territorial waters plus six miles of sovereign fishing rights. This would recognize the rights of countries which have long fished in these waters."

Objects Of Conference:

Iceland, currently involved in a dispute with Britain over the extension of her territorial waters to

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

12 miles, was supported by Canada and some others in suggesting that the six miles fishing zone should be restricted to the ships of the coastal States.

The Conference had been called to deal with two major questions: (1) the breadth of the territorial sea; and (2) the extent of the fishery limits that may be reserved by a coastal State for its exclusive use.

These were the only two issues remaining over from the first Law of the Seas Conference of 1958, which reached agreement on four major Conventions; (1) the law of territorial sea and contiguous zones; (2) the law of the high seas; (3) the continental shelf; and (4) Fisheries Convention.

New Voting Procedure:

On March 18, the Conference adopted a new procedure for voting, which was tabled by the Mexican delegation.

Under the new procedure, any proposal would require a two-thirds' majority to be re-introduced into Committee discussions. Previously, a simple majority was enough.

The Mexical proposal was adopted against opposition from Britain and America.

British sources admitted that the new voting system would make it difficult for Britain to re-introduce her plan for a six-mile territorial sea if it once got voted down in Committee.

The Mexican proposal was approved by 41 votes to 30.

Russian Plan:

On March 22, Mr. Grigory Tunkin (USSR) put forward the Russian plan on coastal waters. The text of the plan, which he read out, was as follows:

"Every State is entitled to fix the breadth of its territorial sea up to a limit of 12 nautical miles.

"If the breadth of its territorial sea is less than this limit, a State may establish a fishing zone contiguous to its territorial sea provided, however, that the total breadth of the territorial sea and the fishing zone shall not exceed 12 nautical miles.

"In this zone, a State shall have the same rights in fishing and exploitation of the living resources of the sea as it has in its territorial sea."

Russia believed, he said, that this proposal reflected best of all the present practice of the States on the breadth of the territorial sea.

The Soviet proposal was based on the presumption that a State may extend its sovereignty over a sea belt of 12 nautical miles. "This is the right of a State, but not a commitment. It may extend its sovereignty over a narrower belt as well and, in this case, it maintains the right to set up a fishing zone in the remaining sea belt extending up to 12 miles."

Mr. Tunkin said that he was putting forward the proposal in the atmosphere of a notably improved international situation. "The clouds of the 'cold war' are beginning to disperse and the nations cherish hopes that the sky of peaceful co-existence will grow absolutely cloudless."

He reminded the Conference that at the first Law of the Seas Conference, military and strategic considerations, which had nothing to do with the interests of preservation of peace and development of international co-operation, underlay the objections to fixing a 12-mile limit to the territorial sea.

He emphasized that there should be general recognition of the right of "innocent passage" for merchantships through the territorial sea and that specific agreements governing international sea-lanes and air-routes would in no way be affected.

US Proposal:

On March 24, the United States, with full British support, proposed that the nations of the world adopt a territorial sea of six miles, with an additional six-mile fishing zone.

In this fishing zone, any State whose vessels had fished there for the past five years may continue to fish within the zone, provided that their catch does not exceed in any one year the average annual level over the preceding five years.

The proposal called for a draft Convention of five Articles, with an annexure governing the procedure to be followed in case of disputes between a coastal State and States whose vessels fish in the outer six miles.

The proposal was promised full support by Britain's Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries, Mr. John Hare, despite what he called "the very considerable sacrifice" involved.

In a statement at the end of the session, Mr. Hare said: "If agreement at this Conference is to be reached, sacrifices will have to be made by each and all.

"We recognize only the three-mile limit, but at the last Conference, in the hope of obtaining an international solution, we supported a proposal advocating a six-mile territorial sea with a contiguous zone of another six miles for fishing, subject only to fishing States being entitled to continue to fish in waters where for years they have gained their livelihood.

"This new proposal by the United States involves an even further concession. Established fishing between six and 12 miles is to be limited both on the quantity of the catch and the types of fish.

"There can be no doubt about the serious effect this proposal will have on the activities of our distant and middle water fishing fleets. Extension of the territorial sea from six to 12 miles will inhibit the freedom of merchant shipping on the high seas, apart from extinguishing all foreign fishing rights inside six miles.

"These sacrifices are made in the hope that others will also modify their attitude in a desire to reach agreement."

Other Views:

The leader of the Philippines delegation, Mr. Arturo Tolentino, said on March 25 that his country claimed as territorial sea all the waters around between and connecting the 7,000 islands of the Philippines archipelago.

The Spanish delegate said he supported a six-mile territorial limit which had been part of Spain's law since 1775.

During the discussion on March 29, the Italian delegate favoured a six-mile limit. He added, however, that coastal States should be given preferential rights in the fishing zone adjoining territorial waters on condition that other countries who had been fishing there traditionally were allowed to continue without hindrance.

The delegates of Burma, Venezuela and Columbia favoured a 12-mile territorial water-limit.

The Columbian delegates said that he would not, however, hinder any agreement on a six-mile territorial sea and another six-mile limit for fishing purposes.

The Greek delegate said it would be tempting for his country to agree to a 12-mile limit because that would give her undisputed control of the Aegean Sea, but in the interests of general order, Greece would support the six-mile limit.

The Peruvian delegate said that his country supported the principle that each State had the right to fix its own territorial sea within reasonable limits.

The Czechoslovak delegate said that his country supported the Soviet proposal that each State should be free to fix its own territorial waters limit up to a maximum of 12 miles.

India's View:

In the debate on March 31, the Indian delegate, Mr. A. K. Sen, supported the Canadian proposal for a 12-mile exclusive fishing zone for a coastal State.

He said that although India had only a six-mile territorial sea, he found it difficult to ignore the genuineness and the depth of feeling of those countries which, for their own security, asked for an exclusive territorial sea of up to 12 miles.

He said that the American proposal would lead to endless quarrels and insoluble disputes. It would be difficult for the International Court of Justice to decide these matters.

Iceland's View:

The Foreign Minister of Iceland, Mr. H. G. Andersen, said that the Canadian proposal was "thoroughly realistic and practical."

Referring to his country's fishing dispute with Britain, he said that the British Government had prevented the enforcement of Iceland's 12-mile fishing limit by sending naval vessels inside the limit to protect British trawlers fishing in the area.

Pakistan's View:

During discussions on April 1, the Pakistani delegate, Mr. M. O. A. Baig, analysed various proposals so far submitted to the Conference and sought to find a solution which would secure the maximum support.

He referred to the US and Canadian proposals of 'six-plus-six' formula which would reserve six miles of water for territorial sea and another contiguous six miles for fishing rights limit and said that there was a major point of difference between the two proposals. Whereas the Canadian proposal would allow exclusive fishing rights to the coastal States inside the six-mile contiguous fishing zone, the US proposal permitted the continuance of historical fishing rights in the fishing zone on a perpetual basis.

He suggested that such historical fishing rights mentioned by the Americans be limited to a few years only.

Explaining his idea of the time-limit, he said that during this transitional period the large maritime fishing States could devote their attention to locating new fishing grounds on the high seas and gradually moving out of their existing fishing grounds within the outer six miles fishing belt.

US-Canadian Compromise Proposal:

It was learnt on April 7 that Canada and America had reached full agreement on a compromise between their differing plans on territorial and fishing zone limits, and that Britain had supported the compromise.

The compromise called for a six-mile territorial sea and an additional six-mile fishing zone in which distant-water fishing States that had fished there for at least five years

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

would be allowed to continue to fish there for a transitional period of 10 years.

The American and Canadian delegations submitted their joint compromise proposal to the Conference on April 8.

The Argentine delegate, Mr. Luis de Vablo Pardo, told the Conference on April 11 that the five-year period to establish distant fishing rights proposed by the United States and Canada was unacceptable to Argentina.

The 30-year period which Argentina was proposing, he said, was really too short to assess the matter legally, but, Argentina considered it satisfactory as a compromise solution.

He said that there should be express recognition of a coastal State's preferential fishing rights in the high sea areas adjoining the exclusive fishing zone.

The Philippines delegate, Mr. A. Tolentino, said that his country backed the 18-nation Asian-African proposal (see below) because it alone excepted "historic waters" from territorial or fishing limits.

This exception was originally proposed by the Philippine delegation in the form of an amendment to the Soviet, Canadian, American and Mexican resolutions.

On April 11, the British delegate announced his country's support for the joint American-Canadian compromise proposal.

Asian-African Group's Proposal:

The 16-nation Asian-African group of the Conference expressed the view that the US-Canadian compromise plan was unacceptable and then presented an alternative proposal.

This group, joined by Mexico and Venezuela, put forward a new, slightly revised, proposal on April 11 which would give each nation the right to fix her own territorial waters up to a maximum of 12 miles.

This provision was already included in the original 16-nation Asian-African proposal on territorial waters and fishing zones.

The proposal also envisaged that when a State's territorial limits were under 12 miles, it should be given the right to set up a contiguous reserved zone of up to a maximum of 12 miles, measured from the base-line used in establishing territorial limits.

The new text differed from the original Asian-African group's proposal by the addition of an Article stipulating that every State be bound to enact suitable laws and rules to prevent its nationals from fishing in the territorial waters and fishing zones of other States without due permission.

Iceland's delegate, Mr. H. G. Andersen, asked the Conference on April 12 to think of his country's special problem in considering his proposal providing for priority fishing rights for those nations whose subsistence or economic development depended first and foremost on their coastal fishing.

The Conference met in Committee on April 13 and rejected the 18-nation (Asian-African group plus Mexico and Venezuela) proposal on the territorial sea limit by 36 votes in favour, 39 against and 13 abstentions.

The Conference voted the Iceland proposal with 31 in favour, 11 against and 46 abstentions.

The Guatemalan amendment to the joint US-Canadian proposal was turned down by 3 in favour, 44 against and 41 abstentions.

An Argentine amendment to the same proposal was rejected by 27 votes in favour, 33 against and 28 abstentions.

The joint US-Canadian proposal received 43 votes in favour, 33 against and 12 abstentions.

Those voting in favour of the joint US-Canada proposal included Pakistan and Ceylon. India was among those who abstained.

Burma was among those voting in favour of the Icelandic proposal.

India, Pakistan and Ceylon were among the 46 abstainers on the Icelandic proposal.

In the vote on the 18-nation proposal, which calls for a 12-mile territorial sea, those voting in favour included 16 Asian-African sponsors, plus Mexico and Venezuela, the nine communist countries, plus Yugoslavia, Burma, India and Malaya.

As the voting was in Committee stages, it needed only a simple majority for any proposal to go on the plenary Conference where a two-thirds' vote is necessary for adoption.

The Soviet Union informed the Conference on April 13 that she was withdrawing her proposal concerning the breadth of the territorial sea and adjacent fishing rights.

The Soviet delegate, Mr. G. Tunkin said that he would support the 18-nation (Asian-African group) proposal which took into consideration the main features of the Soviet proposal. Both proposals recommended that each State had the right to set its territorial sea up to 12 miles. If it was set a lesser distance, then the area from the end of the territorial limit up to 12 miles should constitute an exclusive fishing zone.

US-Canadian "Tactical" Proposal:

The United States and Canada put forward a second proposal on the breadth of the territorial sea and adjacent fishing rights on April 22.

The proposal was exactly the same as the first joint proposal, with the exception that it had an additional paragraph dealing with bilateral and multilateral arrangements.

The paragraph said: "The provisions of the present Convention shall not affect the Convention or other international agreements already in force, as between States parties to them, or preclude the conclusion of bilateral or multilateral agreements for the purpose of regulating matters of fishing."

[Conference sources said that the new proposal was mainly a tactical move to ensure that the Canadian-American plan would be voted on last at the plenary session on April 26. Had the Canadian and United States delegations not put in this proposal the first one would have been voted on before the rival 18-Power plan calling for the fixing of a 12-mile fishing zone. A vote right at the end of the plenary session may ensure a bigger switch in favour of the American-Canadian proposal.]

Three days later, on April 25, the Indian delegate, Mr. A. K. Sen, told the Conference that he sincerely regretted that it had not been possible for his Government to support the American-Canadian plan.

He said that unfortunately it had not been found possible by great maritime Powers to accept a proposal prohibiting foreign warships from entering the outer six-mile area.

He, however, made it clear that his delegation had not formally put any such proposal at the Conference, because it did not want to inject controversy and to complicate the work of the delegates.

He said he was sorry to observe that no reconciliation had been found between the views of the advocates of the 12-mile territorial sea-limit and the supporters of the Canadian-US proposal.

He made the point that the newly independent countries were fearful of foreign warships coming near their coasts and staying there. What they wanted was the right to prevent these ships from doing so. If that right had been conceded, then it would have been possible to accept the Canadian-US proposal.

[The Canadian-US proposal does not prohibit foreign warships from entering the outer six-mile fishing zone, which would be contiguous to the six-mile territorial limit.]

He declared that it was not by a mechanical majority that the rule of international law should be established, but by substantial consent from all parts of the earth.

On April 26, the Conference rejected an Icelandic proposal on preferential fishing rights at its final session. Voting was 25 in favour, 37 against and 26 abstentions.

It also rejected the joint Canadian-US compromise plan fixing the territorial limit at six miles plus a six-mile fishing zone in which nations that have fished there could continue to do so for ten years.

Voting on this resolution was 54 in favour, 28 against, 5 abstentions with one absentee—Lebanon. Fifty-five votes were needed to secure approval for it. So the resolution failed for lack of one vote only.

The fifty-four nations which backed the unsuccessful US-Canadian proposal were reported to be informally discussing the idea of making a Treaty among themselves.

Britain's Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries, Mr. John Hare, told newsmen at London airport on return from Geneva that if India had followed the lead of the rest of the Commonwealth, the result would have been different. He described the outcome of the Conference as "very disappointing".

It was stated that India was among the nations which voted against the US-Canadian plan.

The Conference officially ended on April 26 without having solved the key issues of the extent of national territorial waters and of fishing zones.

The Chairman of the Conference, Prince Wan Waithayakon (Thailand), said he regretted that these vital problems had not yet been solved.

He said that the failure was not due to the ill-will of participating countries but to the complexity of the questions which required a delicate adaptation between national economic needs and international requirements based on the freedom of the high seas.

He hoped that efforts would be made at the proper time to reach an agreement.

Mr. Nehru's Statement:

The question of foreign warships entering the territorial waters of foreign countries was referred to in the Rajya Sabha (Council of States) in

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

New Delhi on April 26 by the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru.

He said that India favoured the adoption of the principle that warships, before entering the coastal waters of any country, should take the permission of that country.

Such permission should be necessary at all times, he said, not only as a matter of courtesy, but because "the average small country has still memories of foreign warships entering the territorial waters of another country and not behaving in a very friendly way in the past." So, the smaller countries did not like the idea of this freedom of foreign warships going where they liked without authority.

Asked by a member whether permission for warships to enter the territorial waters of a particular country would be necessary in peace-time also, he said: "Normally, according to our view, permission for warships to enter the coastal waters should always be necessary."

Mr. A. K. Sen Justifies India's Stand:

At a news conference in New Delhi on May 4, the Indian delegate, Mr. A. K. Sen, justified India's stand in insisting on establishing an International Convention of allowing a 12-mile territorial sea limit for coastal countries.

He said that India did not vote for the US-Canadian resolution as a number of smaller countries, including the Arab and African countries, had expressed their fears about the proposal for a six-mile territorial sea limit for each coastal country.

"Many countries," he said, "expressed their apprehensions to us."

He explained that these countries were apprehensive about ships of Big Powers coming to their coasts and staying in the waters indefinitely. India shared this view and felt that the limit of territorial waters should extend to at least 12 miles instead of six.

He added that a better atmosphere prevailed at the Conference in the sense that there was a genuine desire on the part of many countries to come to some understanding. Although it failed to evolve an agreed Convention about territorial waters, it helped in promoting mutual understanding and appreciation of the respective view-points of the participating countries.

It was India's desire, he said, that some agreement should be reached among nations on this question as early as possible.

He explained that if there had been agreement at the Conference on the suggestion that foreign ships should not only notify their proposed entry but also obtain the specific authorization of the coastal State before making the entry, the US-Canadian resolution, which was defeated in the Committee stage, would have had greater support.

He pointed out that there was a feeling at the Conference that the big maritime Powers might be willing to conform to the requirements of "notification but not authorization." It was under those circumstances that India and other countries voted against the resolution.

Asked whether any of the countries which voted against the resolution was likely to issue a proclamation that the territorial waters limit would be 12 miles, he said that the possibility of such unilateral declaration could not be ruled out. So far as India was concerned, he could not say anything on the subject at present.

(The Times, London, UK High Commission, New Delhi, The Statesman, Calcutta and Tass)

[Prev. ref. 2061:AOA:A]

B. NATO Ministerial Council Meeting: A meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) 15-nation Ministerial Council began in Istanbul on May 2.

The inaugural session was entirely devoted to the question of disarmament.

Cries of "freedom" rang from a crowd outside the new Town Hall in Istanbul as the Foreign Ministers of the Council started their three-day conference to debate Western policy for the 'summit' conference.

Steel-helmeted soldiers pushed back and dispersed a crowd of about 2,000 which gathered on the boulevard near the ancient Byzantine aqueduct opposite the Town Hall.

Several men—one shouting "Murder Menderes"—were detained and taken away in army jeeps, while a spotter plane flew low overhead.

Opening the session, the Norwegian Foreign Minister, Mr. Halvard Lange, recalled many disappointments experienced by the Western Powers in past relations with the Soviet Union and said that there must not be too much optimism about the 'summit' conference.

But, he added, a first step would be taken towards disarmament under effective control.

The Turkish Foreign Minister, Mr. Fatin Zorlu, told the Council that "Turkey, as a whole, is very sorry" that events had prevented the Turkish Prime Minister, Mr. Adnan Menderes, from coming to welcome the delegates as had been planned.

[At the time the Council met, there were demonstrations in the main cities of Turkey against the Government which prevented Mr. Menderes to leave Ankara.]

Mr. Zorlu said: "I am sure that nobody will fail to see that the abuse of a handful of youths by small groups for their selfish political aims is in no way affecting the unity of the Turkish nation which is solidly bound to the principles of the NATO alliance."

A message from President D. D. Eisenhower was read at the meeting.

Mr. Eisenhower's message said: "We can negotiate sucessfully only if we are resolute and united and if that resolution and unity are manifest to the Soviets."

The British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, presented a nine-point plan to the Council for tackling disarmament with the Russians after the 'summit' conference.

He urged that the 'summit' conference should not just agree on general principles but should give concrete directives to the Geneva Conference which recessed on April 29 after six fruitless weeks of discussion.

Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, who was reporting to NATO on behalf of the five Western nations which had been negotiating with the Russians and four other East European countries in Geneva on disarmament, suggested that the 'summit' conference should give directives to the Geneva Disarmament Conference on the following nine points:

(1) On preserving the use of outer space for peaceful purposes; (2) On prior notification of launching missiles; (3) On a cut-off in the manufacture of nuclear weapons; (4) On the reconversion of military missile material into peaceful purposes; (5) On controlling the means of delivery of nuclear weapons; (6) On imposing man-power ceiling on the size of national forces; (7) On depositing conventional weapons in internationally supervised depots: (8) On precautions against surprise attack; and (9) On establishing an international disarmament organization to keep the peace in the world.

[Diplomatic observers said that all these nine points had been subjects of exhaustive exchanges between East and West at the Disarmament Conference in Geneva, which failed to agree even on how to get down to detailed negotiations. They added that the nine points suggested by Mr. Selwyn Lloyd showed the importance which the West attached to balanced disarmament—both conventional and nuclear—under effective international control.]

On May 3, the Council backed the policy of the Western leaders of seeking a detente with Russia at the 'summit' conference provided this detente applied to all parts of the world.

At the same time, they found themselves unable to agree whether the West should bring up aid to under-developed countries and non-interference in others' affairs with Mr. Khruschev at the 'summit'.

It was left to the Western Heads of Governments to decide whether to do so at the 'summit' conference itself depending on the trend of their discussions with the Soviet Prime Minister.

Mr. Selwyn Lloyd (Britain) said that the Russians could not have a "selected detente" applying to some areas of the world while continuing with propaganda campaigns against certain countries, for example, Iran and West Germany.

He stressed that an international detente was indivisible and the West could benefit from such a detente.

M. Couve de Murville (France) who wound up the discussion on East-West relations, said that the NATO Alliance favoured a detente with the Soviet Union, but if the Russians continued to insist on settling questions such as Berlin in their own way there would be no detente.

The 'summit' conference, he said, was only the beginning of a long and arduous road and solutions would not come rapidly. NATO was in complete agreement on 'summit' conference discussions on cultural relations and information problems between the East and the West. But, on economic problems, including trade, non-interference in other countries' affairs and aid to under-developed areas, the Western leaders would have to wait and see how the 'summit' conference was going before deciding if and when to handle these questions.

M Paul Henri Spaak (Belgium) said that the Russians must be pressed to expand intellectual intercourse between the two blocs.

The idea of discussing the issue of aid to the under-developed countries with the Russians, he thought, was a French suggestion but, according to Conference sources, it had run into strong opposition from some other NATO members.

Communique:

In a communique issued on May 3, the NATO Council said that it was entirely in agreement with the "common position" of the United States, Britain and France for the 'summit' conference with the Soviet Union.

The communique said: "The Council welcomes the prospect of negotiations with the Soviet Union and hopes that we are on the road to improved international relations.

"All NATO members supported the Western disarmament proposals at Geneva.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"They regret the unwillingness which the Soviet side has so far shown to discuss specific practical measures of disarmament.

"The Council re-affirms that a solution of the German problem can only be found in re-unification on the basis of self-determination.

"It recalls its declaration of December 16, 1958, and once again expresses its determination to protect the freedom of the people of West Berlin."

(The Times, London and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3134:AOA:B]

C. President de Gaulle's Visit To USA: Following talks between President D. D. Eisenhower and President Charles de Gaulle of France in Washington late in April, 1960 on how they should proceed at the 'summit' conference in Paris in May, 1960, the following Joint Statement was issued on April 24:

"We have had useful and pleasant talks. We will meet tomorrow morning with our Ministers.

"We have defined our own thoughts, clarified our own thinking as to how we shall proceed at the 'summit' meeting.

"We are in agreement on that.

"We will continue these talks tomorrow when we meet with our Ministers to inform them of our private conversations and to decide on the way of presenting our common ideas at the 'summit' meeting."

In an address to a joint session of the US Congress on April 25, President de Gaulle said that the destruction of nuclear weapons under international control offered the only hope "for the future of our species".

He said that unless Britain, USA and USSR renounced atomic weapons, the "French Republic will obviously be obliged to equip itself with such armaments."

He continued: "In the state of increasing uncertainty into which fear throws the peoples of the world, the risk grows that one day events will escape from the control of those who obey reason and that the worst catastrophes will be unleashed by fanatics, lunatics or men with ambition."

He added that the great need now was for Russia and the Western Powers to achieve a lessening of tensions between nations, "a detente, as that in turn would lead to the solution of specific problems."

He repeated his proposal for a joint programme of economic aid by the Great Powers for the benefit of the "unfavoured masses of Asia and the awakening population of Africa." Such aid was "both the greatest human duty and most fruitful policy."

He said: "How much less are the chances of war if the great modern States should choose as a common aim such an undertaking.

"To destroy these weapons by common consent, to enter the commitment not to manufacture any others, to open up all territories to reciprocal supervision, there is no other hope for the future of our species.

"But we have reached the last moment when an agreement appears possible. Failing the renunciation of atomic armaments by those States who are provided with them, the French Republic obviously will be obliged to equip itself with such armaments."

He referred only briefly to Germany and did not mention Berlin by name. But, he said that if a peaceful climate were created, objective solutions would gradually come into view.

(The New York Times and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3133:AOA:A]

D. South African Government Given Powers To Outlaw African Nationalist Organizations: The South African Government was given powers by Parliament on April 5 to outlaw certain African nationalist organizations when the Senate approved the Unlawful Organizations Bill.

The Bill had already been passed by the House of Assembly.

The only dissenting votes were those of the two White representatives of African interests in the Senate.

The Bill did not automatically ban such organizations as the African National Congress and the Pan-Africanist Congress, but empowered the Governor-General, Mr. Charles Swart, to outlaw certain organizations without specifying reasons.

Other provisions of the Bill included the power to ban any other organization which, in the opinion of the Governor-General, had been established to carry on the functions of the Pan-Africanist Congress or the African National Congress.

Once an organization had been banned, no person would be allowed to continue as office-bearer or as a member of such an organization or to contribute or solicit funds for it.

The Minister of Justice could impose upon office-bearers of such organizations restrictions similar to those provided for under the Suppression of Communism Act.

During the debate on the Bill in the Senate, the Minister of Justice, Mr. Francois Erasmus, said that the Government would not for a moment hesitate to use all available power to break the "unprecedented reign of terror" in the major cities and wipe intimidators off the streets.

A member of the Progressive Party, Mrs. Helen Suzman, said she hoped that the Government realized that there were legitimate grievances of Africans that had to be set right.

It was reported that in anticipation of the passage of the Bill, several leaders and officials of the African National Congress and the Pan-Africanist Congress had gone underground.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 311:AOA:A]

E. Space Around The Earth—Discoveries By "Pioneer V": American scientists revealed on May 2 that the US Pioneer V Sun satellite had given man a new and different view of the space around the Earth.

Already more than 6,500,000 miles away from Earth on perhaps the most extraordinary journey of exploration ever undertaken, the instrument-packed sphere has been transmitting startling information on cosmic rays, magnetic fields, and a huge cloud of electrified gas.

At an altitude of about 40,000 miles, Pioneer V confirmed the existence of a current of electrons circulating around the Earth in a westerly direction. The current was first detected by Explorer VI.

Between that altitude and another 20,000 miles up, Pioneer V detected an intense region of disturbed magnetic fields. This confirmed the earlier discovery by Pioneer I. The region marks the boundary of the magnetic fields of the Earth and that in interplanetary space. It was found to be twice as high as previously supposed.

When the vehicle, which is circling the Sun between Venus and Earth, reached a distance of 3,100,000 miles from the Earth, a violent explosion took place on the surface of the Sun.

A stream of protons and electrons flew out and registered on the vehicle's counters before it reached the vicinity of the Earth. The protons were detected moments later by Explorer VII and over the far northern regions of the Earth by instrumented balloons. The protons were confined to the high northern atmosphere because the Earth's magnetic field is weakest there.

Following the protons and electrons came an enormous blob of electrified gases shot out during the solar flare. The cloud enveloped Pioneer V.

During this time, instruments detected a sharp drop of about 25 per cent in the number of cosmic ray particles coming from outside the solar system. Apparently, the magnetic properties of the gas cloud had deflected the missing particles. This discovery cleared up the mystery of lower cosmic ray counts near the Earth during magnetic storms.

The cloud passed Pioneer V and finally collided with the Earth's magnetic field, producing the well-known magnetic storms which interfere with radio broadcasts, disturb undersea cable transmissions and cause "Northern Lights".

The outer Van Allen radiation belt, held in place by the magnetic field, underwent violent changes as detected by Explorer VII. The intensity of the belts trapped particles before the magnetic clash was about 200 counts per second. Suddenly, the count dropped to 10 per second, indicating that most of the trapped radiation was precipitously dumped out of the northern and southern horns of the belt. This was confirmed by widespread observations of auroral lights both north and south. The lights are believed to be caused by interactions between the dumped particles and atoms in the high atmosphere.

The outer zone rapidly recovered, and after a week Explorer VII was recording 10,000 counts per second. The count gradually declined to the normal 200.

These findings, together with measurements of the energies of particles coming from the Sun and in the outer Van Allen belt, shed new light on how the belt is replenished after dumping its particles. The belt is not refilled by high-energy particles, as had been supposed. The information gathered suggests that low energy particles flood into the belt from the gas cloud and in some way are given greater energy by the Earth's magnetic field.

(USIS, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3273:AOA:A]

F. Soviet Fliers' World Records Ratified: It was revealed in Moscow on April 26 that the International Aeronautical Federation (FAI) had ratified as world records the results achieved by the Soviet test pilots, Mr. Vladimir Kokkinaki and Mr. I. Sukhomlin, flying an Il-18 aircraft.

Carrying a pay-load of ten tons and flying along a closed circuit of 5,000 kilometres, the aircraft averaged an hourly speed of 693.547 kilometres. At the same time, records were established with pay-loads of five tons and two tons, one ton and without any pay-load.

Later, Mr. I. Sukhomlin, another Soviet test pilot, broke these records, attaining in a TU-114 aircraft flying along the same route an average speed of 877.212 kilometres an hour with a pay-load of 25 tons.

These results (including the record flights with a pay-load of 20, 15, 10, five and two tons, one ton and without any pay-load) were National records prior to their ratification by FAI as world records.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 2718:AOA:F]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10, Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95|-; Foreign Rs. 115|- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

June 4—10, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 23

AFGHANISTAN

A. Mr. Koca Popovic's Visit: The Yugoslav Foreign Minister, Mr. Koca Popovic, visited Kabul late in April, 1960.

At the end of his talks with the Afghan Government leaders, the following communique was issued on April 27:

"Both the parties noted with satisfaction the similarity of views that exists between the two countries on a number of important international issues manifested in non-adherence to military blocs, in the policy of active and peaceful co-existence, international co-operation based on mutual respect and the policy of active neutrality of Afghanistan.

"They expressed their hope and conviction that efforts which are being made to bring about effective disarmament and cessation of all experiments with nuclear and thermo-nuclear weapons and to solve other major international questions would be used to the establishment of lasting peace in the world.

"Both the parties expressed their belief that the 'summit' meeting will bring further improvement in the international atmosphere and lead to the solution of outstanding problems.

"Both the parties further confirmed their support to the struggle of dependent peoples and nations for full independence and declared to be against all forms of colonialism. The struggle for freedom, self-determination and independence represents the legitimate and natural rights of these peoples which is in full conformity with the principles of the United Nations Charter. The forthcoming visit to Yugoslavia of His Majesty King Zahir Shah this year at the invitation of President Tito will greatly contribute to the strengthening of bonds of friendship already existing between the two countries."

(Royal Afghan Embassy, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3115:AFG:A]

B. Sardar Md. Daud Khan Meets Mr. N. Khruschev: The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, received the Afghan Prime Minister, Sardar Mohammed Daud Khan, in Moscow on May 13.

Sardar Daud Khan was in the Soviet Union for medical treatment.

The conversation between the two Prime Ministers, it was said, touched on questions of further developing and consolidating Soviet-Afghan relations.

(The Hindu, Madras and Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3239:AFG:A]

BURMA

A. Agreements' Ratification Instruments Exchanged With China: Burma and China on May 15 exchanged the Instruments of Ratification of the Mutual Non-aggression Treaty and the Agreement on the Territorial Boundary concluded between them on January 28, 1960.

The Instruments were exchanged in Rangoon by the Chinese Ambassador to Burma, Mr. Li Yi-mang, and the Burmese Foreign Minister, Mr. Sao Hkun Hkio.

The two countries had signed the Treaty and the Boundary Agreement on January 23 in Peking. China had ratified the documents on February 19 and Burma on May 12.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3299:BUR:A]

B. Law And Order Situation: Army and police officials told newsmen in Rangoon on May 14 that crime in the country had showed an increase since February, 1960 and that rebel activity was mounting.

They said that the increase in crime was usual in the hot season.

They attributed the increase in rebel activity to the withdrawal of security forces for election arrangements.

They added that the Prime Minister, U Nu, had given a free hand to the Army and the police to deal with criminals and rebels.

They emphasized that there had been no interference with the work of security forces from politicians.

Insurgents had been so demoralized and weakened that they had fallen to the level of dacoits. The insurgents were labouring under the impression that if they increased their activities the new Government might negotiate with them.

The Armed Forces, they said, would implement the Government policy effectively.

Mujahid rebels had been active in north Arakan about the end of 1959, but their activities would be on the wane following the recent discussions between the representatives of Burma and Pakistan on border problems.

The Pakistan Government had started suppressing Mujahid incursions into Burmese territory.

(The Nation, Rangoon and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2671:BUR:A]

C. New Envoy To India: It was announced in Rangoon and New Delhi on May 20 that Maha Thiri Thudhamma Daw Khin Kyi (Madame Aung San) had been appointed Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of Burma to India in place of Thado Maha Thray Sithu U Than Aung.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 1075:INI:C]

CAMBODIA

A. South Viet-Nam Claims Three Islands: Writing in his newspaper Nationalist, the former Prime Minister, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, said on May 17 that the South Viet-Namese Government had demanded from Cambodia three islands — Pic, Kien Vang and Keo Ngua — which lay just off the Cambodian coast.

He said that the claim had come in a Note delivered at Pnom Penh, which alleged "that the islands were Viet-Namese from the historical, juridical and geographical points of view and that their occupation by Cambodian forces was an act of aggression on the part of Cambodia."

He added that the claim was "untenable."

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3115:CAM:A]

B. New Port Opened: A new seaport — Sihanoukville — on the Bay of Kompongsom was inaugurated on April 2 by the then Prime Minister, Prince Norodom Sihanouk. [Prince Norodom has since resigned for taking rest.]

The port, situated 190 miles from Pnom Penh, can handle ships of up to 10,000 tons. The two places will shortly be linked by a railway.

The port project was executed with French aid.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

CHINA

SUMMARY: Final State Of Accounts For 1959 And Budget For 1960: Mr. Chou En-lai On Foreign Policy; Attack On Imperialism; National Economic Plan For 1960; 12-Year Agricultural Development Plan; Changes In Family System; Peking University President Dismissed; No Exchange Of Newsmen With USA.

A. Final State Of Accounts For 1959 And Budget For 1960: The Vice-Premier and Minister of Finance, Mr. Li Hsien-nien, presented to the second National People's Congress on March 30 the report on the final State of Accounts for 1959 and the draft Budget for 1960.

It was approved by the People's Congress on April 10.

Mr. Li Hsien-nien said that the Budget for 1959 had been successfully executed and that both revenue and expenditure had exceeded the original estimates.

The final accounts for 1959 were as follows (£1 sterling = 6.859 yuan):

"The revenue in 1959 was 54,160 million yuan, or 104.1 per cent of the original budgeted figure of 52,010 million yuan. This was an increase of 12,300 million yuan, or 29.4 per cent over the 1958 revenue of 41,860 million yuan.

"Revenue from enterprises and undertakings accounted for 33,360 million yuan, or 104.9 per cent of the original budgeted figure; taxation 20,470 million yuan, or 102.9 per cent of the budgeted figure; and revenue from other sources 330 million yuan, or 105.7 per cent of the budgeted figure.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"The expenditure was 52,770 million yuan, or 101.5 per cent of the original budgeted figure of 52,010 million yuan. Compared with the 1958 expenditure of 40,960 million yuan, the 1959 expenditure showed an increase of 11,810 million yuan, or 28.8 per cent.

"In the final accounts, 32,170 million yuan (or 101.5 per cent of the budgeted figure) was spent on economic construction, 5,860 million yuan (or 102.3 per cent of the budgeted figure) on social services, culture and education, 5,800 million yuan (the same as budgeted) on national defence, and 2,900 million yuan (or 107.7 per cent of the budgeted figure) on administration.

"In addition, 970 million yuan was spent on the re-payment of national debt, 350 million yuan on aid to foreign countries, 290 million yuan on other expenditures, and 4,430 million yuan on additional allotments of credit funds to the banks.

Budget For 1960:

Mr. Li Hsien-nien said that the Budget for 1960 had been drafted with a view to fulfilling far ahead of schedule the tasks set in the Economic Development Programme.

The budgeted revenue and expenditure for 1960, he said, were balanced at 70,020 million yuan. Compared with the final accounts for 1959, revenue increased by 15,860 million yuan or 29.3 per cent; and expenditure by 17,250 million yuan, or 32.7 per cent. The increase in the revenue and expenditure of the 1960 Budget was in the main compatible with the targets for the growth of industrial and agricultural production set in the draft national economic plan.

He said: "Although the ranges of increase are big, they are well-founded and, given efforts, can be fulfilled or over-fulfilled."

On the revenue side of the 1960 Budget, he said, the figures were as follows:

"(1) Revenue from enterprises and undertakings amounted to 45,300 million yuan, 35.8 per cent more than last year, or 64.7 per cent of all budgeted revenue in 1960.

"(2) Taxes of various kinds provided 24,360 million yuan, 19 per cent more than 1959, or 34.8 per cent of all budgeted revenue this year. Of this sum, industrial and commercial taxes accounted for 19,450 million yuan, or 23.9 per cent more than 1959; and the agricultural tax for 3,300 million yuan, that is still kept at the 1958 level without any increase.

"(3) Revenue from other sources amounted to 360 million yuan, 8.9 per cent more than 1959 or 0.5 per cent of all budgeted revenue this year."

A major portion of the increase in the estimated revenue of the Budget would be from payments from State-owned enterprises.

The expenditure figures were as follows:

(1) Economic Construction: 42,910 million yuan, 33.4 per cent more than last year, or 61.3 per cent of budgeted expenditure;

(2) Social Services, Culture and Education: 8,620 million yuan, 47.1 per cent more than last year, or 12.3 per cent of budgeted expenditure;

(3) National Defence: 5,800 million yuan, the same as last year, forming 8.3 per cent of the expenditure.

(4) Administration: 3,170 million yuan, 9.4 per cent more than last year, or 4.5 per cent of the expenditure.

(5) Repayment of Loans: 1,200 million yuan, 23.8 per cent more than last year, or 1.7 per cent of the expenditure.

(6) Aid to Foreign Countries: 500 million yuan, 40.5 per cent more than last year, or 0.7 per cent of the expenditure.

(7) Additional Allocations of Credit Funds to Banks: 5,800 million yuan, 31 per cent more than last year, 8.3 per cent of the expenditure.

(8) Other Expenses: 320 million yuan, 0.5 per cent of all budgeted expenditure, and general reserve 1,700 million yuan, 2.4 per cent of the expenditure.

Central Government allocations made up 0.5 per cent of all budgeted expenditure; and of the local authorities made up the remaining 51.6 per cent.

(China Today)

[Prev. ref. 2743:CHI:A]

B. Mr. Chou En-lai On Foreign Relations: The Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, spoke on the international situation and China's foreign relations at the Second National People's Congress on April 10.

He said: "The Socialist camp headed by the Soviet Union is stronger than ever before and the plots of the imperialists, modern revisionists and other reactionaries of various countries to sow discord within the camp have met with ignominious defeat.

"The relation of forces is becoming increasingly unfavourable to the forces of imperialism and war. That is why the US ruling circles are compelled to put out certain signs of relaxation, like agreeing to hold the East-West 'summit' conference to resume negotiations on disarmament and so on.

"The imperialist policy of the United States, the most aggressive in character, remains unchanged.

"US ruling circles, while making certain peace gestures are continuing to step up arms expansions and war preparations frantically, developing guided missile weapons and missile bases, leaving nothing undone in strengthening and trying to expand the aggressive military blocs and doing everything to obstruct an agreement on the disarmament question.

"The imperialists, with the United States at their head, whipped up a vicious anti-Chinese wave designed to prevent the spread of China's influence and to isolate China in international affairs."

Relations With USA:

Speaking specifically on Sino-American relations, he said:

"There has up to the present been no change in the tense relations between China and the United States and the responsibility for that rests entirely with the United States.

"As early as 1955, the Chinese Government declared that the Chinese people are friendly to the American people, that China does not want war with the United States and that China is willing to sit down and enter into negotiations with the United States.

"At the Sino-American Ambassadorial talks in Warsaw, we had time and again proposed that the two parties issue a joint statement to undertake mutually that they will not use force in settling international disputes between them.

"To liberate Taiwan (Formosa) is China's internal affair in which no outsider may interfere. However, the United States demands that China give up her sacred sovereign right to liberate her own territory.

"To this very day, the United States still seizes by force China's territory of Taiwan, and disregarding the Chinese Government's repeated warnings, has continually intruded on our territorial waters and air, carrying out military provocations and war threats.

"At the same time, the United States is trying all sorts of ways to create 'two Chinas' in an attempt to legalize its seizure of Taiwan.

"Under these circumstances, the Chinese people cannot but struggle to the end to defend their sovereignty and territorial integrity and to oppose US aggression."

Relations With Japan:

He said that the new US-Japan Mutual Security Treaty was in the long run "a Treaty of disaster for the Japanese people" and added:

"This Treaty not only threatens the security of China and the Soviet Union but first of all poses a direct threat to the security of the peoples of the South-East Asian countries.

"We offer our profound sympathy and support to the Japanese people in their heroic struggle for an independent, democratic, peaceful and neutral Japan.

"The Chinese Government and people resolutely oppose the Kishi Government's policy of hostility to China and of reviving Japanese militarism.

"The Treaty of military alliance which the Kishi Government signed with the United States runs counter to the interests of the people of Japan and the United States.

"In the long run, this is a Treaty of disaster for the Japanese people. So long as the Kishi Government does not abandon its policy of hostility to China, there can be no chance of improving Sino-Japanese relations.

"US ruling circles are vigorously sponsoring the revival of Japanese and West German militarism.

"These two countries are again to become sources of war in Asia and Europe.

"With the connivance of the United States, Adenauer and Kishi are openly collaborating."

(China Today)

[Prev. ref. 3300:CHI:A]

C. Communist Party And Imperialism: Three important articles were recently published in the Communist Party Press which, according to Western observers, suggest that China would not accept a modus vivendi with imperialism, especially America, or any ideological detente.

The first two articles appeared in the April 1 and April 15 issues of the fortnightly Red Flag, while the third appeared in April 23 issue of the Peking People's Daily.

The articles reflected an extreme tactical and ideological rigour in all fields.

The analysis of the present situation as shown by the articles, was four-fold:

(1) The Socialist camp had no need to fear World War III since this could only lead to the final disappearance of capitalism and the speedy creation of a civilization "a thousand times superior." Such a possibility, far from being out of date, remained even probable since it was inherent in the nature of imperialism. The article twice quoted Lenin's remark that "anybody who thinks he had only to mention the word 'peace' for the capitalists to present it to him on a platter is extremely naive."

(2) The articles reflected Peking's belief that there had been no real international detente and, as a result of US policy, the situation had continued to get worse since the Khruschev-Eisenhower talks at Camp David in September, 1959. Many speeches by American authorities were carefully listed to the discredit of "imperialism." The People's Daily asserted that it had a duty to bring American "war-mongering" to light in order to avoid "grave calamities."

(3) Virulent new attacks against Yugoslav "Reformism "in the April 5 issue of the Red Flag, coinciding with the opening of the Belgrade Congress of the Yugoslav Socialist Alliance, were accompanied by a timely reminder of the fundamental opposition of the socialist and capitalist systems. According to the Chinese leaders, the proletariat cannot deprive itself in advance of recourse to "non-peaceful" means of armed insurrection in order to gain power, since Capitalism will not give up of its own accord.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

(4) The People's Daily cited a prediction by Lenin in 1919 that the future Asian revolution would show "even greater peculiarities" than the Russian Revolution.

Observers said China apparently wanted to re-affirm in a spectacular manner by a return to Leninist sources in her exchanges with "brother parties," that she would not consider herself bound by any undertakings at the 'summit' conference or any other conference at which she was not represented, particularly in respect of USA and that any agreement with the West would be merely a temporary expedient.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3300:CHI:A]

D. National Economic Plan For 1960: The Chairman of the State Planning Commission and Vice-Premier, Mr. Li Fu-chun, gave the details of the National Economic Plan to the Second National People's Congress on March 30 which, after discussion, approved it on April 10.

Mr. Li Fu-chun said that "as a result of the continuous 'leap forward' of the national economy, the country had fulfilled, three years ahead of schedule, the major targets of the Second Five-Year (1958-62) Plan."

The following is a comparison of the planned targets for 1962 and the actual output in 1959 (Chinese weights and measures: 1 mou=0.06 hectare or 0.1647 acre; 1 tan (picul) =0.05 ton; 1 jin (catty)=0.5 kilogramme or 1.1023 lb.):

Steel: Planned target between 10.5 million and 12 million tons; actual output 13.35 million tons;

Coal: Planned target between 190 million and 210 million tons; actual output 347.8 million tons;

Electricity: Planned target between 40,000 million and 43,000 million KWH; actual output 41,500 million KWH;

Metallurgical Equipment: Planned target between 30,000 and 40,000 tons; actual output 205,000 tons;

Power Generating Equipment: Planned target between 1.4 million and 1.5 million kilowatts; actual output 2.15 million kilowatts;

Metal-cutting Machine Tools: Planned target between 60,000 and 65,000 units; actual output 70,000 units;

Timber: Planned target between 31 million and 34 million cubic metres; actual output 41.2 million cubic metres;

Cement: Planned target between 12.5 million and 14.5 million tons; actual output 12.27 million tons;

Cotton Yarn: Planned target between 8 million and 9 million bales; actual output 8.25 million bales;

Cotton Cloth: Planned target between 7,290 million and 8,060 million metres; actual output 7,500 million metres;

Salt: Planned target between 10 million and 11 million tons; actual output 11.04 million tons;

Machine-made Paper: Planned target between 1.5 million and 1.6 million tons; actual output 1.7 million tons;

Grain: Planned target around 500,000 million catties; actual output 540,100 million catties;

Cotton: Planned target around 48 million tan; actual output 48.2 million tan; and Soyabeans: Planned target around 25,000 million catties; actual output 23,000 million catties.

Mr. Li Fu-chun said that if the 1960 Plan could be fulfilled it would be possible within 10 years to catch up with or surpass Britain in the quantity and quality of total production.

The gross output value of industry for the first quarter of 1960 was estimated at 80 per cent above that for the same period of 1959 and about 20 per cent of the total capital construction planned for 1960 would be realized in the same period.

Agriculture must be the foundation, and industry the leading factor of planning during 1960; and priority development of heavy industry had to be combined with the rapid development of agriculture.

Agriculture would be modernized by mechanizing it in three stages. In the first phase, modern and local methods would be used with the emphasis on semi-mechanized farm implements towards which over 1.1 million tons of rolled steel was being allocated in 1960. Besides, 22,000 tractors would be pressed into service; small hydro-power equipment of 200,000 to 300,000 kw would be commissioned. The area cultivated by machinery in 1960 was expected to reach 17 million acres.

Targets (for 1960) for heavy industry were: coal 425 million tons; pig iron (excluding production by indigenous methods) 27.5 million tons; steel (excluding production by indigenous methods) 18.4 million tons; cement 16 million tons; chemical fertilizer 2.8 million tons; crude oil 5.2 million tons; and electric power 55,500 million kilowatts.

State budgetary expenditure on capital construction in 1960 would amount to about £4,750 million (not counting some £875 million to be raised locally), an increase of 21.7 per cent over 1959. This sum would be divided almost equally between national and local enterprises and allocated as: 58.3 per cent to industry; 20.9 per cent to transport, posts and tele-communications; 12 per cent to agriculture, water conservancy, forestry and meteorological services, and the balance to other services.

Railway construction planned for 1960 included 2,068 kilometres of main line and 2,053 kilometres of branch line, 1,223 kilometres of double-tracking, 1,045 kilometres of light-gauge line, and 2,000 kilometres of other lines, a total of nearly 5,250 miles, 82 per cent more than what was in 1959.

New students in institutes of higher studies were to number 280,000; in secondary schools of all types over 8 million; and in primary schools 21 million.

He stressed the continued key role of People's Communes not only in agriculture and its ancillary services but also in local industry.

He said that all Chinese cities were setting up People's Communes in a big way. Hitherto, it had been experimental (in cities), particularly in Honan Province, where Communes had started. The extension of the Communes would be on a voluntary basis and would certainly promote the growth of small-scale urban industry.

Two weeks after the presentation of the report, the Peking People's Daily announced that industrial production for the first quarter of 1960 amounted to 30 per cent of the total planned for the year, an achievement which guaranteed the over-fulfilment of the 1960 Plan by a substantial margin and the trebling of industrial output in the three years 1957-60.

12-Year Plan To Raise Farm Output Endorsed: A resolution on the effort to fulfil ahead of schedule the 12-year National Programme of Agricultural Development was also endorsed by the Congress on April 10.

It said: "Agriculture is the foundation of the national economy. The pre-schedule fulfilment of the National Programme for Agricultural Development will be of extremely great significance to the continued 'leap forward' of China's socialist construction.

"The National Programme for Agricultural Development (1956-1967) worked out by the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party is a great programme for developing China's socialist agriculture and building up a new socialist countryside at high speed.

"Since its publication as a draft in 1956, the draft Programme has mobilized the initiative of the broadest masses of people, promoted the rapid development of our agricultural production and all economic and cultural undertakings in the rural areas and thus propelled the rapid development of the national economy as a whole.

"Especially because of the continuous big 'leap forward' in 1958 and 1959 and the switch-over to People's Communes in the countryside, part of the content of the National Programme for Agricultural Development has been exceeded by actual life, and some of the targets have been basically fulfilled, largely fulfilled or fulfilled ahead of schedule in some parts of the country.

"This has made it entirely possible for us to fulfil, two or three years ahead of schedule, the National Programme for Agricultural Development after another period of strenuous effort."

It said that the Congress had adopted the Programme without making any changes in the Articles of the revised draft, except for Article 27 on eliminating the four pests to read as follows: "In the 12 years beginning 1956, rats, bed-bugs, flies and mosquitoes should be practically wiped out wherever possible."

On April 15, the Chairman, Mr. Liu Shao-chi, officially promulgated the 12-year Programme calling for increased production of foodgrains and other crops and also stipulating improvements to be carried out within that period in a number of other spheres covering virtually all aspects of rural life.

According to its Preamble, the Programme sought to increase the productive capacity in agriculture rapidly "so as to re-inforce socialist industrialization in our country and raise the living standards of peasants and the whole people during the period from the First Five-Year Plan to the Third."

Different parts of the Programme, according to the Vice-Premier, Mr. Tan Chen-lin, had been surpassed, basically achieved or realized to a large extent.

The most significant aspect of the ambitious Programme was the accent placed on increasing the yields of foodgrains. In areas with hitherto low yields, grain production was to be more than doubled within 12 years, while in areas which had enjoyed higher yields it was to be doubled.

(China Today)

[Prev. ref. 2867:CHI:A]

E. Significance Of Changes In The Family Explained: The official view of the significance of changes in the family in Chinese society since the communists took over was explained in an article published in the Peking Review dated March 10.

The writer, Mr. Fan Jo-yu, said that the transformation of the feudal patriarchal family into a democratic united family was concomitant with the transformation of a semi-colonial, semi-feudal society into a socialist society.

He wrote: "The most important aspect of the new system was that it turned the former individual way of production, which had the family as a unit, into collective production, with the advanced agricultural co-operative as a unit. Henceforth, the peasant family was basically no longer a unit of production but a unit of consumption—it was still the unit in which all members of the family consumed the payment for their work in the collective economy.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"In 1958, People's Communes were set up throughout the rural areas of China. This further reduced the function of the family as a socio-economic unit. Thanks to the numerous collective welfare services, the universal establishment of public dining-rooms, nurseries and sewing services, household workers being gradually socialized. Women are being freed from the shackles of domestic chores. Like men, they take part in social production on a large scale.

"As the system of distribution adopted by the Commune combines the wage system with the free supply system and wages are paid directly to the earners irrespective of sex, every working member of the family, man or woman, can take his place independently and with equal status in social distribution. At the same time, precisely because of the collective welfare services run by the Communes and the system of distribution in the Communes, a large part or much of the consumption by the peasants does not take place through the family as before.

"Thus, the family is basically no longer an economic unit of production, nor entirely one of consumption, and in consequence, the power once vested in the patriarch to manage and supervise production and dispose of domestic property has lost its sense and utility. With this power of the patriarch ceasing to exist, all survivals of the feudal patriarchal system are bound to vanish. At this point, the survivals of the feudal patriarchal system, left behind by history, have finally become things that must be and, in fact, have been abolished. In his Report of an Investigation into the Peasant Movement in Hunan, Comrade Mao Tse-tung pointed out long ago that the abolition of the clan system 'will follow as a natural consequence of victory in political and economic struggle.' Precisely, this is the theoretical and historical ground on which we have abolished the feudal patriarchal system."

(Peking Review)

[Prev. ref. 2548:CHI:B]

F. Dismissal Of Peking University President: It was officially announced in Peking on April 17 that the President of Peking University, Prof. Ma Yin-chu (78), critic of the Government's population policy, had been dismissed from office.

He was succeeded by Mr. Lu Ping.

Prof. Ma Yin-chu, a US-educated economist, had been President of the University since 1951.

In magazine articles in recent months, he publicly defended his theories on population and birth control, which were under attack from more than 200 critics because they contradicted the Communist Party political line.

He argued that China's teeming population, estimated at more than 650 million, was an obstacle to progress and advocated birth-control to check its present rapid growth.

The Government and his critics said in reply that a vast man-power was an advantage and the country needed more people to cope with all the demands of swiftly developing industry and agriculture.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3266:CHI:C]

G. No Exchange Of Newsmen With USA: The Foreign Ministry issued a communique in Peking on May 17 re-affirming its position against a possible exchange of news correspondents with USA.

It said that such an exchange could take place only after the signing of a formal reciprocal agreement between the two Governments.

It recalled the long-drawn-out negotiations at Ambassadorial level in Warsaw, laid the responsibility for the deadlock squarely on USA and re-stated the absolute need for a formal agreement before an exchange of newsmen could take place.

The State Department in Washington had, on April 20, rejected such a proposal because it would have given blanket permission to a certain number of Chinese correspondents to enter USA without the US Immigration Service being able to decide on their individual merits.

Of a Press corps of 25 foreign correspondents in Peking, only three represent non-communist news agencies from Britain, France and Indonesia.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 973:CHI:A]

FORMOSA

A. Mr. Carlos P. Garcia's Visit: President Carlos P. Garcia of the Philippines paid a goodwill visit to Formosa from May 2 to 7.

During his stay at Taipeh, the Formosan capital, he had prolonged talks with the President of the Kuomintang Administration, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek.

One of his engagements in Taipeh was an address to Legislative Yuan (Parliament) on May 2 when he described the Kuomintang Administration as a "bastion of democracy" and said that the Philippines recognized it as "the only true China."

He added that the "two countries are firmly linked against totalitarian communism whose aggressive instincts are cause for world concern."

He also explained the Philippines' "Filipino First" policy which he said, was an expression of the national desire of Filipinos to be masters in their own households. "This policy is a natural legitimate exercise of Filipinos to be first in the enjoyment of our national heritage and patrimony in exactly the same manner as Chinese would be first in China."

He cited historical Philippines-Chinese ties and assured that Chinese in the Philippines would continue to be treated in the spirit of the true meaning of friendship.

Obviously referring to the two countries' dispute over 2,700 over-staying Chinese in the Philippines, he said, he believed that a satisfactory settlement could be reached on this matter.

Apart from public receptions and political talks, his programme in Formosa included visits to nearby towns and countryside. Everywhere he was given a warm welcome.

Joint Communique:

On May 7, Mr. Garcia and Gen. Chiang Kai-shek issued a joint communique emphasizing "the importance of their countries to the security of 'free Asia'" and pledging to build up their defence capabilities.

The communique expressed their hopes for progress in international disarmament efforts, but, in the meanwhile, they called for "vigilance on the part of the 'free world'."

It re-affirmed the two countries' firm stand against communism and noted their eagerness for a settlement of problems existing between their Governments.

(The Manila Times)

[Prev. ref. 3108:PHI:A, 3161:PHI:A]

INDIA

A. Foodgrains Agreement With USA: The Governments of the United States and India signed in Washington on May 4 an Agreement which provided for the sale to India, over a four-year period, of 16,000,000 metric tons of American wheat and 1,000,000 metric tons of US rice.

The Agreement, undertaken as part of President D. D. Eisenhower's Food-for-Peace Programme, would mean on the average the shipment of more than a ship-load of wheat each day for four years.

For these commodities plus some ocean transportation costs, India would pay USA $1,275,000,000 (Rs. 607 crores in rupees) under Title I of the PL 480 Programme.

The Agreement was signed by President D. D. Eisenhower, and India's Food and Agriculture Minister, Mr. S. K. Patil.

This is the fifth Title I PL 480 Agreement to be signed with India. The first Agreement with India (and the largest previous Agreement with any country) was signed in August, 1956 for an amount of $360,100,000. Previous Agreements with India totalled nearly $1,000,000,000 in value. They provided a significant proportion of India's grain imports during the past 3½ years, as well as substantial imports of cotton, tobacco and dairy products.

The new Agreement was said to be unique in three respects. It was almost four times as large as any Agreement previously signed with any country since the beginning of the Programme in 1955. It was the first Agreement to span a period of four years. It was the first Agreement specifically designed to help a country in establishing substantial food reserves; one-fourth of the wheat and all of the rice would be available for such purposes. The stock-piling feature of the Agreement would provide India with 4,000,000 metric tons (147,000,000 bushels) of wheat and 1,000,000 metric tons (22,000,000 bags) of rice over the four-year period for reserve purposes.

One-fourth of the amount of financing in the new Agreement ($319,000,000) would be made available immediately to finance the first year's shipments of 4,000,000 metric tons (147,000,000 bushels) of wheat and 250,000 metric tons (5,500,000 bags) of rice. The rate and manner in which the remaining quantities would be shipped would be agreed upon by the Government after January 1, 1961 and would be subject to annual review thereafter.

Of the rupees to be acquired by USA in payment for these commodities, $1,076,000,000 (Rs. 512 crores) would be made available to the Government of India for economic development projects (half as loans, half as grants). The remaining $200,000,000 (Rs. 95 crores) would be used to pay US expenses in India and to finance other US Agency programmes, including the development of foreign markets for US agricultural products.

The new Agreement re-inforced by previous Agreements was expected to contribute to India's progress by: (1) substantially increasing India's short food supply; (2) helping to control the rising costs of food; and (3) giving tangible support to the financing of India's development projects.

The commodity composition of the Agreement was:

Commodity	Million $
Wheat (587 million bushels)	965.0
Rice (22 million bags)	116.0
Ocean Transport (estimated)	195.0
Total	1,276.0

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The sales of the commodities would be made by US private traders. Purchase authorizations would be announced later.

Mr. D. D. Eisenhower's Statement:

The following is the text of President Eisenhower's statement on the occasion of the signing of the Agreement:

"This is a ceremony, Mr. Patil, in which I am both honoured and delighted to participate.

"The Agreement that we have just signed is a practical symbol of the term 'food for peace'.

"In a world marked too often by fears and distrust it warms my soul to take part in an event which is the product of mutual respect and ever-growing friendship.

"When I was in your country in December, 1959, Mr. Patil, I caught the spirit—the infectious spirit—of progress that abounds in the new India. What we can do to lend encouragement, to lend a helping hand, we are most happy to do.

"My thoughts go back to the day—it was December 11, 1959—when I was in New Delhi at the opening of the great World Agriculture Fair. I recall the words of your Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, when he said that 'in this world today the call is for ever greater co-operation between individuals, between groups, between nations.'

"When Mr. Nehru spoke of co-operation he was speaking of true co-operation—the kind that is freely extended by one equal to another. What we are observing here today is the signing of a co-operative Agreement freely entered into by each nation pledged by each of us as equal partners in the world community.

"This is the fifth and by far the largest of such Agreements entered into by our two nations. Under the terms of these Agreements, substantial quantities of agricultural commodities are moving from USA to India under special terms of sale. We are fortunate in USA that we have achieved such an abundance of farm products that we are able to share them with our friends.

"India is going forward with a zeal and determination that commands our unreserved admiration and respect. Her people are well down the road that leads to self-generating economic advancement.

"The food that we make available under our special programmes today will be reflected in India's accelerated progress tomorrow.

"This is what we mean by 'food for peace,.'"

Mr. S. K. Patil's Statement:

The following is the statement made by India's Food and Agriculture Minister, Mr. S. K. Patil, at the signing of the Agreement:

"Mr. President, I find it very difficult to express my feelings adequately on this occasion. Your generous sentiments towards my country will touch the hearts of millions of our people, as they have touched mine. A few months ago, when you visited India, you evinced your deep concern that human beings in some parts of the world should suffer from hunger and want while there is more than plenty elsewhere. You proclaimed your intention and the intention of your country to further the well-being of the less fortunate peoples by sharing your abundance with them.

"That this Agreement should have given a concrete shape to your appeal for using 'food for peace' is a matter of deep satisfaction to us all. This Agreement is probably unique in its range and dimensions, but it is perhaps even more significant in its concept. For a country as large as ours with a population of over 400 million people and with a history of recurrent food shortages, a national food reserve is of paramount importance. This Agreement enables us to build such a reserve. Freed from the anxiety of food shortages, we shall be able to concentrate our efforts and energies to the all-round development of our country. Mr. President, it is a signal honour to my country and an indication of your abiding interest in our progress that you have yourself set your hand to this historic Agreement."

Mr. C. A. Herter's Statement:

The following statement was issued by the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, on the occasion:

"The tremendous scope of this Agreement with India is indicated in the statistics which have been released with its signing. It is not only the largest Agreement ever concluded with India but is also the largest single Title I transaction negotiated since the Public Law 480 Programme was established in 1954.

"This Agreement deals with food, and food is a very practical factor in international relations as it is in family life. It provides one of the most genuine links between human beings, the will to help others. President Eisenhower has spoken of this human side of the Agreement with India. We might also well recall the words that he spoke at the opening of the World Agriculture Fair in New Delhi: 'Today we have all the scientific capacity to abolish from the world scene at least this one evil, both tragic and inhuman—hunger that emaciates the bodies of children, that scars the souls of their parents, that stirs the passions of those who toil endlessly and earn only scraps. Men, right now, possess knowledge and resources for a successful world-wide war against hunger—a sort of war that dignifies and exalts human beings.'

"I devoutly hope that the time is not too distant when this type of war—the war on hunger which President Eisenhower referred to, along with the war on disease, poverty and ignorance—is the only kind we know. Some may call this impractical, but this, I suppose, has been said of the great ideas of man since the beginning of time. In the end, it was the ideas and not the doubters who survived."

The United States formally notified the United Nations of the Agreement on May 4.

The Canadian House of Commons was told on May 5 that the Agreement provided ample safeguards for the Canadian wheat export industry.

The Canadian Trade Minister, Mr. Gordon Churchill, said that one of the safeguards was an Indian undertaking to purchase 14,000,000 bushels of wheat each year from the world markets.

Position Of Rice:

It was stated in New Delhi on May 20 that the position regarding rice, considered a weak link in India's food situation, had improved considerably with the signing of Agreements with a number of countries for the import of about 1.8 million tons in the next few years.

These included, apart from 1,000,000 tons under the new PL 480 Agreement with USA for the proposed buffer stock, 150,000 tons from USA under the previous PL 480 Agreement, 100,000 tons from UAR on a barter basis in exchange for jute and tea, and an additional 150,000 tons from Burma on payment of sterling.

The last instalment of 400,000 tons from Burma, under the previous Agreement for the supply of 2,000,000 tons over five years, is also due in 1960.

Excluding the supply under the latest PL 480 Agreement with USA, the total imports of rice in 1960 would, therefore, amount to 800,000 tons as against last year's 500,000 tons.

With imports and with the stocks already with the Government and the recent procurements in Punjab and Madhya Pradesh, there should be no difficulty in meeting the country's requirements without having recourse to wide-spread trading.

The Central Food and Agriculture Minister, Mr. S. K. Patil, realized the vital position of rice in the country's food situation soon after he took over this portfolio. Immediately, he initiated negotiations with a number of countries — Burma, USA, United Arab Republic and Thailand — for the import of rice.

Inquiries from Thailand for a possible supply of rice did not yield any result owing to the comparatively high prices quoted by that country and her unwillingness to agree to a barter deal. This was the first time India had shown any interest in Thai rice.

As a consequence of the new PL 480 Agreement with USA, the rice prices in Thailand had slumped. That explains the protest Thailand has lodged with USA against the proposed supply of 1,000,000 tons of rice to India under this Agreement.

India is said to be still interested in importing rice from Thailand provided the rates quoted are reasonable and the deal is on a barter basis.

Thailand has an adverse balance of trade with India and the Government may agree to offset the adverse balance against the import of rice. Any extra imports would require Thailand to buy goods from India as in the case of UAR.

Indian Comment On Thai Reaction:

Surprise was caused in New Delhi on May 14 by the report from Bangkok that two Thai Ministers wanted to resign on the question of the Indo-US Foodgrains Agreement and that Thailand had decided to make a protest to the US Government against the Agreement.

The Agreement, it was pointed out in New Delhi, should not have occasioned any worry to Thailand because that country is not a regular supplier of rice to India.

India, it was stated, had not imported any rice from Thailand for the past seven or eight years. Further, the price of Thai rice was reported to be very high.

Attention was also drawn to the fact that the Agreement was mostly for wheat, only 1,000,000 out of the 17,000,000 tons of foodgrains contracted for being rice.

It was further pointed out that most of the rice to be supplied under the Indo-US Agreement would be used in India to build up a buffer-stock. Consequently, the annual market in India for rice-exporting countries was not likely to be affected much and its usual suppliers like Burma were expected to continue exporting rice to India till India could do away with imports.

(US Embassy and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3252:INI:D]

B. Oil Struck At Ankaleshwar: It was announced in Bombay on May 15 that oil had been struck at Ankaleshwar, about 100 miles south of Cambay.

The Oil and Natural Gas Commission working in collaboration with Soviet experts discovered the oil-field which was stated to be the best so far in the public sector and with "huge potentialities."

The quality and quantity of the oil struck at Ankaleshwar were stated to be better than the oil so far discovered in the Cambay region.

This was the second big oil discovery made in recent months in the Cambay region.

The other "commercially feasible" discovery was made in April, 1960 when it was said that the Government of India had decided to start planning on a medium-sized refinery, the third in the public sector to be set up in Cambay to process the oil produced there.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The discovery of oil at Ankaleshwar, it was stated, would have a significant impact in hastening the plans for setting up the refinery at Cambay. The other two refineries in the public sector at Gauhati (Assam) and Barauni (Bihar) are being set up with Rumanian and Soviet help respectively.

Mr. K. D. Malaviya's Statement:

The Central Minister for Mines and Fuel, Mr. K. D. Malaviya, said in a statement:

"Yet another oil-field nearly 100 miles south of Cambay town was discovered by the Oil and Natural Gas Commission when the first exploratory well at Ankaleshwar in Broach district was perforated for testing. Although the report (from Ankaleshwar) says that the quality of oil there is better and the quantity greater than the Cambay oil I will warn the public to take this news with cautious optimism".

Giving details of drilling at Ankaleshwar, he said: "The drilling of the first well began in the first week of February, 1960. It took about 60 days to complete drilling.

"Oil gushed out there on the second day of testing operations. Though detailed information is to follow it seems that this discovery is the best that we have made so far in the public sector."

He said that it was the usual practice to allow the well to flow for several days before deciding on its quality and quantity. "This is only the second day."

In Lucknow, Mr. Malaviya told a news conference on May 15 that the discovery of the new oil-well at Ankaleshwar was the third major achievement in the public sector, the earlier two being Jwalamukhi and Cambay.

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3278:INI:F]

C. Intermediate Ports Development: The Intermediate Ports Development Committee appointed two years ago has, in its report, recommended a Rs. 38-crore programme for the development of four existing intermediate ports into well-equipped all-weather ports.

Of the four ports selected for the proposed development, it said, the highest priority should be given to Tuticorin in Madras and Mangalore in Mysore. Paradip in Orissa and Porbandar in Gujerat, were listed as second priority works.

An important part of the Committee's recommendations related to the facilities needed for handling the anticipated expansion in iron-ore exports.

These recommendations envisaged the development of many ports including Mangalore, Paradip, Kakinada, Masulipatam, Cuddalore, Karwar and Redi.

It also suggested the development of Neendakara, in Kerala, as an intermediate port to clear the traffic in the Quilon region.

The Committee, headed by Mr. H. P. Mathrani, Joint Secretary in the Ministry of Transport and Communications, listed 10 ports for specified improvement.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2069:INI:G]

INDONESIA

A. Detention Of Chinese Diplomat: The Chinese Embassy in Djakarta accused the Government on May 13 of arresting the Chinese Consul in Samarinda in Borneo, Mr. Chiang Yen, on April 27 and detaining him in his house for 41 hours.

An Embassy spokesman said that a strong protest had been sent to the Indonesian Foreign Ministry against "the serious incident."

The protest Note stated that the authorities of Samarinda kept the Chinese Consul in "forced residence" for 41 hours, preventing him from accomplishing his consular duties in relation to the repatriation of Chinese nationals.

The Secretary-General of the Indonesian Foreign Office, Mr. Sunito Kusumowigdago, said later that the Consul's "improper behaviour against local officials" had made it necessary for the authorities to ask him to stay temporarily at his residence and not contact overseas Chinese for the sake of security and order.

He added: "Among other things, the Consul sneeringly tried to make out that the local officials were not rigidly carrying out the instructions of the Central Government on the overseas Chinese repatriation question, as in searching their luggage and getting fingerprints".

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3099:IND:A]

IRAQ

A. Cabinet Re-shuffle: A re-shuffle of the Cabinet was announced in Baghdad on May 3.

One decree broadcast by Baghdad Radio appointed the Foreign Minister, Mr. Hashim Jawad, as acting Finance Minister, replacing Mr. Mohammed Hadid, who had resigned the previous week.

The Radio said that Mr. Hadid had asked to be relieved of his post for personal reasons.

A second decree announced the following appointments:

Minister of Industry—Brigadier Muhieddin Abdul Hamid, hitherto Minister of Education.

Minister of Education—Brigadier Ismail Ibrahim Aref.

Minister of State—Dr. (Mrs.) Nazim El Dulaimi, hitherto Minister of Municipal Affairs.

(Baghdad Radio)

[Prev. ref. 2800:IRQ:B]

B. Boycott Of Arab League Ended: It was announced in Cairo on May 14 that Iraq had ended her boycott of the Arab League and would attend the forthcoming League meeting in Beirut.

The Assistant Secretary of the Arab League, Mr. Dardiri Ismail, said in Cairo that he had returned recently from a visit to Iraq where he had discussed Iraq's position with the League.

He said that Iraq would attend the Beirut meeting of the League and any future meeting.

The Beirut meeting, on April 16, was postponed to June 25 at the request of Jordan.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 2631:IRQ:A]

C. Economic Help From Denmark: The Danish Minister of Trade and Finance, Prof. Kjeld Philip, told a news conference in Baghdad on April 6 that his country had offered Iraq a new project, as important as oil, which would revolutionize the economy of Iraq.

He said that he made this offer to the Iraqi Prime Minister, General Abdel Karim Kassem, when he met him earlier during the day (April 6). When he was asked to elaborate the scheme, he said, it was "too early."

He said that the Iraqi authorities were especially interested in getting Danish experts for the building of the Umqasr harbour on the Persian Gulf and for other projects. These experts would be arrriving soon. Danish firms were interested in helping Iraq to develop her natural resources. A leading Danish firm had proposed to open a consultant engineers' office in Iraq.

There were discussions, he said, about constructing a paper mill, and three hospitals of 400 beds each.

(The Times, London)

D. Mosul Revolt Sentences: In Baghdad on May 13, the People's Court sentenced 18 persons to death in their absence for their part in the Mosul revolt in March, 1959.

Eleven Army officers were sentenced to death by a firing squad and six others to be hanged.

The former Iraqi Ambassador to the United Arab Republic, Mr. Fayek el Samourai, reported to be in Cairo, was also sentenced to be hanged on charges of plotting against the Republic.

Three others were sentenced in their absence to life imprisonment.

Samourai and the others were ordered to pay collective compensation of 3,000 Iraqi dinars (£3,000) to the families of three men killed during the mutiny.

Samourai was alleged to have worked with the Egyptian Intelligence Bureau against Iraqi students in Cairo and to have broadcast over the Voice of the Arabs Radio slanders and intrigues against the Iraqi Republic.

The Court also sentenced Kadhem Azzawi and Medhat Hajj Serri—in their absence—to 15 years' imprisonment and Kadhem Rashid to three years' imprisonment on charges of plotting against the life of General Kassem.

(Baghdad Radio)

[Prev. ref. 2605:IRQ:A]

ISRAEL

A. Russia Rejects Proposal For A Meeting Between Mr. David Ben-Gurion And Mr. N. Khruschev: An Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman announced on May 3 that the Soviet Government had rejected a proposal by the Israeli Prime Minister, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, for a meeting between himself and the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev.

He said that the Soviet reply, delivered orally in Moscow, said: "The Soviet Government considers that in view of the statements of Israeli public leaders and even of Ministers of Government not conducive to the furtherance of peace, the Israeli Prime Minister's visit to USSR would be premature."

The Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, Mr. Jacob Malik, who delivered the reply to the Israeli Ambassador in Moscow, added that Soviet policy continued to be based "on a desire for good relations with all States of the Near and Middle East without discrimination".

(The Statesman, Calcutta and The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 1943:AOA:A]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

JORDAN

A. Attempt To Murder Mr. H. Majali—Three Persons Sentenced: Three Jordanians who have fled the country were sentenced, in their absence, on May 4 to 20 years' imprisonment for plotting to assassinate the Prime Minister Mr. Haztaa Majali, and King Hussein's uncle, Sherif Nasser Ben Jamil.

They are Mr. Abdullah Rimawi, a former Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Major-General Ali Abu Nuwar, a former Chief of the Jordan General Staff, and Mr. Zakaria Yousef Ettaher, a prominent merchant.

The State Security Tribunal passed a sentence of 10 years' imprisonment on four other accused in the case while an eighth defendant got seven years' imprisonment. Two of the ten accused were acquitted.

In sentencing Mr. Rimawi, Mr. Abu Nuwar and Mr. Ettaher, the Court took into consideration the fact that they had already been sentenced, in their absence, to 15 years' imprisonment on charges of attempting to overthrow the Government and seize power by an armed revolt.

(Amman Radio)

[Prev. ref. 3293:JOR:B]

B. Exploring The Dead Sea For Sodom And Gomorrah — Trouble About Permit: According to an Amman report on April 13, the Jordan Department of Antiquities had not renewed the permit granted to Dr. Ralph Baney, leader of the Holy Land Christian Approach Mission to Jordan, to explore the Dead Sea bed for the two Biblical cities of Sodom and Gomorrah.

The Director of the Department said that the permit had expired on March 31, 1960.

Among the reasons why the Jordan Department of Antiquities had decided not to renew the permit were the failure of Dr. Baney's expedition to achieve fruitful results after five weeks of continued search and the desire of the Jordan Government to give other archaeological expeditions a chance to explore the sea bed in search of the two cities.

Complaints had been made that Dr. Baney was not an archaeologist—he claims to be an oceanographer—and that he was interfering with the work of other searchers by deviating from his original diving mission to attempt to acquire scrolls and Biblical manuscripts.

Dr. Baney, a Baptist Minister from Kansas City (Missouri), arrived in Jordan in February, 1960 at the head of a team of four Americans equipped with diving equipment and under-water photography apparatus specially made in France to withstand the high salinity of the Dead Sea.

They had been charting and exploring the sea bed near Qumran where the famous Dead Sea Scrolls were found.

Dr. Baney claimed in a report to the Director of the Jordan Department of Antiquities on March 23 that he had traced some under-water ruins which might prove to be those of cities which existed in the area some 4,000 years ago. He also claimed to have traced a 12-ft-wide built-up road at the bottom of the sea.

A spokesman for Dr. Baney said on April 13 that a 30-day renewal of his permit had been promised by the Minister for Education to which the Department of Antiquity was subject.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3305:ISR:A]

LAOS

A. General Elections: Fifty-one of the 59 seats in the National Assembly were won by an alliance of 'Rightist' parties—the Rally of the Lao People and the Committee for the Defence of National Interests—in the General Elections held in the last week of April, 1960.

The swing to the 'Right' was so complete that even the neutralist Santiphab Party was defeated in all the eight constituencies it had contested. Even the Party leader, Mr. Pholsena, who was considered a favourite in his constituency, was credited with only 700 votes.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3128:LAO:A]

LEBANON

A. Government Resigns: The Lebanese Government resigned on May 14.

It was immediately replaced by a neutral interim Government headed by the former Lebanese Ambassador to France, Mr. Ahmed Daouk.

The new Cabinet was composed of eight members who were not running for the forthcoming elections to the Legislature.

The former Minister for Justice and Economic Affairs, Mr. Philippe Takla, occupied the post of Foreign Minister in the new Cabinet.

This Cabinet will govern the country during the election period.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2963:LEB:A]

B. New Agreement With Compagnie du Port de Beirut: The Lebanese Chamber of Deputies approved on April 28 a new Convention between the Government and Compagnie du Port de Beirut, a French Company which has been running all operations at the port of Beirut under a Concession Agreement which was due to expire in 1990.

This Concession was formally terminated. The Company will, however, continue to run the port for the same period of 30 years, the Government reserving to itself the right to take over the port operations within 15 years under certain conditions.

The other main differences between the old and new Agreements are:

(1) The changed status of the Company, which becomes a Lebanese, and not French, concern with headquarters in Beirut instead of in Paris.

(2) The Company has now become subject to all Lebanese taxes, whereas the previous Agreement entitled it to a large degree of tax exemption.

(3) The Government will receive 50 per cent of the Company's net profits, instead of 10 per cent of its gross profits as hitherto. The Government has accepted to pay the Company a lump sum of £L10,000,000 (about £1,623,000) "the value of its Concession rights".

It is understood that the proportion of the Company's shares in the hands of Lebanese nationals—already over 50 per cent—will be raised to 80 per cent.

With the signing of the new Agreement the case brought by France in the International Court of Justice at The Hague against Lebanon will be withdrawn.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 956:LEB:A]

MALAYA

A. Trade Agreement With Japan: Representatives of Malaya and Japan signed a Trade Agreement in Kuala Lumpur on May 10.

The two countries, under the Agreement, will accord each other most-favoured-nation treatment in various fields including immigration and shipping.

Pronouncements on both sides suggested that the Agreement was more on general goodwill than a specific trade pact, with Japan largely providing services in return for goods.

Japan annually buys three times as much from Malaya as she sells to Malaya and there was nothing in the Agreement to alter this balance.

According to the Agreement, Japan, however, undertook to prevent dumping by another country of tin or natural or synthetic rubber which might threaten Malaya's exports of tin and natural rubber, and there would be consultation if Malaya's sales of tin and rubber to Japan declined. Japan would also provide a market for canned pineapple and sawn timber from Malaya.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 986:JAP:A]

NEPAL

A. Nepali Congress Session: The seventh annual conference of the ruling Nepali Congress—the first since the Party came into power 11 months ago—was held in Khatmandu from May 8 to 10.

Delegates and observers from the Socialist Parties of Burma, Japan, Norway, Yugoslavia, Israel and the Praja-Socialist Party of India, besides about 700 delegates, were present.

The delegates from other countries expressed satisfaction over the fact that through the Nepali Congress, democratic socialism was triumphant "in this part of the world as well."

Secretaries' Report:

In a joint report presented to the Conference, the General Secretaries, Mr. Bhadra Sharman and Mr. Tripurwar Singh, commended the Government's neutral foreign policy, particularly in the context of the Sino-Indian border dispute.

The report said it was "natural for us to have a sense of pride in the neutral foreign policy which our Government has been able to maintain."

With Nepal's emergence in the international field, the country faced new problems. "Sandwiched geographically between India and China, Nepal has to tread her path with care and circumspection".

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Unfortunately, it said, Nepal found herself in an awkward position resulting from the Sino-Indian differences. "Under the circumstances, it is a tough job to keep up and develop the policy of positive neutrality. The way the Nepali Congress is facing this difficulty and the success with which Nepal is furthering the growth of friendship with each country should naturally give every Nepali reason to be proud."

It took note of Mr. B. P. Koirala's visit to China and India, and said that the expressions of friendship during these visits sprang from the country's neutral foreign policy.

It "recorded with pleasure" the peaceful settlement of the question of formal demarcation of the Sino-Nepalese boundary during Mr. Koirala's visit to Peking. This settlement was "an important achievement" which had resulted in "certainty" about Nepal's boundary.

It said that the co-operation extended to Nepal by friendly nations and their interest in the country's planned development was an offshoot of Nepal's neutral foreign policy.

Mr. B. P. Koirala's Presidential Address:

In his presidential address, Mr. B. P. Koirala said that increased production and planning were most essential for Nepal.

He said that the Constitution under which his Government worked could not be called completely democratic but was best under the circumstances. It still offered manifold opportunities to broaden the path of democratic development. The limitations set by the Constitution and the problems created by the country's poverty "make the position of the Government extremely vulnerable."

He said that there were anti-national 'Left-wing' elements in the country who could exist only by creating a disturbed atmosphere.

Policy Resolution:

The Conference adopted on May 9 a 2,000-word policy resolution reiterating as its objective "the establishment of a socialist Nepal through parliamentary democracy."

It resolved to safeguard the rights of Parliament and strengthen its prestige. Democratic institutions, such as local self-government and panchayat councils, would be set on a firm foundation.

The Nepali Congress was determined to achieve its "objective" of a socialist Nepal through parliamentary democracy even at the cost of greater sacrifices and sufferings.

The aim of the Party was to create an industrial society to replace the feudal economy in the country. To do this, the Party took upon itself the responsibility of harnessing productive resources and increasing productive forces.

The Party would give the tiller the right to his land and bring about sweeping land reforms to push up agricultural production.

Youth organizations would be given an impetus and the enthusiasm and the revolutionary spirit of the youth of the country would be harnessed for national reconstruction.

It also took note of "many elements" which took advantage of the democratic rights conferred upon them and indulged in "immoral, illegal and undemocratic activities" with a view to disrupting democratic practices "deliberately and consciously". The Party would ceaselessly fight against such anti-national elements.

It also took note of Nepal's emergence in the international field and attributed the country's growing international relations to the Party's "positive" foreign policy, the main features of which were made out to be non-alignment with any Power bloc, independent assessment of all issues and support of the right cause.

It stated that the Nepali Congress would strive to make this policy "still more successful".

It called upon all democratic forces in the country to co-operate in nation-building activities in "a spirit of vigilance and alertness."

"Neutralist Policy" Endorsed:

The following day (April 10), the Conference adopted a "Motion of Thanks" endorsing the policy of "positive neutrality" and non-alignment in foreign affairs.

The resolution referred to the Suez crisis, the Hungarian uprising, the problem of German re-unification, the Tibetan upheaval and the Sino-Indian border dispute and said that these could not precipitate a world war "because the countries believing in peace are active."

Directive On Industrialization:

The Conference issued the following six-point directive to the Government with a view to giving an impetus to industrialization:

(1) The Government should have full control over basic industries;

(2) Technical advice and loans should be provided to private investors;

(3) Steps should be taken to attract foreign capital where indigenous capital is not available;

(4) Full employment should be provided to Nepalese workers in industries;

(5) Training centres should be opened for technicians;

(6) Centres for training in cottage industries should be opened where facilities of communications and electricity are lacking; and

(7) Small-scale industries should be set up on a nation-wide basis.

It approved the Government's measures to increase the area of circulation of Nepalese currency and to maintain a firm exchange rate for Indian currency.

(The Statesman, Calcutta and The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 2690:NEP:A]

B. Investment Guarantee Agreement With USA: The United States and Nepal signed an Investment Guarantee Agreement in Washington on May 17 under which USA would offer three types of guarantees for the investment of private American capital in Nepal.

The were: (1) guarantee that capital and local currency receipts from such investments will remain convertible into dollars; (2) guarantee against losses from expropriation; and (3) guarantee against losses due to war damage.

The Investment Guarantee Programme was extended to Nepal by a formal exchange of Notes between the acting Secretary of State, Mr. Douglas Dillon, and Gen. Subarna S. J. B. Rana, Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister of Nepal.

With the addition of Nepal, the US Investment Guarantee Programme is now available for new private investments of US capital in 34 countries.

A total of $498 million in International Co-operation Administration guarantees has been issued for investments in countries already participating in the programme and applications pending in ICA exceed $1,000,000,000.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2715:NEP:D]

C. Government's Defeat In Upper House: The Nepalese Government suffered a defeat in the Upper House (Mahasabha) of the Nepalese Parliament when the House rejected three clauses of the Entertainment Tax Bill in its second reading on May 16.

The voting was 13 in favour and 15 against.

The main clause of the Bill provided that items on which entertainment tax would be levied would be declared by the Government and published in the official Gazette. The Opposition wanted all these items to be included in the Bill itself.

Mr. Hora Prasad Joshi, the Assistant Law Minister, who piloted the Bill, said that such a procedure would mean a constant amendment of the Act.

[The Constitution, however, provides that if a money Bill has been passed by the Lower House (the Entertainment Tax Bill was passed by the Lower House) and not passed by the Upper House within one month, it may be submitted for Royal Assent without the approval of the Upper House.]

The Upper House consists of 36 members, 18 of whom are nominated by the King and 18 elected by the Lower House.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2822:NEP:B]

D. New C-in-C: General Neer Shamsher Jung Bahadur Rana became the new Commander-in-Chief of the Royal Nepalese Army on May 20, succeeding General Toran Shamsher.

General Toran handed over command to General Neer at a special ceremony at the Army Headquarters.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: Mr. Z. H. Lari's Plea For Freedom Of Expression; New Order On Properties Of Political Parties; Restrictions On Jute Cultivation Removed; New Chief Justice; Prince Aly Khan's Death.

A. Mr. Z. H. Lari's Plea For Freedom Of Expression: The President of the Karachi Bar Association, Mr. Z. H. Lari, told the annual meeting of the Association in Karachi on May 14 that the military regime of Pakistan should amend immediately the laws now in force to enable people to express themselves "freely without involving themselves in risks".

He spoke of "the untold nervousness in the Press, which set the tone of public expression."

He said: "Newspapers of this country have become a mere record of statements issued by responsible persons. The only way to improve is to open avenues that the Press thinks have been closed to them."

Mr. Lari's speech was heard by the Law Minister, Mr. Mohammed Ibrahim, who was the chief guest at the function.

Mr. Lari said: "To re-assure people that they have got freedom of expression, the only course is to give legislative recognition to that right and to the right of courts to enforce it."

Addressing the Law Minister, he said: "You will concede, sir, that there is very limited freedom of assembly and association—another constituent of the rule of law—in the country. In certain spheres of legitimate activity, assemblage as well as associations are totally prohibited and these spheres cover our civic and political life.

"There might have been good reasons for restricting these freedoms during the past 19 months, but they too have lost their validity.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Man does not live by bread alone. It is the development of conscience and spirit that makes an individual as well as a nation strong.

"We urge that in order to enable the nation to take part fully in the affairs of the country and also to prepare ourselves for intelligent participation in the proposed elections, the restrictions imposed be withdrawn without any further delay.

"The rule of law is the base of democracy, while Parliament, the judiciary, the executive and the army were its main pillars. This base was shocked to the core by a pronouncement of the Supreme Court in a case recently that the Laws Continuance in Force Order of 1958 (a decree promulgated by the Chief Martial Law Administrator), which is now the charter of rights of the people had taken away our fundamental rights and powers of courts to enforce these basic human rights.

"We were silent spectators to the procession of petitions of writs bemoaning that they were not heard, as fundamental rights had disappeared and courts were powerless.

"A Judge here and a Minister there may declare that fundamental rights exist, but the decision of the Supreme Court that it had no powers to hear writ petitions of a certain nature under the Laws Continuance in Force Order is final until that Order is changed.

"What about the rights of the State? These rights of the State are there in full force and vigour.

"What else can be the rights of the State? What was denied by the Articles of the late Constitution was the so-called privilege of the Executive to control or restrict these freedoms. The Executive, as well as the individual citizen, must submit to the arbitration of the judiciary as to the extent of a freedom and the ambit of a restriction.

"Judicial determination in the case of a conflict between the Executive and a private citizen is the very soul of fundamental rights. This determination cannot be left to the Executive, particularly in a country, where we have, as yet, no well-recognized standard of behaviour, no informed strong public opinion, no sound conventions and wherein even the highest have tried to violate the spirit of law, not to say of well-established conventions."

He also described as "objectionable trends" the recent legislation on the exclusion of the jurisdictions of courts and the restriction on or prohibition of appearance of lawyers in judicial or quasi-judicial proceedings of certain nature.

The Industrial Disputes Ordinance of 1951, he said, provided that no decision or award of a court could be questioned in any manner by any judicial or other authority, including the High Court. So also was the ouster of jurisdiction in cases covered by the Public Conduct (Scrutiny) Ordinance of 1959. The Supreme Court was the highest judicial organ of the State and must have the last say in all matters requiring judicial determination. Any deviation was likely to shake the confidence of the people in judicial and quasi-judicial proceedings. In fact, the people echoed the opinion of the former Chief Justice Mr. Mohammad Munir, that the "judiciary now stands crippled."

On the appointment of the Constitution Commission, he said: "We welcome the appointment of the Commission, but we are not satisfied with its composition as a whole. We would, however, suspend our judgment till we have seen its recommendations."

One thing should be made clear and that was that the Constitution should come into existence, as promised, before this year (1960) ran out. No Constitution had a chance of the willing acceptance of the people, unless it provided for fundamental rights enforceable through courts, independent judiciary, supremacy of Parliament, subject to results of referendum if any, direct elections based on adult franchise, elections to all offices and Legislature to be held after the withdrawal of the Martial Law and an authority to Parliament and Parliament alone to change the Constitution.

He also called for the immediate separation of the judiciary from the Executive so that the judiciary is made "immune from all influences."

Replying to Mr. Lari, Mr. Mohammed Ibrahim, Law Minister, said that the "October Revolution" was the result of the misuse of fundamental freedom which existed in the country. These freedoms should not become a licence so as to cripple society by various forms of misdeeds.

The present regime which stepped in to stop the rot, he said, was giving serious thought to the institution of a new Constitution and restoration of fundamental freedoms as soon as they thought the time was ripe for it. The present regime wanted freedoms which "did right things and not wrong things to society." It was never the intention of the present regime to cripple the civil liberties of people. Whatever measures the Government had taken were not intended to remove these liberties but to re-establish them in a proper way.

(Dawn, Karachi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2438:PAK:A, 2691:PAK:A]

B. New Martial Law Order On Taking Over Premises, Assets And Funds Of All Political Parties: A new Order under Martial Law was promulgated on May 7 empowering the District Magistrate of Karachi to take over the premises, assets and funds of all political parties which were frozen immediately after Martial Law was established in October, 1958.

A copy of the Order was served on May 7 on all persons who held money, security or credit belonging to political parties to surrender them to Government forthwith.

The Order also empowered the district magistrate to take possession of properties belonging to political parties and evict persons occupying them.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3310:PAK:J]

C. Restrictions On Cultivation Of Jute In East Pakistan Removed: The East Pakistan Administration announced on May 14 the complete withdrawal of prevailing restrictions on the cultivation of jute for 1960.

The official announcement said that the step had been taken "in view of the prolonged drought." Jute growers would now be at liberty to grow as much jute as possible and district officers were instructed to provide facilities like seeds, loans and fertilizers.

The Provincial Governor, Lt-Gen. M. Azam Khan, said in a statement earlier that due to delay in rains the pre-Monsoon sowing of the jute crop might be affected in the low-lying areas.

He, however, added that there would not be any shortage of jute in the coming season "as our sowing programme is going to be on a vastly improved scale both on area basis and application of scientific methods." The effect of the drought of the last few weeks had been greatly exaggerated by a section of exporters and dealers for their own selfish interests.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2447:PAK:C]

D. India Denies Charges About Payments Pact: The Indian High Commission described as "propagandist" and misleading reports appearing in the Pakistan Press on May 7 accusing India of non-fulfilment of the Indo-Pakistan Limited Payments Agreement.

The Pakistani Press had charged India with refusing to export the much-needed cement and steel to Pakistan.

The Indian High Commission, in a Press Note, said: "It is regretted that unfounded allegations of bad faith should have been made when the Trade Agreement has run for some six weeks only and when the fulfilment is to be related, according to the Agreement, to the 12-month period ending March 20, 1961 and not to phased instalments."

The Press Note added that the extended Limited Payments Agreement signed in March 1960 had been in operation for some six weeks. There was no commitment by either side for supplies in phased instalments; these would take place in the normal course on the basis of demand and supply position.

It was, therefore, not correct that India had declined to make available to Pakistan either steel billets or cement. India was in a position to supply pig-iron worth Rs. 2,500,000 as stipulated in the Agreement as and when required. As regards steel billets worth Rs. 7,500,000, India would be in a position to fulfil the contract within the specified period i.e., before March 20, 1961.

Only recently some parties approached the Indian Mission in Karachi for steel billets against licences issued to them by the Pakistan Government. The immediate supplies of this item from India were not possible until the expanded programme of steel production had gathered more momentum.

As regards cement, it said, no formal request had been made for immediate supply. In fact, India had already supplied Pakistan during the last six months about 80,000 tons of cement against the two world-wide tenders and further supplies would be made up to a total of 1,22,000 tons. India's tenders were the lowest.

It also denied that India was "desperately" in need of Pakistan's jute and cotton to feed her "growing industries," and said that India had imported only 30,000 bales of cotton as against her total consumption of about 5,000,000 bales which represented hardly 0.7 per cent of the total requirements. "As is well known, India, though self-sufficient in raw jute, has agreed to take Rs. 10,000,000 worth of jute cuttings in addition to the imports under the General Trade Agreement. India is the only importer of this item."

(Dawn, Karachi and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3252:INI:C]

E. Mr. Justice A. R. Cornelius Sworn-In As Chief Justice: Mr. Justice A. R. Cornelius was sworn-in as the Chief Justice of Pakistan in Rawalpindi on May 13.

Mr. Justice Cornelius (57) is the first non-Muslim to hold the office of Chief Justice of Pakistan.

He succeeded Mr. Justice Shahabuddin who retired on May 12. Mr. Justice Cornelius has been a judge of the Supreme Court for the last nine years.

(Dawn, Karachi)

F. Prince Aly Khan Dies In Car Accident: Prince Aly Khan, Pakistan's Permanent Representative at UN, son of the late Aga Khan and father of the present Aga Khan, died in a road accident in a Paris suburb on May 13.

The French mannequin, Bettina, the Prince's constant companion in recent years, was with him at the time of the accident. She was only slightly injured.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He was driving a grey Lancia which collided with a car coming from the opposite direction near the French Resistance Shrine at Mont Valerian, on the outskirts of Paris.

Prince Aly Khan (48) built his name as a hard-riding, fast-driving man of the world with a liking for parties and beautiful women.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

SINGAPORE

A. Legislation On Off-Course Betting: The Legislative Assembly passed a Bill on May 12 authorizing off-course betting on horse racing and increasing the punishment for any book-making or betting with bookmakers.

The Turf Club race meetings and sweepstakes would, in future, be open to non-members as well.

During the debate, Opposition members attacked the Government as being inconsistent in the matter in that though it had set out to banish vice, yet it was now encouraging betting.

On behalf of the Treasury benches, it was pointed out that the Government was being realistic in deciding that it was better to control gambling where it was impossible to suppress it. A gain in revenue was not the over-riding consideration. The imperfection of human nature had to be admitted and the Government was making the best of a bad job.

Bill To Prevent Tax Evasion:

The same day (May 12), another Government Bill to prevent income-tax evasion was also passed by the Assembly.

Since the introduction of income-tax in Singapore and the Federation of Malaya after World War II, it had been said that the taxpayers—particularly Chinese—had been evading the tax.

The Singapore Minister for Finance, Dr. Goh Keng Swee, had said that some businessmen kept three sets of books—one for income-tax, one for their partners and one for themselves.

The Bill empowered the Comptroller to go to any place of business to inspect books and documents and to order any person to give information about his or any other person's income.

Proper business records must be kept and additional assessments may be imposed for any period in the past 12 years instead of in the past six years as hitherto. This would cover assessments during and after the Korean War, when revenue and profits in both Singapore and the Federation were exceptionally high.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2824:SGP:B]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Disarmament Conference; New USSR President; Sierra Leone To Become Independent.

A. Ten-Nation Disarmament Conference: The 10-nation Disarmament Conference began in Geneva on March 15. This was the 10-nation Disarmament Committee appointed by United Nations in 1959 to discuss the plans for disarmament put forward by the Soviet Union and the Western Powers in United Nations in September, 1959.

The 10 nations represented at the Conference were:

Western side: USA, United Kingdom, Canada, France and Italy.

Eastern side: USSR, Poland, Rumania, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia.

It was disclosed on the eve of the Conference (March 14) that an East-West difference had arisen over the chairmanship of the formal opening of the Conference.

The Russians proposed that the Conference sessions should be presided over in turn by each of the 10 delegations in alphabetical order, which would mean that Bulgaria would preside over the inaugural session on March 15.

The West raised no objection to the alphabetical plan for normal working sessions but were against Bulgaria taking the chair at the formal opening.

The Western delegations decided to propose that the opening session should be held under UN auspices without a President.

Mr. L. P. Nervo Opens Session:

Opening the session on March 15, the Mexican Chairman of the UN Disarmament Commission, Mr. Luis Padilla Nervo, referred to the development and spread of weapons of mass destruction and said that they confronted the world with some of the most difficult problems ever faced by man.

He added: "The solution of these problems requires vision, faith and a willingness to recognize that there are lesser risks and sacrifices in safeguarded international disarmament than in the traditional and uncertain attempts to achieve national security."

Mr. F. Eaton's (USA) Speech:

In his address, the leader of the US delegation, Mr. Frederick Eaton, said: "Existing forces and armaments must be gradually but surely reduced under proper safeguards until no nation shall possess the power to destroy her neighbours.

"We must design a plan, broad and promising in scope and yet realistic in conception, a plan which moves by measured, safeguarded steps towards an attainable goal, not one which raises false hopes of a sudden and easy solution to one of mankind's oldest problems."

"The problem is that of abolishing war among nations, and a plan has to be designed which will bring to a halt this frightening race to create even more massive means of destruction.

"Although we have a great distance to travel, the initial steps must not be overly ambitious, for, until there is some greater degree of confidence and experience with arms control, only carefully-measured steps are feasible.

"The call to arms has been the historic means of settling differences among nations.

"There must, therefore, come into being, as national armaments diminish, an international force within the framework of United Nations to preserve the peace.

"A force to ensure that the seeds of conflict do not mature to the point where small nations, less endowed with the elements of national power, or even large nations, would be threatened by a more powerful and more highly-organized State.

"The establishment of such a force will be fraught with great difficulties—but how much more difficult and unhappy the alternative?

"We must determine those arrangements by which military forces can be limited and reduced.

"We must arrange for reduction of armaments as forces are reduced.

"We must find means to halt the uninhibited growth of nuclear stock-piles.

"We must take immediate action to prevent the extension of the arms race into outer space.

"We must develop arrangements to afford greater protection to all States against surprise attacks and lessen the danger of war by accident or miscalculation.

"We must agree on measures which will reduce the threat of missile attack.

"We must establish an international disarmament organization to supervise and verify the performance of these arrangements.

"From these can come some reduction in tensions, for which the world so anxiously waits. Effective verification will be required. This is a difficult problem—more difficult for some than for others.

"We must patiently find our way through this difficulty. Our speed will be determined by the willingness of States to permit verification of fulfilment of their commitments.

"We would only deceive ourselves and those millions who are hungering for peace—if we were to place our names on some grand, but hollow design, some ambitious but unenforceable scheme, some unrealistically timed programme of disarmament.

"Our most urgent task is, therefore, to sort out, to define, and to agree on those initial steps which will bring increased security to each nation—steps which will provide the experience and evidence of performance that are essential to the more far-reaching measures to come."

General E. L. M. Burns (Canada) spoke of the terrifying prospects opened up by the development of ballistic weapons.

He said that the world was living under "fear of the unknown" and of aggression. The first task of the Conference was to dispel this sense of fear.

M Jules Moch (France) said that the new weapons were of such destructive power that no one would willingly utilize them.

He added that there was, however, the risk of a "catastrophe through an error" and they had to face the problem of how they were going to deal with missiles and operational satellites.

Western Disarmament Plan:

The Western Disarmament Plan, to be implemented in three stages, was presented to the 10-nation Disarmament Committee on March 16 by the British delegate, Mr. David Ormsby-Gore.

Mr. Ormsby-Gore explained that he was presenting the Plan not only for Britain but also on behalf of Canada, France, Italy and the United States.

He said that the need for disarmament was two-fold: first, because the present level of world armaments was fantastically expensive; and secondly, because of the need to create confidence among nations—confidence that they would not be attacked by other nations or groups of nations.

To this end, any disarmament plan must be based on three essentials: (1) It must not give significant military advantage to any nation or group of nations over any others. From this it followed that disarmament must be comprehensive and world-wide, and embrace all kinds of forces and weapons, conventional as well as nuclear. (2) Need for effective control measures. Control should be a means to an end, not an end in itself. Control without a commensurate measure of disarmament was not objective. But, equally, disarmament without control could not produce the confidence the nations were seeking. (3) Steady progress should be made towards a definite and openly declared final goal. Confidence was like a living organism; it was something that must grow gradually. And confidence that could grow up as a result of genuine progress towards disarmament should help the nations of the world to find solutions to their political problems. This inter-action could bring important benefits.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Turning from the general philosophy on which any plan must be based to the specific proposals he had laid before the Conference, he said the most important feature of the Western Plan was that it was complete and comprehensive. It covered the whole field of weapons, conventional and nuclear, and the means of delivering them, production of weapons, accumulation of military stocks and all armed forces. The final aim of the Plan was "to reduce national armed forces and armaments to the levels required by internal security and fulfilment of obligations under the United Nations Charter."

The second major feature of the Plan, he said, was its realism. It was a practical Plan which did not call upon nations to make any great act of faith, or subscribe to far-reaching commitments, before there had been some practical demonstration of goodwill on all sides. This meant that the measures proposed in the first stage of the Plan were fairly modest. From these modest beginnings confidence would be built up, allowing nations to proceed to more far-reaching measures proposed in the second stage.

On the timing of the Plan, he suggested that the first stage might take about one year. He did not wish to be specific about the timing of the later stages, but drew attention to the paragraph in the Plan which said that the second stage should be completed "as rapidly as possible upon the successful conclusion of relevant preparatory studies."

While the physical measures of disarmament outlined in the Plan were being carried through, he said, the all-important international disarmament organization, to supervise and enforce the whole process, would be growing in authority, stature and complexity.

Finally, in the third stage of the Plan, the suggested international organization to preserve world peace would be established within the framework of United Nations. This new organization must be so established that its functions could not be frustrated or rendered impotent by the actions of a Small Power or group of Powers. It must be an organization before which all nations would stand equal, and in which all nations could trust to ensure that their rights and integrity were protected.

The five Western nations had not attempted to set out details of this supreme authority, and they looked forward to working these out with their colleagues on the Committee.

Mr. David Ormsby-Gore said:

"It would be a depressing commentary on the intelligence of the human race if we could find no better way of safeguarding peace and the security and independence of nations than by a huge expenditure upon a vast range of powerful armaments which everyone prays will never be used.

"Any proposals, if they are to be acceptable, must be such that they give equal security to all. Our goal of comprehensive disarmament must, therefore, be arrived at by successive stages, each of which preserves a satisfactory military balance between countries and groups of countries. The balance must be retained, but at a steadily decreasing level of forces and armaments.

"At the moment we all expend what to most people seem a deeply shocking proportion of our resources in minds as well as in materials in order to equip our forces with ever more sophisticated weapons of war. This misuse of human talents and the world's wealth is something we all recognize should be brought to an end. Every one of us can think of a thousand things that cry out to be done and which could be done if only the resources were available to us. The needs of the less developed countries in which the majority of the human race still lives are particularly in our minds.

"We know that if, through disarmament, we can divert some of our energies to meet these urgent needs, we can bring benefits to all mankind. This in itself should increase our determination to reach a worthwhile agreement at this Conference.

"That both East and West have an overwhelming mutual interest in disarmament is beyond dispute. The problem is: how are we to give all the nations concerned the assurance that the process itself will not endanger their security? How do we ensure that at each stage the balance of military power is not significantly changed? For if the balance—precarious though it may be—is upset, then we shall not have diminished the risk of war; we shall have increased it, and thus betrayed the aims and purposes that have brought us here."

Text Of Western Plan:

The following is the text of the Western Plan:

"(A). The ultimate goal is a secure free, peaceful world in which there shall be general disarmament under effective international control and agreed procedures for the settlement of disputes in accordance with the principles of the United Nations Charter.

"(B). The task of the 10-nation Disarmament Conference should be to work out measures leading toward general disarmament, which can only be attained by balanced, phased and safeguarded agreements.

"(C). All measures of disarmament must be observed and verified by an appropriate international organization.

Section 1:

"The following measures are proposed, with the recommendation that they be undertaken forthwith:

"A. Establishment of an International Disarmament Organization by progressive steps following the joint study of the composition and functions of such an organization and its relationship to United Nations (taking into account previous experience in this field).

"B. Prior notification to the International Disarmament Organization of proposed launchings of space vehicles and the establishment of co-operative arrangements for communicating to the International Disarmament Organization data obtained from available tracking facilities.

"C. Collection of information on present force levels (active uniformed military manpower) and on armaments pertaining to land, sea and air forces possessed by various Powers. The collection of information would be based mainly on declarations by States according to predetermined and mutually agreed criteria.

"D. Co-ordinated reduction or limitation of force levels and conventional armaments upon the establishment of agreed arrangements and procedures for initial and continuing verification by the International Disarmament Organization as follows:

"(1) Initial force level ceiling to be: 2,500,000 for the Soviet Union; 2,500,000 for the United States; and agreed appropriate force levels for certain other States.

"(2) Each State, party to the agreement, shall place in storage depots within its own territories, and under the supervision of the International Disarmament Organization, agreed types and quantities of conventional armaments to be set forth in lists annexed to the agreement and bearing a relationship to the agreed force levels.

"E. Submission by various States to the International Disarmament Organization of data relating to the operation of their financial system as it affects military expenditures, the amount of their military expenditures and the percentage of their gross national product earmarked for military expenditures. The data to be submitted will be drawn up in accordance with predetermined and mutually agreed criteria.

"F. Joint studies will be undertaken immediately on the following subjects:

"(1) Measures to assure compliance with an agreement that no nation shall place into orbit or station in outer space weapons of mass destruction, including provision for on-site inspection.

"(2) Measures to assure compliance with an agreement on prior notification of missile launchings, according to predetermined and mutually agreed criteria, and on declarations to the International Disarmament Organization of locations of launching sites and places of manufacture of such missiles.

"(3) Measures to assure compliance with an agreement to discontinue the manufacture of fissionable materials for weapons purposes.

"(4) Arrangements required to carry out an agreement to transfer, under international supervision and control, fissionable material from past production to non-weapons uses, including stock-piling.

"(5) Measures to give participating States greater protection against surprise attack, with effective verification procedures, including aerial inspection, ground observers at agreed points, mobile ground teams, overlapping radar, notification of aircraft flights and appropriate communications facilities and arrangements.

"(6) Measures to verify budgetary information submitted by various States to the International Disarmament Organization.

"(7) Means of preventing aggression and preserving world peace and security, as national armaments are reduced, by an international organization, to be an organ of, or linked to, United Nations.

"(8) Timing and manner of extending a Disarmament Agreement so as to include other States having significant military capabilities, with a view to the holding of a Disarmament Conference.

Section 2:

"The following measures will be undertaken as rapidly as possible upon the successful completion of the relevant preparatory studies outlined in Section 1:

"A. Prohibition against placing into orbit or stationing in outer space vehicles capable of mass destruction to be effective immediately after the installation and effective operation of an agreed control system to verify this measure.

"B. Prior notification to the International Disarmament Organization of proposed launchings of missiles according to predetermined and mutually agreed criteria, and declarations of locations of launching sites, and places of manufacture of such missiles, with agreed verification, including on-site inspection of the launching sites of such missiles.

"C. Cessation of production of fissionable materials for weapons purposes immediately after the installation and effective operation of an agreed control system to verify this measure, conditional upon satisfactory progress in the field of conventional disarmament.

"D. Agreed quantities of fissionable material from past production to be transferred, under international supervision and control, to non-weapons users, including stock-piling, immediately upon the installation and effective operation of an agreed control system to verify the cessation of production of fissionable materials for weapons purposes.

"E. Establishment of appropriate measures to give participating States greater protection against surprise attacks, including aerial inspection, ground observers at agreed points, mobile ground teams, overlapping radar, notification of aircraft flights and appropriate communications.

"F. A Disarmament Conference with other States having significant military capabilities, called to consider their accession to the Disarmament Agreement, including their acceptance of appropriate reductions or limitations of their respective force levels and armaments.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"G. Force level ceilings for all militarily significant States and appropriate inspection and verification measures to go into effect simultaneously with the establishment of force level ceilings of 2,100,000 for the United States and USSR. At the same time, each of the States participating shall agree to place in storage depots agreed types and quantities of armaments in agreed relation to the force level ceilings.

"H. Establishment of measures to verify budgetary information.

"I. Further progressive development of the International Disarmament Organization.

"J. Initial establishment of an International Organization to preserve world peace.

Section 3:

"The foregoing represents measures which should be negotiated and put into effect as rapidly as possible. Below are additional measures which are regarded as necessary for achieving the ultimate goal:

"A. Reduction of national armed forces and armaments by progressive safeguarded steps (after such further joint studies as may be necessary) to levels required by internal security and the fulfilment of obligations under the United Nations Charter to the end that no single nation or group of nations can effectively oppose the enforcement of international law.

"B. Measures toward this objective, phased to coincide with the build-up of international law enforcement capability to preserve world peace, and with the extension of the International Disarmament Organization to provide the necessary inspection and control, will include:

"(1) Prohibition of the production of nuclear, chemical, biological and other weapons of mass destruction.

"(2) Further reduction of existing stocks of nuclear, chemical, biological and other weapons of mass destruction, further transfer of fissionable materials to peaceful use, and further steps, in the light of the latest scientific knowledge, to achieve the final elimination of these weapons.

"(3) Measures to ensure the use of outer space for peaceful purposes only.

"(4) Control of the production of agreed categories of military missiles and existing national stocks and their final elimination.

"(5) Establishment of effective international control over military budgets.

"(6) Completion of the establishment of international organizations and arrangements to preserve world peace.

"(7) Final reduction of military manpower and armaments to levels required for the objective stated in paragraph A above, including the disposition of surplus armaments.

"(8) Control over the production of all remaining types of armaments to ensure that production is limited to that required for the purposes specified in paragraph A."

Mr. V. Zorin's Speech:

The leader of the Soviet delegation, Mr. Valerian Zorin, said he would not offer comment on the Western five-Power Plan until he had had time to study it carefully.

Instead, he said, his delegation wanted to lay before the Conference further details of the proposals outlined by the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, in United Nations on September 18, 1959.

[For Mr. Khruschev's proposals on general and complete disarmament see page 2989.]

He called on the Conference to proceed immediately to the discussion of the Soviet plan put before the United Nations General Assembly and said that the Soviet delegation was prepared to consider any amendments to the Russian plan.

He said that the Governments of India, Indonesia, Burma and Afghanistan had come out with "a high appreciation and support" of the Soviet proposal on general and complete disarmament. General and complete disarmament was supported by the overwhelming majority of the population of the world. There still existed forces in the world which offered stubborn resistance to genuine disarmament. "These circles are not only trying to prevent the implementation of general and complete disarmament but are taking steps for further intensification of the arms race. Is it not testified to by such steps as preparations for the establishment of a joint nuclear force of the NATO military bloc or arrangements for the deployment of FRG (West Germany) military bases on the territory of Spain and of a number of other States?"

He said: "The Soviet delegation believes that in the interests of securing stable peace and the peaceful co-existence of States, the 10-nation Committee should promptly proceed to the practical realization of the decision of the UN General Assembly which approved the idea of general and complete disarmament and transmitted the Soviet proposal on this question to the Committee for detailed consideration."

Russian Plan Explained:

The Soviet Disarmament Plan was explained at length at a news conference in Geneva on March 16 by the leader of the Soviet delegation, Mr. V. Zorin.

He said that the questions now being discussed were of immense international significance. The Soviet delegation had submitted for the Committee's detailed consideration the Soviet proposals for total and universal disarmament, which were presented by the Head of the Soviet Government, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, to the United Nations General Assembly on September 18, 1959.

He pointed out that the Soviet Union proceeded on the assumption that an agreement on the complete cessation of tests of all types of nuclear weapons would be reached before the Soviet disarmament programme was begun or put into effect. This would be the first step towards an end of the nuclear arms race and the beginning of nuclear disarmament.

He said it seemed expedient to provide as a first stage measure of universal and complete disarmament a programme for the reduction of the armed forces of the Soviet Union, the United States and the People's Republic of China to 1,700,000 each; Great Britain and France to 650,000 each; and of all other nations to levels which would be agreed upon at a special session of the United Nations General Assembly or at a World Conference for total and universal disarmament.

Such a substantial reduction of armed forces would attest to the earnest intentions of the Great Powers to liquidate international tensions and to their determination to carry through a policy of peace.

Commenting on control over the reduction of armed forces, he said that such controls must guarantee fulfilment by all States of appropriate commitments. It was proposed to set up an international control agency to which States would submit information on their armed forces and conventional armaments. The machinery of control would begin operating simultaneously with the beginning of the disbandment of troops in the first stage, in order to ensure verification by the international controllers of precise and undeviating fulfilment by the States of the agreed measures on such reduction.

In the second stage of general and complete disarmament, it was envisaged to complete the liquidation of the remaining national armed forces, to liquidate all military bases on alien soil, to withdraw to within one's own national boundaries and disband all forces now on alien soil.

The complete liquidation of the armed forces would require 1½ years or at the most two years. This, in his view, was quite enough to carry out also such measures as the dismantling of foreign bases in the territories of various countries and also discontinuation of production of all types of conventional arms.

Measures of the second stage would be carried out under the same strict international control as the measures of the first stage.

In the third stage of the Soviet Disarmament Plan, all types of nuclear and rocket weapons must be destroyed and the liquidation of the entire military machinery of the States fully accomplished.

The implementation of the third stage measures could not cause any great difficulties and approximately one year would be required for this.

He added: "We believe that this is not only a radical programme of solving the disarmament problem as soon as possible but also quite a feasible programme."

Answering questions, Mr. Zorin said that he considered the Western Plan impractical since it had no time-limit and, therefore, it was impossible to implement it. "It would be impossible to control its implementation since you cannot control a plan without a time-limit. There is also no basis for implementation in the Western Plan."

Asked whether communist China would agree to the troop reduction proposed by the Soviet Union without taking part in the disarmament talks, he said that the Chinese had fully supported the Soviet Plan; so this question was redundant. However, it was obvious that the provisions of any agreement could not be carried out without her participation and consent.

Replying to another question, he said that there was no foundation for the fear that, in the absence of any international police force after general and complete disarmament, the security of some weaker States might be threatened by nations with stronger internal police forces.

It was quite obvious that the security of States after general and complete disarmament would be guaranteed by the fact of disarmament itself. This security would be "hundreds of thousands of times" safer than a situation in which big armed forces existed.

If nations were able to reach agreement on disarmament, they would be able also to agree on the maintenance of peace and security. The atmosphere between nations would have changed completely and the question of interference in the internal affairs of other States would not arise.

Finally, the existence of United Nations would give every possibility for peace and security through agreements within its framework on all outstanding issues.

There must be an agreement for the complete cessation of all types of nuclear weapons tests before the implementation of a programme for general and complete disarmament.

Asked if he meant that Russia considered a nuclear weapons tests ban a prior necessity for disarmament, he replied that the Soviet Union was laying down no prior conditions for disarmament, but an agreement on a nuclear weapons tests ban would be a very important factor and a "first sign of good-will" on the road to disarmament.

He considered that the Disarmament Plan put before the UN General Assembly in September, 1959 by Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, British Foreign Secretary, had been superseded by the Western five-Power draft and would not be considered by the Conference.

In the Soviet Plan, the system of controls for each of the three States must be agreed upon before the conclusion of a Disarmament Treaty. These control systems could be included in an annexure to the Treaty.

USA Proposes Three Immediate Measures:

On March 17, the United States proposed three immediate measures: (1) Ban nuclear weapons in outer space; (2) "Audit" and verification of missile launching; and (3) Halt military production of nuclear materials.

The US delegate, Mr. Frederick Eaton, said that these measures could be adopted immediately, if people wanted them. "We must walk before we run—and as yet we have scarcely begun to walk."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Polish delegate, Mr. Marjan Naszkowski, supported the Soviet Plan and emphasized its four-year time-limit.

He put three questions to the Western side:

(1) What would be the function of the International Disarmament Organization proposed by the West and what concrete relation would it have to disarmament in the early stages?

(2) What would happen to arms put in storage—who would have the "key" to it?

(3) What was the purpose of demanding information on budgets proposed in the Western Plan?

Mr. Juri Nosek, the Czechoslovak delegate, also spoke in support of the Soviet Plan for general and complete disarmament and said that he had four questions to put to the Western side:

(1) What did the West propose to do about cutting down general staffs, war ministries and military training?

(2) What were the West's proposals concerning the liquidation of foreign bases?

(3) At what stage in its Plan did the West intend to ban nuclear weapons tests?

(4) What measures did the West propose to destroy stock-piles of nuclear weapons and who would be responsible for converting nuclear materials to peaceful purposes?

Speaking on March 18, M Jules Moch (France) said that in reducing conventional forces, two factors had to be known—the initial figure on which reductions were made and the final result. If there was no sure way of verifying both these factors, then control would be only illusory.

He said that the two sides should search for elements of agreement and disagreement between them on this question.

France, he said, agreed with the Soviet delegation in not wanting "control without disarmament" nor "disarmament without control." These were important questions of clarification for the subsequent work of the Conference.

Mr. Edouard Mezincesco (Rumania) said that the communist side would accept the maximum control which was feasible in the light of technical and scientific knowledge.

Mr. Frederick Eaton (USA) said that the Western side was now prepared to examine various elements in a disarmament plan.

At the meeting on March 21, the Italian delegate, Mr. Gaetano Martino, answered questions raised by the Soviet Union and her allies on the details of the Western Plan .

Referring to foreign bases, he said that they would cease to exist following general disarmament.

On the proposed International Disarmament Organization, he said that it would collect and examine information from various States concerning what arms they had in hand. This would be the initial stage, and would be followed by an inspection of stock-piles and other control operations.

Mr. David Ormsby-Gore (UK) said that the Soviet Plan was much vaguer than previous Russian proposals.

He added that important points like international control and inspection were missing in the Soviet Plan. Also, whereas the Soviet Union had accepted the principle of aerial inspection four years ago, this had been omitted in the new proposals.

Replying to points made by the Western delegates, Mr. V. Zorin (USSR) said that he was prepared to make reasonable amendments to the Russian Plan.

Details Of International Disarmament Organisation:

On March 22, the Western side gave the Conference details of the International Disarmament Organization to preserve world peace, which was proposed in its Plan.

The tasks of this Organization were spelt out by the French delegate, M Jules Moch, as follows:

(1) To lay down international law;

(2) To apply this law in individual cases; and

(3) To put into effect its decisions.

The decisions would, if necessary, be enforced by an international police force which was also proposed in the Western Plan.

In defining the tasks of the International Organization to preserve world peace, he said that it would be in the frame-work of United Nations.

The main theme of M Moch's speech was the problem of keeping the peace in a disarmed world.

He suggested that disarmament be built up by stages in line with the growth of confidence and international trust.

This might be slower but was a surer way of achieving the objective of complete disarmament than the Soviet Plan.

He was quoted by Conference sources as saying: "I ask the defenders of the Soviet Plan to reflect on the anarchy and the risk which a totally disarmed world would represent without being controlled by international law. The Soviet Plan does not provide for the setting up of an International Organization to preserve world peace nor does it provide for the establishing of an International Disarmament Organization and an international police force."

Russia Agrees To Controls:

On March 23, Mr. V. Zorin declared that Russia was willing to establish at every stage of disarmament a corresponding stage of control, from the beginning of the process to its completion.

He complained that the West had distorted the Russian position on this question.

But, he added, the Soviet Union would not accept a system of control with possibilities of espionage, such as sending a controller to a nation to verify arms which were not subject to disarmament.

He also criticized the Western three-phase Plan and said that in some parts it proposed control without disarmament.

The Rumanian delegate, Mr. E. Mezincesco, said that with the advent of disarmament important psychological changes would occur. No misunderstanding which might then arise could deteriorate into an armed conflict. The UN Charter was an adequate instrument to maintain peace.

He said that in any case he failed to see the usefulness of an international police force. If such a force were to be created before disarmament, it would have to be equipped with nuclear weapons. This would then constitute a new Atomic Power.

On March 24, the Western side told the Conference that it thought the two sides were agreed on six aspects of international control of any agreed disarmament measures:

(1) Acceptance of the need for an International Disarmament Organization or some organ to control disarmament.

(2) The need for control from the very first stage of disarmament.

(3) Once a measure of disarmament was completed, control must be maintained to prevent secret violations.

(4) The need for participation of all States in a Disarmament Agreement. All countries signing a Disarmament Treaty should make statements of the level of their forces and conventional armaments.

(5) Reductions of armed forces and armaments must be controlled.

(6) The necessity of verification of disarmament measures by international controllers or inspectors.

On March 25, Mr. David Ormsby-Gore (UK) intervened in the debate to say that the time-limit of four years for complete disarmament in the Soviet Plan was unrealistic.

Mr. Juri Nosek (Czechoslovakia) criticised the Western Plan and said that any proposal to be realistic must contain time-limits for the implementation of determined tasks.

M Jules Moch (France) said that the West would not agree to any specific disarmament measures without a discussion of corresponding control action.

Lt.-General E. L. M. Burns (Canada) said it was unreal to believe that if there was no international peace-keeping machinery after disarmament, there would be more danger of larger States interfering in the internal affairs of smaller nations.

He said he had some experience of this in West Asia, where men armed only with pistols and light guns had carried out acts of aggression.

Despatches from Geneva on March 25 said that Russia had, on that day, virtually turned down America's proposal that concrete discussions on control machinery should begin the following week. The Russian contention was that the Conference should first agree on the relevant disarmament measures.

The Russian delegate, Mr. V. Zorin, said he did not think that the Western three-phase disarmament Plan provided a basis for agreement, but that did not mean that there were no points of agreement between them.

He listed the following points of agreement:

(1) The need to begin general and complete disarmament;

(2) The proposal to reduce armed forces and conventional armaments;

(3) The importance of nuclear disarmament; and

(4) The maxim "no disarmament without control and no control without disarmament."

Western 10-Point Plan For International Inspection And Control:

On March 28, the Italian delegate, Mr. M. F. Cavaletti, put forward the Western 10-point Plan for international inspection, supervision and control of agreed world disarmament measures.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Plan outlined details of the initial functions of the International Disarmament Organization which the West had proposed should be set up in the first phase of disarmament to police all disarmament measures.

The main features of the Plan were: measures to receive prior notification of launching of satellites; to set up a centre for collecting information about the level of armaments; to verify and check arrangements for reductions in the levels of armed forces and cuts in conventional weapons; to cut off the production of fissionable materials for military use; to establish procedures for the inspection and control of the military operations of important Powers in order to prohibit secret re-arming and provide protection against surprise attacks.

Presenting the Plan, Mr. Cavaletti said that the International Disarmament Organization proposed by the West would be linked to United Nations and would become a paramount peace-keeping body.

Its main duties would be to watch for the launching of satellites capable of carrying mass destruction weapons and to halt the production of fissionable materials for military purposes.

Mr. V. Zorin (USSR) said that the Conference would have to reach agreement on disarmament before it could start talking about control.

Mr. F. Eaton (USA) recalled the recent statement of the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, that the United States would never accept an agreement on disarmament without substantial control.

The Soviet Union offered on March 30 to extend the four-year time-limit it proposed for complete disarmament.

Russia Rejects Western Plan:

On April 4, the Soviet Union formally rejected the Western three-stage Plan for disarmament saying that it did not contain measures providing for general and complete disarmament.

After the meeting of the Conference, Mr. V. Zorin (USSR) told a news conference that it was clear that the Western Powers were neither ready nor desired to work out a Treaty, but only wanted to continue endless talks on control measures.

Commenting on the suggestion made on April 1 by the US delegate, Mr. F. Eaton, for an immediate ban on weapons of mass destruction in outer space, he said that the United States only wanted controls over weapons in which she was inferior.

[Mr. Eaton had said on April 1 that the Soviet three-stage Plan for total disarmament within four years did not meet the objective of general and complete disarmament under effective international control.]

In the Conference room, Mr. V. Zorin was highly critical of the six points put forward by the US delegate, Mr. Frederick Eaton, on April 1.

He said that the attitude of the United States delegation at the Conference "only strengthened everyone's assumption that the United States' aim had nothing in common with the objective of general and complete disarmament."

The United Nations resolution on disarmament had been transmitted to the Disarmament Conference by 82 States and no delegation had the right to try and side-step the question of general and complete disarmament.

He asked the Conference:

"(1) To proceed without delay to work out a Treaty on general and complete disarmament or, at first, of the basic provisions of such a Treaty, or its basic principles.

"(2) To agree, as the first task, on the general scope of measures for general and complete disarmament.

"(3) To define the stages and time-limits for the implementation of general and complete disarmament in order to give the programme for such disarmament concrete nature and sequence.

"(4) To provide for the establishment of effective international control at all stages of general and complete disarmament with regard to specific measures on disarmament so that not a single State could evade the fulfilment of obligations assumed in conformity with the Treaty on general and complete disarmament."

West Rejects Soviet Plan:

On April 5, Mr. Edouard Mezincesco (Rumania) analysed at length the first two stages of the Western Plan and concluded that they would increase the danger of war, particularly nuclear war.

The French delegate, M Jules Moch, said that he could not agree to take the Soviet Plan or any similar plan as a basis for discussion for the following reasons:

"(1) The West cannot agree to a precise time-limit, except for simple operations, and this on a basis of reasonable estimates and not as an imperative must.

"(2) The West cannot give precedence to disarmament of conventional weapons alone because this did not mean much in an era of rockets, satellites and other such weapons.

"(3) The West cannot agree with the extreme conclusions of the Soviet Plan nor to destroy all military organizations because of certain Treaty-imposed commitments.

"(4) The West cannot agree to base nuclear disarmament on mere declarations that were uncontrollable.

"(5) The West cannot agree to a plan which would define, once and for all, all the different stages of a general and complete disarmament because of the uncertain conditions prevailing in the world today.

"(6) The West cannot, at any moment, separate a disarmament measure from the corresponding effective controls."

On April 7, Mr. V. Zorin urged the Disarmament Conference to develop the United Nations resolution of November, 1959 on general and complete disarmament and said that since everyone seemed to agree with this resolution, they should try to find acceptable basic conditions directly resulting from it.

A Soviet spokesman declined to comment on whether Mr. Zorin meant the Conference should stop discussions on the rival plans and concentrate on the General Assembly's resolution.

He said: "The Soviet Plan calls for general and complete disarmament and the UN resolution calls for general and complete disarmament. I think our position is quite clear from Mr. V. Zorin's statement today."

Western Conference sources said that Mr. Zorin had returned to the known Soviet position that the Conference was given a mandate by United Nations to work out general and complete disarmament on the basis of Mr. Khruschev's plan. This was rejected by the West.

They added that the session on April 7 had provided no advance in the impasse over how to get down to detailed work following the rejection by both sides of each other's disarmament Plans.

Diplomatic observers said that the two sides had now rejected each other's Plans as not meeting the objective.

After the meeting was over on April 7, Mr. F. Eaton (USA) said that the United States remained flexible and ready to discuss concrete disarmament measures with the Russians.

He was commenting on Mr. V. Zorin's call for developing the United Nations resolution on general and complete disarmament.

He said that if Mr. Zorin's statement meant that he too was now ready to discuss concrete steps with corresponding controls, then, the Conference would make headway on its prescribed path. Otherwise, Mr. Zorin's statement would have to be regarded merely as a bid to present the usual Soviet position in another form.

Communist Countries Submit "Fundamental Principles":

On April 8, the Soviet delegation made a statement pointing out that the four weeks of discussion on general and complete disarmament by the 10 delegations had not narrowed the gap enough to begin drafting specific provisions of a Treaty on general and complete disarmament.

On behalf of the delegations of the Socialist countries, the Soviet delegation submitted the "fundamental principles of general and complete disarmament."

It said: "The Governments of the member-States of the 10-Nation Disarmament Conference being guided by the resolution of the 14th Session of the United Nations General Assembly of November 20, 1959 'On Total and Universal Disarmament', recognize the achievement of general and complete disarmament of all States as a pressing practical task on the basis of the following principles, in conformity with which a Treaty on universal and complete disarmament must be worked out:

"(1) General and complete disarmament includes disbandment of all armed forces, destruction of all armaments, cessation of all types of military production, liquidation of all bases on foreign territories, withdrawal of foreign troops from these territories and their disbandment, prohibition of nuclear, chemical bacteriological and rocket weapons, cessation of their production and destruction of their stocks, abolition of the organs and institutions meant for the organization of military service in the States (General Staffs, War Ministries and their local organs), prohibition of military training, liquidation of military educational establishments and discontinuation of appropriations for military purposes.

"(2) Total and universal disarmament shall be effected in agreed sequence by stages in a strictly fixed period of four years.

"(3) All measures envisaged in the programme of general and complete disarmament shall be effected under international control, the volume of which shall accord with the volume and nature of the disarmament measures taken in each stage. An international control agency shall be set up to organize control and inspection over disarmament taking into consideration all States and operating on the basis of special rules forming an integral part of the Disarmament Treaty.

"(4) After completing the programme of general and complete disarmament, States will have at their disposal only strictly limited contingents of police (militia) agreed for each country, armed with light fire-arms and meant solely to maintain internal order and protect the personal safety of the citizens.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"(5) The realization of the programme of general and complete disarmament by States cannot be suspended or made dependent on the fulfilment of any conditions the Treaty does not provide for.

"In the event of some States trying to circumvent or violate the Treaty on general and complete disarmament, the question about such a violation must be immediately considered by the Security Council and the United Nations General Assembly for the purpose of taking measures against the violator in conformity with the provisions of the United Nations Charter.

"The Governments of the member-States of the 10-Nation Disarmament Conference express confidence that the realization of general and complete disarmament in accordance with the afore-stated principles would for ever eliminate the threat of war and ensure stable peace to mankind already in the life-time of the present generation.

"As an act of goodwill and for the purpose of providing conditions necessary for the earliest conclusion of a Treaty on general and complete disarmament, the State-members of the Conference possessing nuclear weapons solemnly declare their refusal to be the first to use such weapons."

The French delegate, M Jules Moch, told the Soviet delegate, Mr. V. Zorin, that the proposal added nothing to the four-year Soviet Disarmament Plan presented on March 25 and later outlined in the Press.

On April 11, the Western Powers expressed "profound disappointment" at the five basic principles of disarmament put forward by Mr. V. Zorin on April 8.

Mr. D. Ormsby-Gore (UK) said that the Soviet proposals contained nothing new. One of the points made by Mr. Zorin on April 8 was that the nuclear Powers should immediately make a declaration that they would not be the first to use nuclear weapons.

He said, however, that he saw some hope of bringing together the Soviet and Western views on the duration of a first stage of disarmament, the process of disarmament and some concrete steps to end the fear of nuclear war.

M Jules Moch (France) said that the Soviet principles seemed to him like "the same old salad with a new Russian dressing."

In reply, Mr. Zorin asked the Western representatives to give more specific reasons why his Plan was unacceptable as a basis for negotiations.

On April 12, the Western delegations again appealed to the communist side to re-consider the United States' proposal to ban immediately the launching of any nuclear weapons into outer space.

Mr. F. Eaton (USA) said that after studying Mr. V. Zorin's statement proposing that the Conference try to reach agreement on disarmament principles, he wondered whether Russia was departing from the United Nations resolution of November, 1959.

That resolution, he said, did not suggest that the 10-Power Conference talk about principles but about specific disarmament measures. The adoption of principles would not result in the return of a single soldier to his home, in the abandonment of a single weapon, or in a halt in the production of weapons. Mr. Zorin, he added, was asking the Conference to go backwards.

Four communist delegates — representatives of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Rumania—stressed the advantages of the Soviet Plan, listing the basic principles of complete and general disarmament.

M Jules Moch (France) contended that the Soviet proposals were identical to the Soviet disarmament Plan, which the Western Powers had already rejected.

Under those circumstances, he asked: "How can the Western delegations now accept the Soviet proposals?"

On April 13, M Moch warned the Conference of the danger if nuclear weapons spread to nations without "elements of stability and peace."

He said that the maturity of the present four Atomic Powers—United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France—put aside all risks of universal annihilation.

He added: "But other nations could join us in future years who may not have the same elements of stability and peace. Let us not believe that Prometheus will long remain in chains. The option facing us is this: either we must obtain nuclear disarmament linked to measures in the conventional field, or the threat remains to peace and civilization of the spread of nuclear arms."

On April 14, Mr. F. Eaton (USA) asked the Soviet delegation to choose any one of the concrete disarmament measures from the first stages of the Western Plan as a basis for initial discussion and negotiation.

He rejected the Soviet proposal that the nuclear Powers at the Conference should immediately declare that they would not be the first to use nuclear weapons. There must be effective international control for each agreed disarmament measure.

He added: "This principle explains why we cannot endorse measures related to the uncontrollable aspects of nuclear disarmament. This also explains why we consider it quite irresponsible to press for such measures as the prohibition or renunciation of the use of nuclear weapons so long as there is no known way of verifying every complaint.

"Can it be that they have so little interest in disarmament that they are not prepared to choose a single measure from the many which we have included?

"What can we here or the world draw from this refusal by the Soviets to discuss disarmament but that they have determined not to enter into real disarmament?"

On April 20, Mr. V. Zorin told the Western delegates that their disarmament measures were a bit "shop-worn" and that the communist side was "not prepared to proceed to that sort of shopping."

He said that all the measures listed by the US delegate, Mr. F. Eaton, were provisions of control and not disarmament. "We will readily discuss all measures leading to the goal of general and complete disarmament. We will not discuss those that would not."

Verification Of Armed Forces—Four-Point Western Plan:

On April 21, Mr. F. Eaton (USA) put forward a four-point Plan to verify the strength of the armed forces of the Soviet Union and the United States. The Plan would be applied to other participant States later.

The four points of the Plan were:

(1) The Soviet Union and the United States and each participating State would declare initially and periodically thereafter the total number and general locations of her full-time uniformed personnel. Changes at agreed intervals would be reported.

(2) The territory of the Soviet Union and the United States would be subject to inspection by verification personnel within the agreed interval.

(3) The territory would be divided into areas whose personnel are to be checked and areas for checking would be selected at random in order to forestall re-deployment of forces to conform with declared data.

(4) Teams of verification personnel would, at their own initiative and without any interference, go to the area and to the unit selected by the verification organization and, by checking the forces present, using acceptable sampling techniques, confirm or refute declared data, reporting the results of their work to the verification organization.

He said that for forces at sea it would be necessary that each ship, its home port and its personnel aboard the ships be verified while the ships are in port.

Mr. V. Zorin (USSR) said that he would study the proposal .

On April 22, Mr. F. Eaton (USA) charged that the Soviet Union was blocking progress in disarmament by reluctance to face the problem of international control.

He said that the statements from the Soviet side had paid lip service to the principle of strict international control, but Russia had been uniformly silent on specific control provisions.

He asked: "Is the Soviet Union, despite her boasts of strength and superiority, afraid to accept inspection on equal terms with the West? Or does the Soviet Union have something to hide of which she is ashamed? Why does the Soviet Union seem to regard controls as something to be avoided like the plague?"

Little progress could be hoped for, he added, unless the Conference could bring closer together the detailed views of both sides on the issue of control and inspection.

Mr. Valerian Zorin (USSR) said that the question was not whether they were for or against control, but whether they were for or against general and complete disarmament. That was the crux of the problem.

Western Conditions For Complete Disarmament:

On April 26, the Western delegations advanced four conditions for the fulfilment of general and complete disarmament under effective international control.

These, presented by M. Jules Moch (France), were:

"(1) Disarmament must be carried out by stages, each stage to be completed as rapidly as possible although no fixed time-table can be laid down in advance for the process as a whole.

"(2) Nuclear and conventional measures must be balanced so that no country or group of countries will obtain, at any stage, a significant military advantage and so that equal security for all will be maintained and thus international confidence progressively increased.

"(3) Disarmament measures must be effectively controlled throughout by an International Disarmament Organization within the framework of United Nations to ensure that compliance with these measures is verified from their entry into force and that there is no evasion throughout the disarmament process and thereafter.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"(4) Disarmament measures must be negotiated progressively according to the possibility of their early implementation and effective control."

The Western proposals also stated that any disarmament programme must provide for the use of outer space for peaceful purposes only and for the final elimination of weapons of mass destruction and the means of their delivery.

Conference Adjourns:

The Disarmament Conference adjourned on April 30 to meet again on June 7.

Mr. Frederick Eaton (USA)) issued a statement to newsmen without reading it in the Conference and M Jules Moch (France) reiterated the West's views in an interview.

Mr. V. Zorin (USSR) suggested that delegates discuss a final communique.

He said that the Western delegates did not want to mention either the points of closer agreement or the need to draw up a disarmament programme after the 'summit' conference.

Mr. David Ormsby-Gore (UK) replied that instead of closer agreement there had been rather a clarification of the existing differences.

Eastern delegates then took the floor to defend their disarmament Plan.

M Moch cut short the discussion by saying: "I believe it is really time for us to separate. We are faced with a devilish art of useless discussion and time-wasting.

"A communique must be adopted unanimously. We do not accept your Plan. You do not accept ours. Let us stick to the usual communique."

In his prepared statement, Mr. F. Eaton (USA) said:

"Let me with equal vigour and with the same sincerity make it clear that we will not drop our guard until such time as there shall come into being not only agreements but tangible evidence that the communists have in fact reduced their armed might and are in the course of eliminating it. We shall maintain those forces, those arms and those weapons which we deem necessary to the protection of ourselves and those countries which are to associate themselves with us as allies. We shall not waver in this, and if there be any thought in the minds of the Soviet leaders that their present tactics will bring about a relaxation of our efforts in this regard, let them be disabused.

"On the other hand, if they are serious about safeguarded disarmament, they will find us no less eager to throw away our arms—to meet them in competition for the improvement of standards of living everywhere and far more eager to share with peoples everywhere, within and outside the Soviet Union, those cultural and spiritual advantages which are the great heritage of the free world."

(The New York Times, Tass, The Statesman, Calcutta, UK High Commission, New Delhi, The Times, London and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2933:AOA:M, 2990:AOA:B, 3088:AOA:A, 3149:AOA:A, 3152:CHI:C, 3183:AOA:C]

B. Mr. Leonid Brezhnev Elected New President Of USSR: Speaking in the Supreme Soviet in Moscow on May 7 on behalf of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, referred to a request from the USSR President, Marshal K. E. Voroshilov, that he be released from his duties as President of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet in view of his poor health.

Mr. Khruschev then proposed that Marshal Voroshilov's request be granted.

He said: "I believe that we must express our gratitude to Marshal Voroshilov. He worked many years, was a true son of his Party and one of those who took part in its foundation and defended its cause on the fronts of the Civil War."

The entire labour and the entire activity of Marshal Voroshilov was directed to the benefit of the people of the Soviet Union and to the flourishing of the Communist Party.

He moved to bestow on Marshal Voroshilov the title of 'Hero of Socialist Labour' and read out a draft decree on the award of the title.

It said: "Noting Marshal Voroshilov's outstanding services to the Community Party and Soviet State, to confer on Kliment Voroshilov the title of 'Hero of Socialist Labour' with the presentation of the Order of Lenin and the 'Hammer and Sickle' gold medal."

The session of the Supreme Soviet granted Mr. Voroshilov's request and released him from his duties as President.

It also endorsed a decree awarding the outgoing President the title of 'Hero of Socialist Labour' with the presentation of the Order of Lenin and the Hammer and Sickle gold medal.

Mr. N. Khruschev also announced that the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union had nominated Mr. Leonid Brezhnev for the post of President of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of USSR.

Mr. Khruschev described Mr. Brezhnev as an outstanding public leader.

Mr. Brezhnev is a member of the Presidium of the CPSU Central Committee and has been Deputy of three USSR Supreme Soviets.

Mr. Khruschev said that the Central Committee of the CPSU was convinced that Mr. Brezhnev was a worthy candidate for the post of President.

The session then resolved to elect Mr. Leonid Brezhnev as President.

It also elected Marshal Voroshilov as a member of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of USSR.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3154:INI:A]

C. Working Hours Reduced In Russia: In connexion with the completion of the transition of all factory and office workers to a 7 or 6-hour working day in 1960, the Supreme Soviet adopted a law on May 7 amending Article 119 of the USSR Constitution defining the right of Soviet citizens to recreation and rest.

This Article now reads as follows: "The right to rest and leisure is ensured by the establishment of a seven-hour day for factory and office workers, the reduction of the working day to six hours for arduous trades and to four hours in shops where conditions of work are particularly arduous; by the institution of annual vacations with full pay for factory and office workers, by the provision of a wide net-work of sanatoria, rest homes and clubs for the accommodation of the working people."

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 2567:AOA:A]

D. Sierra Leone To Become Independent: The British Colonial Secretary, Mr. Iain MacLeod, signed a report on May 4 which gives the British colony of Sierra Leone, in West Africa, independence on April 27, 1961.

In his speech at the conclusion of the constitutional talks in London, Mr. MacLeod said that Sierra-Leone and Britain had been friends for 150 years, and all who had taken part in the constitutional talks were determined that that friendship should continue for "all the years that lay ahead of them."

After signing the report, the Prime Minister of Sierra Leone, Sir Milton Margal, said that it was a memorable day for his country and thanked Mr. MacLeod and the British Government for "the confidence they had shown in his delegation."

Sir Milton told newsmen later that the British Government would sponsor Sierra Leone's membership of the Commonwealth.

An official statement issued after the talks said that in the period before independence, it had been agreed that the Premier would take over the presidency of the Executive Council from the Governor, and Executive and Judicial Committees would be set up. Ministers would be associated with the handling of defence, police and external affairs.

It was also agreed that the Sierra Leone and United Kingdom Governments would negotiate an agreement for mutual defence co-operation to be signed after independence.

To assist Sierra Leone's economic expansion in the face of the initial burdens of independence, including defence and compensation, the United Kingdom Government offered assistance totalling £7,500,000. This was accepted by the Sierra Leone Government.

The delegates left Britain on May 12.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3317:AOA:B and C]

E. US Nuclear Submarine "Triton" Completes A 36,000-Mile Underwater Voyage Round The World: It was announced in Washington on May 10 that the American nuclear submarine, Triton, had completed a 36,000-mile under-water trip round the world.

This historic feat by the world's largest submarine followed approximately the course charted by the navigator, Ferdinand Magellan, in his expedition of 1519-21, which first circled the globe.

President D. D. Eisenhower awarded the Legion of Merit to the Triton's commanding officer, Captain Edward L. Beach, at a White House ceremony on May 10.

The Triton sailed from New London, Connecticut, on February 16 and submerged that afternoon. She surfaced on the morning of May 10 off Rehoboth, Delaware, after completing the journey of approximately 36,000 miles in 84 days.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2234:AOA:C]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10 Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95|-; Foreign Rs. 115|- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

June 11—17, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 24

BURMA

A. Equal Shares Proposal For Oil Industry: The Prime Minister, U Nu, told a news conference in Rangoon on May 17 that the Government was considering a proposal by the British-owned Burmah Oil Company that the country's oil industry should be operated on a 50-50 basis with the Government.

He said that the Company's counter-proposal followed the Government's recent announcement in Parliament that it wanted to acquire a 51 per cent interest in the industry. Burmah Oil, at the moment, owned two-thirds of the industry and the Burmese Government one-third.

He added that the Government had decided in principle that imports of oil into Burma should be handled by Burmese nationals instead of foreign firms, but that the oil agencies would be handed over gradually.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3275:BUR:B]

CHINA

A. Productivity Gains: Writing in the Communist Party theoretical journal Red Flag, on May 15, one of the Vice-Premiers, Mr. Po I-po, said that technical innovation had become a nation-wide movement in China.

He said that labour productivity in the first quarter of 1960 was 85 per cent above that in the same period of 1959, "which is something entirely new."

Every field of activity, according to him, "presented a stirring picture of a great 'leap forward'" and the 1960 production plan, dependent upon an output of nearly 18,500,000 tons of steel, was certain to be over-fulfilled.

The movement, he said, had extended rapidly from industry, agriculture, construction, transport and communications to the cultural and educational departments, to various service trades and to other spheres. It had extended from cities to smaller towns and the vast rural areas.

Mr. Po I-po, who is also Chairman of the State Economic Commission, referred to the "millions" of innovations effected in China and said that many of the inventors were ordinary workers and peasants.

In this technological revolution, he said, the mechanization of heavy manual labour and tedious hand operations had received special attention. Most technical enterprises had spare-time technical classes and some had scientific research institutes as well.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3266:CHI:C]

JAPAN

A. Diet Approves US-Japan Mutual Security Treaty—Anti-Government Demonstrations: The Lower House of the Diet approved the revised 10-year US-Japan Mutual Security Treaty on May 19.

Opposition Socialist and Democratic Socialist members who had earlier threatened to physically object to the approval of the Treaty boycotted the plenary session. They blocked the corridors to prevent the members of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party from going in to vote on the Treaty.

A total of 117 persons were injured when the police cleared the way for the Speaker and other members who wanted to go in. Five of the injured were the ruling Party members, 16 were Socialists and the rest policemen. The Socialists resisted attempts to dislodge them.

The Senate is yet to approve it.

From the outset, the US-Japan Mutual Security Treaty had come under heavy fire. The Opposition factions had attacked it strongly. Mass organizations like Sohyo (the Socialist Trade Union Federation) and Zengakuren, the extremist Students' Association had organized popular demonstrations against it.

In many sectors of the population, there had developed an active resistance to defence commitments with USA which had its roots in the revulsion against former Japanese militarism, the atom-bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and the consequent desire to avoid participating in any future war.

Such Japanese had three main objections to the Treaty:

(1) It had not been drafted on a basis of equality between USA and Japan. The Japanese could always claim that the original Treaty was thrust on them by their conquerors, but if the new Treaty was ratified, the communist States could accuse them of being accomplices of the Pentagon who must take the consequences of their actions.

(2) It obliged Japan to co-operate with USA if peace was threatened "in the Far East." No precise definition of this commitment had been made, and alarmists assumed that if, for example, the off-shore islands of Matsu and Quemoy became the object of a struggle between Communist and Nationalist Chinese, into which the US Seventh Fleet was drawn, Japan would also have to come in, at least as a staging and supply centre for US forces. (There is no question of Japanese self-defence forces, now about 220,000 strong, being sent overseas.)

(3) The clause providing for "prior consultations" between the Japanese and US Governments before US forces were deployed overseas from Japanese bases was equivocally worded. There was a strong feeling that the Treaty was not bound by close legal terminology but was based on a spirit of trust, and that its effective and smooth implementation depended on the goodwill of both parties.

Demonstrations:

On May 20, an estimated 1,000 students protesting against the ratification of the Treaty broke into the compound of the Premier, Mr. Nobusuke Kishi's official residence after clashing with the police.

The demonstrators threw gravel and flagpoles at the police and about 30 policemen and students were reported injured as the demonstrators fought their way into the compound, which is located next door to the Diet building. The demonstrators had been massed in front of the building, demanding the immediate dissolution of the Diet.

The students continued to demonstrate outside Mr. Kishi's residence, demanding his immediate resignation, shouting "Down with the Kishi regime" and chanting the Socialist Internationale.

The demonstrators, responding to a call by the Socialist and Communist Parties, also massed round the Diet building in drizzling rain to demand its immediate dissolution.

Earlier in the day (May 20), the Foreign Minister, Mr. Aiichiro Fujiyama, estimated at a news conference that 75 to 80 per cent of the Japanese voters approved the Treaty and that the Government saw no need to consult public opinion on the matter at this stage.

Under the Japanese Constitution, any Bill becomes law one month after being passed in the Lower House.

Resentment against the Treaty and the Government mounted to a high pitch on May 21 when demonstrations were held in several towns.

The Opposition Socialist members of Parliament numbering 40, among them top Party leaders, forced their way into Mr. Kishi's home and handed to him a resolution demanding his Cabinet's immediate resignation or the dissolution of Parliament.

However, Mr. Kishi rejected the Opposition Socialist demand that he either resign or dissolve Parliament in the face of the public out-cry against ratification of the Treaty.

Socialist quarters said that Mr. Kishi had told them that the dissolution of the Diet (Parliament) and his Cabinet's resignation might be "one way" of redeeming the political crisis, but that he had his "own unique way out in mind."

They said that Mr. Kishi's reply was "unsatisfactory" and that they would meet him again every day, if necessary.

Mr. Kishi did, however, regret that he called in the police to obtain the ratification of the Treaty in the Lower House without Socialist members but said that it was "inevitable" under the circumstances.

He added that the newspapers and radio stations which were condemning his Government did not represent public opinion.

Meanwhile, some 5,000 other demonstrators swarmed into Mr. Kishi's official residence and clashed with the police while trying to break into the compound.

Four demonstrators were reported injured in the clash and one student was arrested.

While the 40 Socialists presented their demands, an estimated 13,000 demonstrators besieged Mr. Kishi's home at Nampei Dai in a west Tokyo suburb brandishing anti-Government placards and chanting slogans against the Government and the Treaty.

Some 1,000 policemen threw a tight cordon round the house and minor scuffles ensued when some 60 diehard students tried to break into the house.

The demonstration lasted two hours.

After being dispersed, the stragglers gathered in Hibiya Park and adopted a resolution demanding the immediate dissolution of the Diet (Parliament) and protesting against the Treaty.

The Federation of Trade Unions and the Socialist Party announced that they would continue the daily marches of anti-Treaty petitioners to the Diet until a total of 20,000,000 signatures had been collected, that is, half the total electorate of the country. The total achieved so far was estimated at around 10,000,000.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Soviet Protest:

The Soviet Union protested to Japan on May 20 to say that the Japanese Government was "destroying friendly relations between the two countries by concluding a Mutual Security Treaty with the United States and providing her territory for American U-2 bases in Japan which are aimed at hostile acts against the Soviet Union."

In a Note delivered to the Japanese Ambassador in Moscow, Mr. S. Kaduwaki, the Soviet Union said that the American U-2 planes had more than once invaded Russian air space from Japanese bases and warned that the Japanese Government would be held responsible for the consequences arising from provocative actions against the Soviet Union."

The Note said that the American Command, with the consent of and co-operation from the Japanese Government, used and was still using the territory of Japan for war preparations and aerial spying on Russia and her allies.

It said: "Deliberately aggravating the situation, the Government of Japan is entering into military collusion with a Power which has proclaimed spying, subversive activity, and violation of the sovereignty and inviolability of other nations' frontiers as its national policy.

"The Soviet Government cannot naturally overlook the fact that the conclusion of a new military Treaty between USA and Japan is exactly designed to ensure conditions for aggressive actions to be undertaken from Japanese territory against USSR and her allies."

(The New York Times, The Statesman, Calcutta and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3127:JAP:A, 3232:JAP:A]

B. Fisheries Agreement With USSR: A Russo-Japanese Fisheries Agreement was signed in Moscow on May 18.

The Minister for Agriculture, Mr. T. Fukuda, and the Head of the Gosplan Fishery Department, Mr. A. A. Ishkov, signed the Agreement for Japan and the Soviet Union respectively.

The Agreement set the terms for fishing operations in 1960 by Japan and Russia in the restricted zone of the north-west Pacific, defined in the Fisheries Convention negotiated in Moscow three years earlier.

Under the new Agreement, Japan's salmon and salmon-trout catch in the restricted zone was limited to 67,500 tons.

Japan's permitted catch has been successively reduced year by year. In the first year of the Convention, the Japanese catch was set at 120,000 tons. It was reduced to 110,000 tons in 1958 and to 85,000 tons in 1959.

It also provided for the creation of two new zones where the Japanese are prohibited from fishing. The zones are south-east of the southern Kuriles and south of Kamchatka and adjoin the large existing prohibited zone covering the whole of the Okhotsk Sea and waters surrounding the Kuriles and Kamchatka.

It was concluded after 100 days of negotiations and disappointed the Japanese fishing circles who said that it would inflict "a severe blow" on smaller fishing companies and independent operators.

It was privately estimated that the reduced scope of the 1960 operations would cost the industry about £4,500,000.

Meanwhile, the Government announced that it would give careful consideration to an appeal by the fishing industry for some form of compensation or relief, particularly for smaller fishing companies and independent operators.

(The Times, London)

[[Prev. ref. 2118:JAP:C]

C. Tidal Wave Havoc: Tidal waves caused by the earthquake in Chile surged around the Pacific on May 23 killing several hundred persons in Japan, Okinawa, Hawaii and Chile.

The worst affected area was the east coast of Japan.

The tide rose 30 feet at some points in Japan although the average was six or seven feet. Warnings were not broadcast until after the waves began pounding the coast. Weather bureau officials said that there had been a slip-up in the trans-Pacific warning system.

Tokyo and Yokohama, sheltered by Tokyo Bay, were spared direct blows. The greatest damage was along the northern 200 miles of the Honshu coast where villages became a tangled mass of shattered buildings, debris and ships, washed ashore.

Disaster crews moved into Hilo, the largest city in the Hawaiian islands, where 33 persons were known to be dead, 23 missing and 53 injured in the wake of the islands' worst disaster since 1946. The damage was estimated unofficially around $50,000,000.

Four massive waves pounded a mile-long area in the trading heart of the port city of about 26,000 population on the island of Hawaii. Giant waves—one of 12 feet high—struck other islands in the chain as well, but the damage was said to be small as compared to the chaos in Hilo.

A six-foot wave hit the American-occupied Ryukyu Island at dawn, killing three Okinawa villagers, ripping boats from their moorings and dumping tons of salt on the rice crops.

It was believed that the damage to the rice crops and to the Islands' fishing fleet was heavy. Casualties were reported among the American occupation forces on Okinawa.

(The New York Times)

THAILAND

A. Raids By Karen Outlaws From Burmese Territory: The Interior Minister, Mr. Prapas Charusathen, said in Bangkok on May 17 that two days earlier (May 15), Karen outlaws from Burma, divided into three gangs, had raided Maesod district inside Thai territory and had burnt down a police station, a district office and a post office. Seven policemen and ten civilians were killed in the raid.

He added that the Karen gangs had since retreated into Burmese territory about 15 miles from the border. They were backed by communists. The Government was planning to take joint measures with the Burmese authorities in suppressing the gangs.

The Burmese Prime Minister, U Nu, and the Foreign iMnister, Sao Hkun Hkio, sent messages of regret to the Thai Government on May 16 on the raid.

U Nu's message said: "We shall do everything in our power to bring these evil-doers to book in co-operation with the Thai Government."

The Burmese Ambassador in Bangkok, U Ba Maung, told newsmen on May 17 that most of the Karen rebels were communists and that their leader, Lin Thin, was also a communist.

He said that it was possible for Burma and Thailand to co-operate "because we want to smash the rebels as soon as possible."

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3146:MAL:A]

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Col. G. A. Nasser Thanks Russia For Aid: In a speech on May 8 at the opening of a new textile factory at Damietta, built partly with Soviet aid, the UAR President, Col. G. A. Nasser, thanked Russia for the economic aid she had given UAR and said that differences which had an adverse effect on relations between the two countries at times had no effect on Soviet aid to the United Arab Republic.

He said that Russia never said a bad word or hinted at an economic boycott against United Arab Republic because of the obvious differences on social principles and on other subjects between them.

He added that Russia had remained faithful and true to her undertakings. Her aid accounted for £E40,000,000 of the £E330,000,000 the cost of executing the 1957 Five-Year Plan in three years.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 2652:UAR:A]

B. Relations With Yugoslavia To Be Further Strengthened: The United Arab Republic and Yugoslavia agreed on May 8 that relations between them should be further strengthened and developed in all fields.

This was stated in a communique signed in Cairo by Dr. Mahmoud Fawzi and Mr. Koca Popovic, Foreign Ministers of UAR and Yugoslavia, at the end of a seven-day visit to Cairo by Mr. Popovic.

The communique added that the two Ministers had "achieved an identity of views on most of the international questions discussed as well as on problems concerning the two countries."

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 2565:UAR:B]

C. Trade With Greece: A Protocol to the 1953 Trade and Payments Agreement between Greece and the Egyptian Region of the United Arab Republic signed in Cairo towards the end of April, 1960 altered the current payments system and provided for credit facilities to stimulate the exchange of goods between the two countries.

The "collector account" of the Bank of Greece with the National Bank of Egypt had been cancelled, and excess balances over a debit ceiling of £E1,000,000 would be settled henceforth in free currencies.

The value of the trade between the two countries has been in the region of £E2,500,000 in recent years, leaving a surplus of some £E500,000 in favour of Greece.

Egypt offered to increase her exports by introducing new items, such as sugar and asbestos pipes, in addition to her usual sales of raw cotton, rice, flax and bananas. Greece

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

on her side, offered credit facilities for tobacco sales if her sales of the product to Egypt exceeded their present average of 1,300 tons a year.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2161:UAR:A]

VIET-NAM (DR)

A. Mr. Chou En-lai's Visit: The Chinese Premier, Mr. Chou En-lai, accompanied by the Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, Marshal Chen Yi, paid a visit to the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam from May 9 to 14 at the invitation of the North Viet-Nam Government.

During the visit, they were received by the President, Dr. Ho Chi-Minh, and had talks with Government and Party leaders. They also visited cultural and industrial centres.

On May 14, Mr. Chou En-lai and the North Viet-Nam Prime Minister, Mr. Pham Van Dong, signed a joint communique which noted their identity of views on all the subjects they had discussed.

The communique said: "The two Premiers expressed warm welcome for the untiring efforts made by the Soviet Union to relax international tensions. Chairman N. S. Khrushchev's visits to the United States and other countries had made positive contributions to the safeguarding and consolidating of world peace.

"The two Premiers were of the common view that the East-West Conference of Heads of Governments of Big Powers to be held in Paris was an important event in international life. They expressed the hope that this Conference would achieve results favourable to world peace. In the present age, the question of reduction of armaments has been given an important place, and the Soviet Government's proposals on this question conform to the vital interests of the broad masses of people of the world. The two Premiers reiterated that the Governments of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam and the People's Republic of China fully supported the proposals of the Soviet Government for general disarmament and the prohibition of nuclear weapons. The two Premiers considered that the German question required an urgent solution and declared their support to the stand of the Governments of the Soviet Union and the German Democratic Republic for the conclusion of a Peace Treaty with the two German States and turning West Berlin into a free city.

"The two Premiers pointed out that, although compelled by circumstances into making certain gestures for relaxation, the imperialists, first and foremost those in power in the United States, still persisted in their policy of 'positions of strength', and of aggression, energetically undertaking arms drive, developing rocket bases, stepping up the establishment and consolidation of aggressive military blocs, vigorously reviving West German and Japanese militarism, thus creating again sources of war in Europe and Asia; they had again and again obstructed the settlement of important international questions and continued to intervene against and suppress the revolutionary movements of the peoples of various countries. Recently, US imperialism again flagrantly created tension, acted in an arrogant and wanton way, and tried to sabotage the Paris 'Summit' Conference. The US imperialists dispatched military reconnoitring air-planes to cross the border of the Soviet Union and penetrate deep into her interior; this constituted not only an act of aggression against the Soviet Union but also a provocation against the entire socialist camp. The Viet-Namese and Chinese peoples firmly support the resolute attitude adopted by the Soviet Union towards this aggressive act. The Viet-Namese and Chinese peoples as well as other peace-loving peoples of the world must heighten their vigilance and strive tirelessly to strengthen their fight against all the schemes of the bellicose US imperialists.

"The two Premiers noted with pleasure that the Socialist camp headed by the great Soviet Union had become mightier and more united than ever before. The tremendous achievements gained by the socialist countries in industry, agriculture, science and technology and their foreign policy of unswervingly opposing aggressive war and upholding peace have won them ever higher prestige and exerting ever stronger influence internationally. This constitutes the main factor for relaxing the international situation. The scheme of the imperialists, the modern revisionists and the reactionaries in various countries to split the socialist camp has suffered disastrous defeat. The two Premiers emphatically pointed out that the solidarity and unity of the socialist countries loyal to the principles of proletarian internationalism and Marxism-Leninism was a reliable guarantee of world peace and the victory of socialism. The two Premiers unanimously expressed the firm will that on the basis of the Declaration of the 1957 Moscow Meeting of the Communist and Workers' Parties of the Socialist Countries, the two countries would, continue to strive to increase the might and strengthen the unshakable unity of the socialist camp.

"The two Premiers noted with pleasure that, in recent years, the movements to oppose imperialism and colonialism and to win and preserve national independence and democratic freedoms in Asia, Africa and Latin America had undergone an unprecedentedly vigorous development. The two Premiers warmly hailed the newly-independent African States and pledged their resolute support to the just struggles of the African peoples under colonial domination. The two Premiers expressed strong opposition to the continued obstinate pursuance by the French colonialists of their aggressive war against Algeria, and voiced sharp condemnation of the authorities of the Union of South Africa for their acts of racial discrimination, barbarous persecution and massacre against the South African people. The present age is that of the collapse of colonialism. The entire African Continent is standing up. The African peoples will certainly wipe out the colonialists and smash the scheme of US imperialism to take over the positions of the other imperialist Powers in Africa. The peoples of Viet-Nam and China resolutely support the Cuban people's struggle to oppose intervention by US imperialism so as to consolidate their national independence and democratic freedoms. The peoples of many other Latin American countries are launching broad national and democratic movements to oppose US imperialism and its running dogs—the dictators. Recently, the peoples of South Korea, Japan and Turkey, in defiance of frantic suppression by the reactionary ruling groups, have put up heroic struggles to win their national independence and democratic freedoms. The Japan-US Treaty of military alliance not only damages the national interests of Japan but also threatens the peace and security of China, the Soviet Union, Viet-Nam and the whole of South-East Asia. The peoples of China and Viet-Nam who are still subjected to imperialist aggression and interference cherish a profound sympathy for the peoples of South Korea, Japan and Turkey who are in the midst of great distress and misery. The two Premiers expressed their all-out support for the just and patriotic struggles of the peoples of South Korea, Japan and Turkey and fully endorsed the various proposals put forward by the Korean Democratic People's Republic to the South Korean people.

"The two Premiers pointed out once again that the peoples of Viet-Nam and China, who had been subjected to colonialist and imperialist aggression and domination and had now attained independence and sovereignty, would for ever remain the closest comrades-in-arms of the peoples of Asia, Africa and Latin America, and that the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam and the People's Republic of China firmly supported the struggles in these areas for national independence and democratic freedoms.

"The two Premiers considered that the Bandung Spirit and the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence had in the past five years demonstrated their great vitality. The hypocritical features of US imperialism and its scheme to undermine the Bandung Spirit and sow dissensions have been more and more seen through by the peoples of Asia and Africa. The two Premiers warmly applauded the good results achieved by the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Conference held in Conakry in April, 1960. The signing of the Sino-Burmese Treaty of Friendship and Mutual Non-Aggression and Agreement on the Boundary Question, and that of the Sino-Nepalese Treaty of Peace and Friendship and Agreement on the Boundary Question are great victories for the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence. Premier Chou En-lai's recent visits to Burma, India, Nepal and Cambodia have proved China's sincere desire for peace and friendship with other Asian countries and are an important contribution to the consolidation and cementing of friendly relations between Asian countries. The two Premiers expressed the firm conviction that in settling disputes between certain Asian countries, however complicated these questions left over from the past might be, appropriate solutions could be found provided all the parties concerned cherish the sincere desire to negotiate with each other in a friendly spirit and in accordance with the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence. The two Premiers believed that continued promotion of the Five Principles of peaceful co-existence and the Bandung Spirit would be of great significance to the cause of Asian-African solidarity and to the defence of peace in Asia and the world. The proposal of the Government of the People's Republic of China for the conclusion of a peace pact of mutual non-aggression by countries of Asia and the Pacific region so as to make this area a zone free of nuclear weapons is an important peace initiative fully in the interests of the peace and tranquillity of Asia and the world. The Government of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam wholeheartedly supports the above-mentioned proposal of the Government of the People's Republic of China.

"In discussing the situation in Indo-China, the two Premiers expressed concern over the current situation in Laos. The Geneva Agreements on the question of Laos and the Vientiane Agreements have continued to be subjected to serious violations and the United States has continued to carry out gross interference in the internal affairs of Laos. At present, the patriotic people in Laos are still being suppressed and persecuted. Prince Souphanouvong and the other leaders of the Neo Lao Haksat Party are still imprisoned illegally. The re-activization of the International Commission for Supervision and Control in Laos is being obstructed.

"The two Premiers pointed out with emphasis that the continuation of the current situation in Laos would be dangerous. They re-iterated that it was always the hope of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam and the People's Republic of China to maintain good-neighbourly relations with the Kingdom of Laos on the basis of the principles of peaceful co-existence, and considered that provided the parties concerned are willing to settle the existing questions by means of peaceful consultation, the situation in Laos could be restored to normalcy. The two Premiers held that the leaders of the Neo Lao Haksat Party headed by Prince Souphanouvong should regain freedom, that the International Commission should resume its activities, that the civil war in Laos should stop, and that the Geneva Agreements should be truly respected and scrupulously implemented.

"The two Premiers expressed satisfaction with the implementation of the Geneva Agreements in Cambodia. They saw that, in spite of the wanton pressure and provocation by the imperialists and their lackeys, Prince Norodom Sihanouk and the Royal Cambodian Government had actively striven to safeguard its independence and sovereignty and resolutely followed the path of peace and neutrality. This endeavour is an important contribution to the cause of safeguarding peace in Indo-China and South-East Asia.

"At present, because the United States has engaged in ever-increasing disruptive activities to obstruct the re-unification of Viet-Nam and to turn South Viet-Nam into a US military base and colony, the implementation of the Geneva Agreements on Viet-Nam is confronted with numerous difficulties. Nearly six years have passed since the signing of the Geneva Agreements, yet Viet-Nam remains divided, and the South Viet-Nam authorities, abetted by the United States, have not only rejected the reasonable and humane proposals put forth by the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam but are also stepping up arms expansion and war preparations as well as their extremely brutal suppression of the South Viet-Namese people. Of late, they further promulgated the Fascist Law No. 10 of 1959, and agreed with the United States on the unlawful increase of the number of military personnel in the US Military Aid and Advisory Group in South Viet-Nam. The two Premiers unanimously held that the Co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva Conference on Indo-China and the member-States of the International Commission should, in fulfilment of their responsibility, adopt resolute and effective measures to check the acts of the United States and the South Viet-Nam authorities in violation of the Agreements and ensure that the Geneva Agreements on Viet-Nam be respected and fully implemented so as to contribute to the safeguarding of the peace and tranquillity of Indo-China and South-East Asia.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"During the talks, the two Premiers exchanged views on socialist construction in their respective countries. Premier Chou En-lai expressed sincere admiration for the Socialist transformation being carried out successfully and the tremendous achievements gained on the industrial, agricultural, cultural, educational and other fronts of socialist construction by the fraternal Viet-Namese people under the leadership of the Viet-Nam Lao Dong Party headed by President Ho Chi-Minh. Premier Pham Van Dong expressed great pleasure at the tremendous achievements scored by the fraternal Chinese people under the leadership of the Chinese Communist Party headed by Chairman Mao Tse-tung, and considered China's general line for socialist construction, great leaps forward in industrial and agricultural production and development of the people's communes to be significant creations and valuable experience of the Chinese people in socialist construction. The two Premiers expressed infinite confidence in the bright prospects of the socialist construction of their respective countries.

"The two Premiers expressed deep satisfaction with the development of friendly co-operation between their two countries. Since November, 1956 when Premier Chou En-lai visited the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam this relationship has been further consolidated and developed in all aspects. It is in full conformity with the interests of the peoples of the two fraternal countries, and has played an important role in safeguarding peace in South-East Asia and the world. The extensive co-operation between the two countries in socialist construction in the economic, cultural, scientific and technological fields has been continuously strengthened. This is an expression of the unbreakable relationship of friendship and mutual help among the brotherly countries in the socialist camp, which is based on the Marxist-Leninist principle of national equality and spirit of proletarian internationalism. Premier Pham Van Dong expressed the heart-felt thanks of the Viet-Namese people and the Government of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam for the assistance rendered to the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam by the People's Republic of China. The assistance given to the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam by the People's Republic of China in finance, materials, equipment, experience and experts has played an important role in Viet-Nam's economic construction and cultural development, as well as the raising of her people's living standards, and has been a strong support to the Viet-Namese people who are truggling for the re-unification of their Motherland. The two Premiers unanimously held that the friendly co-operation between the two countries based on Marxism-Leninism is a strong guarantee for the independence and prosperity of the two countries. The two Premiers decided that the two countries would in the future exert every possible effort to further consolidate and develop their ever-flourishing great friendship. The two Premiers were of the firm belief that the present visit of Premier Chou En-lai to the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam and the intimate talks between the two Premiers would not only further enhance the profound friendship between the two fraternal countries but also contribute to the strengthening of the solidarity and unity of the socialist camp and conduce to the consolidation of a lasting peace in Asia and the world."

(China Today)

[Prev. ref. 2573:CHI:A]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Mr. N. Khruschev Announces Shooting Down Of US Spy-Plane Over Russia—Pilot Of Plane Pleads Guilty—Official US Statements—Russian Protests And Warnings To USA, Turkey, Norway and Pakistan—Reaction In Countries Warned—Afghan Protest To Pakistan And USA—International Comments—US Democrats' Reaction.

A. US U-2 Plane Shot Down Over Soviet Territory: The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, announced in the Supreme Soviet on May 5 that an American Lockheed U-2 plane had been shot down over the Soviet Union on May 1.

He declared that Russia would bring the incident before the United Nations Security Council.

In a speech which was greeted with shouts of "Down with the Aggressor..... It is banditry", he said that such incidents could lead to a world war and were no preparation for the 'Summit' Conference.

He warned the Soviet people of the possibility of failure at the 'Summit' talks which were to open in Paris on May 16 and said that the latest Western misadventure gave little hope that the West would really seek a solution of co-existence problems.

He declared that two violations of Soviet air space had taken place in less than a month—one on April 9 and the second on May 1—and these were "a very bad preparation for the 'Summit' talks." The Soviet Union would nevertheless go to the Conference with a pure heart and sincere intentions in the hope of achieving positive results.

He warned the United States that the Soviet Union had means to answer aggressive acts. "We have rockets which work perfectly and which can hit their targets with certainty."

He criticised President D. D. Eisenhower of USA for limiting his attendance at the 'Summit' to seven days and said that it showed that the United States had no real desire to reach a settlement of outstanding international problems.

Mr. Eisenhower had also spoken of the possibility of the US Vice-President, Mr. Richard Nixon, carrying on the talks at the 'Summit' Conference, and Mr. Khruschev said that if Mr. Nixon did become entitled to negotiate at the 'Summit' "it will be like we say in Russia—'when the goat is sent to take care of the cabbage'."

He also criticised Mr. Eisenhower for giving his approval to recent speeches by the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, the Vice-President, Mr. Richard Nixon and the Under-Secretary of State, Mr. Douglas Dillon, whom he accused of seeking to prolong the 'cold war' and the armaments race.

The American spy plane U-2, he said, came from the direction of Pakistan or Tehran. If violations of Soviet air space by foreign planes such as those of April 9 and May 1 recurred, the Soviet Union would take all the steps necessary to put an end to them. He called the May 1 incident an 'alarming occurrence'.

But, he said, he did not think it was time to take the attitude that this was an act of true aggression and war. He was convinced that the American people wanted peace and he had not forgotten the friendly talks he had with people in the United States.

[The American plane involved in the spying incident on May 1 was a Lockheed U-2, capable of flying at great heights, beyond the range of jet fighters and anti-aircraft fire. The man who piloted the plane was identified as Francis Gary Powers, aged 30.]

Details Of Spy-Plane:

The Soviet newspaper, Red Star, furnished certain details about the American U-2 plane on May 10.

It reported specifically that a container was dropped near the place of the pilot's landing. Its contents showed that the pilot, Francis Gary Powers, was an experienced intelligence agent.

The objects tidily packed in the container included eight-fold magnification binoculars, a set of warm outfit, a Soviet soldier's shirt, although it was not of the usual Soviet colour and cut, a supply of tinned food and water and a signal torchlight.

Found in the plane's cabin was a 1:2 million scale navigation chart with the route plotted out on it from Pakistan, over the sea of Aral, Sverdlovsk, Archangel, Murmansk to the Norwegian aerodrome of Bodo. The major cities, airports, industrial undertakings and other important targets were under-scored by a red line. These were points where the spy had to switch on his instruments.

It reported that the Command of the 10:10 Unit in which Powers had served kept assuring him that the flight would be safe. Even when the plane started to fall to the ground, Powers thought that it happened because his engine had exploded.

An examination of the remains of the shot-down plane revealed that it was equipped with additional non-jettisonable fuel tanks. There was enough fuel to fly over the entire course plotted on the flight map found in the possession of the pilot. The plane had a destruction device—a big stick of TNT which was to explode when the catapulting lever was pressed.

An interesting detail was discovered when investigating the catapulting system. The charge of the catapult was marked with a stamp saying that it was last checked in 1956. This meant that it was old and would have failed if the pilot had pressed the catapult lever in an attempt to save his life. The bomb mechanism, however, was in perfect order and would have spared neither the plane nor the flier.

Marshal Andrei Grechko, a former Commander of Soviet troops in Germany and now holding a high post in Moscow, told the Supreme Soviet on May 6 that the American plane shot down over Russia on May 1 was destroyed "by a rocket with the first shot".

The order to destroy the plane, he said, was given by the Government and personally by Mr. Khruschev.

He was loudly applauded when he gave the news and described the rocket as "a wonderful weapon with which the armed forces have been equipped."

He said that the Soviet Union would not allow any weakening of her defensive ability.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

That was why she was working hard to perfect technical equipment. Rocket units had become the main component of the Soviet armed forces. "Separate rocket units have been set up with their own command and separate organizational structure."

Pravda's account of the incident described how the detachment which shot down the plane held a meeting after the Supreme Soviet session on May 7 when their Commander, Mr. Michael Voronov, assured the country of the Army's continued vigilance.

Mr. Khruschev revealed in the Supreme Soviet on May 7 that the pilot of the US plane shot down over Russia on May 1 was alive and that he would be put on trial as a spy.

He identified the pilot as Francis Gary Powers (30) and said that he was formerly a USAF captain, but since 1956 he had been a member of the US Central Intelligence Agency.

He showed members of the Supreme Soviet several aerial photographs of Soviet missile and radar defences taken by Powers.

He said that Powers parachuted from the plane. If he had used his ejector seat, the plane would have blown up, destroying the evidence of its espionage purpose. Powers had also been provided with a poison pin for instant suicide to prevent him from falling into Soviet hands, but he did not use it.

He announced that Russia was going over completely to guided missiles. A Command of inter-continental strategic guided missiles had been established.

Giving further details of the flight of the US aircraft, he said, it took off from Incirlik near Adana, in Turkey.

The pilot had said that the purpose of his flight was officially to carry out a study of cosmic radiation but in reality to carry out spying activities.

He had been trained for a long time for his mission by flying along the Soviet frontier to study Soviet radar defences.

He flew from Turkey to Peshawar in Pakistan and from there over Kazakhstan to Sverdlovsk where he was shot down. He was to have landed in Bodo in Norway after flying over Murmansk and Archangel. The pilot stayed at Peshawar for three days before taking off on May 1 for his mission over the Soviet Union.

It was possible that the countries where American aircraft were based did not know what was being done by the Americans. But, they ought to know it for their own good, because they might be the sufferers of the Americans playing with fire.

He said he had dwelt at such length about what had happened because many people in USA believed in the version put out by the Americans—that it was an innocent weather reconnaissance aircraft.

Referring to the American "Open Skies" proposal, he said: "The Americans decided to themselves open the Soviet sky."

Addressing himself to the countries which had placed their territories for use as military bases for hostile acts, he said: "Do not play with fire, gentlemen!" He then mentioned Pakistan, Turkey and Norway.

He read to the Supreme Soviet the American statement on what had happened to the US aircraft and said that at the time he was telling the Supreme Soviet of the shooting down of the U-2 plane, he kept from them the fact that Powers was alive and in Soviet hands.

The version put out by the Americans was a complete lie and the men who put it out counted on the pilot being dead so that their lies could not be exposed. But the pilot was alive and well in Moscow, and the secret equipment of the aircraft was also in Soviet hands.

He flew according to the orders given to him in order to collect espionage data of a military and industrial nature. When the pilot started to engage in espionage, he received $2,500 monthly. He was flying a high altitude plane beyond the reach of any jet fighter, but "we got it."

The purpose of the aircraft was to fly from the Pamir mountains in the south to the Kola Peninsula in the north. Its mission was to get information on Soviet guided missiles and radar defences. It photographed Soviet air defences.

Mr. Khruschev then proceeded to show the Supreme Soviet photographs showing Soviet air-fields with stationary Soviet fighters and industrial enterprises and said that it was a most genuine military reconnaissance plane equipped with reconnaissance photo-cameras and instruments for radar detection.

There was also a tape-recorder with Russian radio beacon emissions. "Such are the air samples taken by the plane." The intrusion was "piratic" and the explanation given by USA "silly."

The plane's scheduled flight, he disclosed, was to have lasted 3 hours and 40 minutes. The wreckage of the plane was in Moscow and they would show all the pilot's suicide equipment to foreign diplomats, if desired. The Americans called themselves Christians and the communists atheists. But the communists had never committed such crimes against a human being and never would.

The pilot was given a large sum of Soviet roubles. He was also given a large sum of French gold francs, West German marks and Italian lira as well as two gold watches and gold bracelets.

Referring to the gold francs, he asked: "For what purposes had he French gold francs—for taking samples of air? Perhaps his mission was to fly even higher to Mars and supply these things to those on that planet."

The pilot, he went on, also had a noiseless pistol.

Mr. Khruschev declared that he wanted to believe in President Eisenhower's words that he knew nothing about it. But, in that case, matters were even worse, because it showed that the militarists and Generals were in actual power in the United States.

He added: "The lives of tens of millions of men depend on an accident. It is necessary to continue to increase the defensive potential of our Motherland."

Wreckage Of Plane Exhibited:

The wreckage of the American U-2 plane and evidence of the object of its flight was exhibited in Moscow on May 11. Members of the Diplomatic Corps inspected the wreckage and evidence.

Speaking to foreign correspondents at the exhibition, the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, said that the US spy-plane shot down over Russia on May 1 came from a base in Turkey and that Pakistan and Norway were "accomplices".

He added: "The facts in the possession of the Soviet Union leave no room for doubt that the responsible American organs, by sending this plane across the Soviet frontier, were acting in preparation of aggression and with aims hostile to the cause of peace.

"The organizers of this diversion on the eve of the 'Summit' Conference have been literally forced back to the wall by irrefutable facts."

The facts on show at the exhibition included the right and left wings of the U-2, the engine, the ejector seat, the tail part of the fuselage and the oxygen containers.

The pilot's high-altitude suit and all his "bandit" equipment—the silent pistol, dagger and the suicide pin—were also on show, with the Soviet roubles and other currency which the pilot, Francis Powers, had with him.

Photographs of Powers, various documents showing that he worked for the American Intelligence and extracts from his interrogation report, his radio equipment, a camera, a developed film showing clearly Soviet airfields with fighter planes, railway junctions with rolling stock, and industrial enterprises were among the exhibits.

The Diplomatic Corps also listened to the recordings, said to have been made by Powers, of Soviet radar signals.

Mr. Gromyko referred to the "lying versions" of the plane's task put out by the US State Department and said: "These have brought their inventors nothing but discomfiture in the eyes of the whole world."

He said of Mr. Christian Herter's statement on the incident: "To describe this statement of the head of the American diplomatic department as cynical is, I should say, being too mild."

Mr. Herter's statement, he added, proved that violations of the sovereignty and immunity of the frontiers of other States, espionage and diversion had been the proclaimed official US policy.

Nowadays, one of the most valued principles was the inviolability of a State's land, sea and air frontiers and in the eyes of international law such incursions "are an act of aggression."

He described these "provocative" violations of other States as "playing with fire and as one of the most dangerous forms of brinkmanship."

He continued: "We shall meet such uninvited guests in the same way as aggressors have always been met by the Soviet people and only wreckage will remain of any planes which might have the temerity to poke their noses into our territory.

"As to those who offer bases on their territory for planes to violate our frontiers, let them know that the Soviet Union will be able to incapacitate those bases should such provocations be repeated.

"Mr. Herter's view that the incident will not affect the 'Summit' meeting is incorrect.

"One might think that American statesmen look upon the task of the 'Summit' Conference as not to seek a solution of urgent international problems but rather to consider what highly developed Intelligence methods the States taking part in the Conference can adopt against each other and, in general, to see what highly effective methods are available for quarrelling and to heat up the international situation."

Mr. N. Khruschev's News Conference In Gorky Park:

On May 11, Mr. Khruschev made a surprise appearance in Gorky Park in Moscow where the exhibition of the wreckage of the U-2 plane together with the documentation of Powers was on view and held an impromptu news conference at which he made a statement.

Details of his statement were released by Tass the following day (May 12).

Mr. Khruschev, according to Tass, warned the West that if there were any more spy flights over Russian territory, the Soviet Union would destroy the bases from which they came and that would mean war.

When asked about Mr. Eisenhower's visit to the Soviet Union scheduled for June, he said, among other things: "The Russians are an open-hearted people, but how can I now ask the Russian people to extend a cordial welcome to a guest who sends spies in reconnaissance planes over our territory?

"Imagine what would happen if, on the eve of my trip to USA, we had sent a spy plane over American territory? How would I have been welcomed? Our people believe in give and take. The Americans would have extended the welcome I deserved.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"I can in any case assure you that there will be no incidents when President Eisenhower comes to the Soviet Union. Our people are very well disciplined, and if something embitters their spirit they do not act in an unthinking way."

Asked if the plane incident would come up at the 'Summit' Conference, he said: "It already is the subject of discussion all over the world. That is why I do not regard it at present as necessary to put this matter on the agenda of the 'Summit' Conference.

"We deal harshly with those who invade the borders of our homeland, who violate our sovereignty. But we want to live in peace and friendship with all nations. I hope you will understand our attitude when we angrily condemn such aggressive actions. But we take a sober view of these and realize that even the sharpest polemics are better than war."

He declined to commit himself either way when asked if the US Ambassador in Moscow would be allowed to interview Powers.

Recalling Mr. C. A. Herter's recent statement about the plane incident, Mr. Khruschev denounced the statement: "It is a threat to peace, a senseless statement. It is the kind of statement one can make only when a country is at war with another and we are not at war with USA. It is insolence, insolence.

"That is false. We have never sent and we shall never send planes over the territory of other countries.

"Mr. Herter was obliged to admit that President Eisenhower knew about the flights of American reconnaissance planes because, if he had not done so, the responsibility would have fallen on Mr. Allen Dulles (head of American Intelligence Service), and he in turn would have said that he acted under Government orders. That is what I think.

"That reminds me of a story I heard when I was a child. At a time when there were a lot of vagabonds with not a roof ever their heads, when they robbed people in the streets, they used this strategy. Accompanied by a little boy, the thief hid under a bridge. When a passer-by came along, the child came out from under the bridge and began to follow the passer-by saying: Buddy, give me back my watch. Surprised, the man would tell the little boy to go away. Just then, the thief would come out from under the bridge and say in a threatening tone: "Well, have you finished being rough with this little boy? Give him back his watch, and throw in your coat with it?

"We are not defenceless passers-by" he went on. "If USA has not known real war, with bombs over her territory, and if they want to start a war, we shall be obliged to send rockets to them which will arrive within a few minutes after the conflict breaks out."

In answer to a newsman who asked if he would consider as an act of aggression "airplane flights by Western Powers in Berlin after the signature of a Peace Treaty with East Germany, he said: "We have already announced our position on this question. I repeat that the situation resulting from the capitulation of Germany will change. From this moment on, the occupation of West Berlin will end and all access to Berlin, until now based on the capitulation of Germany, will be closed.

"At that moment, the German Democratic Republic will control its own territory, as well as access to Berlin, which is within its limits.

"If the German Democratic Republic reaches an agreement with the countries concerned and allows them to use her air space, navigable waterways and railways and highways, then it will no longer be any business of ours, but of East Germany. That is her sovereign right.

"Some people say that the Western Powers will cut a passage to West Berlin by force. In this connexion. I say clearly: 'If someone tries to do this by force, our troops which are in East Germany to maintain peace will stand up against the force of those violating the peace.' Let the hotheads in the West think about what would be the result for them."

Francis Gary Powers Pleads Guilty:

Tass announced on May 12 that the pilot, Francis Gary Powers, had pleaded guilty to the charge of espionage.

The charge specified that he, being an employee of the United States Intelligence Agency, violated on May 1 the Soviet frontier from Pakistan in an aircraft specially equipped with the object of gathering information of a strategic nature. Flying over the territory of the Soviet Union he had taken photographs with the aid of appropriate equipment of different regions where industrial and military objectives existed and had gathered other information amounting to espionage.

The Head of the US Information Service, Mr. George Allen, said on May 15 that the pilot of the plane shot down over Russia had been instructed, if brought down, to tell exactly what his mission was.

He said that by telling the Soviet authorities the truth about his mission, Francis Powers had done what he was expected to do.

Other Violations Of Soviet Air Space:

Writing in Pravda on May 20, three Russian jurists—Mr. K. Baguininan, Mr. V. Churchalov and Mr. G. Sharmazanashvili—stated that USA had violated Soviet air-space 113 times between 1953 and 1956, and that of the East European communist countries 211 times.

They added that after 1956 repeated attempts at violation had taken place.

In another article in the same newspaper, Col. G. Sechkin and Lt.-Col. S. Krylov said that US spies were also landed from the air and named some of them as Osmanov, Sarantzev, Cook, Toomla, Lakhno, Makov, Gorbounov and Remiga. They had all been arrested by Security Services.

After reviewing all the US violations of Soviet and Socialist camp air-space in recent years including incidents of US "meteorological balloons," they said that the U-2 flight of May 1 was no exception, but part of the espionage policy of which the 'Open Skies' theory was another.

They went on to refer to "spy sputniks" which, they said, were now being built in USA under the Samos Project and said that the Project showed that the US aim in the conquest of space was unlike that of the Soviet Union; the US aim was to prepare for war.

They referred also to other US devices such as long-range precision cameras, miniature recorders which could be hidden in a neck-tie, in the hair and in spectacle frames as well as devices for detecting atomic factories and even a portable atom-bomb for "acts of diversion" and said that America had a force of 12,000 men for espionage and sabotage.

Statement By NASA:

A spokesman of the American State Department said in Washington on May 5 that the State Department had been informed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) that an unarmed U-2 weather research plane based at Adana in Turkey had been missing since May 1.

NASA added that the pilot of the plane was a civilian.

The following is the full text of the statement:

"One of NASA's U-2 research air-planes, in use since 1956 in a continuing programme to study gust-meteorological conditions found at high altitude, has been missing since about 9 a.m. on May 1 when its pilot reported that he was having oxygen difficulties over the Lake Van in Turkey.

"The air-plane had taken off from Incirlik air base in Turkey. The flight plan called for the first check point to be at 37 degrees, 25 minutes north; 41 degrees, 23 minutes east; and for a left turn to be made to the Lake Van beacon, thence to the Trabzon beacon, thence to Antalya, and return to Adana. The flight scheduled was estimated at three hours, 45 minutes, for a total of 1400 nautical miles. Take-off was at 8 a.m. local time.

"About one hour after the take-off, the pilot reported difficulties with his oxygen equipment. Using emergency radio frequency, he reported that he was heading for the Lake Van beacon to get his bearings and that he would return to Adana.

"As indicated above, his flight plan called for him to make a left turn at the Lake Van beacon. His last report indicated that he was attempting to receive that beacon. It is believed that he was probably on a north-eastern course, but there was no further word.

"An aerial search was begun soon after receipt of the last communication. The Lake Van area is mountainous and very rugged. No evidence has been sighted of the aircraft having crashed.

"If the pilot continued to suffer from lack of oxygen, the path of the plane from the last reported position would be impossible to determine. If the air-plane was on automatic pilot, it is likely it would have continued along its north-easterly course.

"The pilot, as are all pilots used on NASA's programme for upper atmosphere research with the U-2 air-plane, is a civilian employed by the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, builders of the air-plane.

"When the research programme was begun in 1956 by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics (predecessor to NASA), the Federal Agency did not have a sufficient number of pilots to operate the programme and so a contract was made with Lockheed to provide the pilots.

"Overseas logistic support for NASA's continuing use of the U-2 is provided by Air Weather Service Units of USAF.

"NASA has procured a total of 10 U-2 air-planes. The air-plane was originally built as a private venture by Lockheed to serve as a 'flying test bed'. It is powered by a single Pratt and Whitney J-57 turbo-jet engine and can maintain flight for as long as four hours at altitudes of up to 55,000 feet.

"Since the inception of the research programme in 1956, the U-2 flying weather laboratories have operated from bases in California, New York, Alaska, England, Germany, Turkey, Pakistan, Japan, Okinawa and the Philippines.

"The U-2 air-planes are now being used in California (Edwards AFB—1), Japan (Atsugi—3) and Turkey (Adana—4).

"The instrumentation carried by the U-2 permits obtaining more precise information about clear air turbulence, convective clouds, wind shear, the jet stream and such widespread weather patterns as typhoons. The air-plane also has been used by NASA to obtain information about cosmic rays and the concentration of certain elements in the atmosphere, including ozone and water vapour.

"Instrumentation carried included angular velocity recorder to measure the air-plane's rate of pitch, modified VGH recorder to measure the record head-on gust components in flight, recorder model BB, continuous recorder of indicated, air-speed, pressure altitude and normal acceleration, air-speed and altitude transducer to measure pressure altitude and indicated air-speed, temperature and humidity measuring set AN|AMQ 7 to measure indicated free air temperature and indicated relative humidity and vortex thermometer system to measure true free-air temperature within one-half degree centigrade at high speeds."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Mr. D. D. Eisenhower Orders Enquiry:

It was announced in Washington on May 6 that President D. D. Eisenhower had ordered an enquiry into the disappearance of the American plane which was last heard of on May 1 as "on a peaceful meteorological mission in eastern Turkey."

The White House Press Secretary, Mr. James Hagerty, issued the following statement:

"At the direction of President Eisenhower, a complete enquiry is being made. The results of this enquiry—the facts as developed—will be made public by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the Department of State."

Other US Statements:

The US State Department Press Officer, Mr. Lincoln White, issued the following statement on May 6:

"The State Department has been informed by NASA that, as announced on May 3, an unarmed plane, U-2 weather research plane based at Adana (Turkey), piloted by a civilian, has been missing since May 1.

"During the flight of this plane the pilot reported difficulty with his oxygen equipment.

"Mr. Khruschev has announced that a US plane has been shot down over USSR on that date. It may be that this was the missing plane.

"It is entirely possible that having a failure in the oxygen equipment, which could result in the pilot losing consciousness, the plane continued on automatic pilot for a considerable distance and accidentally violated Soviet air space.

"USA is taking this matter up with the Soviet Government with particular reference to the fate of the pilot."

The US State Department issued the following statement on May 7 on the incident:

"The State Department has reviewed the text of Mr. Khruschev's further remarks about an unarmed plane which is reported to have been shot down in the Soviet Union.

"As previously announced, it was known that a U-2 plane was missing. As a result of the enquiry ordered by President Eisenhower, it has been established that insofar as the authorities in Washington are concerned there was no authorization for any such flight as described by Mr. Khruschev. Nevertheless, it appears that in endeavouring to obtain information now concealed behind the Iron Curtain, a flight over Soviet territory was probably undertaken by an unarmed civilian U-2 plane.

"It is certainly no secret that, given the state of the world today, intelligence collection activities are practised by all countries and post-War history certainly reveals that the Soviet Union has not been lagging behind in this field. The necessity for such activities, as measures for legitimate national defence, is enhanced by the excessive secrecy practised by the Soviet Union in contrast to the free world.

"One of the things creating tension in the world today is apprehension over surprise attacks with weapons of mass destruction. To reduce mutual suspicion and to give a measure of protection against surprise attacks, the United States, in 1955, offered its 'Open Skies' proposal—a proposal which was rejected out of hand by the Soviet Union.

"It is in relation to the danger of surprise attacks that planes of the type of unarmed civilian U-2 aircraft have made flights along the frontiers of the free world for the past four years."

A Washington despatch on May 7 said: "Tonight's State Department statement, issued with President Eisenhower's personal approval after hours of conferences involving the Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, and other top officials, was believed to be the first instance of a Government admitting to a specific intelligence operation in another country.

"One of the significant aspects of the astonishing turn of events was the assertion that the flight had been carried out without authorization from any agency in Washington. The implication seemed to be that local military commanders had gone ahead on their own."

The Defence Department officials, noting Mr. Khruschev's allegation that the plane shot down was an unmarked "American military aircraft," pointed out that the U-2 bore a large, conspicuous NASA insignia and lettering that readily identified it as being non-military and having a scientific mission.

The U-2 vanished in the same general area where an unarmed C-130 turbo-prop American Air Force transport, on a radio survey mission over Turkey, disappeared on September 2, 1958, with 17 men aboard.

The US Government charged that Soviet fighter planes shot down the C-130. Soviet authorities denied this, contending that the plane crashed on Soviet territory. However, the State Department later released taped radio voice recordings which showed Soviet fighter plane pilots exchanging comments as they shot the C-130 down.

The Soviet Union returned the bodies of six members of the crew. It has continually disclaimed any knowledge about the fate of the other 11 men. US officials contended that the C-130 transport had accidentally strayed over the Soviet border.

Mr. C. A. Herter's Statement:

The following is the text of the statement issued by the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter on May 9 after he had appeared before Congressional leaders in connexion with the shooting down of the U-2 plane over Soviet territory:

"On May 7, the Department of State spokesman made a statement with respect to the alleged shooting down of an unarmed American civilian aircraft of the U-2 type over the Soviet Union.

"The following supplements and clarifies that statement as respects the position of the United States Government.

"Ever since Marshal Stalin shifted the policy of the Soviet Union from War-time co-operation to post-War conflict in 1946 and particularly since the Berlin blockade, the forceful take-over of Czechoslovakia and the communist aggressions in Korea and Viet-Nam, the world has lived in a state of apprehension with respect to Soviet intentions.

"The Soviet leaders have almost complete access to the open societies of the 'free world' and supplement this with vast espionage networks. However, they keep their own society tightly closed and rigorously controlled.

"With the development of modern weapons carrying tremendously destructive nuclear warheads, the threat of surprise attack and aggression presents a constant danger. This menace is enhanced by the threats of mass destruction frequently voiced by the Soviet leadership.

"For many years, the United States, in company with her allies, has sought to lessen or even to eliminate this threat from the life of man so that he can go about his peaceful business without fear.

"Many proposals to this end have been put up to the Soviet Union. President Eisenhower's 'Open Skies' proposal of 1955 was followed in 1957 by the offer of an exchange of ground observers between agreed military installations in USA, USSR and other nations that might wish to participate.

"For several years, we have been seeking the mutual abolition of the restrictions on travel imposed by the Soviet Union and those which the United States felt obliged to institute on a reciprocal basis. More recently, at the Geneva Disarmament Conference, the United States proposed far-reaching new measures of controlled disarmament.

"It is possible that the Soviet leaders have a different version and that, however unjustified, they fear attack from the West. But this is hard to reconcile with their continual rejection of our repeated proposals for effective measures against surprise attack and for effective inspection of disarmament measures.

"I will say frankly that it is unacceptable that the Soviet political system should be given an opportunity to make secret preparations to face the 'free world' with the choice of abject surrender or nuclear destruction.

"The Government of the United States would be derelict to its responsibility not only to the American people but to the free peoples everywhere if it did not, in the absence of Soviet co-operation, take such measures as are possible unilaterally to lessen and to overcome this danger of surprise attack. In fact, the United States has not and does not shirk this responsibility.

"In accordance with the National Security Act of 1947, President Eisenhower has put into effect since the beginning of his administration directives to gather by every possible means the information required to protect the United States and the 'free world' against surprise attacks and to enable them to make effective preparations for their defence.

"Under these directives, programmes have been developed and put into operation which have included extensive aerial surveillance by unarmed civilian aircraft, normally of a peripheral character, but on occasion, by penetration.

"Specific missions of these unarmed civilian aircraft have not been subject to Presidential authorization. The fact that such surveillance was taking place has apparently not been a secret to the Soviet leadership and the question, indeed, arises as to why at this particular juncture they should seek to exploit the present incident as a propaganda battle in the 'cold war.'

"This Government had sincerely hoped and continues to hope that in the coming meeting of the Heads of Governments in Paris, Mr. Khruschev would be prepared to co-operate in agreeing to effective measures which would remove this fear of sudden mass destruction from the minds of peoples everywhere.

"Far from being damaging to the forthcoming meeting in Paris, this incident should serve to underline the importance to the world of an earnest attempt there to achieve agreed and effective safeguards against surprise attack and aggression.

"At my request and with the authority of the President, the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Mr. Allen W. Dulles, is today briefing members of the Congress fully along the foregoing lines."

Russian Protest To USA:

On May 10, the Russian Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, received Mr. E. Freers, Charge d'Affaire ad Interim of the United States in Moscow, and handed him the following Note from the Soviet Government to the Government of USA:

"The Government of USSR deems it necessary to communicate the following to the Government of the United States of America.

"At 05.36 hours, Moscow Time, on May 1, 1960, a military plane violated the frontier of USSR and invaded the air-space of the Soviet Union to a distance of over 2,000 kilometres. The Government of USSR, of course, could not leave unpunished such a gross violation of the Soviet State frontiers. When the deliberate nature of the flight of the intruding plane became obvious, it was brought down by Soviet rocket forces near Sverdlosvk.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Experts' study of all data available to the Soviet side irrefutably established that the intruding plane belonged to the United States of America, was permanently based in Turkey and was sent through Pakistan to the Soviet Union on a hostile mission.

"Precise data of the investigation, as Mr. Khruschev, Chairman of the Council of Ministers of USSR, said on May 7 at the concluding sitting of the session of the Supreme Soviet of USSR, leaves no room for doubt concerning the purposes of the flight by the American plane which violated the frontiers of USSR on May 1. This plane was specially equipped for a reconnaissance and diversionary flight over Soviet territory. It had on board equipment for aerial photography, for spotting Soviet radar sets and other special radio engineering facilities forming part of the anti-aircraft defence of USSR. The Soviet Expert Commission which conducted the investigation has irrefutable evidence of the espionage and reconnaissance mission of the American plane; photos taken of Soviet defence and industrial objectives, tape recordings of signals of Soviet radar stations and other data.

"The pilot, Powers, about whom the Embassy of the United States made inquiries in its Note of May 6, is alive and as Mr. Khruschev, Chairman of the Council of Ministers of USSR, said in his above-mentioned speech, will be held responsible in conformity with the laws of the Soviet Union. The pilot deposed that he had done everything in complete accordance with the assignment he had received. In the route map seized from him the entire route after taking off from Adana (Turkey) is clearly and precisely marked on the map: Peshawar (Pakistan)—Sea of Aral—Sverdlovsk—Archangel—Murmansk with subsequent landing at the Norwegian airfield of Bodo. The pilot also said that he was serving in Unit 10-10 which, under the signboard of National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), engages in military reconnaissance from great altitudes.

"These and other data cited in the speeches by the head of the Soviet Government utterly refuted the invented and hastily concocted version of the US State Department, set forth in an official Press release on May 5 and alleging that the plane conducted meteorological observations in the upper layers of the atmosphere along the Turkish-Soviet frontier.

"After the utter absurdity of the above version was shown and it was proved irrefutably that the American plane invaded the air-space of the Soviet Union with aggressive reconnaissance purposes, the State Department issued another statement on May 7 containing the forced admission that the plane was sent into the air-space of the Soviet Union with military reconnaissance purposes, thus admitting the aggressive aims of the flight.

"Thus, already within two days the State Department had to abandon the version which was obviously designed to mislead both world public opinion and public opinion in the United States itself.

"The State Department found it appropriate in its statement to refer to the 'Open Skies' proposal made by the US Government, in 1955 and to the Soviet Government's refusal to accept this proposal. Yes, the Soviet Government, like the Governments of many other States, refused to accept this proposal designed to open widely the doors of other countries to the American intelligence. The actions of the American aviation only confirm the correct appraisal of this proposal made at the time by the Soviet Government.

"Does all this not mean that, in view of the refusal by a number of States to accept the above-mentioned 'Open Skies' proposal, the United States seeks to usurp the right to 'open' up an alien sky arbitrarily? Suffice it to raise this question to make clear the utter insolvency of the afore-mentioned reference to the United States' 'Open Skies' proposal.

"It follows from the above-mentioned statement issued by the State Department of the United States on May 7 that the hostile actions by the American aviation, frequently taken against the Soviet Union, are not just a result of measures by the military command of USA in some regions or other but an expression of the deliberate policy of USA.

"It has now been confirmed what the Soviet Government more than once declared in its representations made to the US Government in connexion with the violations of the State frontiers of USSR by American planes, that these violations are deliberate. All this bears out that the US Government, instead of taking measures to put an end to the above-mentioned actions by the American aviation, the risks of which have more than once been emphasized by the Soviet Government, officially proclaims such actions as its national policy.

"Thus, the US Government firstly admits that its replies to representations of the Soviet Government were made only pro forma, to conceal the desire to evade the essence of the question, and that all violations by American planes of the State frontiers of USSR were actions taken in conformity with the policy of the United States.

"Secondly, and this is the main point, by allowing such actions of American aviation, the US Government exacerbates the situation still more.

"The question is: how can this be squared with the statement by the United States leaders that the US Government, just like the Soviet Government, is seeking to improve relations between USSR and the United States, relieve international tension and strengthen confidence between the States? The military reconnaissance activity of one country by sending its planes inside another can hardly be qualified as a means of improving relations and strengthening confidence.

"It goes without saying that the Soviet Government has been compelled by the present circumstances to give strict orders to its armed forces to take all the necessary measures against the violation of the Soviet frontiers by foreign aircraft.

"The Government of USSR regrets to state that while it is doing everything possible towards normalizing and improving the international situation, the US Government is pursuing a different course. One cannot avoid the impression that the two Governments must be looking differently at the necessity of improving relations between our two countries and laying good ground for the success of the coming 'Summit' Conference.

"The Soviet Government, just as the Soviet people as a whole, believed that the personal meetings and talks which the Chairman of USSR Council of Ministers had with the President of USA and other American officials during his visit to the United States made a good start on normalizing Soviet-American relations and, consequently, improving the overall international situation.

"However, the latest actions of the American authorities must have had the purpose of throwing American-Soviet relations back into the state they were in during the worst days of the 'cold war' and also poisoning the international atmosphere before the 'Summit' Conference.

"The Government of USSR cannot fail to note that what the US State Department's statement, unexampled for its cynicism, has done is not only to seek to justify the provocative flights of US military planes but also to assume that such actions are a 'normal thing' which is tantamount to saying that USA is determined to continue provocative intrusions into the air-space of the Soviet Union for reconnaissance purposes.

"The Government of USSR, therefore, arrives at the conclusion that the State Department's statement that the flight was made without the knowledge and authorization of the US Government does not tally with the facts because the same statement seeks to justify the necessity of reconnaissance activity against the Soviet Union. This means that the spy missions are undertaken by American aircraft with permission from the US Government.

"The Government of the Soviet Union declares strong protest to the US Government in connexion with the aggressive acts by American aircraft and warns it that should such provocations be repeated, the Soviet Government will have to take retaliatory measures the responsibility for whose consequences will rest with the Governments of the States committing acts of aggression against other countries.

"It is the Soviet Government's earnest hope that the US Government will recognize at last that the interests of maintaining and strengthening international peace, including the interests of the American people themselves, whose urge for peace was well in evidence also during the visit of Mr. N. Khruschev, the Head of the Soviet Government, to the United States, would be served by stopping the above-mentioned dangerous provocative actions against USSR, ending the 'cold war' and seeking, jointly with the Soviet Union and other interested countries, mutually acceptable solutions to the unresolved international problems, which is what all the peoples are waiting for."

American Reply:

On May 12, the US Government delivered a Note to the Soviet Foreign Ministry in reply to the Soviet protest over the plane incident.

The following is the text of the American Note:

"The Embassy of the United States of America refers to the Soviet Government's Note of May 10 concerning the shooting down of an unarmed American civilian aircraft on May 1, and under instruction from its Government, has the honour to state the following.

"The US Government, in the statement issued by the Department of State on May 9, has fully stated its position with respect to this incident.

"In its Note, the Soviet Government has stated that the collection of intelligence about the Soviet Union by American aircraft is a 'calculated policy' of USA. The US Government does not deny that it has pursued such a policy for purely defensive purposes. What it emphatically does deny is that this policy has any aggressive intent, or that the unarmed U-2 flight of May 1 was undertaken in an effort to prejudice the success of the forthcoming meeting of the Heads of Governments in Paris or to 'return the state of American-Soviet relations to the worst times of the cold war.' Indeed, it is the Soviet Government's treatment of this case which, if anything, may raise questions about its intentions in respect to these matters.

"For its part, the US Government will participate in the Paris meeting on May 16 prepared to co-operate to the fullest extent in seeking agreements designed to reduce tensions including effective safeguards against surprise attack which would make unnecessary issues of this kind."

Mr. D. D. Eisenhower's News Conference:

President D. D. Eisenhower told a news conference in Washington on May 11 that USA carried out aerial intelligence missions over the Soviet Union because it did not want another 'Pearl Harbour'.

He said that the Soviet Union's secrecy and concealment and the measures necessary to penetrate that secrecy were a major cause of tension. He would again ask Mr. Khruschev at the 'Summit' Conference in Paris to agree to his "Open Skies" proposal to end the danger of surprise attacks.

He said that he still expected to go to the Soviet Union in June despite the U-2 plane incident. He did not think that the outlook for the 'Summit' Conference had been decisively changed by the incident and Mr. Khruschev's reaction to it.

A newsman reminded Mr. Eisenhower that he had often said he would not go to the 'Summit' Conference under a threat or ultimatum, and asked whether Mr. Eisenhower regarded the Soviet "threat" made on May 9 to shoot down any further planes over Soviet territory as an "ultimatum."

He replied: "No. One has to set that aside in a special category."

He did not believe that this was the sort of thing that one would interpret as an 'ultimatum.'

Reading from his notes, Mr. Eisenhower first dealt with what he termed as 'the need for intelligence-gathering activities.'

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

No one wanted another Pearl Harbour, he said, and this meant that the United States must have knowledge of military forces and preparations around the world, especially those capable of massive surprise attack. Secrecy in the Soviet Union made intelligence-gathering operations essential.

He said that the United States' deterrent must never be placed in jeopardy. The safety of the 'free world' demanded that it should never be placed in jeopardy.

He said that, as Mr. Christian Herter had pointed out earlier, he (Mr. Eisenhower) had issued directives for gathering in every feasible way the information required to protect the United States and the 'free world' against surprise attacks and to enable them to make effective preparations for defence.

Mr. Eisenhower then discussed the nature of intelligence-gathering activities, and said that those activities had a special and secret character. They were, so to speak, 'below-the-surface activities'. The secret measures taken by the United States must circumvent the measures designed by other countries to protect secrecy and military preparations. They were divorced from the regular visible agencies of Government which stayed clear of operational involvement in specific, detailed intelligence activities.

Intelligence elements operated under broad directives to seek and gather intelligence short of the use of force. These operations were supervised by responsible officials within the area of secret activities.

The United States did not use her Army, Navy or Air Force, for intelligence purposes, first, to avoid any possibility of the use of force in connexion with these activities, and second, because the military forces for obvious reasons could not be given latitude in their directives that must be kept under strict control.

Intelligence activities had their own rules and methods of concealment which sought to mislead and obscure, just as there were many discrepancies in the Soviet account of the U-2 incident.

For example, he said, there was some reason to believe that the plane in question was not shot down in high altitude.

His third point was that intelligence activities were distasteful but a vital necessity. The United States preferred to work for a different kind of world and a different way of obtaining information.

His fourth point was that the world must not permit the U-2 plane incident to distract it from the real issues of the day. The incident had been given a great propaganda interpretation and the emphasis given to it by the Soviet Union could only reflect a fetish of secrecy.

He described the real issues as those on which they would be working at the 'Summit' Conference—disarmament, search for solutions affecting Germany and Berlin, and the whole range of East-West relations, including a reduction of secrecy and suspicion.

Frankly, he said, he was hopeful that they might make progress on these great issues. That was what the United States meant when she spoke of working for peace.

Mr. Eisenhower was asked to comment on statements made at a conference on May 11 by the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, saying that USA, in conjunction with her allies, were balanced on the brink of war against the Soviet Union as a result of the aerial intelligence missions.

Asked further if he still maintained a hopeful attitude towards the 'Summit' Conference in view of Mr. Gromyko's remarks, he replied: "Yes".

He commented that he had some hope because those things had been said over many years and Mr. Gromyko's remark was no real change.

In a reference to Soviet intelligence apparatus, he recalled that Colonel Rudolf Abel had been convicted in the United States some time ago and sentenced to a long prison term for espionage. Anyone talking about provocative acts would do better to look at his own record.

The United States and her allies had done nothing which could be honestly consid red as 'provocative'. They were looking to their own security and they had no idea of provoking any conflict. It was absolutely ridiculous to think otherwise.

He was asked, in connexion with the Abel case, whether USA would defend one of her own citizens arrested by a foreign Government on an espionage charge.

[This was an obvious reference to the Soviet Government statement that Francis Powers, pilot of the U-2, would be dealt with in accordance with Soviet laws.]

He replied that USA would certainly offer the good offices of her Embassy. Of course, it would be an internal matter for the country concerned and the United States would have to act with its permission.

In answer to another question, he said that so far as he knew there had never been any Soviet intelligence flights over the United States.

On his planned journey to USSR in June, 1960, a newsman reminded Mr. Eisenhower that he had used the phrase "If I go" a week earlier and asked whether his plans had changed.

He replied: "No, not at all."

He added with a smile that he had no idea—one could never tell what would happen, but he did expect to go.

US Commitments To Allies To Be Honoured:

In answer to questions put by newsmen, the US State Department Press Officer, Mr. Lincoln White, said on May 10:

"The United States has undertaken certain commitments in the multilateral and bilateral arrangements for defence existing between this Government and those which once again appear to be subjected to a policy of intimidation by the Soviet Government. There should be no doubt that the United States will honour these commitments."

Asked to comment on Press reports that the Soviet Premier, Mr. Khruschev, had said that Soviet rockets would be used to retaliate against sites of intelligence missions over the Soviet Union, he replied: "It is typical that the Soviet Government singles out as the objective of its threats those smaller countries of the 'free world' who bear no responsibility for the recent incident."

Asked specifically whether his comment referred to Pakistan and Turkey as countries which bear no responsibility for the recent incidents, he said that that was correct "in the recent incident."

He added that the United States had assured the Japanese Government that U-2 flights from American bases in Japan had been and would continue to be used only for "legitimate and normal purposes."

Asked if his statement applied also to U-2 flights from Okinawa and Taiwan, he said: "We will keep our eyes open. We are not closing our eyes to surprise attacks from any direction."

Second Soviet Note To USA:

In a second Note to the United States on May 16, the Soviet Government warned again that in case of more aggressive attempts by American planes to invade the air-space of the Soviet Union, the intruding planes would be immediately destroyed.

The Soviet Note pointed out that the policy of deliberate provocations and gross violations of international law and the sovereignty of States, including one of its main principles —the principle of territorial integrity of States —proclaimed by the US Government as its political line, led not only to aggravation of tension, suspicion and mistrust in relations between States but also created a dangerous situation for the cause of peace.

As pointed out in the Note, the statement made by the US Secretary of State, Mr. C. A. Herter, on May 9 "cannot be regarded otherwise than as an act of aggression." The attempt to justify and "legalize" hostile actions was nothing less than preaching aggression.

It also stressed that with regard to the States whose Governments, neglecting the interests of their own peoples, offered their territory for the location of American bases from which planes were sent to intrude into the air-space of USSR, the Soviet Union would take appropriate measures, not excluding a blow at the above-mentioned bases.

It added: "The Soviet Government is of the opinion that the time has come for the US Government to demonstrate, in deeds and not in words, its concern for lessening international tension and, in the first place, to denounce the provocative activities of its aviation in relation to the Soviet Union and reject its announced policy, most dangerous to the cause of peace, of aggressive intrusion into the air-space of other States.

"The Soviet Government continues to remain an advocate of re-establishment of good relations between the Soviet Union and USA. Now it depends on the US Government, and on it only, whether the obstacle which has now risen on the path towards this goal will be removed."

US Press Comment:

American newspapers were critical of the episode. The New York Herald Tribune said that there was no disputing the fact that the prestige of the United States had received a blow and the West's moral authority had been impaired at a crucial moment.

The New York Times summed up the case as 'a costly diplomatic defeat'. It said that the timing of the flight before the 'Summit' Conference was 'political stupidity.' The American people had the right to expect that "changes" would be made which would prevent a recurrence of such gross miscalculation. Worse still was the evidence that "the right hand in Washington did not know what the left hand in Turkey or Pakistan was doing."

Hints Of British Espionage Flights Over Russia:

It was reported in London on May 9 that Royal Air Force aircraft had been taking part in reconnaissance missions over the Soviet Union and other communist countries in Eastern Europe.

Stories appearing in leading British newspapers said that the reconnaissance flights were made by modified "V" and Canberra bombers.

These reports appeared in conjunction with stories on US admission that the US aircraft shot down over Russia was probably engaged in an intelligence mission.

The British Air Ministry declined to comment on the reports.

Russian Protests To Norway, Turkey and Pakistan:

On May 13, the Soviet Government delivered protest Notes to Norway, Turkey and Pakistan.

The following is the text of the Note to Norway:

"The Government of USSR deems it necessary to communicate the following to the Government of Norway.

"A military aircraft violated the Soviet frontier at 05.36 hours, Moscow Time, on May 1 and flew over 2,000 kilometres deep into the Soviet Union. The Government of USSR could not naturally have left such a gross violation of the Soviet national frontiers unpunished. As soon as the intentions of the intruder plane became obvious, it was shot down by the Soviet missile forces in the vicinity of Sverdlovsk.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"An expert examination of all the evidence at the Soviet Union's disposal has put it beyond dispute that the invading plane belonged to USA, was permanently based in Turkey and was sent to the Soviet Union via Pakistan for hostile purposes.

"The exact findings of the investigation, as reported by the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of USSR, Mr. N. S. Khruschev, at the closing meeting of the session of the USSR Supreme Soviet on May 7, leave no room for doubt as to the purposes behind the flight of the American plane which violated the Soviet frontier on May 1. This plane, of the Lockheed U-2 type, was expressly equipped for a reconnaissance and subversionary flight over the territory of the Soviet Union.

"The plane carried equipment for aerial photography and for detection of the Soviet radar net-work and other special radio-engineering facilities of the Soviet anti-aircraft defences. The Soviet expert commission, which made the inquiry, has incontestable evidence at its disposal of the spying and reconnaissance mission of the American plane: the rolls of film showing Soviet defence and industrial establishments, a tape recording of the signals of Soviet radar stations and other evidence.

"It has been established that the plane in question was based at the American-Turkish air-base at Incirlik, near Adana, from where it flew over to the Peshawar airfield in Pakistan on April 27.

"The flight map, taken from the surviving American spy flier, Powers, clearly and distinctly indicates the whole of the route he was instructed to follow after taking off from the Turkish city of Adana: Peshawar—the Aral Sea—Sverdlovsk—Archangel—Murmansk, with the subsequent landing at the Bodo airfield in Norway. The spy flier reported that he was serving with the American 10-10 Unit stationed in Turkey and engaged in high altitude aerial reconnaissance, and that he had, notably, made repeated flights along the Turkish-Soviet frontier for the purpose of studying the Soviet anti-aircraft radar net-work.

"In face of these incontrovertible facts, the US State Department has had to admit that the American plane, which violated the Soviet frontier on May 1, had been sent into the Soviet Union for military reconnaissance. This meant recognizing that the flight had aggressive purposes.

"The American pilot testified that in the course of a thorough preparation for his flight over the territory of USSR, made well in advance, he had, on the instructions of his Command, made a preliminary flight from Turkey to Norway via Greece, Italy and to FRG (West Germany) and stayed there for 2 to 3 weeks studying the landing conditions at the Bodo airfield.

"It should be recalled in this connexion that as early as January, 1959 the Soviet Government, having received exact and verified information about deliberate reconnaissance flights to Soviet territory by American military planes from the territory of Norway, and specifically the Bodo airfield, had already told the Norwegian Government that such a state of affairs was intolerable. In its reply, the Government of Norway did not deny that planes of the third countries received permission from the Norwegian authorities in isolated cases to stay on Norwegian territory temporarily, allegedly for joint flights with aircraft of the Norwegian Air Force.

"The Government of Norway said that these flights were made only with the permission of the Norwegian authorities and that, under the Norwegian rules, the allied planes were not allowed to fly across Norwegian territory east of the 24th degree Eastern Longitude. But already then it was clear that these assurances were an attempt to exonerate Norway's partners in the aggressive NATO bloc and to whitewash their actions which are a threat to peace and security in the north of Europe, actions for which Norwegian territory, too, is used.

"Now, the provocative flight over Soviet territory by an American plane which was to land on the Norwegian airfield at Bodo proves irrefutably that the Norwegian Government did not heed the warnings of the Soviet Government. More, it has, in fact, become an accessory to provocative actions by the United States against Norway's neighbour, the Soviet Union.

"In view of the aforesaid, the question imposes: what is the real worth of the Norwegian Government's repeated assurances that the territory of Norway will not be made available in peace time for the stationing of foreign armed forces if this territory is already being used by planes of the US Air Force making aggressive flights within the confines of the Soviet Union? The Soviet Government calls the attention of the Government of Norway to the fact that it is difficult to regard these actions otherwise than as unfriendly to the Soviet Union and incompatible with the normal good-neighbourly relations between the two countries, and considers it necessary to stress that the Government of Norway bears a not inconsiderable share of the responsibility for the aggressive acts undertaken by the US Air Force with regard to the Soviet Union.

"The Government of the Soviet Union protests strongly to the Government of Norway against allowing foreign military aircraft to use Norwegian territory for the preparation and commission of intrusions into the Soviet air-space. The Soviet Government considers it necessary to warn that if such provocations continue from the territory of Norway, it will be obliged to take appropriate measures in reply. It will be recalled that the Soviet Union has means which, if necessary, will make it possible fully to incapacitate the military bases used for the commission of aggressive actions against the Soviet Union. It goes without saying that the responsibility for the consequences will rest both with the Governments of the States committing aggression against other nations and the Governments of the countries which are their accomplices."

Note To Turkey:

The following is the text of the Soviet Note to Turkey:

"The Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics deems it necessary to state the following to the Government of the Republic of Turkey.

"A military aircraft violated the Soviet border at 05.36 hours, Moscow Time, on May 1 and penetrated more than 2,000 kilometres within the Soviet Union. The Soviet Government, naturally, could not leave unpunished such a gross violation of the Soviet State frontier. When the intentions of the intruder plane became obvious, it was shot down by Soviet rocket troops in the area of Sverdlovsk.

"Expert investigation of all the data possessed by the Soviet side has established irrefutably that the intruder plane belonged to USA, was permanently based in Turkey and sent via Pakistan into the Soviet Union on a hostile mission.

"The Soviet Government cannot disregard the part played in the preparation and implementation of this hostile act against the Soviet Union by the Turkish Republic, in whose territory the American intruder plane was based and prepared for the flight.

"The Soviet Government deems it necessary to state to the Government of Turkey that by lending its territory to the United States for setting up war bases and for carrying out aggressive acts against the Soviet Union by the US Air Force, it becomes an accomplice in such acts and thereby assumes grave responsibility for the possible dangerous consequences of such actions.

"All this by no means agrees with the statements of the Turkish leaders about their desire to help consolidate peace, ease international tension and improve Turkey's relations with the Soviet Union.

"The Soviet Government has earlier warned the Government of Turkey about the danger of the situation when Turkish territory is used as a military place d'arms by third Powers. The Soviet side has drawn attention to the facts when the Soviet air-space was violated by foreign planes and balloons from Turkish territory. In the light of the above, the Soviet Government cannot help arriving at the conclusion that the Government of Turkey has not heeded these warnings of the Soviet Union, dictated by concern for the preservation of peace and by a desire to improve Soviet-Turkish relations.

"The Government of the Soviet Union protests to the Government of the Turkish Republic against the opportunity given to foreign war planes to use Turkish territory for preparing and carrying out intrusions into the Soviet Union. The Soviet Government deems it necessary to warn that if such provocations are repeated from the territory of Turkey, it will be compelled to take proper retaliatory measures. It is common knowledge that the Soviet Union has means to render harmless, if necessary, the war bases used for aggressive actions against the Soviet Union. It goes without saying that all responsibility for the consequences will be borne both by the Governments of the States committing aggression against other countries and the accomplices in this aggression."

Note To Pakistan:

The following is the text of the Soviet Note to Pakistan:

"A military aircraft violated the frontier of USSR at 05.36 hours, Moscow time, on May 1 of this year and penetrated more than 2,000 kilometres within the Soviet Union.

"The Soviet Government, naturally, could not leave unpunished such a gross violation of the Soviet State frontier. When the intentions of the intruder plane became clear, it was shot down by Soviet rocket troops in the area of Sverdlovsk.

"Expert investigation of all the data possessed by the Soviet side has irrefutably established that the intruder plane belonged to USA, was permanently based in Turkey and sent via Pakistan with a hostile mission into the Soviet Union.

"It was equipped with apparatuses for aerial photography, for detecting the Soviet radar net-work and other special radio-technical means, included in the Soviet Union's anti-aircraft defences. The Soviet Expert Commission, which carried out the investigation, possesses irrefutable proof of the American plane's espionage mission.

"It has been established that the plane in question was based on the American-Turkish Air Force base of Incirlik near Adana, whence it flew on April 27 to the airport of Peshawar in Pakistan.

"The flight map taken from the American spy pilot, Powers, who survived, shows clearly the entire course he had to fly after leaving the Turkish city of Adana: Peshawar—the Sea of Aral—Sverdlovsk—Archangel—Murmansk and then the Norwegian airport of Bodo, where he was to land. The spy pilot divulged that he serves with the American Unit 10-10, stationed in Turkey and engaged in high altitude intelligence, and that he, for one, had flown more than once along the Turkish-Soviet border with a view to studying the Soviet Union's anti-aircraft defence radar system.

"Confronted with these irrefutable facts, the US State Department was compelled to admit that the American plane, which violated the Soviet border on May 1 of this year, was sent into the Soviet Union on an intelligence mission.

"It was thereby admitted that this flight pursued aggressive purposes.

"The Government of USSR cannot disregard the part played in the preparation and implementation of this act, hostile to the Soviet Union, by Pakistan from whose territory the provocative intrusion of the American plane into Soviet air-space was undertaken.

"In its statements of December 26, 1958, February 20, 1959 and March 25, 1959, the Soviet Government already called the attention of the Pakistani Government to the grave consequences connected with the lend-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ing of Pakistani territory for the establishment of foreign war bases and their use by third Powers for aggressive purposes against the Soviet Union and the other peace-loving States.

"The take-off from Pakistani territory of a US Air Force plane, which penetrated into the Soviet Union on May 1 of this year, confirms again with ample clarity what a dangerous policy the Pakistani Government pursues by allowing foreign armed forces to use its territory.

"The Government of the Soviet Union protests to the Government of Pakistan in connexion with the granting of Pakistani territory to the United States for the commission of aggressive actions against USSR by the US Air Force and warns that if such actions are repeated from Pakistani territory, it will be compelled to take proper retaliatory measures. It is common knowledge that the Soviet Union possesses means to render harmless in case of need the war bases used for aggressive actions against the Soviet Union. It goes without saying that the responsibility for the consequences will be borne both by the Governments of the States committing aggression against other nations and by the Governments of the countries which are accomplices in it."

Mr. N. Khruschev's Warning To USA And Her Allies:

At a Czechoslovak Embassy reception in Moscow on May 9, the Soviet Premier, Mr. N. Khruschev, told the Pakistan Charge d'Affaires that if Peshawar was used in future as a base for action against the Soviet Union, immediate retaliatory measures would be taken.

He had summoned the Pakistan and Norwegian representatives to him to question them about the flight of the American reconnaissance plane.

Turning to the Pakistan Charge d'Affaires, Mr. Salman Ali, Mr. Khruschev told him that the plane took off from Peshawar.

He was quoted as saying that Peshawar had now been marked on a map and a ring made round it by the Soviet defence forces.

Mr. Khruschev also disclosed for the first time a previous flight over Russia two days after a visit to the Soviet Union by Gen. Nathan Twining, then US Air Force Chief of Staff, who had been "wined and dined in Moscow."

He said that General Twining had sent a plane over Russia which had gone as far as Kiev. "What were we to do? Should we protest? I suggested that we should not. Only an animal can behave like Gen. Twining did which does its unpleasant business where it eats."

In a reference to the shooting down of the American reconnaissance plane over Russia he said that the US State Department had been put in a situation in which "they cannot admit it and cannot deny it."

He likened the situation to a "maiden who is not a maiden for she has a child and no marriage has been registered. So, in one way she is a maiden, but in another she is not a maiden."

He added: "But life is not like that, and we say to the Americans: your plane was flying on reconnaissance over our territory. We were tracking it and when it got to the Sverdlovsk region we shot it down. There, you have put yourselves into a mess and are sitting in it."

He warned against any further attempts to make reconnaissance flights over the Soviet Union and said that measures would be taken against them. "If anyone is preparing to fly over our territory to reconnoitre objectives and find out State secrets, we shall simply shoot those planes down. Further, if such flights are repeated we shall take corresponding reprisal action. Let me put it this way. Those countries who have bases on their territory must get this into their heads: if they are going to permit people to fly from their bases over our territory, we shall strike at those bases because we regard these acts as a provocation against our country.

"We say to the Governments of those countries: if you lease your countries, it follows that we shall understand it our way. You who lease your territory are acting against us from your territory. Their country (USA) is far away from us but yours are close.

"Therefore, while making sure of our distant targets, we shall also keep our sights on the nearer targets. Let them draw the necessary conclusions from this.

"But I do not want to inflame passions because, even when there is war, people long for peace, they wait for the end of the fighting and dream of peace. There is no war now, but they are sounding our strength.

"Therefore, let us not draw any conclusions which might aggravate relations between countries, any conclusions which might in the future prevent us from creating good relations, even, I might say, with the United States.

"I repeat today that we want not only to live in peace with the Americans but in friendship with them."

Mr. Khruschev described the American reconnaissance flight as a "provocation" and said it was deliberately timed for the 'Summit' Conference in Paris.

"It is said that it was the work of the military," he said. "What kind of a State is this if the military do what the Government opposes?"

Then, he added amid laughter: "If anyone in our defence forces allowed himself to do such a thing we would pull him up immediately." A Government and country were strong when the entire machinery functioned smoothly, when everything was subordinated to the Government. "When everyone pulls in a different direction, what kind of a State is this and what confidence can one have in the policy of such a State?"

An American plane which earlier flew over Soviet territory on April 9, he said, should have been shot down. "But our military people, to put it mildly, missed their chance and we, so to say, made a note of that. But the aircraft on May 1 was shot down and our military carried out their task brilliantly."

Present-day bombers were powerless against rockets, he said, and Soviet rockets "find their own targets." It was this homing rocket which had been used to shoot down the U-2 plane. "Therefore, I say, if there are politicians who want to rely on bombers, they are doomed to failure. With our modern equipment the bombers will be destroyed before they reach their targets."

He said that attempts were still being made to frighten Russia because in the West bombers were still flying round the clock. "I should like to tell those people: 'Listen gentlemen, we also have bombers, but they are not on vigil. In our country, rockets are on vigil'.

"The plane which committed the diversion on May 1 flew at an altitude of 20,000 metres (about 65,600 feet). Our fighters can fly as high as 28,000 metres (about 91,800 feet). It is now not so difficult to bring down a bomber. The Americans can do this, but we can do it even better."

Reactions In Norway, Turkey And Pakistan:

The Prime Minister of Norway, Mr. E. Gerhardsen, said on May 13 that his Government in no way contributed to the US U-2 plane incident.

He also gave an assurance that Norway would never allow her territory to be used for aggressive action against the Soviet Union.

The Norwegian Foreign Minister, Mr. Halvard Lange, had said earlier in the Norwegian Parliament that his country had protested to the United States and had asked that Norway should not again be involved in such incidents. It was clear that the American spy-plane had planned to land in Norway.

He added that he could well understand the Soviet Union's bitterness over what had happened. At the same time, he said, he must protest against the "threats" against Norway which had been levelled by responsible political quarters in Russia.

It was evident that Norway, as a partner in common Western defence, took part in reconnaissance over international waters and over her own borders, but it had been and still was an explicit condition that this activity should not violate the borders of other countries.

The assurances asked for by Norway were given by USA on May 19.

The Turkish Foreign Ministry, in a communique issued on May 8, said: "It has been established that no plane has crossed the Turkish frontier in the direction of the Soviet Union on May 1."

Referring to the US plane shot down over Soviet territory on May 1, it said: "The Turkish Government has never authorized any American plane to fly over Soviet territory for reconnaissance or for any other purpose."

It maintained that no US plane had flown towards USSR from Turkish territory. "In any case, the Turkish Government can only be responsible for flights made by its own planes outside its air-space. If a foreign plane has flown over Turkey in the direction of a foreign territory Turkey cannot be implicated."

The communique brought to the fore the question of US bases.

By the terms of a US Air Treaty with Turkey, USA had set up an air-base near Adana in south-east Turkey. This base was directly under US Command. It was used without involving Turkey either diplomatically or militarily by US forces during their landing in Lebanon in July, 1958.

The communique stated that no US officer had been authorized to cross the Turkish frontier into the Soviet Union. However, if a US plane based in some other country flies over Turkey or even lands there before setting out on a reconnaissance mission to USSR, Turkey cannot be held responsible, having no control over such missions.

Commenting on Mr. Khruschev's statement, a spokesman of the Pakistan Foreign Office said that the Soviet leaders "appear to have a pathological conviction that foreign bases exist in Pakistan".

He said: "We have frequently told them quite categorically that no such bases exist in Pakistan. The allegation made by Mr. Khruschev so far as it refers to Pakistan is, therefore, wholly incorrect.

"The Central Treaty Organization (CENTO), of which Pakistan is a member, is purely defensive in intent and nature and there is, therefore, no question whatever of its being put to aggressive purposes."

It was stated in London on May 8 that the Pakistan Government was ordering an enquiry into the Soviet allegation that the US aircraft shot down on May 1 over Soviet territory had stopped over in Peshawar before flying over to the Soviet Union.

The Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Mohammed Ikramullah, who was then in London, said in a statement: "We have no information whether the allegation that the American aircraft which has been shot down in Russia did stop over in Peshawar. We are ordering an enquiry into the allegation.

"If it is found to be true, we shall lodge a strong protest with the Government of the United States to ensure that such a thing does not happen again."

He added that no country had any control over the movements of foreign aircraft after

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

it had crossed her borders. "Anyway, the violation of our air-space is not a new phenomenon. In the recent past, it has on several occasions been violated from the north."

Mr. Ikramullah was in London as a member of the delegation led by its President, Field-Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan, to the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference.

In a statement issued from the Pakistan High Commission in London on May 14, the Pakistan Foreign Secretary, Mr. Ikramullah, said that enquiries had shown that "no aircraft had taken off from the Peshawar airfield in the direction of the Soviet Union on May 1."

He added: "If any American plane taking off from Peshawar has been directed to Soviet Russia in the course of its flight, we have cause for bitter complaint.

"The American authorities must realize the delicacy of our situation and ensure that all concerned refrain from such activities in future."

The Pakistan President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, told a news conference in London on May 13 that his Government would protest to the US Government if it was established that Pakistan's airfield had been used for espionage purposes.

He was asked if he would be shocked to know that his country's airfield had been used for such a purpose and what action he would take.

He said: "We should take action to see that it is not used for such purposes in future. If we discover that it was in fact used, we shall protest to the US Government that it should not have done so and certainly should not be done in future."

Pakistan, he said, was trying to find out whether the aircraft had come from Peshawar and whether it had gone in the direction of Russia. "The Americans are our friends. Their aeroplanes come and visit our territory. How do we know where they go after they leave our territory?

"We are no party to anything like this. How can we know that such and such an aeroplane is designed for such and such purpose? All our intentions are peaceful. We want to live at peace with our neighbours and certainly with the Russians who are not far from us and are our neighbours.

"In spite of that, if we are threatened we are not going to be frightened of those threats in a hurry."

President Ayub Khan told a news conference in Karachi on May 17 that Pakistan had protested to USA against the use of Pakistan air-bases for a spy flight over Russia.

He said that there was no military agreement between Pakistan and the United States. There was only a Civil Aviation Agreement between Pakistan and the United States, giving airfield facilities to US civilian aircraft. The Pakistan Government would take steps to ensure that an incident like this did not happen again.

He categorically denied that USA had an air-base in Peshawar. But he admitted that an American Communication Unit did exist in Peshawar.

Asked whether Pakistan would apply for increased US military aid as a result of Soviet "threats", he said: "This is always under review."

If anyone was foolish enough to strike with nuclear weapons, he said, the answer would be nuclear defence. He was in touch with Washington about Soviet "threats" to his country.

In a Note handed to the Soviet Ambassador in Pakistan on May 24, the Pakistan Government denied that it had played any part in the preparation and execution of the flight of any aircraft for the purpose of military intelligence over Soviet Russia. This was in reply to the Soviet protest Note delivered on May 16.

It referred to the Pakistan Government's protest to the United States demanding assurances that no such incident would be allowed to take place in future and said: "An assurance to that effect has been received from the Government of the United States of America."

It said that Pakistan's air-space had been violated several times in recent months and that the "type of aircraft used in these operations and their directions of flight indicate that these must have been Soviet planes".

It assured the Soviet Government that Pakistan wished and intended to live in peace and friendship with Russia.

Afghan Protest To Pakistan And USA:

The Government of Afghanistan protested to Pakistan and the United States on May 18 against the violation of Afghan air-space by the American U-2 plane on May 1.

The protest was handed to the Pakistan Ambassador and the American Charge d'Affaires in Kabul.

Earlier, in an interview with the Soviet news agency Tass on May 11, the Afghan Foreign Minister, Sardar Mohammed Naim Khan, said that his Government intended to lodge an energetic protest with USA and Pakistan after studying the circumstances of the aggressive action committed by the American spy-plane against Afghanistan and the Soviet Union.

He said that such acts did not correspond to any international understanding, especially on the eve of the 'Summit' Conference.

They would only increase tensions among countries and in themselves represented a threat of a new war.

He added that countries which had allowed the United States to use their territories were "accomplices in aggression."

Other Comments:

The Danish Defence Minister, Mr. H. C. Hansen, said in Copenhagen on May 17 that the Danish Government considered that Danish aerodromes should not be used as bases for Allied planes undertaking "unjustified" flights over the land or territorial waters of countries which were not members of NATO.

The Shah of Iran, who was on a visit to Stockholm said on May 7, that he was convinced that the US plane shot down over Russia had not taken off from Iran.

Replying to questions by newsmen who suggested that the US plane might have flown over Iran, he said he was sure that the Iranian authorities knew nothing about this incursion, if incursion there had been.

Replying to another question, he said that military planes were not allowed to fly over Iranian territory without special permission.

He added: "If we had good radars and efficient anti-aircraft artillery we would shoot down any plane flying over our territory without permission."

The Japanese Prime Minister, Mr. Nobusuke Kishi, said on May 16 that in the face of mounting doubts on the activities of the American U-2 planes, his Government might have to demand their withdrawal from Japan.

Mr. Nehru (then in London) described the incident on May 7 as "unfortunate" and said it had somewhat vitiated the psychological atmosphere for the "Summit" Conference in Paris.

The West German Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, told a meeting in Dusseldorf on May 9 that he knew for sure that the Soviet Union had also flown planes over West German territory.

He added: "And I know, thank God, that the American planes have been making similar flights over Russia. This is part of the same business."

US Democratic Party's Reaction:

Democratic Party leaders in the United States issued a statement on May 22 saying that "Mr. Eisenhower's foreign policy had failed because of its fundamental lack of purpose and integrity."

The statement issued by the Democratic Advisory Council was signed among others, by the former US President, Mr. Harry S. Truman, Mr. Adlai Stevenson, Senator John Kennedy and Senator Symington.

It criticised Mr. Eisenhower for going to Paris with the full knowledge that no progress was possible for a settlement of the two most important problems—Berlin and disarmament.

It said that the Eisenhower Administration gave Mr. Khruschev the opportunity to kill the 'Summit' Conference by its inept handling of the U-2 plane incident.

It called for an investigation of the way in which the plane incident was handled.

Senator Kennedy, likely candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, said in New York on May 24 that he would have expressed regret to the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Khruschev, about the U-2 plane incident if he had been in Mr. Eisenhower's place.

In a television interview, he stressed that he felt Mr. Khruschev had not specifically demanded apologies and that simply regrets would have been sufficient.

In that case, he added, the blame for the 'Summit' Conference failure would have been placed more clearly on Mr. Khruschev.

He said: "I do regret the U-2 incident."

(The New York Times, US Embassy and UK High Commission, New Delhi, Tass, The Times, London and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2036:AOA:B, 2645:AOA:A]

B. Russia Launches 'Sputnik IV': On May 15, the eve of the 'summit' conference in Paris, Russia announced the successful launching into orbit around the Earth of a satellite carrying a "dummy space-man" in a cabin with simulating conditions for manned flight into space. It weighed 4-1/2 tons.

The satellite space-ship was put into a pre-calculated orbit, which is close to circular and some 320 kilometres (about 200 miles) above the surface of the Earth, where it separated from the carrier-rocket's last stage.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

This came in an announcement by the Soviet official news agency Tass, which said:

"This lays the beginning for difficult endeavours to build reliable space-ships, guaranteeing safely-manned flights into outer space.

"For the past few years, the Soviet Union has been conducting scientific research and designing work to prepare a manned flight into outer space.

"The Soviet Union's achievements in the creation of artificial Earth satellites of huge weight and size, the successful testing of powerful rocket-carriers capable of orbiting a Sputnik weighing several tons have paved the way to the building and testing of space-ship for long manned flights into space.

"The space-ship's initial period of revolution around the Earth is 91 minutes. Its inclination to the equatorial plane is 65 degrees.

"It weighs four tons 540 kilograms without the last stage of the carrier-rocket. The ship has a pressurized cabin on board which contains a dummy space-man, all the necessary equipment for a future manned flight and, moreover, various instrumentation weighing 1,477 kilograms (approximately 4,250 lbs) together with sources of power supply.

"The launching was undertaken to perfect and check the satellite's system, ensuring its safe flight and controls, its return to the Earth and the necessary conditions for the space crew.

"When the necessary information is received from the space-ship, a pressurized cabin weighing some 2-1|2 (metric) tons will be separated from it. In this case, it is not planned to retrieve the pressurized cabin, which, after due checking of its reliability, operation and separation from the carrier-rocket, will—as the space-ship itself—begin descending on command from the Earth and burn up in the denser layers of the atmosphere.

"The space-ship is equipped with a 'signal' radio-transmitter, operating on the frequency of 19.995 megacycles, both in the telegraph and telephone regimes.

"Besides this transmitter, the space-ship is fitted out with special radio equipment to play back data on the operation of its instrumentation and for the exact measuring of the orbit elements. The power supply for the scientific and measuring instruments is provided by chemical and solar batteries.

"Analysis of the initial data received from the satellite shows that the installed instrumentation and equipment are functioning normally. Ground stations are keeping regular track of the satellite."

A Soviet scientist said: "The satellite's flight over Paris has recalled not only the immense might of the Soviet Union but also our passionate wish to unite the efforts of mankind in the cause of progress of science and technology."

Moscow Radio predicted that the first man who would be sent into space would be a Russian.

Moscow Radio's Astronautical Commentator said: "We are primarily interested in questions connected with the strain imposed on people launched in a space-ship in the study of the effects of cosmic rays on the human organism as well as the scope of the danger from meteors which accompanies every space flight.

"The area around the Earth, where the satellite is now rushing along, is quite like outer space."

"Although the present experiment did not provide for the safe return of the cabin, in the future it is intended to return the cabin to the Earth's surface."

Prof. Vladimir Dobronravov, Soviet space scientist, in a broadcast over Moscow Radio the same day (May 15), stressed the importance of the weight of the new satellite and said: "This weight has made it possible to equip the satellite space-ship with a special compartment—a cabinet adapted for man's flight into outer space."

He added: "To preserve all the conditions required for ensuring the life of the pilot and for the carrying out of research, the cabin has been equipped with various instruments and installations.

"Thanks to reliable radio-telegraphic and radio-telephonic communications, with the help of a radio transmitter, scientists on the Earth will receive information on how the instruments recording the physical conditions required for man's life are working."

He recalled that May 15 was also the date of another Soviet space achievement—the launching of Sputnik III in 1958. "Today, on May 15, 1960, Soviet science and technology again demonstrated to the whole world the unbounded possibilities which are inherent in the field of the study of outer space.

"Tomorrow, on May 16, the 'summit' conference opens in Paris. The peoples of the whole Earth await from it fruitful results and hope for a relaxation of tension in international relations and for the removal of the threat of another world war. USSR will do everything she can to ensure world peace."

In Germany, a spokesman of the Bochum Observatory said that the signal from the Soviet space-ship had been received clearly and strongly from 09-26 GMT to 09-20 GMT and from 1059 GMT to 11-94 GMT.

He described the signal as a high-pitched "bee-bee-bee" with occasional rasping notes.

[Bochum is situated in the industrial Ruhr, 75 miles north of Bonn.]

The signals from the Soviet space-ship were received clearly and strongly by Reuter's radio station near London from 12-29 to 12-36 GMT.

A group of observers at Denver, Colorado in USA, saw the Sputnik or its carrier-rocket at 10-37 GMT.

Mr. Francis Ohmer, Head of the Denver Observer team, said that the object he saw was at 60 degrees from the horizon at an altitude of 200 to 225 miles. It was shining like a second magnitude star.

A spokesman for the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Massachusetts, USA, said that "minitrack" stations had recorded the Sputnik's signals by radio shortly after 13-00 GMT at Blossom Point, Washington, and Fort Myers.

The world's largest radio-telescope at Jordell Bank in UK did not track the Russian space-ship.

Its Director, Prof. A. C. B. Lovell, explained on May 15: "It is very close to the Earth and signals could be easy to pick up without the use of our complicated equipment."

He added that he and his colleagues were very impressed by the weight of the Russian satellite—over four tons. "This illustrates the seriousness with which the Russians are taking man's flight into space, which must now be considered imminent. We have known for a long time that the Russians intended to proceed with manned flights."

Because of clouds over Britain, few people were able to see Sputnik IV, but a message from Paris said that the Soviet space-ship flashed across the clear morning sky near Paris on May 16 with the brightness of a second magnitude star.

Moscow Radio said on May 15 that the Soviet Union was the only nation with rockets powerful enough to launch a space-ship.

The broadcast revealed that the tests carried out in the Pacific on January 20 and 31 of rockets were designed to launch heavy space-ships and pointed out that the weight of the space-ship launched on May 15 was equal to that of an aircraft.

It noted that the total weight of US satellites launched to date did not reach that of the Sputnik III launched exactly two years ago, which weighed 1,327 kilograms.

It added that the American explanation that it was of small importance to launch heavy satellites to verify scientific data was not valid.

(Tass and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3185:AOA:G, 3273:AOA:D]

C. UN Economic And Social Council Meeting: The UN Economic and Social Council began its 29th session at UN Headquarters on April 5.

The Netherlands representative, Mr. C. W. A. Schurmann, was elected President succeeding Mr. Daniel Coso Willegas of Mexico.

The President of the World Bank, Mr. Eugene Black, said on April 7 that foreign investment opportunities in Africa would necessarily remain limited until the human resources of the new African nations were more fully developed.

More education and training at all levels constituted the basic requirements for the fast development of new nations on the African continent. The same situation applied in many of the other less developed nations as well.

He said that it was a striking fact that from 1956-58, public external debts of the World Bank's member-countries in Asia, Middle East and Africa had almost doubled. He cited India and the United Arab Republic as examples of States which had very little external public debt at the end of 1955 and were major debtors on public account three years later.

By the end of 1958, Latin America, Asia, Middle East and Africa had an outstanding public debt of about $5,000,000,000 and further expansion had since occurred.

He said that he was mentioning these figures not because he regarded the present level of indebtedness as excessive but because they indicated that to maintain and accelerate the momentum of development would require continued large investment of foreign capital for many years ahead.

Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld's Speech:

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld, stressed the importance of the time element in aiding newly-independent countries.

The problem of under-development, he said, was universal, but it must be recognized that newly emerging States faced very specific traditional problems. Similar needs had developed in many cases in the past but never to the present degree.

He said that all the countries likely to become new members of United Nations in 1960 happened to be countries in Africa. They were the former UN Trust territories of Cameroons, Togo and Somalia. Furthermore, Nigeria, Mali, Madagascar and the Belgian Congo were arriving at independence and were likely to become members of UN.

He observed that in the transitional period of newly-won independence, people were quite naturally entertaining great expectations while at the same time Governments were faced with special difficulties. There was an atmosphere of uncertainty as the administration was undergoing changes and investors might be holding back.

It was at that time that United Nations "carries a special responsibility and has, in a certain sense, a strategic importance." Assistance was a necessity, and United Nations,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"as a kind of a stop-gap organization," should, during those days, come in with the assistance needed.

For United Nations, he added, it was only a question of using existing machinery. But it would be unrealistic "not to count on the need for more funds." Moreover, it was important for UN action not to be delayed by a year or two by administrative and budgetary arrangements for, otherwise, the Organization might have missed the time when it had a special responsibility.

He expressed the opinion that UN efforts should be "more in the nature of a central consultant activity than in the nature of, so to say, some kind of marginal executive activity."

Resolution On Technical Aid:

The Economic and Social Council unanimously adopted a resolution on April 14 calling for special efforts by United Nations to provide technical assistance to newly-independent States, particularly in Africa.

The resolution, sponsored by the United States, Japan, the Netherlands, Denmark, Sudan, New Zealand and Venezuela, asked the Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, to submit a detailed report on technical aid to the newly-independent nations at the Summer session of the Council.

This report would be prepared in consultation with the new nations and the heads of international agencies affiliated to United Nations.

The resolution expressed the hope that additional funds would be made available to the expanded Technical Assistance Programme and the Special Fund in 1961 and the following years "to permit a substantial increase in the activities of these programmes in Africa while fully maintaining or increasing the assistance given to other regions."

Committee On Industrialization:

There was general agreement in the Council on the need for setting up an expert international body to promote the industrialization of under-developed countries.

The Council had been asked by the UN General Assembly to consider the "prompt establishment" of a Commission for Industrial Development. As it is, the Council decided to set up a Standing Committee, suggested by Brazil, Denmark, France, the United Kingdom and the United States.

In support of the Standing Committee, it was pointed out that it would have the same task as a Commission, and hence differ from it only in name; and that it could be more closely integrated with the work of the Council.

The Standing Committee would comprise all members of the Council and an additional six members to be elected for three years from among UN members, specialized agencies or the International Atomic Energy Agency. In the election of these additional members, consideration would be given to geographical distribution and the "adequate representation" of under-developed countries.

Draft Declaration On Freedom Of Information:

The Social Committee of the Economic and Social Council adopted an Article for a Draft Declaration on Freedom of Information on April 18 calling for the free flow of information "within countries and across frontiers".

At the same time, the Committee rejected an amendment submitted by the Soviet Union which declared that all Governments had the right to "oppose the dissemination of false and distorted reports which offend the national dignity of peoples."

The Draft Declaration contained the following five Articles:

"(1) The right to know and the right freely to seek the truth are the inalienable and fundamental rights of man. Everyone has the right, individually and collectively, to seek, receive and impart information.

"(2) All Governments should pursue policies under which the free flow of information within countries and across frontiers will be protected. The right to seek and transmit information should be assured in order to enable the public to ascertain facts and appraise events.

"(3) The media of information should be employed in the service of the people. The development of independent national media of information should be encouraged. No Government or public or private body or interests should exercise such control over media for disseminating information as to prevent the existence of a diversity of sources of information or to deprive the individual of free access to such sources.

"(4) The exercise of the rights and freedoms entails special responsibilities and duties. Those who disseminate information must strive in good faith to ensure the accuracy of the facts reported and respect the rights and the dignity of nations, groups and individuals, without distinction of race, nationality or creed.

"(5) The rights and freedoms proclaimed above should be universally recognized and respected and may in no case be exercised contrary to the purposes and principles of United Nations. They should be subject only to such limitations as are determined by law solely for the purpose of securing due recognition and respect for the rights and freedoms of others and of meeting the just requirements of national security, public order, morality and the general welfare in a democratic society."

Teaching About UN:

The Council also gave unanimous approval to a resolution on the subject of teaching about United Nations in the educational establishments of the member-States.

The resolution re-affirmed the Council's belief in the importance of teaching about United Nations and its related agencies as a means of promoting support for their work.

It expressed hope for continued and, if possible, intensified efforts.

Among the statements heard by the Council was one made on behalf of the World Federation of UN Associations. This was to have been delivered by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, but as she was unable to attend, it was read by Mrs. Santha Rama Rau, an Indian author.

Among other things, the statement emphasized that it was essential for children to begin learning about international co-operation and United Nations in their early years.

Decisions Of Council:

The Economic and Social Council ended on April 21.

The Council, in a resolution adopted unanimously, fully supported the UN Secretary-General's efforts to provide special assistance to newly-independent countries in Africa and elsewhere and called for additional funds for a substantial increase in UN programmes in emerging States.

Industrialization of poorer countries would be accelerated with the help of a United Nations Standing Committee for Industrial Development. The new Committee was established by the Council by a vote of 15 to none, with three abstentions (Bulgaria, Poland and USSR).

The Council approved directives to the Secretariat for continued work on various projects for industrialization, water resources, international flow of private capital and petroleum resources.

Finally, the Council asked the UN Secretary-General to convene an Asian Cartographic Conference, and possibly also one for Africa.

Two proposals to discuss the economic and social aspects of disarmament were not pressed to the vote: one by USSR asked that the Council discuss the subject in Summer, while Chile, Costa Rica and Venezuela proposed that the problem may not be discussed "in present circumstances."

The Council adopted, by 15 votes to none, with three abstentions (Bulgaria, Poland and USSR), the text of the Declaration on Freedom of Information (see above).

The text of the Declaration will now go to the General Assembly.

Elections:

The new Industrial Development Committee would consist of 24 members, of whom 18 are those of the Council.

Elected to be the six additional members of the Committee for a period of one to three years were: Peru, Pakistan, India, United Arab Republic, Yugoslavia and Mexico.

Other elections carried out to fill seats falling vacant at the beginning of 1961 in about one-third of the Council's functional Commission and certain other organs brought the following results:

Population Commission: Belgium, Ceylon, Mexico, United Arab Republic and Uruguay.

Statistical Commission: France, United Kingdom, Norway, Cuba and Rumania.

Commission On International Commodity Trade: United States, Ceylon, New Zealand, Bulgaria, Sweden and the Federation of Malaya.

Commission on Human Rights: United Kingdom, Panama, the Netherlands, Poland, China and Afghanistan.

Social Commission: Canada, Ecuador, Albania, China (Formosa), Israel and Sudan.

Commission on Status of Women: Argentina, Japan, Philippines, Australia, Czechoslovakia and China (Formosa).

UNICEF Executive Board: United States, Poland, Brazil, France, USSR, Afghanistan, Japan, China (Formosa), Tunisia and El Salvador.

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi and The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2513:AOA:E]

D. Togoland Achieves Independence: Togoland became the world's newest independent State on April 27.

At Lome, capital of Togoland, the green, yellow, and red flag of the Republic was hoisted to the boom of a 101-gun salute as midnight struck.

Tens of thousands of Africans celebrated their independence by dancing all night to tom-toms in the streets of Lome and throughout the country in celebrations which continued till April 29.

As the National Flag was hoisted, Mr. Sylvanus Olympio, Togoland's 58-year old Prime Minister, said: "I solemnly proclaim the Independence of Togo, our Motherland. Let the joy of the young Togo break forth.

"Throughout the country now, there can be no other sentiment, no space in our hearts, except for this unique moment in the life of the nation."

[Togo is the smallest independent African State and the fourth independent West African State, following Liberia, Ghana, Guinea and the Cameroons. Later in 1960, Nigeria.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

with Africa's biggest population, would be achieving Independence. Togo was a German colony for 30 years until 1914, when it was occupied by British and French troops during World War I. The country has now ended 38 years of French rule, first under the League of Nations Mandate voted in 1922, and later as a United Nations Trust Territory.]

Background:

The UN Trust Territory of French Togoland, which achieved its Independence, will henceforth be known as the Republic of Togo. Now that the rights of the people to mould their destinies have been restored, the young Republic will take its due place in the comity of nations and, as the 11th independent African State, will add strength and confidence to the "African personality."

Togoland has gone through a pattern of colonial history similar to the Republic of Cameroons, which became independent on January 1, 1960. It is a former German Protectorate in West Africa, a narrow strip of land on the Gulf of Guinea, Great Britain and France having formally recognized the German influence in that area by 1886. During World War I, Togoland, like the Cameroons and Tanganyika, was occupied by British and French forces.

In 1922, the League divided the territory into two Mandates—British Togoland (13,041) sq. miles) and French Togoland (21,893 sq. miles) with Lome as the capital of the latter. This division, which was certainly arbitrary, was done without much regard to natural frontiers or the tribal feelings of the inhabitants. The Mandates became Trust Territories of UN in 1946. British Togoland has all along been governed as an administrative unit of the Gold Coast and this unit ceased to be a Trusteeship Territory on March 6, 1957, when the objectives of the Trusteeship having been realized, it was after a referendum united with the independent State of Ghana.

French Togoland, however, was not linked up for administrative purposes with its neighbouring Dahomey. Constitutionally, it was given the status of an Associated Territory, forming a separate administrative unit with a Commissioner at its head. A Territorial Assembly for French Togoland was established in 1946 and from 1952 its members have been directly chosen on a single roll. Some attempts were made between 1933 and 1946 to bring Togoland into closer administrative association with French West Africa, but its autonomy was restored in 1946. Like other French dependencies, Togoland has also been represented in the French Parliament as well as in the now defunct French Union.

Early in 1956, the French Government promulgated a statute, whereby Togoland was declared to be an autonomous Republic within the French Union. Under the statute, the Togoland Government was to have full control over its internal affairs, but the defence of the country and its foreign relations were to remain the responsibility of the Metropolitan Government. According to the new Constitution, there was to be a Legislature elected by universal suffrage. The administration was to be conducted by Ministers responsible to the Legislature.

General Elections were held in this Trust Territory in 1956 which approved the new Constitution. Soon after, the French Government announced its intention of ending the Trusteeship Agreement as, according to the French view, the purpose of Trusteeship was met by its new Constitution.

The French contention was opposed by several countries in UN and later it was decided by the General Assembly to hold a plebiscite in Togoland with a view to ascertaining the wishes of the people. The plebiscite held in April, 1958 gave a shock to France when the Togolese voted for complete Independence. This plebiscite also brought into power the most dominant political personality in Togoland, Mr. Sylvanus Olympio, a vehement nationalist, who had all along been an uncompromising opponent of French imperialism. He also appeared before United Nations where he pleaded the case for his country's Independence. His party, known by the name Commite' de l'Unite Togolaise, defeated the pro-French Parti Togolais du Progress led by M. Grunitzky, a former Prime Minister of Togoland.

On assuming office as Prime Minister, Mr. Olympio immediately opened negotiations with the representatives of the French Government on the territory's political future and asked for an immediate transfer of complete power and sovereignty to the people of Togoland.

France had to recognize the urges and aspirations of the two million people of Togoland and had to recognize that the territory was ripe for independence. Thus, the same year (1958) France requested the UN General Assembly to terminate the Trusteeship Agreement in 1960. When all the negotiations were over, France and the Government of Mr. Olympio came to an agreement announcing April 27, 1960 as the date for Independence—exactly two years after Mr. Olympio was voted to power in 1958. The final hitch was over when the UN General Assembly adopted a unanimous resolution in December, 1959 approving this date for Togoland's Independence, coupled with a recommendation that the territory be admitted to United Nations on achieving Independence.

While the territory has been on the threshold of Independence, Togoland was involved in a bitter and acrimonious controversy with her neighbour, Ghana. The genesis of this controversy, in fact, goes back to a long period of history.

It has already been stated that the division of Togoland between France and Britain was done without any regard to ethnic or other considerations. It is significant that this partition has aroused, from the very beginning, strong protests from the Ewe people of Togoland, who were the largest single tribe in united Togoland. The opposition to partition was more vehement in the neighbourhood of Lome—the capital of French Togoland.

Some associations in British Togoland and the Comite de l'Unite Togolaise of Mr. Olympio in French Togoland have been active in demanding from United Nations the re-unification of the two parts of Togoland into one independent State. This demand has, however, been opposed by another association in French Togoland, the Perti Togolais du Progress, which does not desire to see the creation of a separate Ewe State, but looks forward, on the contrary, to a unified Togoland under French administration.

While British Togoland was being united with Ghana in March, 1957, Mr. Olympio's party made a strong protest against the annexation of Togoland's area. And now when French Togoland was on the verge of independence, Ghana's Prime Minister, Dr. Kwame Nkrumah, has been talking in terms of integration between French Togoland and Ghana. He has said on several occasions that the integration of the two will mean the removal of the artificial and arbitrary frontiers brought about by the imperialists and will enable the two sister territories to be re-united as they were in the good old days. Thus, Dr. Nkrumah had been suggesting that Ghana and Togoland must start negotiations before the latter achieved Independence.

Mr. Olympio has already rejected Dr. Nkrumah's proposal. He and his party are not opposed to the idea of an eventual African Federation, but they believe that this is not possible to-day as there are several problems involved in bringing about federations at this stage. But, certain nationalist elements in French Togoland have been suggesting that Ghana has imperialist motives and wishes to "grab" French Togoland.

The uneasy calm between Ghana and Togoland has been disturbed after a recent announcement by the Ghana Government of having unearthed a conspiracy between Togoland and some opposition leaders in Ghana to start subversive activities in Trans-Volta, which includes the former British Togoland. This led to the detention of some Ghanians in this region. Although the Government of Mr. Olympio lost no time in refuting this serious allegation, the relations between Mr. Olympio and Dr. Nkrumah were further strained. In the meantime, the Juvento Movement (Youth Movement)—a militantly nationalist and strongly anti-French organizations in French Togoland—had been declaring that France was behind all this trouble between African brothers in the two countries.

(The Hindu, Madras and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3135:AOA:D, 3334:AOA:E]

E. Successful Test Of "Saturn" Rocket-Booster In USA: It was revealed in Washington on April 29 that the United States had conducted a successful full-scale test of its mammoth Saturn rocket-booster.

All eight engines of the super-rocket's first stage were fired at once for the first time and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) said that the tests conducted at Huntsville, Alabama, was a complete success. About 1,300,000 lbs of thrust was developed during the test, which lasted for less than 10 seconds.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3174:AOA:F]

F. Lenin Peace Prize: The official Soviet News Agency Tass announced on May 3 that the Indonesian President, Dr. Sukarno, and the American industrialist, Mr. Cyrus Eaton, had been awarded the International Lenin Prizes for the Promotion of Peace.

Tass described the 77-year-old, Canadian-born multi-millionnaire, Mr. Eaton, as "a public figure of the United States whose activity is an example of courageous service to the lofty ideal of peaceful co-existence between people."

It described Dr. Sukarno as "one of the most prominent leaders of 'free Asia', actively carrying through an independent foreign policy, aimed at the strengthening of universal peace."

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3106:AOA:N]

G. Britain Writes Off "Blue Streak" Missile As A Defence Weapon: The British Defence Minister, Mr. Harold Watkinson, announced in the House of Commons on April 13 that the Blue Streak missile was being written off as a defence weapon.

The implications of the decision were summed up the following day in a dispatch to The Hindu, Madras, by its London Correspondent, as follows:

"The general feeling among politicians and the public now is that the announcement puts a big question mark over the whole future of Britain as an independent nuclear Power. Mr. Macmillan, it is said, is either gambling on total nuclear disarmament within the next five years or has resigned himself to dependence on American supplies.

"The truth of the matter is that nuclear defence has become so complicated that nations do not know where they stand or what may be round the corner. A typical comment is that of a cartoonist today who has drawn two idealist-looking protest-marchers, one saying to the other 'But darling, what on earth is the use of walking all the way from Aldermaston to protest against something that is hopelessly out of date, too expensive to build, and probably won't work.'

"The Blue Streak round which the controversy is raging is a fixed-site missile which has been the focal point of British defence effort during the last three years. It was the centre piece of a programme designed to give Britain an independent nuclear strike force,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

but it is now being officially abandoned on the ground that the cost is prohibitive and that the bases would be too vulnerable anyway.

"Britain is for the present relying chiefly on her force of V-bombers to carry H-Bombs to enemy targets, but these bombers are fast becoming obsolete. The Blue Streak was intended to replace them, and since it is being given up, some alternative has to be found. The only alternatives are the American submarine-launched Polaris missile, and the Skybolt (to be launched from manned aircraft), but these are still in an experimental stage and may not be available to Britain for another five or ten years.

"The position, therefore, is that the Government is being attacked from all sides for wasting huge sums of money on a project that has become out-dated even before it could be tested, and for proposing to buy the American Skybolt which might itself be superseded by some new Soviet advance. Moreover, America might be prepared to supply the Polaris and the Skybolt missiles only on conditions which might well prove irksome or unacceptable to Britain. Thus whatever happens, the country seems destined to slip into second place in the nuclear race, possessing at best her own nuclear weapons but without having an effective means of delivering them.

"In the face of this situation, more and more people are coming round to the conclusion that only two countries—United States and the Soviet Union—are economically capable of going ahead with large-scale nuclear programmes, and that the best thing for Britain to do is to dovetail her research and development programmes with those of her allies or drop out of the race altogether."

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3274:AOA:G]

H. Progress Of Vertical-Take-Off Research Jet Plane In Britain: It was announced in London on April 6 by Short Brothers & Harland Ltd. that the development of Britain's Short SC-1 vertical-take-off research jet aircraft had made a major advance.

The Company said that the plane had for the first time achieved full transition from jet-borne hovering to wing-borne flight and then back to hovering. "The development is regarded by experts as a major break-through in the field of vertical take-off and landing."

The final phase of the aircraft flight test programme was completed by the Company's chief test pilot, Mr. Tom Brooke-Smith, after several weeks of test flights at the Royal Aircraft Establishment, near London.

Previously, the aircraft had taken off vertically and hovered on its four downward-pointing Rolls-Royce turbo-jet engines, and it had also flown conventionally, using its single, horizontally-mounted propulsion engine. But, for the first time, it had completed the entire sequence of flight operations for which it was designed.

The Company's chief test pilot, Mr. Tom Brooke-Smith, took the SC-1 into a circuit of the airfield and then made a long approach to the main runway, gradually de-celerating until, finally, he was hovering motionless a few feet above the concrete. The first stage of the transition was accomplished. Then, to complete the sequence, he accelerated away again into normal wing-borne flight, gradually gained height, then went into another circuit and landed conventionally.

After the flight, he said: "We have learned a lot from our research with the SC-1. We know how to use these remarkable Rolls-Royce engines and how to built aircraft round them.

"We know how to control the aircraft and keep it stable at all times, and how to overcome the problems of jet-blast on the ground. We can take the aircraft off a small platform with great ease, hover it accurately and land on the proverbial six-pence. Now, we can take it off vertically, fly it away and bring it back again for a vertical landing—just as we shall with supersonic airliners in a few years' time."

The SC-1 is said to be the only aircraft of its type in the world. It was designed and built under contract to the UK Government.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 1888:AOA:E]

I. Civil Rights For Negroes In USA: President D. D. Eisenhower signed the Civil Rights Bill, 1960 into law on May 6. He described it as "an historic step forward."

The signature marked the culmination of three months of debate, at times degenerating into bitter filibuster, on the measure to provide new guarantees of citizenship rights for Negroes.

Mr. Eisenhower said in a statement: "The new law will play an important role in the days ahead in attaining our goal of equality under law in all areas of our country for all Americans."

A salient feature of the new law—and one of the most controversial aspects—is a provision authorizing the use by Federal Courts of voting "referees" to investigate complaints of discrimination at the polls.

All American citizens are entitled to vote under the Constitution, but Negroes have been denied access to the polls in certain Southern States by local discriminatory practices.

(The New York Times)

J. UN Statistical Commission: The 15-nation United Nations Statistical Commission which began its biennial session in New York on April 20 ended on May 5.

During its session, the Commission reviewed recent developments in national statistics, considered proposals for a world industrial census in 1963 and recommended a further unification of standard classifications of foreign trade statistics.

One of the most important results of the Commission's session was a recommendation that Governments should adopt for their foreign trade statistics the Revised Standard International Trade Classification.

The new classification system unifies the Brussels Tariff Nomenclature (BTN) developed outside United Nations and going back in its origin to the period immediately after World War I and the Standard International Trade Classification (SITC) established by the UN Economic and Social Council.

The Commission noted a marked improvement in the international comparability of foreign trade statistics.

United Nations activities to develop statistical services in various regions of the world were welcomed by the Commission. These activities included, in particular, arrangements for the organization of regional conferences of statisticians and the designations of regional statisticians by United Nations and its Specialized Agencies.

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 1876:AOA:C]

K. Princess Margaret Weds: Princess Margaret, sister of Queen Elizabeth II, became the wife of a commoner, Mr. Anthony Armstrong-Jones, in a simple ceremony in Westminster Abbey, London, on May 6.

At 11.45 a.m. British summer time, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, pronounced them man and wife as they knelt side by side before him, their right hands locked in a vow of eternal love.

The 2,000 strong congregation made up of royalty, nobles, statesmen and scholars watched in deep silence as the Archbishop stooped down and bound the clasped hands symbolically with his stole.

Queen Elizabeth watched the ceremony from a throne-like chair of red and gold. All Commonwealth Prime Ministers, then in London, were present.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3238:AOA:F]

L. Buddha Jayanti Celebrated In USSR: Buddha's birthday (Buddha Jayanti) was celebrated in Moscow for the first time on May 11.

A reception held at the Moscow Embassy of Ceylon on the occasion was addressed by Prof. Yuri Rerikh, an eminent Soviet scholar on Buddhism and Tibetan language, and by the Ambassadors of Ceylon, India, Japan and Thailand. They spoke of the Buddhist traditions in their countries.

The Ambassador of Ceylon, Dr. Gunapala Malalasekera, said that abhorrence of war and violence was the main tenet of Buddhist teaching. [The Ceylon Ambassador has been lecturing at Moscow University on Buddhism.]

He said: "We Buddhists would be happy if peace reigned on Earth."

The Indian Ambassador, Mr. K. P. S. Menon, welcomed the fact that the Buddhist holiday was celebrated for the first time in the Soviet Union and added: "Not war, but peace, must guide people in their relations, especially on the eve of the 'summit' meeting in Paris."

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 2698:INI:B]

M. Barnham Comet Photographed: The members of the Stalinabad (USSR) Astrophysics Institute of Academy of the Sciences of the Tajik Republic observed and photographed on April 20 a new comet in the Pegasus Constellation, which was discovered by the American astronomer, Barnham, in December, 1959.

On March 20, at the Equinox, the Barnham Comet passed its perihelion and was said to be moving again towards the Earth.

The Comet was said to appear before dawn low over the horizon in the eastern part of the sky and could be observed by the naked eye as a nebulous mark condensed in the centre. A small and short tail could be seen in the telescope.

The brightness of the Comet was said to be gradually increasing. According to the observations made at the Ashkhabad Observatory on April 9, it had the seventh stellar magnitude. On April 20, it reached the sixth stellar magnitude.

On April 27, Barnham's Comet was closest to the Earth—30,000,000 kilometres—and was well visible in the northern part of the sky at the height of the North Star.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3221:AOA:F]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10, Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95/-; Foreign Rs. 115/- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

June 18—24, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 25

BURMA

A. UN Expert's Report On Oil Industry: According to a report published in The Nation on May 20, a UN oil consultant, Mr. J. T. Cawley, had recommended, after a study of Burma's oil resources, that the Government should encourage foreign capital, private or otherwise, to undertake the search for new sources of petroleum in the country.

He advised the Government to frame rules or make arrangements which would give confidence and security to investors, with minimum cost to Government and which would yet protect the national interests.

He was of the opinion that an oil-finding programme should be embarked upon as quickly as possible and that, taking all factors into consideration, the Government should seek outside help and not be content with its partnership with the Burmah Oil Company (BOC) (1954) Ltd.

Besides, he said, unless fresh sources of oil were found, the present production of 8,200 barrels of crude oil per day from Chauk and Lanywa would decline after 1962.

His other conclusions were said to be that: (a) production at Chauk and Lanywa had been geared to meet the needs of the refining plant and was not good oilfield practice; (b) this practice, if continued, would ultimately affect the secondary recovery operations from the fields; (c) old wells should be reclaimed; and (d) new drilling operations should be undertaken in oil-producing sands when it was established that it was uneconomical to reclaim old wells.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3275:BUR:B]

FORMOSA

A. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek Sworn-In As President For Third Term: Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was sworn-in on May 20 as President of the Kuomintang Administration for a third term. He will hold office for six years. The ceremony was held at the City Hall in Taipeh.

Mr. Chen Chiang was also sworn-in at the ceremony as Vice-President for a second six-year term.

Speaking on the occasion, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek said that the Chinese communists would meet with destruction if they renewed their hostilities in the Formosa Straits. He pledged himself to the task of retaking the mainland.

He described the Communes on the mainland as "hell", but said that they were also 'the breeding ground for anti-communist revolutionary activities."

The Chinese communists, he added, were "living amidst the danger of a general anti-communist revolutionary uprising throughout the length and breadth of the Chinese mainland."

Cabinet Re-shuffle:

On May 31, the Central Committee of the Kuomintang Party announced a re-shuffle of the Cabinet, distributing the portfolios among the Ministers as follows:

Gen. Chen Cheng—Prime Minister;

Mr. Chen Chang-huan—Foreign Minister;

Mr. Lien Cheng-tung—Minister of the Interior;

Mr. Yu Ta-wei—Minister of National Defence;

Dr. D. K. Yen—Minister of Finance;

Mr. Mei Yi-chi—Minister of Education;

Mr. Cheng Yin-fun—Minister of Justice;

Mr. Yang Chi-tseng—Minister of Economic Affairs;

Mr. Shen Yi—Minister of Communications; and

Mr. Chen Hseuph-ping—Secretary-General.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3251:FOR:A]

B. Currency Devalued: Formosa devalued its currency by more than 10 per cent on May 29.

The announcement was made by the Kuomintang China Bank in its daily quotation bulletin, without any other official statement being made by the financial authorities.

Banking and exchange circles believed that this was done to avoid alarm.

With the devaluation, the exchange rate for the US dollar jumped from 36.80 to 40.00 Taiwan dollars.

Some of the other new rates were: one Hong Kong dollar to seven Taiwan dollars; one £ sterling to 112 Taiwan dollars; and one Straits dollar to 13.6 Taiwan cents.

(The Straits Times, Singapore)

INDIA

SUMMARY: Everest Expedition Fails; Mazagaon Docks Taken Over; Fire At Bhakra Dam Site; Working Of Re-finance Corporation; Progress Of Banking In 1959; All-India Hindu Mahasabha Session.

A. Indian Expedition To Everest Fails: It was announced in New Delhi on May 27 that the first Indian Everest Expedition had abandoned its attempt to reach the summit as Monsoon conditions had developed in the Everest region.

According to a message received from the leader of the Expedition, Brig. Gyan Singh, the second summit party could not stir out of South Col on May 26 to make another attempt on the peak due to high winds and blinding snow.

Brig. Gyan Singh said that the first summit party that had to turn back on May 25 from 28,300 feet due to blizzards had done as well as anybody could do in the circumstances.

The two Indian climbers who formed the first assault party and had reached 28,300 ft. on May 25 were Capt. N. Kumar and Mr. Sonam Gyatso.

Capt. Kumar belongs to the Kumaon Rifles and was commissioned in 1954. He was a member of the expedition which climbed Trishul (23,360 ft.) in 1958.

Mr. Sonam Gyatso (37) is a civilian Government official. He was a member of the late Maj. N. D. Jayal's Expedition to Nanda Devi in 1954 and also of the successful party which scaled Cho Oyu in 1958. He led the final assault team to the 26,867 ft. peak's summit.

[The Everest has been climbed by nine men so far: Tenzing Norkay and Sir Edmund Hillary in 1953; Ernest Schmied and Jurg Marmet and Hansrudolf von Gunten Adolf Reist on the third Swiss attempt three years later, 1956; and Chu Yin-hua, Wang Fu-chou and a Tibetan Komba of the Chinese Expedition on May 26 from the north side. In all 27 climbers, in groups of two, have moved high towards the summit and 18 of them have turned back from within 900 feet of it.]

The failure of the Indian Expedition was received with disappointment in New Delhi. Tenzing remains the only Indian to have scaled the Everest.

The Indian Expedition, sponsored by the Ministry of Scientific Research, comprised 18 members. Three of them —Mr. Ang Themba, Mr. Gombu and Mr. Da Namgyal—have been on the mountain with previous expeditions.

The Expedition took a year for preliminary effort and had been on the mountain for nearly 6-1|2 weeks.

For the better part of this stay, it was hampered by bad weather, high winds and intermittent snow. Gaining an initial advantage by an early forcing of the treacherous ice-fall—a veritable maze of deep crevasses and steep walls of ice that guard the entrance to the Western Combe and the route to the summit—the Expedition was forced to halt at the base of the South Col,—a pass-like defile between Everest and Lhotse at 26,850 ft. high.

Although Mr. Ang Themba and Mr. Jungalwala succeeded in pitching Camp VI at the base of the South Col on May 9, it remained untenanted until May 23 because of unfavourable atmospheric conditions.

The task of re-inforcing and re-provisioning the take-off Camp for the final assault teams could only be taken in hand on May 23. The move to Camp VII on the south-east ridge was impeded by a set-back in the weather on May 24 when snow fell intermittently from morning and continued until the last hour.

But, at the base camp, by May 26, the wind that, barring short lapses, had maintained a steady velocity of 25 to 30 knots had subsided to a reasonable five knots.

In more ways than one, the Indian Expedition's progress was remarkable.

First, it was remarkable in the speed with which it forced its way across the ice-fall described by Andre Roch, who reconnoitred it in the Spring of 1952, as "a scene of indescribable chaos, a mass of shattered ice-blocks between 17,000 and 20,000 ft." The pace was maintained through the Western Combe—an immense plateau about 4½ miles long, two miles broad, bounded by the enormous wall of Everest. Nuptse and Lhotse. The entire process took the Expedition less than three weeks and, by May 2, Camp V across the Lhotse Face had already been occupied.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Secondly, in the last stages, it was a fight against time. The pre-Monsoon disturbances were inordinately long leaving less than a week for the occupation of Camp VI, the establishment of Camp VII, the final ascent and the evacuation.

Thirdly, their stamina was great. Almost no Expedition that has tried to scale the Everest from the south side in post-War years beginning with the second Swiss attempt of 1952—withstood such a long siege from the weather at high altitudes.

All the expeditions which preceded the Indian attempt and were successful were fortunate in striking ideal weather almost simultaneously with their reaching the South Col. Four of the five attempts on the summit between 1952 and 1960 were launched within three days of reaching the South Col.

Brig. Gyan Singh, on the other hand, had to contend with two weeks of forced inactivity between the achievement of the South Col and the final assault.

In broad outline, Brig. Gyan Singh followed closely the plans of the two successful expeditions—British and Swiss. The modifications related to details such as the establishment of a telephone line to connect Camps II and III between 20,000 ft. and 21,000 ft.—the highest in the world.

Barring the rear base camp at Pheriche and Camp VI at the South Col and Camp VII on the south-east ridge, all the other camp sites were located higher than had been customary.

Generally, the route all the way from the Khumbu glacier up to the summit followed the track trod by four other Expeditions. There was no other way.

But, this party was perhaps the heaviest of all that have gone to the mountain in three decades. The transportation of material from Jayanagar on the Indo-Nepalese border required a caravan of 600 porters as against the customary figure of 300 to 400 porters.

Of the 13 serious expeditions, seven have been British, three Swiss, one Russian and one Indian. Besides, there have been two purely one-man attempts—one before and the other after World War II.

The South Col (26,000 ft.), where the Indian Expedition had its final take-off base, and the summit region were reported heavily clouded on May 27 as the news of the failure of the Expedition's second attempt to reach the summit was announced.

Broadcasting a special weather bulletin for the Expedition at noon on May 27, All-India Radio had said that there was a possibility of one or two snow-showers during the day.

The wind velocity in the south-west direction near the peak, according to the forecast, was expected to be 15 to 20 knots and the temperature 21°C. Increase in precipitation was expected next day (March 28).

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 859:NEP:A, 2059:NEP:B]

B. West German Credit—Second Agreement Signed: An Agreement on $30 million West German credit for India was signed in Bonn on May 27.

The credit is the second instalment of a $100 million loan agreed to by West Germany at a conference sponsored by the World Bank in Washington in August, 1958 to find ways to relieve India of her foreign exchange burden in carrying out her Second Five-Year Plan.

The first instalment was given in January, 1959 when West Germany allowed India a credit of $40 million.

An Indian spokesman in Bonn said that the new credit would be used to pay German creditors.

Both Agreements were negotiated by Mr. T. Swaminathan, the Indian Commissioner-General for Economic Affairs in Europe.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2600:INI:A, 3201:INI:B]

C. Air Agreement With France: According to an Agreement announced in New Delhi on May 27, Air-India International would now be able to operate up to four services a week through Paris to New York via intermediate ports, and Air France would be permitted to operate an extra frequency through India.

At present, Air-India International is operating two services a week through Paris to New York and Air-France is operating three services a week through India to the Far East.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3063:INI:C]

D. Diplomatic Appointments: It was announced in New Delhi on May 25 that India's next High Commissioner to Ceylon would be Mr. B. K. Kapur, a career diplomat, who was until recently India's High Commissioner in Ghana.

The present High Commissioner in Colombo, Mr. Y. Gundevia, was transferred to the External Affairs Ministry where he would be Special Secretary.

The appointment of the present Special Secretary, Mr. B. N. Chakravarty, as High Commissioner to Canada was also announced.

New UK High Commissioner:

A London announcement on May 17 said that Queen Elizabeth II had been pleased to approve the appointment of Sir Paul Gore-Booth, at present holding the appointment of Deputy Under-Secretary of State in the British Foreign Office, as High Commissioner for the United Kingdom in India in succession to Mr. Malcolm MacDonald.

Mr. MacDonald's term of office would end in the Autumn of 1960.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2559:INI:C]

E. Pakistan Worsening Ladakh Situation—India's Letter To Security Council: In a letter to the President of the Security Council by India's Permanent Representative at UN, Mr. C. S. Jha, which was made public on May 23, the Pakistan Government was accused of trying to worsen the situation in Ladakh.

The following is the text of the letter:

"I have been instructed by the Government of India to refer to the letter dated March 24, 1960 from the Permanent Representative of Pakistan addressed to the President of the Security Council regarding recent developments in Ladakh.

"The Pakistan Permanent Representative denies that his letter of December 3, 1959 (S|4242) was intended to put pressure on India and to aggravate the situation caused by the Chinese incursions into Ladakh. This denial, I regret to say, follows the pattern of other previous denials referred to briefly in para 2 of my letter of December 22, 1959 (X|4249).

"In para 3 of his letter, the Pakistan Representative refers to the resolution of the Security Council dated January 17, 1948. The Security Council resolution of January 17, 1948, which Pakistan has consistently violated, refers to the situation which was the subject matter of India's complaint to the Security Council and directs the parties to keep the Council informed of all important developments in regard to that situation. In utter disregard of this resolution, Pakistan marched its regular armed forces into the Indian Union territory of Jammu and Kashmir, annexed the northern areas of the State during the period of the cease-fire, increased the fighting strength of the so-called 'Azad Kashmir' forces, also during the period of the cease-fire, received military aid and joined military pacts, thereby increasing its military potential in the area under its unlawful occupation. Apart from these violations of its obligations, Pakistan continues to use its unlawful occupation of part of Jammu and Kashmir to instigate subversion and sabotage activities in the territory of the Indian Union in Jammu and Kashmir. The Government of India has from time to time brought these developments to the notice of the Council.

"The position of the Government of India in the matter of the recent Chinese incursions into Ladakh has been clearly stated in para 5 of my letter of December 22, 1959. The recent incursion by China into the territory of the Indian Union does not give Pakistan, herself an older aggressor on Indian territory, the right to exploit to her advantage a similar aggression from another quarter."

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3241:INI:A]

F. Ford Foundation Grant To Boost Food Production: The Ford Foundation announced on April 27 a $10,500,000-grant for a programme aimed at boosting food production in selected districts in India by at least 50 per cent in five years.

Ford Foundation assistance will supplement major contributions to the Programme by the Government of India.

The programme grew out of a survey made in 1959 by a team of 13 agriculture specialists assembled by the Foundation at the request of the Government of India.

It will be concentrated in single districts in seven States. Four States raise mostly rice; two, wheat; and one, millet. Demonstrations of substantially higher crop-yields in these areas are intended to provide an impetus throughout the country. The Government of India intends to establish similar demonstration projects in the other seven States.

The highlights of the programme, in which co-operation will be wholly voluntary, are:

(1) Adequate supplies of fertilizers, pesticides, improved seeds, improved farm tools and other production needs in the villages; (2) Price incentives announced two years in advance; (3) Adequate farm credit; (4) Steps to enable the cultivator to obtain the full market price for his marketed surplus; (5) Educational, technical and farm-management assistance at all levels; and (6) Individual farm planning by all interested cultivators towards increased food production.

The bulk of the Foundation appropriation will finance Indian and foreign agriculture experts to conduct the programme, build centres for training additional agricultural specialists and provide seed-treatment and soil-testing facilities.

The Government of India will provide agricultural credit and local storage facilities

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

and will arrange to make available for sale to farmers the necessary fertilizers, insecticides and improved seeds.

(US Embassy, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2466.INI:E, 3003 (corrected):INI:O]

G. Air-link With USA: Mrs. Indira Gandhi and a number of Government and Air-India International officials were among the passengers who stepped off the inaugural trans-Atlantic Air-India flight by Boeing-707 in New York on May 14.

The big Boeing-707 arrived in New York at 19-45 GMT after a non-stop flight from London, on the last leg of its journey from Bombay.

The flight established what was claimed to be the fastest air-link between India and USA and also the first trans-Atlantic service run by an airline of an Asian country.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2888:INI:D, 3003(corrected):INI:K]

H. Mazagaon Docks Taken Over: The Central Defence Minister, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, said at a function arranged to formally take over the recently-acquired Mazagaon Docks, a British marine and industrial venture, on May 14 that the tendency to deride the Government's role in the production of goods and services required for the community as "inimical to development of the country" was deplorable.

He added that the tendency to carry on such propaganda by what could be called 'a section of the national Press' could be interpreted as "extremely ignorant or entirely unpatriotic."

Contrary to all criticism, he said, defence production was daily increasing. Those who criticised the Government had 'freedom from facts.' "When you are free from facts, you can write imaginatively," but, on the other hand, he had facts "which could not always be disclosed in the national interest."

He pointed out that the acquisition of the Docks would considerably strengthen the defence of the country. "The dockyard, we hope, will build ships for the Navy in the future because it is our desire, as far as possible that this country should become less and less dependent on our foreign exchange resources."

There was no intention of changing the character of this concern and the Government wanted the establishment to function in an orderly manner. Public-owned industries were capable of larger production. This dockyard would continue to repair ships for the Navy or private customers, Indian or foreign, and the requirements of private shipping were so considerable that there was no danger of its being idle.

He denied that defence production had fallen. It had increased by an average of 130 per cent over the previous years. The ordnance factories alone had stepped up their production from Rs. 14 crores in 1957 to Rs. 23 crores during 1959. These figures excluded the production of vehicles.

The acquisition by the Central Government of one of the biggest British marine and industrial ventures in the country marked the extension of the nationalized shipbuilding industry.

The Mazagaon Docks, developed during the last century, sprawl over 35 acres. One of its two dry docks is suitable for sea-going ships and the other for harbour craft. There are six slipways capable of accommodating coasters and lighters upto 150 tons for construction and repair.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3056:INI:L]

I. Fire At Bhakra Dam Site: A part of the belt conveyor at the Bhakra Dam site was damaged in a fire which broke out near the compressor house at about 8 p.m. on May 13.

Fire engines of the Bhakra-Nangal Project brought the fire under control after fighting the flames for more than 1½ hours.

The concreting work on the Project was suspended for three to four weeks as a result of the fire. The fire burnt down a stretch of about 200 feet of belt conveyor.

An official report said that a serious fire broke out at Bhakra, the exact cause of which was not yet known. But, it started from the 6,000 KVA transformer sub-station located behind the compressor house at Bhakra. The transformers were also feared to have been damaged.

There was, however, no loss of life.

The accident would not affect the completion of the Dam nor the operations nor the permanent plugging of the right diversion tunnel.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3124:INI:S]

J. Iron-ore Output In 1959: It was officially stated on May 31 that the output of iron-ore reached the peak figure of 7.93 million tons in 1959, compared with 6.13 million tons in 1958. The increase was shared by all States where iron-ore is being mined.

Bihar and Orissa accounted for 41 per cent and 33 per cent respectively of the total output. The production in these two States increased by 972,000 and 418,000 tons respectively.

The output in Madhya Pradesh, which supplies iron-ore for Bhilai, increased by 180,000 tons. Bombay and Mysore showed an increase of 164,000 and 55,000 tons respectively.

The internal requirements of iron-ore were greater after the three steel plants in the public sector went into production during the year. There was also greater overseas demand.

Despatches of iron-ore to the steel plants totalled 5,661,000 tons against 3,511,000 tons in the preceding year, representing an increase of about 61 per cent.

Iron-ore exports were higher by about 31 per cent, compared with the 1958 figure.

Japan, which heads the list of countries importing Indian iron-ore, is interested in additional supplies. Kiriburu deposits are being developed for an annual production of 2,000,000 tons to meet the additional export demand.

A further quantity of 4,000,000 tons, also for export to Japan, is contemplated. Large-scale exploration of the Bailadila iron-ore deposits in Madhya Pradesh has already begun.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2521:INI:L]

K. Re-finance Corporation's Working: The Chairman of the Re-finance Corporation for Industry (Private) Limited, Mr. H. V. R. Iengar, told the second annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Corporation in Bombay on May 17 that despite the resurgence of industrial activity in 1959, calls on the resources of the Corporation were disappointing.

He said: "It would have been legitimate to expect that this resurgence in industrial activity would be reflected in substantial calls on the resources of the Re-finance Corporation.

"In actual fact, applications for re-finance made in 1959 amounted to Rs. 2.23 crores and came from only three banks; of these, applications amounting to Rs. 2.10 crores were accepted during the year. The actual withdrawals amounted to Rs. 85,00,000.

"Whatever allowances may be made for the fact that this is a new institution, there is no gain-saying that this was a disappointing year."

He said that the rate of industrial production had dropped in the years 1957 and 1958 as compared with 1955 and 1956. In 1959, there was again a resurgence in industrial growth in both public and private sectors. From the point of view of production the private sector was preponderant.

It was clear that in spite of the continuing foreign exchange difficulties, the private sector had taken a big 'leap forward' in 1959.

The Corporation was one of many institutions set up by the Gvernment expressly to provide financial assistance to the private sector. This fact was often forgotten "in the sterile controversy that sometimes takes place over the roles of the private and public sectors."

So far as the Re-finance Corporation was concerned, the Government had provided a very substantial loan limit of Rs. 26 crores under very generous terms from PL 480 funds.

"It should be a matter of interest—and concern—for the private sector to analyse the factors for the relative stagnation of the Corporation's activities during a period when capital is said to be scarce and demand for it sustained at a high level."

A question of fundamental importance in the economy, he said, was the curbing of the rising price level and the only effective solution to this was the stimulation of production.

Another reason for the comparative stagnation, he added, was the fact that there had been, during the last few years, a spectacular increase in bank deposits which had enabled them to extend the scope of their industrial advances.

In regard to the accounts of the Corporation for the year ended December 31, 1959, he said that most of the funds continued to be kept with the member-banks in the form of short-term deposits and the main source of income was the interest earned on them.

It had been suggested that the fact that banks had substantial deposits of the Corporation's funds might itself be a reason for their not having recourse to re-finance facilities. "This argument will be put to the test by a change which we have decided to make in our investment pattern; I expect that fairly soon a substantial portion of our funds will be invested in short-term Government securities."

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 2602:INI:I]

L. India's Needs Of Electricity In Next 15 Years—NCAER Assessment: The National Council of Applied Economic Research, in its report on India's needs of electricity, has as-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

sessed that her requirements would rise by nearly 375 per cent in the next 15 years.

It estimated that by 1975-76 nuclear power would constitute about nine per cent of the power generated in the country.

Compared with 1950, primary energy consumption was expected to increase by over 600 per cent in 1975. This is a measure of the expected industrial and economic growth.

The Council came to the conclusion that India's energy economy in 1975 would be substantially a coal-based economy and even by 2000 it would have a high proportion of coal, ie about 55 to 60 per cent. Even in USA, until as recently as 1946, coal provided nearly half of all the energy consumed in that country. The share of coal in India was expected to fall to about 71 per cent, from 82.4 per cent in 1950 and 79.5 per cent in 1955 The fall in the coal component would be taken up by hydro-power instead of petroleum. Contrary to popular impression, the share of petroleum was expected to be more or less steady at about 13 to 14 per cent.

The average rate of increase in total energy would be of the order of 5 per cent per annum, but that of primary energy would be about 10 per cent. During the Second and Third Five-Year Plans, the rate of growth was expected to be much higher at about 16 and 12 per cent respectively. The energy pattern of the economy would continue to remain heavily coal and hydro-oriented in the next ten years.

The abnormal rise in the contribution of petroleum to total energy from 1950 to 1955 was explained by the fact that during this period there was a mild increase in the consumption of coal. But, with the increasing orientation of the economy towards metal-based industries from the Second Plan onwards the pressure on coal was likely to be extremely heavy. It would be unrealistic, therefore, to expect petroleum to sustain the relative increase that it had attained during 1950-55.

As between thermal power and hydro-power, it was reasonable to estimate that in the years to come the growth of hydro-power was likely to be more rapid than that of thermal power. Nuclear power would be a competitive alternative to conventional thermal generation in areas away from the collieries. Although the capital cost of nuclear power is higher, it is likely to go down considerably. There are also other reasons why nuclear power must be developed.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3159:INI:E]

M. Progress Of Banking—Reserve Bank's Report: According to the Reserve Bank's annual report on the "Trend and Progress of Banking in India", Indian Banking took "another stride" in 1959 in its role as mobilizer of resources and credit purveyor for the country's economy.

The significant rise in bank deposits since 1955, it observed, "is indicative of the gradual spread of the banking habit among the people and effort of the banking system in mobilizing savings in the context of expanding money incomes".

On the country's economic situation, it said that the year 1959 "witnessed a significant strengthening of the base of the Indian economy, but there was no abatement of inflationary pressures." There was a further step-up in the rate of investment in the public sector, and private investment also recovered, after slackening in 1958.

It recorded that during 1959, the aggregate deposits of commercial banks increased by Rs. 253 crores (against Rs. 216 crores in 1958) to a record level of Rs. 1,816 crores. Time deposits rose by Rs. 234 crores (Rs. 9 crores more than in 1958) and demand deposits by Rs. 19 crores (against a decline of Rs. 10 crores in 1958).

There was a big spurt in bank credit amounting to Rs. 91 crores, as compared with Rs. 11 crores in 1958.

With a relatively larger increase in the deposit resources of scheduled banks (compared to credit expansion), the credit-deposit ratio came down from 54.8 per cent in 1958 to 52.2 per cent.

Industrial advances rose by Rs. 20 crores (in the year ended October, 1959) against Rs. 14 crores in the previous year; and the proportion of industrial advances to the total, recording a decline for the first time in five years, stood at 45 per cent in October, 1959, against 48 per cent in October, 1958.

A sizable part of the increase in bank deposits represented, as in the two preceding years, the counterpart funds of PL 480 imports from USA, but even after excluding PL 480 deposits, there was a significant rise since 1955.

It described the credit policy of the Reserve Bank during the year as "one of general restraint and vigilance", especially in view of the tendency of prices to rise. The Reserve Bank made use of "moral suasion and general and selective credit controls."

Profits:

An analysis of the profit and loss accounts for 1959 of 25 large Indian banks, each with deposits of Rs. 5 crores and over, revealed a slight improvement in the net profit position.

Their gross earnings increased by Rs. 7.8 crores to Rs. 69.9 crores, and total expenses by Rs. 7.5 crores to Rs. 62 crores.

Thus, the net profit of these banks increased by Rs. 0.3 crores to Rs. 7.9 crores, against Rs. 8.4 crores in 1957 and Rs. 7.6 crores in 1958.

The Reserve Bank suggested that large Indian banks should extend medium-term credit to industry, especially in view of the facilities provided by the Re-finance Corporation.

It said: "The pattern of planned development to which Indian economy is committed makes it incumbent on banks to enter new lines of business. Term-lending to industry is obviously a new line of activity which banks with large resources can consider to the benefit of the economy as well as themselves.

"Under formal term-lending, the borrowing units could be certain of the use of the funds for the period specified, without being subjected to the impact of changes in monetary policy and adherence to an amortization scheme, which would impose some financial discipline on the borrowers."

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2701:INI:L]

N. A-I Hindu Mahasabha Session: Addressing the All-India Hindu Mahasabha session in Shimoga (Mysore) on May 29, its newly-elected President, Mr. V. G. Deshpande, said that the Hindu Mahasabha wanted to put before the country the ideal of Hindu socialism, which was quite different from the Marxist socialism or communism or the socialistic pattern of society preached by the Indian National Congress.

He said that the Mahasabha should openly declare Hindu socialism as its sheet-anchor. By Hindu socialism, it believed in planned economy. It was not based upon materialistic philosophy but upon the spiritualistic philosophy followed by Hinduism. Unless the socialistic programme was accompanied by spiritualism, it would be a terrible weapon for human destruction as is evidenced in communism and other forms of Marxism. Under Hindu socialism, socialistic principles would be applied after considering the peculiar conditions and economic development of the country. It would not be subservient to any international organization and even though it was prepared to co-operate and collaborate with other nations it would pursue its own national policy.

Foreign Policy Criticised:

Mr. Deshpande criticised the Government for neglecting the defence requirements of the country and demanded that the Third Five-Year Plan should be modified and an ambitious defence plan involving crores of rupees for building defence industries and raising different wings of the army be prepared.

The defence of India, he said, was more important than the economic programme. If with all the economic prosperity to be achieved through the Five-Year Plans, which also was doubtful, the country's independence and territorial integrity could not be defended, all this prosperity would be at the mercy of foreign invaders.

He demanded that India should give an ultimatum to China. If the Chinese did not withdraw beyond the traditional Indian border by a certain date India should resort to arms.

India should not make a fetish of non-alignment but should modify it to accept help from powerful nations like USA to combat Chinese aggression. Pakistan should be the only country with which India should not form a military alliance, as she had also violated Indian borders and occupied Gilgit, Mirpur and Poonch.

Resolutions:

On May 30, the Mahasabha adopted seven resolutions, including one demanding that the Government of India should call upon China to vacate the aggression on Indian territory.

This resolution on China said that the Mahasabha "notes with grave concern the Chinese aggression" and China's denial of the defined boundary line and rejected China's "unfounded claim to Mount Everest and Mansarovar."

It asked the Government of India to meet the "present grave danger" by taking immediate steps for the "defence of the Fatherland" and to strengthen "all the wings of Army, Navy and Air Force" to meet any emergency.

It also expressed "strong disapproval" of the action of the Government in inviting the Chinese Premier, Mr. Chou En-lai, as "an honoured guest" while the Chinese aggression continued.

It also took a serious view of the activities of the Chinese in the neighbouring countries like Nepal, Burma and Indonesia—activities which were "animated by evil designs on India and will have harmful effects on this country."

It asked the Government to send "high-level diplomatic missions" to these countries to effectively counter the anti-Indian propaganda by the Chinese.

A resolution on the 'Summit' Conference said that its failure had further complicated the international situation.

It condemned the South African racial policies, extended its full support to the suffering people of Africa and expressed the hope that they would ultimately triumph.

It set up an eight-member Goodwill Mission, with Mahant Digjayanathji as leader, to tour foreign countries, particularly those in the Near East, to "carry the message of love and peace from India and to promote cordial relations between those countries and India."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

A resolution on the "Testament of Faith" of the Mahasabha asked the members of the organization "to pledge themselves to work for Hindu supremacy in Akhand Bharat on all points, at all costs and by all means."

It asked the members to "undo the evils of Partition" and to defend the integrity and independence of the Fatherland against aggression of all types.

It also urged them to fight for a "democratic Hindu State in India based on the culture and tradition of Hindu Rashtra."

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 1359:INI:M]

O. NCAER's Techno-economic Survey Of Madhya Pradesh: The National Council of Applied Economic Research (NCAER), in its techno-economic survey of Madhya Pradesh, published on May 19, set out a ten-year programme of development for Madhya Pradesh which, if implemented, "is capable of raising the per capita income of the State from Rs. 287 in 1961 to Rs. 437 by 1971—a level somewhat higher than the all-India per capita income estimated at about Rs. 420."

[This was the second techno-economic survey completed by the National Council of Applied Economic Research during the last two years, the first being the survey of Bihar.]

It reported that the known and potential resources of Madhya Pradesh, particularly of minerals and forests, were so large that their effective development and utilization would make it one of the industrially advanced regions of India.

According to the survey, the per capita income of the State could be increased at five per cent per year and the total State income at eight per cent per year. This rate of growth could be achieved with an aggregate investment of the order of Rs. 2,090 crores.

Of the aggregate investment of Rs. 2,090 crores, the survey estimated that large-scale manufacturing industry would claim 25.5 per cent, transport and communications 21.5 per cent, agriculture and allied fields 21.8 per cent, power 9.6 per cent, mining 6.6 per cent, construction of houses, schools, hospitals, etc, 8 per cent and small-scale industry 1.9 per cent.

It showed that the economy of the re-organized nascent State of Madhya Pradesh, although backward and weak in many respects, had considerable potential for relatively large and rapid growth.

Although the State possessed rich and large mineral resources—iron-ore, manganese, coal, bauxite, limestone, diamond, etc—their industrial utilization had been inadequate, despite the recent use of local iron-ore for the Bhilai steel plant. Like the forests, the mineral base was also not "matured."

Except for the Bhilai steel plant and the heavy electrical plant at Bhopal, there was little new industrial development in the State and the industrial structure was still dominated by agricultural processing industries. This situation would no doubt improve by the end of the Second Plan, when the steel plant would be in full production.

According to the survey, Madhya Pradesh had several strong points. Agricultural productivity could be raised substantially. A sizable increase in the output of commercial crops could also be brought about without disturbing the current level of foodgrains. Known mineral resources were large and await exploitation, and there were indications that further surveying would reveal larger resources. Forest potential of the State was also one of the best in the country and could be further improved. Madhya Pradesh did not appear to have the usual problems of over-population and acute "overt" unemployment.

The pattern of development recommended was estimated to increase the output of large industries by 270 per cent, mining output by 417 per cent, agricultural output by 44 per cent and the output of small-scale industries and services by 30 per cent and 88 per cent respectively.

It underlined the need for a strong and well-integrated administrative and planning machinery for the State to achieve rapid economic development which was technically possible.

Although, it may not be possible to claim that the scale and the rate of development proposed would lead the State economy to the "take-off" stage by 1971, it said, it was certain that by then the structure of the economy would have so changed as to enable the economy to go forward at a high level of development.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3159:INI:E]

P. Section 11 Of Kerala Education Act Suspended: The Governor of Kerala promulgated an Ordinance on May 31 suspending till January 1, 1961 the operation of the controversial Section 11 of the Kerala Education Act relating to the appointment of teachers.

[Section 11 of the Act provides for the selection of teachers, both for Government and private schools, by the Public Service Commission, giving due regard to the principle of communal reservation in the selection.]

According to the Ordinance, "nothing in Section 11 or in the rules relating to that Section shall come into operation or shall be deemed ever to have come into operation until January 1, 1961."

An official announcement earlier had said that as there had been a great deal of controversy over this Section, "the Government considers it necessary that it should have sufficient time to further discuss these issues with the various interests affected."

The Kerala Pradesh Congress Committee had also expressed itself in favour of staying the operation of the Section in view of the strong views held by the interests concerned.

Mr. E. M. S. Namboodiripad's Comment:

Mr. E. M. S. Namboodiripad, who headed the communist Ministry which drew up the legislation, said that "this Ordinance is the result of the tremendous pressure put on the Cabinet by the vested interests in the field of education headed by the Catholic Church and the Nair Service Society who are bent upon allowing the managers to do as they please in the matter of appointment of teachers".

The argument that this was only a temporary measure to facilitate consultations among the interests concerned, he said, would deceive nobody. The Communist Party, stood for "all reasonable adjustments with the managers without violating the basic principles of (1) applying reservation for backward communities in the matter of appointment of teachers and (2) providing adequate guarantees that the managers would not be allowed to indulge in irregular and corrupt practices in making appointments."

He added: "Unfortunately, however, the satisfaction of all the interests concerned in a peaceful solution of the problem to the satisfaction of all the interests concerned but wants to preserve and protect the vested interests in the field of education to the detriment of the interests of the teachers and the backward communities."

The managements of private schools had opposed the Section on the ground that they should have freedom to appoint teachers of their choice. The Nair Service Society and the Christian managements had also opposed communal reservation in the appointment of teachers.

On the other hand, the SNDP Yogam, an organization of Ezhavas, a backward community, had wanted the retention of the Section.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2712:INI:S]

Q. Bihar Government Switches Over To Hindi In Devanagri Script: All the offices of the Bihar State Government switched over to Hindi in the Devanagri script for all official transactions on June 1.

The Bihar Official Language Act, 1950 had fixed the deadline for the switch-over to Hindi on November 29, 1957. Due to practical difficulties, however, the time limit was extended by three years. The statutory deadline for the switch-over to Hindi is November 29, 1960.

The switch-over was made as a preparatory measure to ensure that the statutory provision of the Act was fully implemented in time.

All noting, drafting and preparation of Cabinet agenda would be in Hindi. Exceptions would be made for correspondence with the Central Government, the Accountant-General and those States which have either not switched over to Hindi or have not agreed to correspond with the Government of Bihar in Hindi.

The Governments of Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh and Rajasthan have agreed to correspond with Bihar Government in Hindi.

The High Court would continue to transact its business in English.

The preparations for the gradual introduction of Hindi for various official purposes were begun in 1948. A high-level Hindi Committee was then formed to advise the Government. The pace of the preparatory measures was stepped up after the adoption of the Official Language Act in 1950.

Among the preparatory measures were the training of officers and staff, including typists and stenographers. A central Hindi training centre was started in the State Secretariat in 1954. Similar centres were started in divisions and districts. So far, 32,000 gazetted officers have received training at the Secretariat centre; 1,718 of them have passed the examinations prescribed by the Government; and 13,000 have completed their training at other centres.

(The Times of India, Bombay and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3005 (corrected):INI:W]

R. Mr. A. C. Subba Reddy Resigns From Andhra Cabinet: A Gazette Extraordinary issued by the Andhra Pradesh Government on June 1 announced that the Governor of the State had accepted the resignation of Mr. A. C. Subba Reddy from the State Cabinet. The resignation was made effective from the afternoon of May 31.

The brief announcement did not give the reason for the resignation.

The Chief Minister, Mr. D. Sanjivayya, had relieved Mr. Subba Reddy, who was Industries Minister,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

of all his portfolios a fortnight earlier and had demanded his resignation.

Though no charges were officially given, Congress circles gave four reasons for dropping Mr. Subba Reddy. They were: (1) undue interference in other Ministers' portfolios; (2) not attending a Cabinet meeting though present in the State capital; (3) threats of resignation; and (4) contesting election to the Pradesh Congress Election Committee against the officially approved nominees.

With the exit of Mr. Subba Reddy, the Cabinet's strength was reduced to 13—eight from Andhra and five from Telengana.

Mr. Subba Reddy said in an interview: "My conscience is clear. I have not done anything either to belittle the Chief Minister or let down my Cabinet colleagues and bring down the prestige of the Government and the Congress organization to which I am proud to belong and which I will continue to serve with undiminished zeal."

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2560:INI:J]

S. Ancient Civilization Unearthed In Bihar: It was officially stated in Patna on May 23 that excavations conducted in Bihar in 1959 had revealed the existence of an ancient civilization dating back to 1000 BC in Chakramdasa in Muzaffarpur district (north Bihar) and Sonepur in Gaya district (south Bihar).

The excavations conducted by the Kashi Prasad Jaiswal Research Institute had led to the discovery of the antiquities.

A large number of sherds and black and red ware, the first of their kind found in north Bihar, were found in Chakramdasa.

The excavations at Sonepur revealed three successive periods of human habitation from 1000 BC up to the advent of the Christian era.

A few neolithic sites were also discovered in the river valleys of north Koel (Palamau district), south Koel (Ranchi district), Damodar (Hazaribagh and Dhanbad districts), the Sanjai and the Suvarnarekha (Singhbhum district). Marvania and Pratappur (Palamau district) were found to be rich in microlithic sites. A large number of micro-lithic tools and paleolithic blades were unearthed.

Valuable historical data were also collected from three different places at Vaishali in Muzaffarpur district. Important finds in this area included terracotta figures, both of human beings and animals, terracotta seals and fragments of a gold necklace.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3245:INI:P]

T. Retina In Action—Dr. C. V. Raman's New Technique: The noted physicist, Dr. C. V. Raman, announced recently that he had developed a technique by which, without the aid of any instruments, it is possible for a person to view his own retina in action and observe how its different parts function in the perception of colour.

Describing the new technique, he said: "The observer sits facing a white screen in a well-lighted room and views the screen throughout one or another of a suitably chosen set of colour filters held close to the eyes. After allowing sufficient time for the observer's vision to adapt itself to the effect of the colour filter, the latter is suddenly removed.

"The observer then sees on the screen a highly enlarged image of his own retina, or rather of the physiologically important central part of it, known as the macula lutes. The nature of the image perceived and the colour which it exhibits in different parts depend very much on the colour filter used."

The new technique, he said, had disclosed the existence in the human retina of three different pigments, which he named as visual pigments. These enable people to perceive the full spectrum of colour extending from extreme red.

After discussing the question of limen or minimum of colour difference which the eye could detect along the spectrum, he inferred that the perception of light and colour involved a simple transference of the energy absorbed by the visual pigment to the neutrons in the retina.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3145:INI:Q]

INDONESIA

A. UN Technical Aid: According to UN statistics released in Djakarta on May 24, Indonesia had received about $7,665,000 in technical aid from United Nations and its specialized agencies since 1951.

A total of 770 experts from 35 countries visited Indonesia during the period to help speed up economic and social developments.

In addition, more than 350 Indonesian nationals were awarded UN fellowships for training in various fields; a great number of Indonesians participated in seminars, working groups, study tours and technical meetings held under UN auspices in various parts of the world; and scientific and technical equipment worth $250,000 was supplied to Indonesia during the same period.

At the same time, Indonesia, as a member of UN, contributed $618,590 to technical assistance under UN agencies since 1950.

(UN Newsletter)

[Prev. ref. 1068:IND:B]

IRAN

A. Trade Agreement With Poland: A new Trade Agreement with Poland was signed early in May. The Agreement took effect from March 21, 1960.

Under the Agreement, the two countries would exchange goods to the value of £4,000,000. This is a considerable increase on the previous Trade Agreement concluded in 1958, which fixed a minimum of trade of £500,000 each way.

Poland agreed to raise the amount of commercial credits for technical services supplied to Iran from £200,000 to £300,000 and would purchase additional amounts of cotton, zinc and iron-ore.

Iran undertook to buy machinery and equipment for glass and sugar factories from Poland worth £750,000 and other industrial equipment for a similar amount. Other manufactured goods would make up the total. (200 rials = £1).

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2363:IRN:B]

IRAQ

A. Budget For 1960-61: The Budget for the fiscal year (which began on April 1, 1960) was published in Baghdad early in May.

In it, expenditure was estimated at ID 116,151,918 and revenue ID 102,130,000 (Iraqi Dinars).

Actual allocations in the fiscal year which ended on March 31, 1960 amounted to ID 112,000,000, about ID 9,000,000 more than the original estimates.

Unlike the previous year, no new taxes were imposed to meet the deficit, but greater economy was recommended to all Government departments and it was hoped to increase the income from direct taxes by improving the system of tax collection.

The General Budget would continue to receive 50 per cent of the oil revenues.

Of the total expenditure estimates, ID36,500,000 were allocated to defence, ID19,000,000 to education, ID9,000,000 to police and security departments, ID 6,500,000 to health and ID 4,000,000 to communications.

The Budget did not include expenditure on development, which was provided for under the Interim Economic Plan of 1959 amounting to ID392,000,000 for the four years 1959-1962. (One Dinar = £1).

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2689.IRQ.A]

ISRAEL

A. Arrest Of Mr. Adolf Eichmann: The Prime Minister, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, told the Israeli Parliament (Knesset) on May 23 that Mr. Adolf Eichmann, a former head of the Jewish Department of the Nazi Gestapo, had been detained by the Israeli Security authorities and would be put on trial.

Mr. Eichmann, said to have been personally responsible for the murder and torture of 6,000,000 European Jews, disappeared towards the end of World War II.

In most Jewish history books on crimes against the Jews, he is described as "the most blood-thirsty of all the Nazi leaders." According to evidence produced by witnesses during the Nuremberg trials, he was expected to be appointed Reich Commissar for Jews after the War.

He was born in Palestine, was educated in Jewish schools and learned Hebrew, Yiddish and Arabic.

There was no official statement on the circumstances in which Mr. Eichmann was arrested.

But, an American Jewish leader, Mr. Benjamin Epstein, said in a radio interview in New York that a former Polish Intelligence Officer, Mr. Uvia Friedmann, had traced Mr. Eichmann in Israel through one of his (Mr. Eichmann's) several mistresses.

According to Mr. Epstein, Mr. Eichmann had had his face changed by plastic surgery and had quietly slipped into Israel.

He added that one of Mr. Eichmann's mistresses furnished Mr. Friedmann, who is the Director of the Nazi War Crimes Documentary Centre at Haifa, with the only photo of Mr. Eichmann as he is today. A tip from a love letter also played a part in Mr. Eichmann's capture.

He revealed that Mr. Eichmann was traced in 1959 to the Sheikhdom of Kuwait where he was working for a British oil Company.

Captured documents were said to show that Mr. Eichmann submitted to Himmler, the Nazi Gestapo Chief, a detailed proposal in 1938 to "settle the Jewish problem" and, in the same year, ordered the first transport of Jews to gas chambers.

Israeli authorities were keeping Mr. Eichmann's whereabouts in custody a secret. They were taking no chances of lynching attempts by survivors of death camps in Europe.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Prof. Theodor Heuss, a former West German President, who was visiting Israel, told a newsman: "I well understand the great excitement among all the citizens of Israel."

Mr. Adolf Eichmann was remanded to 14 days judicial imprisonment by a Judge on May 23.

(The New York Times and The Statesman, Calcutta)

B. Loan From US Development Loan Fund: An Agreement on a new $5,000,000 loan from the US Development Loan Fund to the Industrial Development Bank of Israel was signed in Tel Aviv on May 9.

Similar to a loan granted to the Bank in 1959, the new loan is intended to finance new industrial enterprises and the expansion of existing plants.

The Fund has so far agreed to lend a total of $26,000,000 for investment in Israel.

The US Development Loan Fund mission, which signed the Agreement, also discussed the possibility of two new loans of $8,000,000 and $2,000,000 to finance purchases of new telephone equipment for the Israeli net-work and new electronic equipment for the Lydda airport.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2609:ISR:A]

JORDAN

A. American Archaeological Expedition Unearths Biblical City: The Director of the American Dothan Archaeological Expedition, Dr. Joseph P. Free, said on May 16 that after two weeks, during which the Expedition worked near Jenin in north-west Jordan, it came upon the fallen ceiling of a 3,000-year-old tomb. The tomb was first discovered at the close of 1959.

Dr. Free said that more than 900 objects had been recovered from the tomb, including copper bowls, a copper lamp and several spears, which indicated that it might have been the tomb of a warrior in the Biblical period of the Judges.

Because of an earthquake over 2,500 years ago, the floor of the burial cave was covered with the fallen ceiling, which made it necessary to approach the tomb from above.

In 1959, the tomb door was discovered, but it was blocked by the fallen ceiling, and a layer of only 3 feet could be removed at the end of 1959.

The objects, which included great numbers of lamps and jars, were laid bare at one level after another as the diggers slowly uncovered the vessels, dating back to more than 200 years before the days of King Solomon. So far, 15 different levels had been found, showing that the city began some 5,000 years ago, and was destroyed and rebuilt several times through the centuries.

On top of the mound, the excavators had uncovered the city built after the military invasion and destruction by the ancient Assyrians about 700 BC. The walls, rooms, houses, chambers and other remains of this part gave a clear idea of Palestinian life nearly 3,000 years ago. Ancient writing on a potsherd from this period was one of the outstanding discoveries of the present season.

Dr. Free and his assistants had been excavating at the site of Dothan six miles from Jenin for seven seasons. The site is referred to in the Second Book of Kings in connexion with the prophet Elisha; and in the record in Genesis of Joseph and his brothers, as the site where Joseph was cast into a pit and later sold into slavery.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 812:JOR:B]

B. Independence Anniversary Celebrations: On May 25, King Hussein attended an Army parade to celebrate the 14th anniversary of Jordan's independence.

About 50,000 people, including British, American and other foreign military delegations, watched the parade some 20 miles north of Amman.

During the parade, Amman Radio attacked President G. A. Nasser of UAR accusing him of greediness and false Arab nationalism.

(Amman Radio)

[Prev. ref. 3256:JOR:A]

KOREA (South)

A. Dr. S. Rhee's Departure: The former President, Dr. Syngman Rhee, left Seoul on May 29 for Hawaii on his way to USA, presumably on exile.

Accompanied by his Austria-born wife, Mrs. Francesca Rhee, he left secretly aboard a chartered plane.

Seoul sources reported that their flight had been agreed on during a secret meeting between the US Ambassador in Seoul, Mr. Walter McNaughy, and the acting President, Mr. Huh Chung, two days earlier.

A Seoul newspaper reported that Dr. Rhee and his wife had visited the US Ambassador to ask for exile permits for USA and that afterwards they underwent a medical check-up at the US Army Hospital in Seoul.

Dr. Rhee's top rival, former Vice-President, Mr. Chang Myon, was enraged at his sudden flight without leaving any word of "apology and atonement for his 12-year rule of corruption and despotism and demanded a full account from Mr. Huh Chung's Government on why it authorized Dr. Rhee's "escape from the country."

Mr. Huh Chung, who saw Dr. Rhee off at the airport, later told newsmen that the Foreign Ministry had issued a passport to Dr. Rhee and his wife "only because they wanted to travel to Hawaii on vacation."

The American Embassy Consul, Mr. Tom Mayfield, explained later that Dr. Rhee was travelling on a diplomatic passport, which was customary for former Heads of States. The visas issued to Dr. Rhee and his wife were good for two months but were extendable.

When riots toppled his 12-year-old regime in April, Dr. Rhee still enjoyed such prestige as a national hero and the champion of Korean independence that many thought he would remain in semi-retirement in Seoul and that he might even be chosen as the first President of the Second Republic—a function which, under the new Constitution, would be purely an honorific.

Later, however, when it became abundantly clear that he could not shun moral responsibility for the series of political crimes since then coming to light, both American and Korean authorities began to advise his departure.

Law suits had been filed against Dr. Rhee by a Socialist group which attacked him specifically for the trumped-up trial of his rival, Mr. Cho Bong Am, executed last Summer. It also demanded that Dr. Rhee surrender his millions of allegedly ill-gotten dollars.

When the news of Dr. Rhee's flight spread, students paraded the streets on May 30 demanding that he should be immediately brought back to answer charges of misrule.

On May 30, the acting President, Mr. Huh Chung, told the National Assembly in Seoul that the Government would ask USA for the extradition of Dr. Rhee from Hawaii if and when this became necessary.

The announcement was made in response to requests from the Assembly members to explain Government's arrangements for Dr. Rhee's visit to Hawaii.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3328:KRS:A]

MALAYA

A. New Words Added To Malay Language: According to the Director of the Language and Literature Agency, Syed Nasir Bin Ismail, more than 15,000 new words have been added to the Malay language in the past three years. Most of the words are for administrative use.

The new words are Malay translations of English words used in science, agriculture and administration.

In cases where English terms permit no literal translation into Malay, the nearest Malay equivalent is used.

Malay will be the official and national language in eight years, replacing English.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2436:MAL:D]

MALDIVES

A. UK Representative In Maldive Islands: It was announced in London on May 22 that Mr. H. A. Arthington-Davy had been appointed British Representative in the Maldive Islands.

The appointment followed a recent announcement in the House of Commons that the Maldivian Government had agreed to receive such an officer at Male, the capital.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3249:MLD:A]

NEPAL

A. Aid Agreement With USA: A comprehensive Agreement was signed between Nepal and USA in Khatmandu on May 31, under which USA would provide financial and material aid for the execution of the various projects in Nepal in 1960-61.

America would provide aid amounting to Rs. 30,10,000 in Indian currency and $717,000. Nepal's contribution to the programme would be Rs. 14,39,000 in Nepalese currency.

The Agreement covered, among others, village development, tele-communications, food production and agricultural projects.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2715:NEP:D]

B. Dhaulagiri Climbed: It was announced in Khatmandu on May 26 that a Swiss Expedition, led by Mr. Max Eiselin, had climbed the 26,795-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

foot high Dhaulagiri, the world's highest unclimbed peak, on May 13.

This was the eighth attempt on the mountain since 1950.

Mr. Max Eiselin said in Khatmandu on May 26 that of the 11 members of the Expedition as many as six had stood on top of Dhaulagiri.

The Expedition used the aircraft Flying Yeti to ferry the personnel and baggage upto the acclimatization camp at 16,000 feet but lost the aircraft later, which crashed on Dhaulagiri on May 5 and was abandoned as total wreck.

Previous attempts on Dhaulagiri were: Argentinian 2, French 1, Austrian 1 and Swiss 4.

It was learnt that the Swiss approached the summit by the north-east ridge which was found to be easier, although longer, by an Austrian Expedition in 1959.

Mountaineering circles in Khatmandu regard Dhaulagiri as one of the most difficult peaks in the world to climb. Some authorities on mountaineering have even condemned it as an impossible mountain. They said that the peak was swept by strong gales and winds. The most difficult part of the climb was stated to be the last 700 feet of a ridge that sweeps almost vertically up to the summit.

It was stated that the most outstanding feature of the Swiss ascent of the Dhaulagiri peak was that the Expedition used no oxygen at all.

It was still more creditable that the ascent in its highest parts involved difficult rock and ice climbing over precipitous terrain.

Mr. Max Eiselin said that his team had found many articles left on the mountain by the Austrian Expedition of 1959. There were tattered tents, ropes, an ice-axe and several petrol-cookers which were partly working.

The first attempt by them to reach the summit on May 4, he said, was thwarted by blizzards and snowstorms, which forced back the team from a height of 25,600 feet.

However, Camp VI was set at this height on May 7 for the next assault. "On the eventful day—May 13—the weather was very favourable. Starting at 8 a.m. the six-man summit party reached the top at 12-30 p.m. The summit of Dhaulagiri is flat and can accommodate up to 20 people."

Of the six who got to the top, two were Sherpas and four Swiss.

He said that his team had followed the route first used by the Austrians in 1959—along the north-east ridge. Before the Austrians, six unsuccessful attempts had been made on Dhaulagiri by a route which proved to be "very disadvantageous.

The two sherpas who reached the top were from Solo Khumbu—Nima Dorje and Newa Dorje.

The two Nepalese who climbed the peak were Nima Sherpa (23) and Newa Dorje (25).

Peter Diener, vice-leader, Ernst Forrer, Albin Schelbert and Kurt Diemberger were the four Swiss who climbed the peak.

Height Higher:

The new height of Dhaulagiri has been read as 26,975 feet by the altimeter carried to its summit by the Swiss climbers on May 13.

This is 180 feet more than the height hitherto credited to it.

If this is acceptable universally, then Mount Dhaulagiri will be promoted as the six highest mountain in the world, to the rank at present held by Cho Oyu.

Dhaulagiri has so far been regarded as the seventh highest mountain.

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2715:NEP:F]

C. Mount Api Climbed: It was announced in Khatmandu on May 25 that the five-member Japanese Expedition to the western Nepal Himalayas had climbed the 23,399-ft. Mount Api twice, once on May 10 and again on May 11.

The climbers to reach the top were Katsutoshi Harabyashi and the Sherpa Sardar, Gyaltzen, who climbed on May 10, and the leader, Yasusuke Tsuda, and Moto Terasaka, who repeated the feat the next day (May 11).

Mount Api, located in remote north-west Nepal, came into limelight nearly five years (in 1956) ago when the leader of a Welsh expedition to the peak and one of his colleagues trespassed into Tibet where they were apprehended by the Chinese border guard and later released.

Mt. Api was first attempted in 1954 by an Italian Expedition. Three of its members, however, died.

The fourth member—and leader—of the 1954 Italian Expedition, Dr. Piero Ghighione, said that a member of his team, Giuseppe Barenghi, reached the summit but was probably blown off as he climbed the last few hundred feet.

(The Statesman and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 612:NEP:A, 629:INI:N, 714:NEP:B]

D. Annapurna II Climbed: It was announced in Khatmandu on May 10 that the joint British-Indian-Nepalese Services Expedition had climbed the 26,041-ft-high Annapurna II in west Nepal.

According to reports, the successful assault was made by three climbers at 4 p.m. on May 17. Though the reports did not name them, the Expedition's leader, Col. J. O. M. Roberts, had indicated in his latest letter dated May 7 that if the weather permitted, an attempt on the summit might be made on May 17 by Capt. R. H. Grant (Royal Marines), Lieut. C. J. S. Bonington (Royal Tank Regiment) and Sherpa Aug Nyima (now a Lance-Corporal in the British Gurkha Regiment).

The Expedition, which was the first joint Services venture in the Nepal Himalayas, had as its patron a former Chief of the Imperial General Staff, Field-Marshal Sir Gerald Templar. Its two co-patrons were the, Chief of the Indian Army Staff, General K. S. Thimayya, and Nepal's Commander-in-Chief, General Toran Shamsher.

The Expedition's success came in the wake of reports that bad weather had dogged its progress from the very start.

The main climbing hazard was in the last 1,500 ft. along the west ridge to the summit. The climb there involved traversing through steep rocks and ice.

Besides the six British Service officers, there were two Indian and two Nepalese Army officers in the party. The two Indian officers were Capt. Jagjit Singh of the Indian Artillery and Capt. M. A. Soares of the Indian Army Medical Corps.

Annapurna II is the second highest of the four peaks in the Annapurna masif.

The Expedition had left Khatmandu for Annapurna II on February 29.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 291:NEP:C]

E. Himalchuli Climbed: Two of the ten members of the Keio University Himalayan Expedition of Japan to the 25,801-foot hitherto unclimbed mountain of Himalchuli in the central Nepal Himalayas successfully climbed the peak on May 24.

A second group of two members also climbed the summit the following day—on May 25.

The team had had no accident except the death of one sherpa in the preliminary stage of climbing. All members were reported to be fit and healthy, except one 22-year-old Tokyo student, Yoshiro Kawada, who was suffering from high altitude sickness.

The party left the base camp on June 2 on a ten-day trekking to Khatmandu.

A total of three Japanese expeditions attempted three different peaks this season in the Nepal Himalayas, including the 23,000 feet high Jugul Himal and the 23,801 feet high Himalchuli. Two of the three succeeded—on Api and Himalchuli—while the third on Jugul Himal failed.

The Himalchuli was first attempted by the British Kenya team in 1958 when its leader was killed in an accident. The Japanese first reconnoitred the peak from the east side in the Autumn of 1958 and an eight-man Japanese team in 1959 failed to climb the summit after reaching 24,000 feet. The mountain presented a steep rock and ice ascent between 13,000 to 20,000 feet while the greatest difficulty of the assault was about 24,000 feet.

Himalchuli is considered as one of toughest mountains in Nepal Himalayas.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2715:NEP:F]

PAKISTAN

A. F-M Ayub Khan On US Aid To India: The President, Field-Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan, said in Karachi on May 17 that Pakistan would not object to American aid being given to neutral countries.

He was answering questions at his news conference in relation to the recent 17,000,000-ton Foodgrain Agreement and other economic aid to India from USA.

He said: "What is the use of raising objections? If America wants to waste her resources, what right has Pakistan to stop her?"

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2844:PAK:A]

B. Greater Visa Facilities For Indian Visitors: The Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, told a news conference in Rawalpindi on May 24 that greater facilities would be given to Indian nationals visiting Pakistan on visas and they would be subjected to fewer restrictions.

Answering a question, he said that at a recent conference attended by the Pakistan High Commissioner to India, Mr. A. K. Brohi, it was decided to rationalize transport and visa rules. "We have been thinking of rationalizing the procedure in respect of passports and visas for a long time. This was pending a little over a year. Meanwhile, there was a proposal to liberalize the policy of visas that came in only for incidental mention during the Rawalpindi Conference. The rationalization already decided upon will result in greater facilities and lesser restrictions on those who are granted visas without affecting the opportunities for obtaining them."

Replying to another question, he said that the policy regarding the issue of passports and visas would remain unchanged.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 1881:PAK:A]

C. Radio Pakistan To Start Commercial Broadcasts: The Information

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

and Broadcasting Minister, Mr. Z. A. Bhutto, gave an indication in Rawalpindi on May 23 that Pakistan might soon start commercial broadcasts through the Government-owned Radio Pakistan.

He told newsmen that his Ministry had worked out a scheme for commercial broadcasts and had submitted it to the Cabinet for approval. Under the proposal, programmes for commercial broadcasts would have to be approved by Radio Pakistan.

(Dawn, Karachi)

D. Preliminary Master Plan For New Capital: The Presidential Cabinet approved on May 24 a preliminary Master Plan for Islamabad, the new capital of Pakistan.

The Plan was presented to the President, F-M Ayub Khan by Maj-Gen. A. M. Yahya Khan, Chairman of the Federal Capital Commission.

It was approved at a Cabinet meeting which was held on a hillock seven miles from Rawalpindi, commanding a panoramic view of the new capital site.

It envisaged office accommodation for 9,000 civil servants.

Shown in the Plan were the President's House, the Parliament House, the Secretariat and other administrative blocks. Housing and other facilities would be provided for a population of at least 36,000.

The works outlined would be completed within the next five years.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3234:PAK:H]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

A. Commonwealth Premiers' Conference: The Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference began in London on May 3.

Apart from the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, the Commonwealth Prime Ministers who attended the Conference were: Tengku Abdul Rehman (Malaya), Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru (India), Mr. Walter Nash (New Zealand), Mr. John Diefenbaker (Canada), Mr. Robert Menzies (Australia), Dr. Kwame Nkrumah (Ghana) and Sir Roy Welensky (Rhodesia-Nyasaland). Pakistan was represented by her President, Field-Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan, South Africa by her External Affairs Minister, Mr. Eric Louw, and Ceylon by her Minister of Justice, Mr. E. J. Gooray.

Despite the tension aroused by the racial question in South Africa, the Conference opened in a calm atmosphere and, according to reports, the first session went off without incident.

The main "business" at the session was Mr. Macmillan's welcome address, to which Tenkgu Abdul Rehman (Malaya) replied on behalf of the delegates, followed by a brief exchange of views on the scope of the agenda and the start of the general discussion on the world political situation, with a review of the 'summit' prospects by Mr. Macmillan.

The South African issue was raised in the session but only in a tentative fashion, more to initiate a consideration of how it should be dealt with at the Conference rather than as a substantive subject for discussion.

In the interests of preserving harmony, the Prime Ministers decided to confine the discussion of South Africa's racial policies to the smaller and unofficial group meetings.

The following communique was issued at the end of the inaugural session on May 3:

"The first plenary session of the meeting of Commonwealth Prime Ministers were held at 10, Downing Street, London, today (May 3).

"In opening the meeting, the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, Mr. H. Macmillan, expressed on behalf of his Commonwealth colleagues their deep sorrow at the circumstances which had prevented Dr. H. Verwoerd, the Prime Minister of South Africa, from carrying out his intention of attending this meeting.

"He also expressed his regret that the Prime Minister of Ceylon was prevented, owing to the impending election, from coming to London at this time.

"Mr. Macmillan welcomed the Prime Minister of Malaya, Tengku Abdul Rehman, as the first representative of Malaya to attend a Commonwealth Prime Ministers meeting since Malaya attained full membership of the Commonwealth.

"The reply to Mr. Macmillan's opening statement was made by Tengku Abdul Rehman. In the course of his reply, he raised the problem of racial discrimination in South Africa and its effects on relations between South Africa and other Commonwealth countries. He expressed the hope that opportunity would be found for the Commonwealth Prime Ministers to discuss this matter while they were in London.

"The representative of the South African Government, Mr. Eric Louw, emphasized that the sole responsibility for domestic policies within South Africa rested with the Union Government.

"The meeting re-affirmed the traditional practice that Commonwealth Conferences do not discuss the internal affairs of member-countries. Mr. Louw expressed his readiness to meet other heads of delegations informally for discussion of this problem. Arrangements are being made accordingly.

"After these procedural questions had been settled, Mr. Macmillian opened a general discussion on the world political situation.

"The Prime Minister of India, Mr. J. Nehru, and the President of Pakistan, F-M Ayub Khan, continued this discussion at the afternoon session. It will be resumed at a further plenary session tomorrow (May 4) morning."

Sierra Leone To Be Independent:

The Prime Ministers were told on May 4 that the West African territory of Sierra Leone would be granted independence on April 27, 1961.

The question of this diamond and iron-ore producing country of 2,500,000 people becoming a full member of the Commonwealth was a topic of discussion at the Conference.

South African Racial Policies:

There was a private meeting between Mr. Eric Louw and some Commonwealth Prime Ministers at No. 10, Downing Street, on May 4.

The Prime Ministers were Mr. Robert Menzies (Australia), Dr. Kwame Nkrumah (Ghana), Mr. Nehru (India), Tengku Abdul Rehman (Malaya), Mr. Walter Nash (New Zealand) and F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan (Pakistan).

The private exchange of views lasted about an hour and was continued later in the day.

Mr. Louw said he would then meet another group of a similar number "and then we shall be finished."

Shortly after this meeting, Mr. Eric Louw told a news conference that the white population of South Africa was not prepared to abdicate and hand over power to a probable Bantu (African) dictatorship.

He said: "I have come to London and to the Commonwealth Conference neither as an 'accused' nor as a 'patient' nor 'suppliant'."

But such relations "must necessarily be disturbed when a fellow-member is subjected to attacks and misrepresentation in regard to its domestic policies."

He said: "The European-descended population of South Africa is not prepared to hand over to a probable Bantu dictatorship which was built up by their forebears during the past 300 years.

"We are not prepared to abdicate.

"The Government's policy of separate development (apartheid) aims at peaceful co-existence in South Africa of the European-descended and the Bantu people."

He said that he had come to London to discuss with the Commonwealth members matters which were a common concern to all of them, but domestic policies were not such matters.

"South Africa's domestic policies are her own affair, as are the policies of Britain, or of any other member of the Commonwealth."

As a member of the Commonwealth, he said, South Africa was anxious to maintain good relations with its fellow-members and to co-operate in regard to matters of common concern.

But, he added: "Good relations and co-operation between members of the Commonwealth must necessarily be disturbed when a fellow-member is subjected to attacks and misrepresentation in regard to its domestic policies.

"In considering South Africa's racial policy it must be borne in mind that South Africans of European extraction were a permanent population, many of whose ancestors went to the country 300 years ago.

"They have as much right in South Africa as the Bantus who arrived at the northern boundary at approximately the same time as the original European settlers."

Correspondents of Indian newspapers as also those of Asian and African countries were excluded from the news conference.

The Hindustan Times correspondent, who rang up Mr. Maclear Bate, South African Press Attache in the South African High Commission in London was told that he could not attend "because there is no room at the news conference."

Mr. Bate added that no one would be admitted without a pass.

East-West Relations:

On May 4, the Commonwealth leaders discussed the state of relations between the communist bloc and the 'free world' in the light of the 'summit' conference when it was agreed that China should eventually be brought into disarmament discussions.

The subject of China came up during a general discussion on disarmament and world affairs.

Mr. Nehru was one of the main speakers.

In the matter of East-West relations, it was stated that the Prime Ministers were divided.

Mr. Nehru, Dr. Nkrumah and Mr. Walter Nash felt that there was a good chance of a thaw in East-West relations and that the Soviet Union sincerely wanted to end the 'cold war.'

On the other side, among others, were the Pakistan President, F-M Ayub Khan, and the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Robert Menzies, who were particularly inclined to view Soviet proposals for a detente as a mere tactical operation.

Aid To African Countries:

The Commonwealth Prime Ministers approved in principle at their meeting on May 5 a draft project on Commonwealth aid to under-developed African countries.

The programme was reportedly inspired by the Colombo Plan for economic co-operation in South-East Asia, in which the Commonwealth was co-operating with Japan, USA and the World Bank.

New discussions would take place at experts' level before the project was finalized and it was also possible that the project would be related to the group for aid to under-developed countries set up in January, 1960 following the Economic Conference of the "21" in Paris.

The meeting on May 5, which was devoted entirely to economic problems, dealt mainly with the question of aid to under-developed countries, but the Premiers also briefly discussed relations between the two European economic blocs.

A communiaue issued after the meeting on May 5 said that the discussions centred mainly on the problem of aid to the less-developed countries of the world and on the effects which economic developments in Europe might have in the Commonwealth countries.

The Conference was adjourned on the night of May 5 until May 9 because of Princess Margaret's wedding.

All of the eleven Commonwealth statesmen were present at the wedding.

Tengku Abdul Rehman Boycotts Talks With Mr. Eric Louw:

In a statement on May 5, the Malayan Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, announced that he would not take part in any more informal talks on the racial question with Mr. Eric Louw.

He said that it was impossible to discuss or go any further with the representative of a country which had firmly decided that there would be no change in her policy.

He referred to Mr. Louw's news conference and said that it was "a cold, calculating and downright unfair," and did not augur well for the success of any talks.

He added that on his return to Malaya he would ask all Asian and African countries to decide what action to take against South Africa, and said: "I am determined to pursue this issue to the end."

He accused Mr. Louw of having "re-enacted Pearl Harbour by giving a news conference while his talks with Commonwealth Prime Ministers on the question of apartheid were going on."

He did not explain what he meant by this.

He said: "It is obvious that his (Mr. Louw's) character is uncompromising and his attitude unyielding on this question of apartheid which he takes to the extreme limits of unreasonableness."

He said that while the present state of affairs existed in South Africa it remained a threat to the peace and harmony of the Commonwealth.

Dr. K. Nkrumah Withdraws Invitation To Mr. Eric Louw:

Besides the Malayan-South African disagreement, a complication also arose between Ghana and South Africa.

Mr. Louw told newsmen on May 7 that a few days earlier, Dr. K. Nkrumah, in the presence of other Commonwealth leaders, withdrew an invitation to him to visit Ghana.

Mr. Louw said that Dr. Nkrumah had told him that he first wanted an assurance that "a visit by me would be followed by a return visit." Dr. Nkrumah had also hoped that the visit would "lead to an exchange of diplomatic representatives between our countries."

Mr. Louw denied that his original invitation to visit Ghana was conditional on a Ghana Cabinet Minister being permitted to pay a return visit to South Africa.

It was officially announced in London on May 9 that the Government of Ghana had withdrawn its invitation to Mr. Eric Louw to visit Ghana.

A Ghana Government Press Note said: "In the hope that discussions in Ghana would assist in settling African problems, an invitation was extended to Mr. Louw to visit Ghana. In the light, however, of the recent conduct of the Government of South Africa, it is clear that such a visit would serve no useful purpose. Mr. Louw has, accordingly, been informed that in view of the conduct of the South African Government, the Government of Ghana has withdrawn the invitation previously extended to him."

"Restricted Session" On South African Policies:

The Commonwealth Prime Ministers resumed their Conference in London on May 9 after the week-end break, during which they had informal discussions.

No sooner had the Conference resumed at No. 10 Downing Street in the morning than it was decided to make it a restricted session.

Officials and advisers were asked to leave and even the Secretary to the Conference was excluded so that the Prime Ministers could speak in private.

No statement was issued after the restricted session, but a Conference spokesman said that the heads of the delegations had met in private to carry further the informal talks on the racial policies of the South African Government.

The South African Minister for External Affairs, Mr. Louw, said in a statement that it was at his instance that the Commonwealth Prime Ministers held a closed session on May 9 in order to deal with the Press statement issued by the Malayan Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, the previous week.

Mr. Louw said that Tengku Abdul Rehmain's statement contained allegations which were unfounded and which had placed him in a false position.

He said he did not propose to disclose what had happened at the closed session on May 9. But, at the same time, he added that he was in no way a party to any discussion regarding South Africa's racial problems or other matters which were the domestic concern of Commonwealth countries, as these were not discussed at the Conference.

Discussion On Economic Affairs:

The Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference continued discussion on economic affairs, particularly the position resulting from the recent emergence in Western Europe of rival trade blocs, on May 11. It heard a report from the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. D. Heathcoat-Amory on the subject.

Later in the day (May 11), the Conference reviewed the situation in West Asia and the Far East and developments in South-East Asia.

Ceylon's Proposal For Commonwealth Court:

The Prime Ministers also discussed a Ceylonese proposal for a Commonwealth Court to replace the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on May 11.

Under this proposal, the Court would have judges from the various Commonwealth countries and would hold its sessions in these countries in turn.

It was stated that the Prime Ministers had agreed to study the proposal.

Discussion On Constitutional Developments:

During a discussion on Commonwealth constitutional developments on May 11, the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Iain MacLeod, reported on the advance towards independence being made by the British colonies.

It was reported that there was no discussion on the question whether South Africa should remain in the Commonwealth after it became a Republic.

This matter had been raised by Mr. E. Louw with a view to sounding the reactions of other delegates.

When the Prime Ministers took up the question of constitutional developments in various British territories, they also discussed the question of Ghana remaining in the Commonwealth. This was agreed to without much debate.

Immediately afterwards, Mr. Louw raised the question of South Africa, but, it was reported that he could not explain the various aspects of the proposed referendum on the issue of South Africa becoming a Republic, particularly on who would be entitled to vote in the referendum.

The Prime Ministers considered the implications for their countries of the proposed establishment of two European trading groups. The British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. D. Heathcoat-Amory supplemented the review of the economic situation which he began on May 5.

In the afternoon session, the British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, reviewed the West Asian situation.

The Conference then turned to affairs in South-East Asia, and the problems of that area as seen from the view-points of different countries of the Commonwealth were discussed.

Discussion On Africa:

The British Colonial Secretary, Mr. Iain MacLeod, introduced the review of Africa. The discussion centred mainly on British dependent territories on that continent. Mr. MacLeod reviewed the situation in Sierra Leone, Somaliland, Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Nyasaland and Gambia.

Tributes were paid to Britain's work in aiding these countries along the path to independence.

Aid To Commonwealth Countries:

The discussions at the two plenary sessions on May 12 were principally concerned with plans to advance the economy and technology of the Commonwealth countries.

The heads of the delegations examined a scheme presented by Tengku Abdul Rehman for an exchange of technical and administrative personnel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

At the second plenary session, consideration was given to the drafting of the final joint communique.

Final Communique:

The Conference ended on May 13 when the following final communique was issued:

"The meeting of Commonwealth Prime Ministers ended today. Pakistan was represented by its President. Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India, Ghana, the Federation of Malaya and the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland were represented by their Prime Ministers. South Africa was represented by her Minister of External Affairs and Ceylon by her Minister of Justice.

"This was the tenth of these meetings to have been held since the War, the first taking place at a time of great significance to the Commonwealth and the world.

"The continuing growth of the membership of the Commonwealth was marked by the attendance at this meeting of the Prime Minister of the Federation of Malaya, which achieved independence in August, 1957. The representatives of the other Commonwealth countries welcomed the presence of the Federation at the Conference.

"The Commonwealth is an association of independent sovereign States, each responsible for its own policies; but the primary objective of all is world peace and security. It is their declared purpose to do everything in their power to achieve that objective and to continue to co-operate to that end with all the peace-loving nations of the world.

"In this spirit the Commonwealth Ministers reviewed the major international problems of the day on the eve of the impending 'Summit' Conference which is to be attended by the Prime Minister of UK. They expressed their sincere hopes for a successful outcome of that Conference as a further step in the relaxation of international tensions.

"They discussed, in particular, the problem of disarmament and welcomed the progress made at the Geneva Conference on the discontinuance of nuclear weapons tests.

"They hoped that, on the basis of the preliminary work already done, the 'Summit' Conference would be able to make some significant progress towards an eventual settlement, under international control, of the problem of disarmament. An advance towards a solution of that problem, linked with a progressive lessening of political tensions, would afford a firm basis for strengthening confidence between nations and promoting world security.

"The Commonwealth Ministers also discussed the problems of Africa, the Middle East, the Far East and South-East Asia. They recognized that economic and social progress are essential for political stability. They welcomed the continuing contribution which mutual assistance under the Colombo Plan afforded throughout South-East Asia to these aims; and they agreed that there and elsewhere throughout the less-developed areas of the world the best hope of peace, stability and political freedom lies in practical international co-operation of this kind.

"The Ministers reviewed the world economic situation. They noted that, while in general the outlook was favourable, the economic expansion which had taken place since their last meeting had been greater in the industrialized countries of the Commonwealth than in the primary producing countries.

"They agreed that an important condition of the prosperity of these countries was their ability to develop their export trade. They also recognized the urgent need to maintain and, where possible, increase the flow of economic assistance to the less-developed countries. They welcomed the decision to establish an International Development Association.

"The Ministers discussed European trade problems. They expressed concern at the prospect of any economic division in Europe and its possible political implications. The countries of Europe form an important market for Commonwealth exports.

"The Ministers expressed their hope that these countries would follow trade policies in accordance with the principles of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and thus avoid damage to the economies of the primary producing countries and those that are also developing exports of manufactured goods.

"In addition, European countries have an important contribution to make in assisting the economic development of the less advanced countries. The Ministers hoped that these problems could be speedily and satisfactorily resolved, with due regard to the interests of countries outside Europe.

"The Commonwealth Ministers reviewed the economic development of the Commonwealth countries in Africa which had recently attained or are approaching independence. They agreed that consideration should be given to the possibility of co-operative action among the members of the Commonwealth in assisting the economic development of these countries. This possibility would be studied in the first instance by officials of Commonwealth Governments, and the Commonwealth Economic Consultative Council would examine it at its next meeting.

"The Ministers also re-affirmed their belief in the value of exchanges between Commonwealth countries of persons with specialized skills and experience. They agreed that further efforts should be made to foster and encourage these exchanges, whether on a regional or other basis and that the Commonwealth Economic Consultative Council should take this question into urgent consideration.

"They trusted that employers in Commonwealth countries—whether Governments, statutory bodies or private companies—would be ready, wherever possible, to encourage members of their staffs to undertake a period of public service abroad and would do their best to ensure that their prospects in their home countries would not thereby be prejudiced.

"The Ministers considered various questions of constitutional development within the Commonwealth. They noted that the Federation of Nigeria would attain independence on October, 1960. They extended to the Federation their good wishes for its future and looked forward to welcoming an independent Nigeria as a member of the Commonwealth on the completion of the necessary constitutional processes.

"The Conference was informed that in pursuance of the recent plebiscite, the Constituent Assembly in Ghana had resolved that the necessary constitutional steps should be taken to introduce a Republican form of Constitution in Ghana by July 1, 1960.

"In notifying this forthcoming constitutional change, the Prime Minister of Ghana assured the meeting of his country's desire to continue her membership of the Commonwealth and her acceptance of the Queen as the symbol of the free association of its independent member-nations and as such the Head of the Commonwealth.

"The heads of delegations of the other member-countries of the Commonwealth assured the Prime Minister of Ghana that the present relations between their countries and Ghana would remain unaffected by this constitutional change and they declared that their Governments would accept and recognize Ghana's continued membership of the Commonwealth.

"The meeting noted a statement by the South African Minister of External Affairs that the Union Government intended to hold a referendum on the subject of South Africa becoming a Republic. The meeting affirmed the view that the choice between a monarchy and a Republic was entirely the responsibility of the country concerned.

"In the event of South Africa deciding to become a Republic and if the desire was subsequently expressed to remain a member of the Commonwealth, the Conference suggested that the South African Government should then ask for the consent of the other Commonwealth Governments either at a meeting of Commonwealth Prime Ministers, or if this were not practicable, by correspondence.

"The Ministers reviewed the constitutional developments in the Commonwealth, with particular reference to the future of the smaller dependent territories. They agreed that a detailed study of this subject should be made for consideration by Commonwealth Governments.

"Whilst re-affirming the traditional practice that Commonwealth Conferences do not discuss the internal affairs of member-countries, the Ministers availed themselves of Mr. Louw's presence in London to have informal discussions with him about the racial situation in South Africa. During these informal discussions Mr. Louw gave information and answered questions on the Union's policies and the other Ministers conveyed to him their views on the South African problem.

"The Ministers emphasized that the Commonwealth itself is a multi-racial association and expressed the need to ensure good relations between all member-States and peoples of the Commonwealth."

Prime Ministers To Meet At Shorter Intervals:

The Commonwealth Relations Secretary, Lord Home, announced on May 13 that the Commonwealth Prime Ministers would in future meet at shorter intervals, every 18 months or two years.

He said that between these conferences, consultations would be held among the member-States on the future status in the Commonwealth of the small British territories which were to become independent soon.

Dr. K. Nkrumah On "Apartheid":

The Prime Minister of Ghana, Dr. K. Nkrumah, told a public meeting in London on May 13 that if the Commonwealth had any meaning it could not leave the situation in South Africa to drift until a wave of desperation created another Algeria.

He said that the Commonwealth could not exist as an association of nations dedicated to the same principles if exceptions were made.

He added that the majority of the members of the Commonwealth had categorically rejected racialism, and yet they had to recognize that one member was practising it in a most abhorrent manner.

He added: "The warning has been written in blood for all to read. The Commonwealth cannot avoid this situation.

"It is mainly against Africans that this policy is directed, and it so happens that Ghana is so far the only real African member of the Commonwealth. I have a special responsibility to make my views and those of the Government of Ghana on this subject absolutely clear."

Tengku Abdul Rehman's Statement:

The Malayan Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, told newsmen on May 13 that the final section of the communique issued at the conclusion of the Conference gave the impression that nothing was said on the issue of apartheid. However, apartheid had occupied the attention of the Conference from the start and more time was given to it than any other matter.

Asked if he was disappointed with the communique he said: "It is beyond me. The rule is that every release must be agreed upon. If one person disagrees, nothing can be issued.

"This has serious implications for the smooth running of conferences like this. While the unanimity rule exists, it will be difficult in the future. Now, there are 11 members, tomorrow there may be 25. You cannot expect people from all corners of the world to agree on difficult problems."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He said that on his return home he would consult with his Cabinet and then report to the Malayan Parliament.

Asked if he intended to initiate an official boycott of South African goods in Malaya, he replied: "Souh Africa would stand to lose in an economic boycott, not Malaya, because the balance of trade is in our favour. If South Africa stopped buying rubber from Malaya, we should not lose by it. They will lose if they do not get what we sell."

F-M Ayub Khan's Comment:

F-M Ayub Khan of Pakistan also made a statement after the end of the Conference on May 13. He told a news conference that unless some "human solution" to apartheid was found "it will certainly set alight the best part of Africa".

He said: "As far as we are concerned we feel very strongly that apartheid, the way it is now being enforced with all the modern weapons of war against defenceless and unarmed citizens, will do an immense amount of harm."

Asked if he was satisfied with what the Conference had achieved on racial questions, he replied; "I think so."

He said that the Commonwealth leaders had expressed their views and hoped that the South African Government would take them into consideration.

He said that the communique had been produced with Mr. Louw's consent.

He added: "If he had not subscribed to it, it would not have come out in this form."

Mr. Nehru's News Conference:

On the eve of the Conference, Mr. Nehru spoke exhaustively on apartheid, China and Pakistan at a news conference at India House on May 2.

He said that India was entirely opposed to apartheid and racial discrimination in any part of the world. The UN Charter itself was opposed to apartheid and racial discrimination and because of the racial policies of South Africa "our relations with South Africa have been strained for the past dozen years or so".

He added that there were practically no relations between the two countries though both were attached to the Commonwealth. He explained that there were no Indian diplomatic representatives in South Africa nor were there South African diplomatic representatives in India. India had stopped all economic connections with South Africa several years ago and nothing directly had been exported or imported between the two countries for years.

Asked what steps he had proposed in his recent Delhi talks with Mr. Chou En-lai to dislodge the Chinese from Indian territory, he replied: "That raises a very big question. My talks with Mr. Chou En-lai disclosed completely different sets of facts on which we based our respective stands."

Asked if there was any threat to world peace from China and whether he intended to discuss this at the Commonwealth Conference, Mr. Nehru asked the questioner whether he was referring to any threat in Asia.

When the questioner said "Yes", Mr. Nehru replied: "Potentially, yes. It is actually difficult to say. Not in the near future. But in future, the effect of the tremendous explosive situation being created by the rapid growth industrially of the population—which will be 1,000,000,000 in perhaps 20 years or thereabouts—brings in certain explosive factors. There is no easy answer to that question."

Asked if China's admission to UN would ease the world situation, he said: "That has been our opinion throughout, and it continues to be so. It really verges on absurdity to go on calling the island of Formosa or Taiwan as China and ignoring the biggest and most populated country in the world."

Asked how they were going to admit China into UN, he said: "I think if China had been taken into United Nations about 10 years ago many of the present day problems would be much smaller."

He was also asked what he thought would be the future of Tibet and her Government.

He replied that Tibet was today very much a part of the Chinese State. "I do not myself see in the foreseeable future anything happening which will change the present position there."

Asked "in view of the explosive situation created by China" whether he considered his "policy of neutralism" still valid, he declared that India's policy was not neutralism.

He went on: "I have always thought that a country is neutral only when there is a war. If you accept the fact of a country being neutral in peace-time, presumably the other countries are belligerent. It is not a correct description. What you perhaps mean is the policy of non-alignment in military alliances. That, we feel, is a very sound policy. Not only were we right in following it, but it should continue to be followed by us and I hope by other countries in future."

Asked whether China had violated the Five Principles of co-existence, he said: "I would say they have not observed the Five Principles. But that does not mean that we have given up our faith in those Principles. We believe that adhering to them is the best policy. Naturally, we want to be friends with all our neighbours. Occasions may arise, as they have arisen, when there are difficulties and conflicts. It is important for us to face them, and one does not look forward to a state of hostility with any neighbouring country, or indeed with any other country for that matter."

Mr. Nehru's Address To India League On "Apartheid", Goa And China:

Addressing a public meeting of the India League in London on May 6, Mr. Nehru said that apartheid and racial discrimination might well change the very foundation of the Commonwealth.

This issue, he said, affected "our general feelings about liberty and our dislike of racialism". It affected each person of the African and Asian countries, apart from the African people themselves. Racial discrimination was irritating to an individual, but far more irritating and insulting to a national community. He laid stress on the dangers and explosive character of the situation.

He said that he did not expect a sudden solution, by some kind of magic, of this problem. But if a beginning was not made in reaching a solution, it would lead to disaster.

Referring to Goa, he said that India's handling of the Goa problem demonstrated "our desire to solve problems peacefully without recourse to violence even though it greatly irritates and may take some time."

He described Portuguese Angola as "a strange dark spot" from which normally no news emerged.

Amid laughter, he said: "There is Angola, a Portuguese colony. Of course, the Portuguese do not have any colonies at all. They are all Provinces of Portugal. I don't suppose any newspaper dares to send its correspondent there. They would not be allowed to enter it. It is a peculiarly dark spot, one of the worst in Africa."

There was further laughter when he said: "I am not saying this because of any animosity against Portugal because of Goa".

After he had spoken at some length on the internal situation in India, he turned to Sino-Indian relations and said: "I have had long talks with Mr. Chou En-lai. They were quite friendly talks, but they revealed a complete difference, a difference of our ideas and even the basic facts of the situation. Ultimately, we decided that at least we should collate the facts and know where we are. We think a sifting of facts may make it a little easier to talk later."

Mr. Nehru Visits Paris:

Mr. Nehru arrived in Paris by air from London on May 8 for a one-day visit during which he had talks with President Charles de Gaulle.

He also had discussions with the French Premier, M Michel Debre, and the Foreign Minister, M Maurice Couve de Murville.

Mr. Nehru used a private aircraft lent him by Queen Elizabeth to fly to Paris.

This was the first meeting between President Charles de Gaulle and Mr. Nehru. According to a Paris despatch, they discussed the 'Summit' Conference and the main topics likely to be brought up at it.

General de Gaulle was understood to have explained his stand on the right of self-determination for the people of Algeria and explained to Mr. Nehru the developments of the French community in Africa. They also discussed the former French Settlements in India.

Foreign Press Association Lunch To Mr. Nehru:

On May 9, Mr. Nehru was the chief guest at a Foreign Press Association lunch.

Speaking on the occasion he said on apartheid: "I need hardly tell you how very much opposed we are to racial discrimination. In the modern world, that kind of thing just cannot be carried on without conflict.

"Africa is in a tremendous ferment, seething, and when that sort of thing happens whole populations become conscious, politically and otherwise, of the good things of life. They cannot be ignored, more especially where matters of individual self-respect are concerned."

Asked about Indo-Pakistan relations, Mr. Nehru replied: "Broadly our relations are much better than they have been for the last ten years or so. Some problems still remain to be settled but so far as the people of India are concerned relations are almost back to normal and the old feelings resulting from Partition are practically gone."

Asked if the Indian Government would give de jure recognition to the State of Israel in future, Mr. Nehru pointed out that India had recognized Israel de jure long ago. "But we have not followed this up by sending a diplomatic mission there. We did not send a mission because we thought we could perhaps approach a little nearer to the solution to problems in West Asia by not doing so. India's contacts with the Arab world are considerable and Israel is not popular among the Arab countries. It was, therefore, a practical consideration that led us to this policy."

British Decoration For F-M Ayub Khan And Pakistan Decoration For Queen:

On April 30, Queen Elizabeth presented the President of Pakistan, F-M Mohammad Ayub Khan, in London with the insignia of an honorary GCMG (Knight Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George).

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

In return, the President gave the Queen the insignia of the Order, first class, of Nishan-i-Pakistan.

Membership of this Order is limited to 25 persons. Other recipients outside Pakistan include President Eisenhower, the Shah of Iran and President G. A. Nasser of UAR.

The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh gave a dinner in the State dining room at Windsor Castle on April 29 in honour of F-M Ayub Khan and Begum Ayub Khan.

Mr. Eric Louw's Speech At South Africa Club:

The External Affairs Minister of South Africa, Mr. Eric Louw, told a dinner meeting of the South Africa Club on May 10 that there was a danger that the Union's relations with Britain might be seriously disturbed if the "anti-South African campaign" in UK was permitted to continue unchecked.

Explaining the "anti-South African campaign", he said that apart from the rowdy demonstrations he had been subjected to in U.K. there was the movement to boycott South African goods in Britain.

In 1946, he said, Gen. Smuts had returned from the first Assembly of United Nations a disappointed and disillusioned man. "He said that in dealing with South Africa's racial problems, he had been up against a stone wall of prejudice. During the succeeding years the prejudice encountered by Gen. Smuts has increased twenty-fold, and the anti-South African campaign is every year increasing in bitterness and intensity. Insofar as this campaign is being carried on in UK, there is the danger that our relations with the United Kingdom may be seriously disturbed if it is permitted to continue unchecked."

Recalling that he had lived in London as High Commissioner for many years and had since visited Britain on many occasions, he said: "I today sense a feeling of estrangement and of hostility towards South Africa."

He did not mind the rowdy demonstrations to which he had been subjected since his arrival in London, nor was he much disturbed by the movement to boycott South African goods. "In ordinary human intercourse, a man who is hit is apt to hit back: So also the buying public of a country whose goods are boycotted."

"But there is other evidence of hostility There is the vigorous anti-South African Press campaign; the hostile atmosphere shown at my recent news conference, the undoubted hostility recently shown in a debate in the House of Commons.

"There is the campaign which is carried on by certain clerics.

"And then, of course, there are the 'Leftist' elements in Britain which, in this campaign against South Africa, are fighting shoulder to shoulder with 'Christian Action' and Bishop Reeves—as they are doing in South Africa, where communist propaganda has played its part in inciting the Bantu masses against the Europeans."

British Politicians' Plan Against "Apartheid":

It was disclosed in London on May 11 that 12 British politicians had put forward a five-point plan for action against apartheid to the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference.

The signatories included the Bishop of Birmingham, the Bishop of Southwark, Lord Hemingford, Lord Pakenham, Lord Altrincham, Mr. James Callaghan and Mr. Clement Davies.

Their plan was also separately discussed with Mr. Nehru and Tengku Abdul Rehman.

The five suggestions made by the signatories were:

"(1) The Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference should publicly declare that the principles of equality between races and political freedom are fundamental to its role in world affairs.

"(2) The Conference should call upon the South African Government to reverse its policy of apartheid and to make a fresh start on the basis of freedom and equality, and respect for the dignity and humanity of all men irrespective of race.

"(3) The Commonwealth Governments should contribute to a Commonwealth fund for relief of or to any other fund bringing relief to the victims of apartheid and the present State of Emergency.

"(4) As the system of apartheid is being rigorously applied in the mandated territory of South-West Africa, giving rise to racial animosity and insecurity, the Commonwealth Governments should take the initiative in UN in ensuring that South-West Africa be administered strictly in accordance with the mandate. If necessary, UN should be urged to revoke the mandate and to replace the present South African administration by one instituted by UN.

"(5) The Conference should appeal to the South African Government to release and try the detainees imprisoned under emergency regulations."

Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld Meets Mr. E. Louw:

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, had two meetings with the South African External Affairs Minister, Mr. Eric Louw, in London on May 13.

He met Mr. Louw again the following day (May 14). These meetings were held at the request of the UN Security Council which carried a resolution in April, 1960 deploring the apartheid policy of the South African Government.

Mr. Hammarskjoeld's talks were preliminary to his visit to South Africa later this Summer to discuss the racial discrimination policy of the Union Government.

Dr. H. Verwoerd's Statement:

The South African Prime Minister, Dr. Hendrik Verwoerd, said in a statement on May 18 that it was clear from the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference that South Africa would be welcome in the Commonwealth as a Republic.

The statement which was read in the House of Assembly in Capetown on behalf of the Prime Minister was Dr. Verwoerd's first official pronouncement since he was seriously injured in an assassination attempt five weeks earlier.

Dr. Verwoerd said that any other interpretation would be unfair to the Commonwealth and to the recent Prime Ministers' Conference because it would constitute discrimination against South Africa for the sole reason that it had become a Republic. "In this connexion, it should be stressed that a possible refusal of membership is an incorrect deduction which has been made in some quarters from a statement in the communique that should the South African Union decide to become a Republic it would have to obtain the acquiescence of other members. This procedure has indeed always been followed after peoples or parliaments of member-countries decided upon a change—which South Africa has not done."

The Prime Ministers' Conference, he said, had explicitly upheld the long-standing tradition and convention that there should be no interference in any member-country's domestic affairs.

The South African Government was, however, willing—and would be willing in the future—to discuss its policy with representatives of other countries.

He added: "The Union Government remains convinced that its solution of the racial problem is a more human and more ethical and lasting one than those of its critics."

(The Times, London, UK High Commission and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 1550:AOA:A]

B. UN Commission On Status Of Women: The annual session of the 18-nation UN Commission on the Status of Women which met in Buenos Aires in April, 1960 had before it both a draft Convention on marriage regulations and a draft recommendation to Governments suggesting that they adopt whatever measures may be necessary to give effect to the terms of the Convention.

Both the texts were prepared by the UN Secretariat at the request of the Economic and Social Council. The Council's request followed earlier recommendations on the subject of marriage made by the Commission.

In its three Articles, the draft Convention: (a) prescribes that no marriage shall be valid under a given minimum age, the age itself being left blank since this is a matter to be discussed by the Commission; (b) declares that no marriage is valid without the full and free consent of both parties, and (c) provides that all marriages shall be recorded in an appropriate official register.

In their preambles, both the Convention and the recommendation refer to the relevant Article in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and recall a resolution adopted by the General Assembly in 1954 urging all nations to take steps to abolish certain laws and practices relating to marriage which are inconsistent with the UN Charter and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Also before the Commission was a report summarizing the information received on the subject from 43 Governments and 11 non-Governmental organizations and showing that in the countries covered the highest minimum marriage age fixed by law for both sexes was 21 and the lowest was 12.

Regarding the age of consent, requirements vary widely. In the Republic of Korea, for example, men must obtain parental consent up to the age of 27, but women only up to the age of 23. In Sudan, on the other hand, Moslem males who are governed by religious rules in this matter do not require parental consent after the age of 15. Women, however, must obtain the consent of a guardian until they are 33 unless they are widowed or divorced before that age.

Other main questions on the agenda of the 18-nation Commission included a review of progress achieved in the political rights of women and reports on their access to education and their economic opportunities.

The Commission surveyed progress in acceptance and application of the two Conventions which originally came into being under its sponsorship, and which are now in force. These are the Convention on the Political Rights of Women, and the Convention on the Nationality of Married Women.

The 18 countries comprising the 1960 membership of the Commission are: Argentina, Canada, China, Colombia, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Finland, France, Greece, Israel. Japan, Mexico, the Netherlands, Pakistan, Poland, USSR, United Kingdom and United States.

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 1480:AOA.A]

C. USA Launches "Discoverer XI": A new American satellite, Discoverer XI, was placed in a polar orbit on the night of April 15.

An announcement by the US Air Force said that the new satellite would circle the Earth over the Poles every 92 minutes.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The satellite was equipped with a device to eject a capsule which planes and ships were asked to try to recover the following day (April 16) in the region of Hawaii.

Ten previous attempts to recover the capsule had failed.

The recovery of the present capsule, which weighs about 300 lbs, is said to be of crucial importance in the US programme to send man into space.

The capsule which should have plunged back to the earth from the satellite was believed still in orbit on April 17 due to some "unknown malfunction."

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3261:AOA:H]

D. USA Launches "Transit Navigation" Satellite: What was called a "transit navigation" satellite was launched from Cape Canaveral in Florida by US Navy on the morning of April 13. The satellite was called Transit I.

It was fired with a Thor-Able rocket. The satellite's pay-load was 265 lbs.

The satellite was launched as part of the US Navy's project to provide navigational aid to ships and planes.

The satellite, whose batteries would be powered by the Sun, was designed to study the feasibility of using satellites as global, all-weather navigation stations.

It was hoped that ships, planes and submarines getting radio-signals from a net-work of "transits" would be able to plot their positions within one-tenth of a mile more accurately than at present.

When the rocket reached an altitude of about 500 miles, it was planned to inject the satellite into orbit.

It was later announced that the satellite had gone into orbit round the Earth.

Tracking stations not only in America but those in Newfoundland, Britain and West Germany picked up signals from the satellite.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3261:AOA:H]

E. Progress Of "Tiros I" And Balloon "Radio-Mirror": It was officially stated in Washington on April 4 that Tiros I continued in an almost circular orbit with its two complex, electronic cameras feeding back photographs of cloud formations around the Earth for scientists to gauge their effect on weather and climate.

The pictures were relayed from the drum-shaped satellite to a receiving station at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, where a giant telemetery antenna "reads" the recorded data from Tiros I's television cameras. Other tracking stations were also receiving the data.

Dr. Abe Solverstein, Director of NASA's space flight programme, described the orbit of Tiros I as the most accurate yet achieved by a US space vehicle.

The photos from Tiros I, he said, could be sent to the Earth direct or stored on memory-drums, 32 at a time, for relay on being signalled when the satellite was within range of receiving stations.

The US National Aeronautics and Space Administration revealed on April 5 that Tiros I had sent back to the Earth about 1,200 photographs since its launching on April 1. Meteorologists had been surprised at their quality.

Pictures of the Soviet Union were among the batch of several hundred photographs taken by Tiros I and released in Washington on April 11.

The pictures were taken from directly over Soviet territory, unlike earlier pictures which showed the Soviet Union only as a distant background to Japan and the Kurile Islands.

But, it was impossible to pick out salient land features from pictures as projected on a screen.

Mr. William Stroud, Project Manager of Tiros, said it was difficult to distinguish between snow on the ground and a white cloud overhead. But, he pointed out the Soviet coastline to dark inland areas of forest and the crescent-shaped Lake Baikal in Siberia, several hundred miles long.

Among the pictures were shots of giant circular weather movements over the ocean, some of which weather experts estimated as 2,000 miles across. One official said: "We have things on this scale before."

On April 10, the US Weather Bureau reported that the Tiros had photographed a hurricane off Australia. The pictures released on April 11 included more shots of gigantic cyclonic and anti-cyclonic wind movements in the Pacific.

Balloon "Radio-Mirror":

Together with Tiros I, another American space probe shared headlines on April 3. This was the rocket-launching at Wallops Island, Virginia, of a huge balloon 200 miles above the Earth. The purpose of this test was to develop a "radio mirror" communications system.

The balloon, as large as a 10-storey building, provided a target for communications signals so that they could be bounced off the balloon around the Earth's curvature to distant points.

The launching of Tiros I and the balloon "radio mirror" were successfully carried out under the auspices of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

The balloon was not designed to orbit round the Earth.

(The Hindu, Madras and The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3318:AOA:F]

F. Progress Of "Pioneer V": The US National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) announced in Washington on April 18 that Pioneer V was 5,000,000 miles from the Earth at 3-30 a.m. IST on that day.

The Administration said that the instruments of the space satellite were working nicely, relaying data every four to five hours on solar radiation, micrometeorites and magnetic fields in space. Stations in Hawaii and England were receiving information.

The Administration said that Pioneer V was speeding up as it left the Earth's gravitational field. Its speed on passing the 5,000,000-mile mark was 5,635 miles an hour.

Date On Theory Of Origin Of Storms:

It was stated on April 29 that Pioneer V had sent back reports of its findings which have shaken the accepted theory on the origin of storms on the Earth.

A group of West Coast scientists who had monitored the data collected and transmitted by Pioneer's capsule instruments disclosed at a NASA news conference on April 29 that magnetic records obtained about 3,000,000 miles from the Earth showed storm variations similar to those obtained recently by land stations in Hawaii and Virginia.

This seemed, they said, to place in doubt the long-held belief that magnetic storms were caused by electric currents in or near the Earth's atmosphere.

The satellite also discovered a giant magnetic field far out in space with an axis which bore no relation to that of the Sun.

It also found a strong current of electricity girdling the Earth at a distance of about 23,500 miles, and the first pure cosmic rays—that is, cosmic rays detected at altitudes entirely free of the Earth's atmosphere.

It appeared that the Earth's magnetic field acted at certain times like a gigantic dynamo which attracted the dangerous radio-active particles given off by the Sun towards the Van Allen radiation belt, which is the furthest from the Earth. This, it seemed, might be one of the main obstacles to future space travel.

(The New York Times and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3273:AOA:A, 3318:AOA:G]

G. Russian Discovery Of Two Separate Belts Of Electric Radiation Round Earth: Moscow Radio reported on April 26 that the existence of two separate belts of electric radiation round the Earth had been proved by information provided by the now disintegrated Sputnik III.

The discoverer of this fact was Prof. Zernov whose work with other Soviet scientists on cosmic space won him a Lenin Prize.

The conclusions he reached were that the so-called exterior belt of radiation was 30,000 to 60,000 kilometres distant from the Earth at the Equator, and the other, interior belt, was much closer, about 6,000 kilometres away.

Instruments in Sputnik III had detected the presence of this belt at a height of 300 to 400 kilometres.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3029:AOA:D, 3318:AOA:H]

H. Russian Scientists Discover A Path Into Outer Space For Future Space Ships: It was stated in Moscow on April 21 that Russian scientists had discovered a path into outer space which future space ships would be able to use to escape a dangerous radiation zone on their journey away from the Earth.

Announcing the 1960 Lenin Prize winners in science and technology, the official Soviet News Agency Tass said that four physicists—Mr. Sergei Vernov, Mr. Alexander Chudakov, Mr. Sasa Dolginov and Mr. Nikolai Pushkov—"have the honour of the discovery and investigation of the external radiation belt around the Earth and the establishment of a general picture of the distribution of charged particles in outer space."

It added: "They made the discovery that a particle-free space lies around the Earth's Poles which will enable future space ships to leave our planet, by-passing the dangerous radiation zone."

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 2782:AOA:W]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10 Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95|-; Foreign Rs. 115|- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

June 25—July 1, 1960

Reg. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 26

CHINA

A. Conquest of Everest: The official Hsinhua News reported on May 27 that three Chinese mountaineers had reached the summit of Mount Everest on May 25.

The news agency, reporting under the dateline Chomo Lungma (the Chinese name for Mt. Everest), said: "The three mountaineers—Mr. Wang Fu-chou, Mr. Chu Yin-hua and Mr. Konbu (of Tibetan nationality)—reached the summit of Chomo Lungma, the highest peak in the world, at 2-20 p.m. Peking time on May 25.

"The conquest of the towering peak, which rises 8,882 metres above sea level, by the Chinese Mountaineering Expedition marked the first success in mankind's history of efforts to reach the summit from the northern slopes of the mountain in the Himalayas.

"Led by China's well-known Alpinist, Master of Sports in mountaineering, Mr. Shih Chan-Chun, the Chinese Expedition set off on their first acclimatization march on March 25.

"In the course of the climbing, members of the Chinese Expedition, under the leadership of the Communist Party, displayed unprecedented revolutionary enthusiasm, overcame the serious lack of exygen at high altitudes, braved cold of 40 degrees below zero (centigrade) and gave full play to their spirit of collectivism and patriotism in achieving this brilliant victory."

Mr. Wang Fu-chou (25), who led the final three-man assault group on the peak, is a member of the Communist Party, Master of Sports and a graduate of Peking's Geological Institute.

Mr. Chu Yin-hua (25), a lumber worker from the Szechuan Province, is also a member of the Communist Party and a Master of Sports.

Mr. Konbu (27) is described as a Tibetan soldier of the People's Liberation Army and a first grade sportsman.

The leader of the Expedition, Mr. Shih Chan-chun (32), an administrative worker, Communist Party member and Master of Sports, began his mountaineering career as an Alpinist in 1956 when he climbed several of the Taipai mountains in the Shensi Province.

This is the third expedition to scale the 29,028-foot peak, and the fourth time it has been climbed.

The first was in 1953 when a British Commonwealth team led by Sir John Hunt reached the top on the eve of Queen Elizabeth's coronation. The two men who stood on the summit then were Tenzing Norkay and Sir Edmund Hillary.

Later two Swiss teams scaled the peak in 1956.

The northern face, which is hidden from the Sun, is regarded as more difficult and much colder than the southern route.

History Of Expeditions:

As far as is known, that is the first Chinese attempt on Everest. It was the 13th expedition to the peak, the eighth from the north and the only one to succeed along that route.

If the Chinese attempt succeeded at the time indicated by their announcement, it must be regarded as an amazing feat of endurance and courage.

The time factor and the manifest dangers of open bivouacs atop the exposed summit ridge had forced many a climber from the north side to retrace his steps when the goal was less than 1,000-ft. ahead.

Seven men, besides the three Chinese who have ascended the peak, had reached a height of over 28,100 feet—just 900 feet below the top on the north face. They were Norton, Mallory, Irvine—who were last seen at the second rock step within a few hundred feet of the summit before they disappeared in a mist—Smythe, Wyn Harris, Wager and Sommerville.

From the south, the height was climbed by 12 men in eight years.

Only two climbers had seen both routes from close quarters—Eric Shipton, who climbed to about 28,000 feet in 1933 on the north side and who conducted the initial exploration of the Khumbu glacier and the ice-fall which guards the southern Nepalese approaches, and Tenzing Norkay, a veteran of seven Everest expeditions, who enjoys the sole distinction of being the only climber who has been to beyond 27,000 feet on either side.

Four of the seven expeditions in which Tenzing Norkay participated were directed from the northern side.

Only two—Hillary and Tenzing—of the six men who have stood on Everest waited long enough on Everest to look down the northern side and study the chances of success.

Hillary testified, as all others who had climbed to within 8,000 feet from the northern side, that it was very steep.

The northern route was first discovered by Mallory who went with the first British reconnaissance party in 1921.

Mallory, looking at Everest for the first time from an eminence by the side of the Rongbuk Valley, also charted the route along the north-east ridge. The route, followed by successive expeditions, gains entry to Everest through the Rongbuk Valley and the eastern end of the three glaciers which branch from it.

The first explorers, including Mallory, believed that the actual climbing difficulties on the upper part of the mountain would be slight. But closer contact with the upper reaches belied this impression. The route along the Rongbuk glacier covered by innumerable ice pinnacles, some of them rising to 80 feet at the southern approaches, offered few mountaineering difficulties up to the north-eastern spur and its junction with the north-east ridge reached along the North Col 22,500 feet high.

Description Of Summit:

The summit route presents three chief physical obstacles. There are three horizontal bands, each of different rock formations.

The first of these, composed of light coloured rock, is 800 feet thick and lies between 27,200 feet and 28,000 feet. The surface of the "yellow band," as it has come to be known, is composed, on the northern side, of a series of overlapping slabs set at a fairly steep angle and sloping outwards like tiles on a roof. On the south-eastern ridge, which provides access to the summit from the Nepalese side, the slope inclines favourably, the slabs forming steps.

By far the more formidable, the "black band" begins where the yellow one ends. The crest of the north-eastern ridge, 27,500-ft. high, leading to the "black hand," is almost knife-sharp, making a slow and laborious climb.

Further on the north-eastern ridge stand two great sentinels guarding the approaches to the pyramid, the first fairly easy and the second rising 200-feet high with a steep ice slope.

The only alternative route to the final pyramid is guarded by the great couloir reached by a traverse diagonally across to the head of a conspicuous gully running down the north face from a point below the "black band" of the rock.

The great couloir is filled with soft snow and is flanked on the west by a high sharp ridge; a mountaineer attempting it may sink hip-deep in it.

Night In A Snow Cave:

In Lhasa, on May 31, the leader of the Chinese Expedition, Mr. Shih Chan-chun, described how he and another climber had spent a night in a snow cave 27,950 feet up on the north face of the mountain.

He said it was perhaps "the first ever adventure of its kind in mankind's history."

The two climbers were on the Expedition's third acclimatization march early in May, and had reached the upper part of the formidable "second step"—an almost vertical rock wall on the north-east ridge leading up to the summit, regarded by foreign mountaineers as an extremely difficult obstacle.

After spending the night in the cave dug out of snow in a crevice, the climbers surveyed a safe route to the summit for their companions to follow. They then descended, exhausted.

Mr. Shih, who described the conquest of the 29,028-foot peak as a "victory for the Communist Party and the people throughout the country," returned to Lhasa from the base camp on May 31.

Achievement Hailed:

The Chinese climbing of Everest was hailed as a great achievement in world mountaineering circles.

Significance was also attached by political observers to the event in view of the recent Chinese claim to Everest peak which Nepal had claimed as exclusively hers.

The New China News Agency said on May 30 that the successful team of Chinese mountaineers erected on the summit of Everest a statue of Mr. Mao Tse-tung, Chairman of the Chinese Communist Party, and the Chinese flag.

Members of the victorious team, it said, also left a document with their signatures behind on the peak, a custom required by international mountain climbing tradition.

Body Of Englishman Found:

The New China News Agency reported from the successful Chinese Everest Expedition's base camp on May 30 that the Expedition had discovered a body seemingly that of "a dead British mountaineer" high on Everest and had buried it.

The discovery was said to have been made at a height of 21,000 ft. The body was on

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

snow-covered stretch of ground under a slope. "Its shredded and faded green garments were of British make. The corpse had stiffened and shrunk and the features were beyond identification but the body had not completely decomposed."

A. C. Irvine and G. L. Mallory of the 1924 British Expedition to Everest had reached 26,800 feet on the north face and disappeared after setting out to climb to the top. They disappeared at 28,239 feet, but it was generally believed that they reached the summit and were unable to return. The Chinese Expedition also attempted the north face.

But, at his home in Henley-on-Thames, in England, the British mountaineer, Sir John Hunt, said on May 30 that he thought the body was most likely that of Maurice Wilson, a British Army Captain, who perished attempting to scale the mountain in 1934 unaided.

Wilson, a religious fanatic, attempted the climb to draw mankind's attention to his doctrines. He perished at about the height at which the Chinese climbers found the body.

However, his body was found by a British reconnaisance party in July, 1936. His diary was removed, and the body buried.

Sir John said that a possible explanation may be that the body had been uncovered by mountain winds.

Sir John, who led the successful British expedition to Mount Everest in 1953, thought it impossible that the body was that of either Mallory or Irvine. They perished in a different area covered by the Chinese climbers, and even if they had plunged thousands of feet down the mountain, their bodies could not have landed in the area.

Mr. B. P. Koirala's Comment:

The Nepalese Premier, Mr. B. P. Koirala, told a news conference in Khatmandu on May 28 that the Chinese climb to the Everest had not affected Nepal's stand on the mountain.

At the same time, he said, he did not see any ground to protest to Peking against the Chinese climbing Everest in view of the tradition estalished of climbing it from the north also.

There had been seven attempts from the north since 1921 and Nepal had never protested against them. A protest now would not mean anything. "It is too late now."

He revealed that he was in correspondence with the Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, regarding the Everest controversy.

He, however, thought that Peking was not obliged nor was expected to inform Nepal of its Expedition to Everest. He had not received any communication from Peking informing him of the Chinese success.

Nepal had not been informed of this at any stage before or now.

He re-iterated Nepal's stand on Everest that it belonged to Nepal and Nepal alone. But, viewed against a long-standing tradition, the Chinese climbing to the summit of Everest without any reference to Nepal did not "limit, hinder or affect our stand with regard to Everest."

He had no information if the Chinese had planted the Nepali flag on the peak.

Mr. Koirala told Parliament on June 2 that if the Chinese had planted their flag on Everest considering it to be the highest peak of their Fatherland, he would consider protesting to Peking.

He quoted some newspaper reports and said that if he found that the Chinese had really described Everest as the highest peak of their Fatherland, he would consider it "objectionable."

Planting of flags would not establish any claim. The British and the Swiss had also planted their flags on Everest. That did not make it British or Swiss.

Nepali Journals' Criticism:

The Nepalese newspaper of Khatmandu, Kalpana, which has close contacts with Nepal's Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, said on May 21 that the Chinese attempt on the 29,028-ft Everest was a "bad sign of arrogance" in the face of Nepal's claim that the southern face and summit of the peak lie within Nepalese territory.

Another Khatmandu newspaper, The Commoner, also questioned the propriety of the Chinese sending an Expedition to Everest and said:

"Cannot this Expedition of the Chinese without Nepal's permission be interpreted as a bid to establish their claim over the peak? Cannot it be called as a bid to vindicate their right without arriving at a settlement which Mr. Chou En-lai agreed was necessary?"

Brig. Gyan Singh's Comment:

The Leader of the Indian Expedition to Everest, Brig. Gyan Singh, said in Khatmandu on June 18 that he would consider it "reckless mountaineering" to send an assault team to the top of the world's highest peak at night (as the Chinese are reported to have done).

He made this statement when asked by a newsman whether, as leader of an Everest Expedition, he would undertake to climb it at night as the Chinese had done from the northern side.

He replied: "As a Brigadier planning a military operation I might do it, but not in mountaineering as a sport. The risks involved are great. Frost-bite due to the extremely low temperatures is one. Second, at night, you can't distinguish between bump and dip, crevasse and shadow. Climbing Everest without oxygen is not within the realm of possibility as yet, but like the four-minute mile and other fantastic feats performed by men it is not utterly improbable."

He successfully parried a question about the geographical positioning of the summit of Everest and said that the Nepalese Prime Minister should be asked this question. All that he could say was that he had received permission to climb Everest from the Nepalese Government.

On June 26, he told a news conference in New Delhi about the Chinese climb of Everest:

"It is not quite cricket for me to doubt it. If they've done it, they are better men. I would say with Hillary, 'a jolly good show'. Mountaineers have no politics. If we had met the Chinese on the summit we would have shaken hands with them. We would have had a summit meeting."

Scientists' Study Of Himalayas:

The New China News Agency reported on May 29 that 44 Chinese scientists had completed an intensive study of about 2,700 sq. miles of the Himalayas around Mount Everest.

It said that after an acclimatization period in Lhasa, the expedition covered the geography, geology, topography, meteorology, hydrology, contemporary glaciers and flora and fauna of the area north, east and west of Everest.

The scientists "braved rain and snow-storms, travelled long distances on horseback and on foot, and often camped on glaciers and snow slopes" as they carried out the survey.

(New China News Agency, The Hindu, Madras and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 859:NEP:A, 898:NEP:B, 3383:INI:A]

B. Anti-US Rally In Peking Over U-2 Spy-plane Incident: A mass rally, reportedly attended by 2,000,000 people, was held in Peking on May 20 to denounce the US Government and its policies.

Violent attacks on President Eisenhower calling him a "bandit ring-leader," "blood-stained butcher," "gangster" were proclaimed in banners carried by demonstrators.

The Premier, Mr. Chou En-lai, the Defence Minister, Marshal Lin Pi-ao, the Vice-Chairman, Madame Soong Ching-ling, and the General Secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee, Mr. Teng Hsiao-ping, headed the list of Communist Party and Government leaders who attended the demonstration.

One after another, the speakers, among them the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Shervonenko, denounced President Eisenhower's "provocation" in sending the U-2 plane over the Soviet Union and refusing to apologize for it.

At the rally, Mr. Kuo Mo Jo, Chairman of the World Peace Committee, said: "If US imperialism mistakes our sincere desire for peace as a sign of weakness and dares to continue its provocation it can be assured that it cannot escape its doom of being destroyed by the fire it plays with."

Yugoslavia, Britain and France were also denounced in connexion with the U-2 incident.

Mr. Teng Hsiao-ping, in an oblique attack on President Tito of Yugoslavia said: "Some people, while criticizing US espionage activities, were also saying that the Soviet Union was overdoing it. These people, whatever their capacity and whatever signboard they put up, cannot hide their true colours as servants of imperialism."

Mr. Shervonenko said that the Soviet Union had enough rockets to challenge any planes trying to invade Soviet skies as well as nations sending them or lending bases to them.

A similar, but smaller demonstration was reported from Ulan Bator, capital of Outer Mongolia, where Mr. Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Ambassador, condemned the US "aggressive act."

A Hsinhua News report on May 23 said that on the previous day (May 22), over 14,000,000 persons in 24 Chinese cities had taken part in demonstrations to express their opposition to the "US aggression and provocation" against the Soviet Union and its "sabotage" of the 'Summit' Conference.

In the north China port city of Tientsin, it said, parades of 2,000,000 people filled over a 50-kilometre stretch of road.

It added that the city was "shaken by the roars" of the demonstrators who shouted anti-American and pro-Soviet slogans.

It said that at a rally in Dairen the Mayor of the City, Mr. Hu Ming, called the US President, Mr. Eisenhower, as "the No I war-monger in the world."

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3370:AOA:A]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

C. Genocide In Tibet — Jurists' Legal Committee's Finding: According to a report submitted to the International Commission of Jurists by the Commission's nine-member Legal Inquiry Committee on Tibet, the Chinese authorities in Tibet had violated most of the human rights embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights—including the right to life itself.

The report said that widespread killings had taken place in Tibet which were unrelated to military action in suppression of the Tibetan uprising.

The Commission said in a statement on June 20 that its Legal Committee was concerned with three points: (1) whether genocide had been committed in Tibet; (2) whether human rights had been violated; and (3) Tibet's status in international law.

The Legal Committee found that acts of genocide had been committed in Tibet in an attempt to destroy the Tibetans as a religious group, but did not find sufficient proof of the destruction of Tibetans as a race, nation or ethnic group by methods that could be regarded as genocide under international law.

The Committee claimed, however, that four principal facts had been established by the evidence:

(1) The Chinese would not permit adherence to the practice of Buddhism in Tibet;

(2) They had systematically set out to eradicate this religious belief in Tibet;

(3) In pursuit of this aim, they had killed religious figures whose belief and practice was an encouragement and example to others; and

(4) They had forcibly transferred a large number of Tibetan children to a Chinese materialist environment to prevent them from having a religious upbringing.

Regarding Tibet's status in international law, the Committee found that although Tibet surrendered its de facto independence by signing in 1951 the "Agreement on peaceful measures for the liberation of Tibet" with the Chinese Government, the repudiation of this Agreement by Tibet in March 1959 restored the nation to its status of de facto independence. Tibet's repudiation of the Agreement had been justified, as undertakings given by the Chinese under the Agreement had been violated by them.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3035:INI:C]

D. F-M Montgomery's Visit: Field-Marshal Montgomery of Britain paid a visit to China from May 23 to 28 when he had talks with top Chinese leaders on world problems.

Significance was attached to the (private) visit because he was the only top dignitary from the West to visit Peking recently and have talks with Chinese leaders, including the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, and the Chairman of the Communist Party, Mr. Mao Tse-tung.

Mr. Chou En-lai gave a banquet in honour of F-M Montgomery in Peking on May 26 and, on the occasion, said that the Chinese people supported the efforts of F-M Montgomery to ease international tensions and secure world peace.

He said that F-M Montgomery's visit to China would help enhance the friendship between the peoples of China and of Britain and to improve relations between the two countries.

Replying, F-M Montgomery said: "After returning home, I shall lose no time in making it quite clear that ...we should all be friendly with New China."

He said that his visit had enabled him to correct the wrong impressions prevalent about New China.

F-M Montgomery visited Shanghai on May 27 when he called on Mr. Mao Tse-tung.

Back in London on June 1, he told newsmen at the airport that New China was "quite preferable" as compared to the old.

He said: "I formed the impression that there is a great deal of misconception in the West about New China as compared with the old.

"I am of the opinion that the New China is quite preferable. They have cleaned the country up and they have swept away corruption and bandits, and there are no teddy boys."

Describing his talks with Mr. Chou En-lai, he said: "I think he is most charming, very brilliant, a delightful person, with beautiful manners, and he is most courteous."

Asked whether he thought he was able to get the right impression of the country in the short space of time he was there, he replied: "On this issue, yes."

Asked if he thought People's China should be invited to the next 'summit' meeting, he replied: "Certainly".

On the subject of Formosa, he said: "I believe there should be one China, not two, and that China is the one which has its Government in Peking."

Writing the first of a series of articles on China in the June 11 issue of The Sunday Times, London, he said that there was a deadly hatred of USA and of everything American in China now.

This intense hatred, he added, seemed to have begun when a mission under General George Marshall was sent to China soon after the last War. According to the Chinese, it began a policy of "unwarranted interference in the affairs of another nation."

The hatred increased when USA "backed Japan and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and refused to speak to China."

About the relationship between China and Russia, he said that he had sometimes thought they might well come to blows one day. "But now I reckon I was wrong."

He said that Mr. Chou En-lai had been very insistent in telling him that if any nation attacked Russia, China would declare war on that nation at once.

He said he found Mr. Mao Tse-tung "a very delightful person to meet and talk with."

(China Today and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3163:CHI:A]

FORMOSA

A. Mr. D. D. Eisenhower's Visit: President D. D. Eisenhower of USA paid a goodwill visit to Formosa on June 18 and 19 when he had talks with President Chiang Kai-shek.

Mr. Eisenhower was given a hero's welcome on his arrival in Taipeh. About half-a-million people lined the Presidential route to cheer him.

In a welcome speech, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek told Mr. Eisenhower: "With half mankind enslaved and the free nations of the Far East under the constant threat of communist aggression, it behoves our two Governments to co-operate even more closely than ever before.

"Your visit is a powerful demonstration of the lasting friendship between the Republic of China and the United States."

Replying, Mr. Eisenhower said that he looked forward to a fruitful exchange of views with Gen. Chiang Kai-shek.

He saluted the Chinese on the rapid progress made and said: "Our friendship, tested in war as in peace, is a real source of strength in the development of free world security.

"The ideals we share, our common commitment to self-government in our respective countries, our aspiration for a world of freedom, just peace and friendship under the rule of law, all these demand of us—and of all the free world—increased vigilance and closer co-operation in the face of threats posed by communists.

"I bring you a personal assurance of America's steadfast solidarity with you and your Government in defence of these ideals and in pursuit of our common aspirations."

Public Reception:

Later, speaking at a public reception, Mr. Eisenhower re-affirmed American support for Kuomintang China.

He said: "The United States does not recognize the claim of the war-like and tyrannical communist regime in Peking to speak for all Chinese people. In United Nations, we support the Republic of China (KMT), a founding-member, as the only rightful representative of China in that organization.

"The American people admire your courage in striving so well to keep the cause of liberty alive here in Taiwan in face of the menacing power of the communist imperialism. Your accomplishments provide inspiration to us all.

"I have come as the representative of a country determined, despite all set-backs, to press on in the search of effective means to outlaw war and promote the rule of law among nations.

"You may be assured that our continuing search for peaceful solutions to outstanding international problems does not reflect the slightest lessening of our determination to stand with you and with all our free neighbours of the Pacific against any aggression."

Chinese Shelling Of Quemoy:

Meanwhile, from the mainland, the Chinese began a fierce bombardment of the Kuomintang-held off-shore island of Quemoy on June 17.

The Chinese official Hsinhua News said: "In support of the just struggle of the peoples of the Asian countries against Mr. Eisenhower's gangster trip, in support of the just struggle of our patriotic compatriots in Taiwan (Formosa), Penghu, Quemoy and Matsu against Mr. Eisenhower's gangster trip and to show the great Chinese people's contempt and scorn for Mr. Eisenhower, we have decided that, in accordance with the rule of shelling on odd days, on June 17, the eve of Mr. Eisenhower's arrival in Taiwan, and on June 19, the day of his departure from Taiwan, a demonstration of arms against the United States, shelling to welcome and see off Mr. Eisenhower, will be conducted at the Quemoy front.

"In the recent period, the US armed forces have continuously threatened and committed provocations against us. This decision of ours is solely to make a demonstration against US imperialism.

"All patriotic compatriots in Taiwan, Penghu, Quemoy and Matsu who are unwilling to give way to US pressure will certainly favour this.

"For your safety, advance notice is hereby given. During the period of shelling, be sure to take shelter in safe areas and do not come out so as to avoid accidental injury.

"Your vessels must also take care during these two days not to sail near the areas under fire, so as to avoid risks. Anyone who does not heed our advice but willingly acts as a cat's paw and dares to interfere with this great demonstration of arms against the United States will surely be severely punished. You have had advance warning."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Mr. J. Hagerty's Statement:

In Taipeh, the US President's Press Secretary, Mr. James Hagerty, issued a statement on June 18, which, he said, reflected Mr. Eisenhower's feelings.

He said: "The President of the United States is in the Far East on a goodwill mission and in the interests of world peace. Indiscriminate shelling of civilian establishments, of homes and hospitals should make it obvious to the peoples of the world that the communists are not interested in working either for goodwill or for world peace. This shelling shows the typical communist disregard for personal property and for human life and I would think the peoples of the world and world opinion would characterize this for just what it is—a deliberate and aggressive act by the communists."

Joint Communique:

In a joint communique issued in Taipeh on June 19, Mr. Eisenhower and President Chiang Kai-shek pledged that their Governments would "continue to stand solidly behind the KMT-United States Mutual Defence Treaty in meeting the challenge posed by the Chinese communists in this area."

The communique, published after President Eisenhower's departure for Korea on June 19, stressed the need for continued vigilance and firmness in the face of violence.

It deplored what was called the Chinese communists' barbaric practice in shelling and ruthlessly killing Chinese people on the offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

It also said that discussions were held between the two leaders on the importance of accelerating Formosa's economic development to enhance the well-being and prosperity of the people.

It added: "Gen. Chiang Kai-shek explained the steps his Government was taking towards this goal and President Eisenhower assured him that United States assistance would be continued.

"Gen. Chiang also expressed appreciation for the valuable assistance given by the United States to the Republic of China. President Eisenhower said that American people admired the progress made by the Republic of China in various fields in recent years.

"The two Presidents said that they were determined to continue to dedicate themselves to the principles of United Nations and would strive for closer co-operation between the Chinese and American people."

(The New York Times and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3354:FOR:A]

INDIA

SUMMARY: Mr. Nehru's Tour In West Asia; Bhutan's Letter To India; P-SP On Chinese Aggression; A-ICC Session In Poona; Inquiry Into Complaints Against Congressmen.

A. Mr. Nehru's Visits To Egypt, Turkey, Lebanon And Syria: The Prime Minister, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, arrived in Cairo from London on May 17 on a visit to Egypt at the invitation of the UAR Government.

The President of UAR, Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser, and his entire Cabinet were present at the airport to receive him. Col. Nasser embraced Mr. Nehru as he came out of his plane.

On the same day (May 17), Mr. Nehru proceeded to the site of the Aswan High Dam and detonated eight tons of dynamite, exploding a mound of rock to inaugurate the work on the diversion channel of the Dam.

In doing so, he said that the Aswan High Dam would bring prosperity to the Egyptian people.

Hundreds of wildly cheering Nubians greeted Mr. Nehru with slogans "Long live Nehru" as he inaugurated the diversion channel.

Later in the day (May 17), Mr. Nehru visited the Kima fertilizer factory, which has double the capacity of the Sindri Factory in India.

Col. Nasser and Mr. Nehru began their formal talks in Cairo at the President's Palace on May 19.

Those present at the talks were Mr. N. R. Pillai, Secretary-General of the Indian External Affairs Ministry, the Indian Ambassador to Egypt, Mr. R. K. Nehru, the Egyptian Foreign Minister, Dr. Mahmoud Fawzi, the Egyptian Minister for Presidential Affairs, Mr. Ali Sabri, and the Egyptian Ambassador to India, Mr. Ahmad Hasan L. Fekhi.

The four-mile drive from the Indian Embassy to the Presidential Palace was lined by crowds who cheered Mr. Nehru with cries of "Nehru Zindabad". Arches on the way carried placards in Hindi with the words: "Messenger of Peace, Welcome."

Earlier in the day (May 19), Mr. Nehru met over 200 Indian residents in Cairo on the Indian Embassy lawns. Some 500 Egyptian school children had gathered at the Embassy to greet Mr. Nehru who walked out to the lawns and mingled with them.

At Gaza:

Mr. Nehru proceeded to Gaza Strip on May 19 on a visit to the United Nations Emergency Force, one contingent of which is from India.

Accompanied by Lt.-Gen. P. S. Gyani, Commander of UNEF, Mr. Nehru was met by a guard of honour representing all contingents of the Force—Brazilian, Canadian, Danish, Indian, Norwegian, Swedish and Yugoslav.

Addressing the Indian contingent at Gaza on May 20, Mr. Nehru stressed the necessity of adopting a friendly and co-operative approach in tackling all important or unimportant problems.

He said: "I am very happy to have the chance of visiting this Gaza Strip of which I have heard for so long and to have a glimpse of the kind of work that this UN Emergency Force is doing here. I have found here, in spite of so many soldiers present in the Strip, an atmosphere of peace—not of war. And I have seen for myself how the United Nations has become a symbol of peace in this troubled world.

"We have a number of problems, some very serious and dangerous, in this world, but even these very serious problems have been to some extent kept in check by the activities of United Nations. Those problems will continue to pursue us, and I hope that the work of the United Nations trying to solve them and reduce the tensions that afflict us will more than meet with success".

On May 19, Israel demonstrated against Mr. Nehru's visit to Gaza when two Israeli Super-Mystere fighters circled over the United Nations aircraft carrying Mr. Nehru to Gaza.

The fighters flew low over Mr. Nehru's aircraft and then disappeared in Israeli territory.

Preliminary investigations carried out by UNEF showed that at least one of these Super-Mystere fighters violated Gaza air-space.

Major Ahmed Meneissi, UAR representative on the Mixed Armistice Commission, made an oral protest on the incident.

The same day (May 19), an Israeli military spokesman denied United Arab Republic allegations that three Israeli fighters had violated UAR air-space and flown over a plane carrying Mr. Nehru.

He added that an unidentified plane flew about one mile into Israeli air-space in the region of the Gaza Strip, and Israeli fighters took off to identify it. After the aircraft had been identified as a United Nations plane, they allowed it to proceed.

After his plane had landed, Mr. Nehru was informed about Israeli planes flying over it, but he made no comment and remained unmoved.

From the airport, Mr. Nehru drove to the Gaza Legislative Assembly where he was presented with a Palestine national flag, a map of Palestine and a hand-woven table cloth and sheet made by refugee girls and men.

Later Mr. Nehru visited the Armistice demarcation line guarded by men of the 4th Kumaon Regiment.

Mr. Nehru stood right on the Armistice line and had a good glimpse of the terrain and the problems of protecting the sprawling sandy border with Israel.

Back In Egypt:

Back in Egypt later on May 20, Mr. Nehru told a gathering of 10,000 Egyptian peasants at Inchass, 40 miles outside Cairo, that India attached great importance to co-operatives in all fields because, on them depended the prosperity of the country.

The meeting was organized by the agricultural co-operatives formed under Col. Nasser's agrarian reforms.

Mr. Nehru said: "I shall carry with me memories of this visit to your place. Everywhere your President and I had a tremendous welcome. I shall always remember this, and I shall convey this affection and friendship to our farmers in India.

"In India, we are ourselves trying to raise the standard of our peasantry so that through their work our country may profit. I do believe the progress of a country depends on the foundation of a good and prosperous peasantry."

President Nasser, who accompanied Mr. Nehru during his tour throughout the morning of May 20, said that on his recent tour of India he came in contact with Indian people and realized "the friendship of the glorious Indian people and their feeling for the people of UAR."

He added: "I hope today, with the warm welcome you gave, Premier Nehru would realize the friendship of our people towards the friendly people of India."

Mr. Nehru visited several co-operative centres and saw their working.

Earlier, he visited the Delta Barrage on the Nile, 16 miles outside Cairo.

Joint Communique:

Mr. Nehru and President Nasser issued a joint communique on May 20 expressing regret at the failure of the 'Summit' Conference.

The following is the text of the communique:

"We have been deeply distressed to learn of the failure of the 'Summit' Conference in Paris. This long-awaited Conference had

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

aroused the hopes of mankind, and people in all countries had looked forward to some effective steps being taken by this Conference towards the stoppage of nuclear tests and an advance towards the general disarmament and lessening of tensions that have afflicted the world and come in the way of co-operation and progress.

"It has been generally recognized that peace and ending of the 'cold war' are essential for a progressive solution of the world problems and for the progress of the industrially under-developed countries.

"The collapse of the 'Summit' Conference even before it had applied itself to these problems came, therefore, as a shock everywhere. The apprehension that this may lead to the intensification of 'cold war' and even more active concentration on armaments is particularly distressing.

"Peace is essential for the world. For countries like UAR, India and others struggling for progress and betterment of the lot of the people, peace is a paramount necessity as no effective progress can be made in an atmosphere of conflict and 'cold war'. The real and basic problems of the world today are the maintenance of the independence and integrity of all the States and the application of world's resources towards the development of all the nations and peoples and, more particularly, those who have suffered for long from under-development.

"We deeply regret, therefore, the failure of the 'Summit' Conference. We realize that particular responsibility in regard to peace and war rests on the Great Powers which have developed industrially and technologically and in the production of terrible weapons of modern warfare. But this responsibility is not confined to them. It is the responsibility shared by all countries and peoples alike, for the fate of every country is involved in the proper solution of the vital and terrible question of peace and war. It is of utmost importance that the set-back resulting from the failure of the 'Summit' Conference should not be allowed to worsen the present international situation. Otherwise, this can only lead to the intensification of the 'cold war' and the possibility of a dreadful war which would put an end to all hopes of progress and, indeed, lead to world disaster of which it is difficult even to measure the terrible consequences.

"Every nation, whether big or small, must bear its full share of responsibility for the world situation. We should appeal, therefore, to all leaders and nations of the world to stand firm against any deterioration in the international situation and to spare no effort in the service of the noble cause of peace and the building of a world community of nations. To this great cause, we dedicate ourselves anew and pledge the support of our countries."

In Turkey:

Mr. Nehru arrived in Ankara by air from Cairo on May 20.

He was welcomed at the airport by the Turkish Prime Minister, Mr. Adnan Menderes, and the Foreign Minister, Mr. Fatin Zorlu, and other Government leaders.

Some hundred Turkish peasants from the neighbouring villages, brought to the airport in trucks, crowded the tarmac of the airfield. The airport building was decorated with an immense Indian flag flanked on both sides by Turkish flags.

On arrival in Ankara airport, Mr. Nehru told newsmen: "I want to express my thanks to the Turkish Government, which offered me the opportunity of this visit. I hope to see many things and meet many people during this trip, despite its brevity."

Police used tear-gas to disperse demonstrators as Mr. Menderes and Mr. Nehru drove through Ankara.

[Demonstrations against the Turkish Government had been going on for several days in Ankara and other cities].

A demonstration broke out in the city's main boulevard when the crowd which had gathered to greet Mr. Nehru broke through the heavily-armed police and Army cordons a few moments after Mr. Nehru's car had passed. The police cleared the street by throwing some 20 tear-gas shells. When the police took several demonstrators into custody, the crowd rescued the arrested demonstrators from the hands of the police.

Mr. Nehru called on Mr. Menderes and Mr. Fatin Zorlu on May 21 and discussed with them the international situation.

According to Ankara despatches, these discussions were regarded as significant in view of the collapse of the 'Summit' Conference and the joint communique issued on May 20 by Mr. Nehru and President Nasser calling upon leaders of all nations to stand firm against any worsening of the international situation and work for the cause of peace.

Earlier in the day (May 21), Mr. Nehru placed a wreath at the mausoleum of Kemal Ataturk.

News Conference:

Later on May 21, he addressed a news conference.

A journalist of the Turkish Opposition Press presented Mr. Nehru with a shirt which once belonged to Kemal Ataturk. The presentation was made in the name of the Turkish Opposition leader, Mr. Ismet Inonu.

Mr. Nehru read out at the news Conference the joint communique issued by him and President Nasser on the failure of the 'Summit' Conference. [Upto May 21, the communique was not published in the Turkish Press.]

Answering a question whether he would mediate between the East and the West now that the 'Summit' had failed, he firmly rejected the idea with a positive "No".

He said: There is no question of mediation. My problem is the economic development of India, which greatly interests me. It is a big enough problem for me in India.

"It is very easy to blame or condemn this or that which had happened during the past fortnight. But the point is whether, in doing so, we are aiming at some achievement or merely giving angry reactions to events. It is more important what happens in the future, which we might be able to shape, than what has happened in the past. We cannot undo it."

He refused to be drawn into local issues in Turkey.

On the evening of May 21, the Indian Ambassador in Ankara held a reception in honour of Mr. Nehru.

Among the distinguished guests were the Turkish Foreign Minister and Trade Minister who attended on behalf of their Government, and the Turkish Opposition leader, Mr. Ismet Inonu. He had a brief talk with Mr. Inonu and warmly shook hands with him as he escorted him to his car.

Before he left for Istanbul, Mr. Nehru laid the foundation stone for the new premises of the Indian Embassy in Ankara.

In Istanbul:

Mr. Nehru arrived in Istanbul from Ankara on May 22.

At a banquet given in his honour by the Turkish Foreign Minister, Mr. Fatin Zorlu, on May 22, Mr. Nehru referred to the universal desire for peace and said that in spite of this desire there was constant danger and fear of war.

The best way to overcome these fears, he said, was for nations to respect each other's rights and not to interfere in each other's affairs. No country should try to impose its wishes by force.

There might be some differences in the policies of Turkey and India, "but I have observed here that these differences are less than I have thought. What we have in common is much more." In any case, it was India's and Turkey's desire to do everything within their power for the preservation of peace.

Earlier, welcoming Mr. Nehru, Mr. Fatin Zorlu said: "We are bound by the principles which will lead humanity to a brighter future."

Mr. Nehru spent most of May 23 sight-seeing in Istanbul.

He visited the famous Sophia Mosque, the Blue Mosque, the old Imperial Palace and other places of architectural beauty.

He drove through the narrow cobbled lanes and streets of Istanbul and after the sight-seeing went to a restaurant down-town for a quiet lunch.

In the afternoon (May 23), he drove along the Bosphorus to the Black Sea where he dined later and saw a performance of Turkish folk dancing.

The following day, he went out on a cruise on the Bosphorus.

Joint Communique:

In a joint communique issued in Istanbul on May 23, Mr. Nehru and the Turkish Prime Minister, Mr. Adnan Menderes, re-affirmed the adherence of their countries to the principles adopted at the Bandung Conference.

The following is the text of the communique:

"The Prime Minister of India, returning the visit to India of the Turkish Prime Minister in 1958, is now paying a visit to Turkey lasting from May 20 to 24. During his stay in Ankara, he had talks with the Prime Minister of Turkey, His Excellency Mr. Adnan Menderes, and Turkish Foreign Minister, His Excellency Mr. Fatin Zorlu.

"These talks were friendly and covered many matters of common concern, including problems of economic development of mutual interest to the two countries. During these talks, the two Prime Ministers recalled with pleasure the co-operation between their two countries at the Bandung Conference and re-affirmed their adherence to the principles adopted at Bandung.

"Overshadowing all other problems of world concern is the failure of the 'Summit' Conference and its possible repercussions on the international situation. This Conference had evoked the liveliest expectations of men of peace and goodwill all over the world.

"While it was realized that the problems of the world could not be solved at one conference, it had been hoped that even at this 'Summit' Conference some effective steps would have been taken towards general disarmament under an appropriate system of control and a reduction of international tensions.

"Such a step would have paved the way to some extent and created a favourable atmosphere for the progressive solution of the world's problems. It would have led to greater concentration of the progress and development of the less industrially-developed countries of the world which is a question of vital importance today.

"It is, therefore, a matter of deep regret to the two Prime Ministers that the 'Summit' Conference should have ended in failure. But no such temporary failure can be accepted as the final result of efforts for peace. The logic of circumstances and the earnest wishes of mankind demand peace. Not to succeed in this great venture is failure of humanity itself.

"While there are political and economic differences in the structure of various countries, the demand for peace is common to all, and attempts at peaceful solutions must, therefore, be pursued, regardless of temporary set-backs or differences in outlook. A peaceful world necessarily involves peaceful relations between the different nations.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Although in the circumstances of today the determination of the issues of peace and war rests in a special measure on the Great Powers, the two Prime Ministers consider that all countries and people are affected by these issues and must share the responsibility.

"The fate of every country hangs on a proper solution of the vital and terrible question of peace and war. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that every nation, small or big, should make its full contribution to the furtherance of the cause of peace.

"The Prime Minister of India expressed his happiness at visiting Turkey and his grateful appreciation of the warm reception accorded him. Both Prime Ministers expressed their gratification at the opportunity which this visit has afforded them of meeting together and exchanging views on matters of current interest on a friendly basis."

In Lebanon:

Mr. Nehru arrived in Beirut, capital of the Lebanon, from Istanbul on May 24.

He was welcomed at the airport by the Lebanese Prime Minister, Mr. Ahmed Daouk, and the Foreign Minister, Mr. Philippe Takla, and members of the diplomatic corps.

A bouquet of red roses was presented to Mr. Nehru on behalf of the Lebanese President, Mr. Fuad Chehab.

About a thousand members of the Indian community were present at the airport to greet him.

After inspecting a guard of honour, Mr. Nehru drove to the city. People gathered at various points along the route and shouted "Nehru Zindabad." One other slogan they shouted was: "Welcome Nehru, father of all Arabs."

On May 25, Mr. Nehru had an hour's official talk with President Fuad Chehab and the Prime Minister of Lebanon, Mr. Ahmed Daouk, on the international situation following the collapse of the 'Summit' Conference.

They also discussed inter-Arab relations.

After the talks, Mr. Nehru joined other guests at a luncheon given in his honour by President Chehab.

Earlier in the day (May 25), he spent an hour with members of the Indian community who met him at his hotel. On behalf of the Indians in Lebanon, he was presented with a bar of gold for the Prime Minister's Relief Fund.

An Indian merchant presented Mr. Nehru with a map of India outlined with pearls.

An American tourist sitting in the lobby of the hotel said on meeting Mr. Nehru: "You are a man of peace. We in America want peace. Why don't you do something about it?"

In the morning, Mr. Nehru spent an hour visiting the local museum which contains the remains of Phoenician and Roman civilizations.

Address To Students:

Addressing a gathering of over 5,000 students and guests in the American University in Beirut on May 25, Mr. Nehru declared that in the present international situation, it was paramount that countries employed right means to achieve their ends.

He illustrated his point by drawing attention to India's struggle for independence and said that Mahatma Gandhi believed that means were even more important than the ends.

He said that Mahatma Gandhi refused to employ wrong means to attain noble ends and the result was that when India gained independence—the British were wise enough to concede independence before it was too late—there was no legacy of bitterness, and India and Britain today were friends.

He advised students to think of the current problems in a long perspective and develop an integrated view of life, which was becoming difficult in an age of increasing specialization. A sense of purpose and function was important in providing this integration.

Later in the day (May 25), he attended a reception given in his honour by the Lebanese Prime Minister, Mr. Ahmed Daouk.

In Syria:

Mr. Nehru received a warm welcome from a cheering crowd when he drove into flag-bedecked Damascus on May 26.

The crowd shouted slogans in favour of Arab-Indian friendship proclaiming Mr. Nehru and President Gamal Abdel Nasser as "the champions of positive neutralism".

Mr. Nehru was welcomed at the Syrian-Lebanese frontier by Marshal Abdel Hakim Amer, Vice-President of UAR.

Also at the frontier to welcome Mr. Nehru were Mr. Shukry El Kuwatly, first citizen of UAR, Mr. Nureddine Kahale, President of the Executive Council, Ministers, First Deputy Commander of the Arab Army and senior officers.

Mr. Nehru flew into Palmyra, 150 miles from Damascus, on May 27 to see the ruins of a civilization that existed 1,000 years before Christ. Here, an excited Bedouin kissed Mr. Nehru on the cheek and wished him success in his peace efforts.

On May 28, Mr. Nehru visited the age-old Omayed Mosque built in the 7th century by Omayed, a Caliph who was the first to rule the Arab world with Damascus as his capital.

As part of his sight-seeing tour of Damascus, Mr. Nehru also saw the tomb of the famed Arab hero. Saladin, Sultan of Egypt and Syria, who defeated the crusaders in the 13th century.

The previous night, he called on the ailing former Syrian Premier, Mr. Faris el Khury, who was confined to bed following a leg fracture.

During the previous two days, the Syrian Press had editorially welcomed Mr. Nehru's visit and acclaimed him as "one of the best friends of the Arabs in the whole world."

News Conference:

Addressing a news conference in Damascus on May 28, Mr. Nehru said that he was satisfied with the recent Conference of Commonwealth Prime Ministers, which he attended in London, because the policy of racial discrimination was condemned unanimously by it.

He said that the Commonwealth leaders did not discuss the Palestine question and only discussed European, Asian and African questions in general terms.

He said that it was not his business to make any comments on recent events in Turkey. It was not his custom to interfere in the domestic affairs of other countries.

He thought, however, that the events which had just taken place in Turkey (military coup) did not constitute a direct gain for the policy of positive neutrality, but they were probably an indirect gain as can happen under such circumstances.

Commenting on the UN Security Council resolution urging the Big Powers to resume discussions on common problems as soon as possible, he said: "Broadly speaking, it is obviously desirable that talks should continue between the Great Powers because we cannot accept a final break.

"Some time or other, there will have to be talks on major questions including disarmament—when and how, I cannot say.

"Therefore, I am glad that the Security Council laid stress on it."

Replying to a question if it was desirable for neutral leaders—Mr. Nehru, President Nasser and Marshal Tito—to meet to discuss the failure of the 'Summit' Conference, he said: "There is no such proposal and I rather doubt if any such conference in the near future is needed.

"We, of course, agree very largely. I met President Nasser recently, and although I have not met Marshal Tito lately, we keep in touch.

"The problem is between the Big Powers who met and parted. Others can only help. If we indulge in condemnation, it may be justified, but it does not help. That is why that in the joint communique which Col. Nasser and I issued recently from Cairo we expressed our sorrow at the failure of the 'Summit' Conference. We have not condemned anybody but expressed the hope that some effective steps may be taken."

Mr. Nehru returned to New Delhi on May 29.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo, The Times, London and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3289:INI:B]

B. Bhutan And Chinese Aggression—Letter To India: The Bhutanese concern over the growing Chinese threat from Tibet was reflected in a two-day debate on defence and foreign affairs in the Tsongdu (Bhutanese Parliament) which concluded in Paro on May 24.

The debate culminated in the signing and sealing of a letter to the Government of India protesting against Chinese "cartographic aggression."

The letter was signed by Mr. Thin Ley, Speaker of the Tsongdu, who is also Chief Secretary of the Bhutanese Government and a member of the Maharaja's Council of Advisers.

The Tsongdu debate and the signing-and-sealing ceremony were watched by the five-member Indian parliamentary delegation to Bhutan and a group of visiting newsmen representing Indian, American and British newspapers and agencies, the first group of foreigners ever to watch the Tsongdu proceedings.

The letter renewed its protest against the continued publication of Chinese maps showing large chunks of Bhutanese territory within Tibet and urged India to seek rectification of the "cartographic aggression" from China.

The Tsongdu further wanted to know from India if the Chinese Government had replied to its earlier protest against the same cartographic aggression.

[The Bhutanese Government had sent its protest through India since, under the 1949 Indo-Bhutanese Treaty, Bhutan is guided by India in her foreign affairs.]

The Bhutanese letter also pointed out an error in the common boundary between India and Bhutan in a map included in the Government of India's recently published White Paper. The map was not displayed in the Tsongdu, but the letter said that the boundary had been shown by a thin line as those separating Indian States. It should have been shown thicker as an international boundary.

Letter To Mr. Nehru:

Another letter, ceremonially signed and sealed by the Speaker in the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Tsongdu, was addressed to Mr. Nehru personally.

In this letter, the Tsongdu expressed its thanks for sending the Indian parliamentary delegation.

The visit, it said, would further strengthen Indo-Bhutanese ties and enable the people of India to learn more about Bhutan's problems and aspirations.

Implications of Letter:

Mr. Thin Ley later explained to newsmen the implications of the references to the Indo-Bhutanese border in the Tsongdu's letter to the Government of India.

He said that the Government had drawn the attention of the Tsongdu to the map in the White Paper published in November, 1959 and, since then, members had expressed some concern about it. There was no hostility in pointing out the error. It was possible that India had drawn the map only as a warning to China that India was concerned about Bhutan's defence but even for this Bhutan should have been consulted.

[While on the question of Bhutan's foreign policy, it is noteworthy that there was some reference during the Tsongdu debates to a letter which Mr. Nehru had written to the Bhutanese Government in 1959. Following a statement in Calcutta by Sardar D. K. Sen, Constitutional Adviser to the Bhutanese Government, in 1959, that Bhutan would like to establish direct relations with some of the bigger nations like America, Britain and Russia, Mr. Jigme Dorji, Prime Minister of Bhutan, had talks with Mr. Nehru in New Delhi. After these discussions, Mr. Nehru formally wrote to the Government of Bhutan that it would be inadvisable for Bhutan to establish direct contacts with foreign Powers. The Bhutanese Parliament took the view that the Bhutanese Government was obliged to agree to Mr. Nehru's advice under the 1949 Treaty and the Government would, therefore, abide by it. The Tsongdu, however, maintained that the Bhutanese Government had a right, in theory at least, to establish direct relations with countries other than India even while conducting its foreign relations with India's guidance.]

The question of theoretical right of establishing direct relations with foreign countries was raised again in the Tsongdu on May 24 by some members. Since India had not replied to the Tsongdu's letter on the subject so far, the discussion remained inconclusive.

It was also stated that the Government of Bhutan had requested India to sponsor her membership to the International Postal Union.

Defence Position:

The trend of discussions in the Tsongdu on defence made it amply clear that Bhutan relies wholly, for the present at any rate, on India's protection. The Bhutanese Government is trying to raise a modern army of its own which would necessarily take some years to take shape.

Bhutan has also strengthened her patrols. She has closed her northern passes to Tibet. This has resulted in some dislocation of trade.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Jigme Dorji, told the visiting newsmen that Bhutan was forced to take the step as a defensive measure because, in 1959, Bhutanese traders who had gone to Tibet were systematically subjected to anti-Bhutanese propaganda by the Chinese. Evidently, the Chinese tried to get some stooges, but they did not succeed.

Relationship With India:

Mr. Dorji was asked the following questions by newsmen on Bhutan's relationship with India:

Q: "If you have to follow India's advice, what use or purpose is it for you to have ambassadorial relations with other countries?"

Mr. Dorji: "If we (India and Bhutan) don't agree, the matter has to be referred to a tribunal. It is all a question of a right which we possess."

A correspondent said that the 1949 Treaty with India itself said nothing of the status of Bhutan specifically.

Mr. Dorji: "We don't consider ourselves to be the Protectorate of India. We consider ourselves independent. But, we are not 100 per cent independent because of the 1949 Treaty."

Q: "Would you say in point of fact that co-operation and association between India and Bhutan have been much closer than the formal wording of the Treaty?"

Mr. Dorji: "Yes, much closer. All this sounds anti-Indian, the way we have been discussing. It is not true at all. Our co-operation with India has been far, far closer than ever before."

Q: "Do you feel that India's grant of asylum to the Dalai Lama has made Bhutan come closer to India?"

Mr. Dorji replied that that did not have much significance.

(The Times of India and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2856:INI:A]

C. Chinese Ban Pilgrimages To Kailash: New Delhi Press reports quoting official sources said on June 15 that the Chinese authorities in Lhasa had informed the Indian Consul-General there that it would not be advisable for pilgrims to go to Mount Kailash and Mansarovar this year.

Under the Sino-Indian Agreement of 1954, pilgrims from India may visit Kailash and Mansarovar "in accordance with custom." But, in recent years, pilgrims found it increasingly difficult to travel to these places and the Government of India had occasion to protest against the harassment of pilgrims by the Chinese authorities.

In 1959, the Indian Consul-General in Lhasa was asked by the Chinese Foreign Bureau to caution Indian pilgrims not to proceed on pilgrimage to these places in view of the military operations being launched against rebels by the Chinese forces in western Tibet.

In a Note to China in 1959, the Government of India stated that in accordance with the wishes of the Chinese Government, all intending Indian pilgrims were warned not to undertake pilgrimages to Kailash and Mansarovar during the season but, at the same time, it hoped that when conditions returned to normal, the facilities which the Indian nationals had traditionally enjoyed of visiting the two places would be restored.

(The Hindustan Times, Delhi and The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3300:INI:A]

D. P-SP Executive On Chinese Aggression: The National Executive of the Praja-Socialist Party met in Bangalore from June 6 to 8 and reviewed the national and international situation.

One of the important resolutions it adopted was on the Sino-Indian border dispute. It said:

"The National Executive of the Praja—Socialist Party has noted with grave concern the fact that relations between India and China have deteriorated further. The much-advertised talks between the Prime Ministers of the two countries failed not only to produce a satisfactory settlement, but even to create a friendly atmosphere, in which fruitful discussion would become possible. The subsequent utterances of Mr. Chou En-lai, the Chinese claim to Mount Everest and the moving into Tibet of large masses of troops and equipment under the pretext of quelling the Tibetan insurrection go to emphasize what has been obvious for the last many years that the communist Government of China never sincerely believed in Panch Shila.

"The National Executive takes the view that the hardening of the attitude of the Chinese communists and their recent aggressiveness and arrogance are indications of an attempt to give a new turn to the world strategy of international communism. The slogan of co-existence may soon give place to the slogan of liberation of the remaining world. This need not mean a full-scale war, which the communist countries perhaps would like to avoid, but it would certainly mean a fresh wave of slanderous attacks against nations that dare to counter their aggressive designs, the use of economic and other sanctions, and a directive to the communist parties in all countries to step up their disruptive activities. Viewed against this background, the Chinese actions no longer remain a Chinese puzzle but fall neatly into the global design, which is sought to be evolved.

"The National Executive of the Praja-Socialist Party, therefore, feels that utmost efforts must be made to make the people of India aware of the details as well as the design of the communist strategy. The country can be made safe for democracy only to the extent that the ordinary citizen is conscious of his sovereign rights and equally conscious of his duty to safeguard the higher sovereignty of his country, of which his rights are only a part.

"We must realize that the two-pronged propaganda of the Communist Party of India and their allies that no communist country can ever commit aggression and, in any event, what can India do against the armed might of communist China is intended, first, to put us off our guard, and, secondly, to undermine our morale. Never must we give up our stand that no settlement between India and China would be possible until China vacates aggression on our soil. In addition, because of the prominent role it has played in the anti-colonial struggle during the last hundred years India must seek to establish closer relations with all nations in Afro-Asia, particularly with those recently liberated from the clutches of 'Western Imperialism', with a view to resisting the communist offensive. Only by standing firm on our rights and by creating a feeling of solidarity and strength amongst our neighbours in Africa and Asia can we safeguard the freedom of this part of the world from the designs of the Power Blocs."

Punjabi Suba Agitation:

Another resolution concerning the Punjabi Suba agitation said:

"The National Executive of the Praja-Socialist Party is deeply disturbed over the arrest of the leaders of the Akali Dal, detention of Master Tara Singh, seizure of several newspapers and widespread repression let loose on the people of the Punjab. Even those who oppose the formation of the Punjabi Suba must realize that administrative severity and destruction of the civil liberties of the supporters of Punjabi Suba are likely to intensify the agitation and impart to their determination a new firmness. Demands with deep emotional involvement have to be settled at some stage, and such settlement becomes more difficult if they are countered by massive repression.

"The P-SP has always supported the demand for linguistic States, and consistent with its policy, the Executive cannot ignore the demand for the formation of Punjabi Suba. The Executive is not unaware of the complexities of the problem, but it is firmly of the opinion that these can be resolved only if we adhere to our principles and policies.

"The Executive appeals to the protagonists of the Punjabi Suba to adopt, in the face of repression, all peaceful methods of agitation.

"Strict adherence to peaceful and non-violent methods assume special significance in view of the aggression on our borders and because it is necessary to win the support of all sections of the people in the region and outside the Punjab to this demand."

The National Executive also approved the decision taken by its

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Maharashtra branch to dissociate itself from the Samyukta Maharashtra Samiti.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3166:INI:C]

E. Agreement With Soviet Union On Oil Exploration: An Indo-Soviet Agreement for technical collaboration on oil exploration was signed by the representatives of the two Governments in New Delhi on June 16.

The Agreement covered the utilization of 277 million roubles (Rs. 33 crores) allocated to oil exploration out of the 1,500 million roubles (Rs. 180 crores) of Soviet credit to India for the Third Five-Year Plan.

The credit was extended to India under an Agreement signed between the two Governments in September, 1959.

An additional Agreement was signed on February 12, 1960 determining the list of enterprises as well as the nature and volume of technical assistance required for the enterprises to be financed by the credit.

The latest Agreement was meant to implement the additional Agreement.

The Government of India had nominated the Oil and Natural Gas Commission as the Indian party for implementing the Agreement. The agency nominated by the USSR Government was the Techno-export, Moscow.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3189:INI:B]

F. UN Special Fund Aid For India: The United Nations Special Fund's session met at UN Headquarters in New York from May 25 to 27.

At the end of the session, the Managing Director of the Fund, Mr. Paul G. Hoffman, announced that an allocation of $5,160,000 towards five major development projects in India had been approved by the Governing Council of the Fund.

The projects were: (1) Central Public Health Engineering Research Institute, Nagpur, with field centres in Delhi, Hyderabad, Poona and Bombay; (2) Fisheries Training Institute to be established either in Bombay or Cochin; (3) Provision of equipment for the new Central Mining Research Institute; (4) Execution of a survey of the water supply resources of Greater Calcutta; and (5) Survey of potential hydro-power sites.

Addressing the Governing Council of the Special Fund on May 25, Mr. A. K. Maitra (India) said that the Special Fund should convert itself into a Capital Development Fund.

He added that the Special Fund was at present primarily dealing with smaller projects to create conditions for capital investment.

He also urged the establishment of institutes for the training of technical and other personnel. These could be useful for West Africa as well.

India's Permanent Representative at UN, Mr. C. S. Jha, was elected Chairman of the Special Fund for economic development projects on May 25.

Mr. Egidio Ortona (Italy) was elected First Vice-Chairman, and Dr. Hector Bernardo (Argentina) Second Vice-Chairman.

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3142:INI:E]

G. Indian Investment Centre—Agreement With USA: The Governments of India and the United States signed an Agreement on June 20 for establishing an Indian Investment Centre in New Delhi.

Under the Agreement, assistance valued at about Rs. 59,10,000 would be made available to the Centre through the US Technical Co-operation Mission.

Of the total, Rs. 34,00,000 would come from TCM to cover foreign exchange costs, while local costs of Rs. 25,00,000 would be covered from the sale proceeds of US agricultural commodities supplied to India.

The purpose of the Centre would be to promote the flow of foreign private investment capital into India. It would provide the technical facilities required for capital sources, preparing prospectuses and assisting negotiations.

It would be a non-profit registered society.

The TCM aid would cover salaries for the services of five foreign technicians and short-term experts, costs for the purchase outside India of various equipment and the establishment of a reference library.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2602:INI:F, 3063:INI:D]

H. US Loan For Small-scale Industries: The United States Development Loan Fund approved on June 17 a $10,000,000 loan to help small business concerns in India in procuring equipment under a rental-purchase plan.

The loan would be made to the National Small-scale Industries Corporation.

A Washington announcement said: "Under the loan, DLF funds are to be used to meet foreign exchange costs of capital equipment and related materials and services which will be made available through rental-purchase agreements to private borrowers for projects which will contribute to the basic economic development of India."

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2759:INI:C]

I. Shipping Of US Wheat Supplies: The Central Minister for Transport, Mr. Raj Bahadur, who had just returned from a tour of Europe and USA, told newsmen in New Delhi on June 10 that during his talks with officials of the US Commerce Department in Washington he had established India's right to carry half of the 17 million tons of foodgrains to be supplied to India under the recent Indo-US Agreement (page 3354).

Under US Public Law, he said, half of the 1,500 ships that would transport the 17 million tons of foodgrains from USA to India have to be those under the American flag. India would carry the remaining 750 shiploads either by chartering grain tankers or by buying them. The Government of India was investigating the possibility of credit and loan arrangements for this purpose.

To be able to undertake this, the country would need 60 grain tankers as against its present fleet of three. The private sector could play a notable part in helping the country meet the situation.

The average cost of transporting grain was expected to be £3 per ton.

He said that the allocation for shipping in the Third Plan, previously fixed at Rs. 55 crores, was now likely to be increased to Rs. 80 crores. With the additional shipping funds that would be available, this figure would be nearer Rs. 86 crores.

Indian shipping, he said, was likely to reach the 1.3 million ton target by the end of the Third Plan as against the 1.422 million ton target set by the National Shipping Board. The country's shipping tonnage by the end of the Second Plan would be 900,000 GRT.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3354:INI:A]

J. A-ICC Session: The All-India Congress Committee met in Poona on June 4 and 5.

Addressing the delegates on the opening day, the Congress President, Mr. N. Sanjiva Reddy, made a reference to the existence of differences among the rank and file and also at Pradesh levels in the Congress and said that these differences were weakening the organization.

He said that opposition parties were taking advantage of this weakness in the Congress. The Press tended to magnify the shortcomings of the organization. These differences were, however, superficial. It was necessary to build up the organizational structure of the Congress, particularly because of the Chinese aggression against the northern borders.

It was unfortunate, he said, that after the recent Nehru-Chou En-lai meeting, Mr. Chou En-lai "became angry" at the mention of the word "aggression". India had never left any doubt that it regarded the Chinese incursions into the border areas as aggression and, in fact, the last Congress session at Bangalore had passed a resolution stating categorically that China had committed aggression and asking her to vacate the aggression.

In a passing reference to Goa, he said that the Government of India's approach to the problem was prompted by the desire to avoid force. But that did not mean that India would surrender its claim to Goa. Similarly, in regard to the Chinese border aggression, while India desired peace, it would not countenance aggression.

He added that the creation of Maharashtra and Gujerat had restored Congress prestige in Maharashtra.

Debate On Party Re-organization:

The debate on the report of the Congress Re-organization Committee was initiated by Mr. U. N. Dhebar, who had presided over it.

Mr. Dhebar explained the various proposals which had come up for consideration before the Committee and why it decided on accepting some and rejecting others.

Dual leadership in the party, he said, served a two-fold purpose. While the Parliamentary wing carried the decisions and policies of the Government to the people, the organizational wing conveyed to the Government the impact those policies had made on the people. This link between the Government and the masses was a vital one and no party in power could afford to break it. The successful functioning of the link depended on the quality of the workers and the leadership.

Mr. K. Hanumanthaiya proposed that the elective principle should be introduced in forming the Working Committee.

Several other delegates spoke in his support. They also expressed themselves against the evil of bogus membership. Some of them urged that the "organizational wing" of the party should be supreme and not the "parliamentary wing."

Intervening in the debate, Mr. Nehru said that the proposal to have a nominated Working Committee like a nominated Cabinet had strong reasons behind it and, in fact, that had been the practice of the Congress all along. Nevertheless, as many members wished to have an elective element, he saw no harm in accepting the proposal and he suggested to the Working Committee to consider the matter afresh.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The next day (June 5), when voting came, he alone among top Congress leaders voted for Mr. Hanumanthaiya's proposal and it was declared lost by a show of hands, 55 for and 95 against. A second counting resulted in 78 for and 148 against, with six abstentions.

The voting was preceded by uproarious scenes. Several members raised points of order on the procedure for putting the proposal to vote.

Utter confusion prevailed for some time when Mr. Dhebar announced that the voting would be on a specific proposal that one-third of the members of the Working Committee should be elected.

Later, at a closed meeting, the A-ICC approved the following recommendations of the Working Committee—that the leadership of the Legislature parties and the organization should continue to be separate, that the four-anna membership should continue, that there should be no change in the term of office of party office-bearers and no rigidity about the term of office of Ministers, that co-opted members should have no voting rights, that arrangements should be made to give special representation in the A-ICC to the Congress Parliamentary Party and the Congress Legislature parties in the States.

Five-Man Committee's Report And Decisions Thereon:

The five-man Committee appointed by the Congress Working Committee to go into the various suggestions for organizational changes submitted its report on January 15—rejecting the proposal to merge the leadership of the organizational and parliamentary wings of the party.

[This suggestion had been made by Mr. K. Hanumanthaiya in his report on the Congress constitution.]

The Committee, which consisted of Mr. U. N. Dhebar, Mr. Jagjivan Ram, Mr. S. K. Patil, Mr. C. Subramaniam and Mr. Sadiq Ali, also rejected the suggestion to have an indirectly elected Working Committee.

It said that the President, who still occupied a unique position in the organization, should have a Committee of his own choice. The Working Committee should be treated as on a par with a Cabinet, which is nominated by the Leader of a party. Moreover, the Working Committee, as at present constituted, was the only stabilizing factor in the organization.

Admitting that a great deal of primary membership in the Congress was fraudulent, it said that it would have liked to abolish it but for the necessity of maintaining mass contact. It, therefore, suggested the appointment of a small Committee to go into this matter.

Mr. Hanumanthaiya's suggestion that enrolment should be by committees at public meetings did not find favour with the Committee. Nor did it approve the idea of having enrolment of each primary member in front of five witnesses.

The proposal to extend the term of A-ICC and the PCCs to five years also did not find favour with the Committee, primarily because it feared that such a move would take away freshness from the Party and lead to stagnation. Nor did it approve the idea of limiting the term of office of people in the parliamentary field, particularly Ministers.

It accepted the suggestion to give representation to special interests in A-ICC without, however, disturbing its present structure at least for the current term.

It partially accepted some of the recommendations of the study groups of the Parliamentary Party such as the training of mandal workers, representation of minorities, scope for ventilation of public grievances and co-ordination between the two wings of the party—parliamentary and organizational.

Finally, it felt that it would not be desirable to have any major change in the present constitution of the party at this juncture, when organizational elections from the mandal upwards had just been completed. The new Committees should be allowed to function for their full term of two years.

It approved a suggestion that several committees of A-ICC should be formed to deal with subjects like labour, kisans and increased agricultural production. It has, however, rejected the formation of such a Committee to deal with foreign affairs "as it is too delicate a subject to be handled by any committee of A-ICC."

The appointment of a Disciplinary Action Committee directly by A-ICC and the enlargement of its functions were also suggested.

The following were the point-by-point decisions of the Working Committee on the report of the Re-organization Committee:

Question of leadership: The proposal that the leaders of the Congress Legislature parties at the Centre as well as in States should be Presidents of the corresponding Congress committees (A-ICC and PCC) was not acceptable.

Primary membership: The four-anna membership should continue. There were enough provisions in the Congress constitution for preventing bogus membership and punishing those responsible for it. These provisions should be strictly enforced.

Term of Committees: The existing system of a two-year term for every Congress Committee should continue.

Term of office-bearers in the Parliamentary field: The proposal that no Minister should hold office for more than two terms was not feasible.

Sub-committees of A-ICC: The A-ICC should elect the following committees: Disciplinary Action Committee, Committee on Planning and Implementation, Committee for Increased Agricultural Production and Committee for Constructive Activities.

Composition of A-ICC and PCCs: Members of the Executive Committee of the Congress Party in Parliament should be full-fledged members of A-ICC. Similarly, members of the Executive Committees of the Congress parties in the State Legislatures should be full-fledged members of PCCs.

Composition of the Working Committee: The Working Committee agreed with the view of the Re-organization Committee that it should continue to be nominated by the Congress President.

Nominated and co-opted members: Nominated and co-opted members would have no voting rights in organizational elections. They would exercise all other rights of membership.

Resolutions:

On June 5, the A-ICC adopted two non-official resolutions, one opposing any further re-organization of States, and the other deprecating "the tendency among certain sections of Congressmen" to criticize and to tone down the implementation of the accepted national policies of the Congress regarding the planned progress towards a Socialistic Welfare State and the policy of non-alignment in international affairs.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3085:INI:C]

K. Inquiry Into Complaints Against Congressmen: The Congress President, Mr. N. Sanjiva Reddy, made public at a news conference in New Delhi on June 14 two resolutions which the Congress Working Committee had adopted in Poona on June 3.

The resolutions, in brief, authorized the Congress President, first, to appoint a permanent panel of five or six persons to inquire into specific complaints of misuse of authority by Congressmen, and secondly, to call for annual statements of the assets, incomes and expenditures from all Congress Ministers, both at the Centre and in the States, and all Congress Members of Parliament and State Legislatures.

The following were the texts of the two resolutions:

"(1) Whereas complaints are received occasionally about misuse of authority by responsible Congressmen, it is advisable to have a permanent machinery to examine the merits of such complaints. For this purpose, the President is authorized to appoint a panel out of which he may nominate one or more persons, wherever he considers such action necessary, to inquire into such complaints and to report to him."

"(2) The Working Committee authorizes the Congress President to require the Congress Ministers of Central and State Governments and Congress Members of Parliament and State Legislatures to submit to him annual statements of their assets, income and expenditure."

Asked if he had finalized the list of people who would constitute the panel, Mr. Reddy said that it was not an easy task to get the right type of people for the job. Apart from a judicial background, the members of the panel would have to have some political experience, since they would be required not only to go into the legal aspects of complaints but also determine the question of propriety even if legally there was no case. The membership of the panel, which might be enlarged later, need not be necessarily limited to the Congress Party.

Explaining the procedure to be followed in the case of complaints of misuse of power, he said that before referring such a case to a committee of the panel for inquiry, he would have to satisfy himself, in consultation with the Prime Minister at the Centre and Chief Ministers in the States, that a prima facie case did exist.

The returns of assets and liabilities of Congressmen, he explained, would be treated as public documents and would be open to scrutiny by any member. Of course, these returns would not include information about the assets and liabilities of the relatives of Ministers.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3118:INI:B]

L. Review Of Community Development Programme: The Programme Evaluation Organization, in its seventh evaluation report on the Community Development Programme made public on June 11, said that the Programme had "become more Governmental rather than popular in character."

The report said that the Programme had been sustained "more by hope than by achievement."

It said that people's reaction in most Community Development blocs was not yet generally favourable to the growth of self-reliance in village communities, which was the primary aim of the Community Development Programme.

It said: "The majority of the villagers do not regard it as their own Programme and seem to rely mainly on Government for effecting the development of the rural areas."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Among the agricultural problems considered most important by the people and the officials was the question of irrigation facilities. Improved agricultural practices seemed to be spreading very slowly. Among the reasons for the slow progress were shortages of supplies, lack of irrigation and shortage and delay in the supply of fertilizers.

In 1958-59, there was a general increase in the number and membership of co-operatives of all types. Their working capital, owned capital, deposits and business showed a significant increase in 1958-59. It was only the marketing co-operatives, however, that showed general improvement in number and working.

The only aspect of the people's participation of any importance in the execution of the Programme was their contribution in cash and kind towards the cost of development projects. An attempt had, therefore, been made to assess the nature and extent of such contribution in the blocs under study.

To assess its impact upon farming practices, the rabi crop campaign was evaluated by the Programme Evaluation Organization in the Punjab, UP and Rajasthan. The campaign seemed to have achieved some success in organizing the necessary supplies.

One of its findings was that to bring about a rapid increase in agricultural output the Government would have, in the circumstances of the rural economy, to rely very largely on institutional agencies for the distribution of seeds, fertilizers and finance to the farmers. Moreover, the campaign would leave a permanent mark if its experience was used to convert what were necessarily ad hoc arrangements into permanent alterations.

The report was an evaluation of the 1958-59 rabi crop campaign in selected States, case studies of successful panchayats and co-operatives and an analysis of some aspects of rural unemployment.

It covered certain important aspects of the programme, namely, agriculture, animal husbandry, organization of supply, co-operation, village industries, health, education, social education, democratic decentralization and people's contribution and attitudes.

National Conference Decisions:

The National Conference on Community Development, at its plenary session in Srinagar on June 10, recommended intensification of the village and small industries programme in the areas selected for the 'package programme' of intensive agricultural development without prejudice to the general pattern of economic development.

The Conference, which was presided over by the Central Minister of Community Development, Mr. S. K. Dey, agreed that the work being done in the pilot projects (industries) might be continued as part of the Third Five-Year Plan and a specific provision should be made as part of the rural industries programme of the State plans.

To make the impact of the industries programme felt in the countryside, it wanted the Khadi Commission to organize at least one or two industries in each bloc.

It approved a proposal to set up a rural industries centre for every five blocs.

A scheme for setting up one industrial estate for every 15 blocs by the end of the Third Plan was also approved.

It recommended that there should be one youth organization for every 10 villages in a bloc. It took note of the progress already achieved in this connexion in UP, where about 6,000 youth clubs were functioning.

It expressed itself as being unhappy that an attempt should have been made to evaluate the Community Development Programme, "which now extends over 3,000 blocs, by a study of as few as 18 of them" (see above).

It observed that the selection of blocs had not been done on a scientific basis. In making the selection, "the nearness of the bloc to the Programme Evaluation Officer's headquarters seems to have been a major criterion rather than the representative character of a particular bloc."

It was said to be "intrigued" by "the contradictory findings" of the Programme Evaluation Organization in regard to food production. It recalled that the National Sample Survey, which made a country-wide study of agricultural yields, "had given its verdict that production in Community Development Blocs was 10 per cent to 15 per cent more than in other areas". It was of the view that it would be extremely unrealistic to draw any conclusions on the basis of "such inadequate and unrepresentative studies".

It recommended to the Central Government to set up a special committee to examine the adequacy of the Programme Evaluation Organization to meet the current needs of evaluation.

It urged that a proper and effective organization should be built up so that the study made would produce "an independent and representative report based on scientific data".

The Chairman of the Programme Evaluation Organization, who was present at the Conference, recognized the validity of the observations made by the Conference and agreed to make necessary amendments in the report to indicate that the study was an evaluation of 18 selected blocs and not of the Community Development Programme as a whole.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2817:INI:H]

M. Dandakaranya Authority Reconstituted: A high-level conference held in New Delhi on June 16 at the invitation of the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, to discuss problems of rehabilitation of displaced persons, and more particularly, of the Dandakaranya Scheme, decided to re-constitute the Dandakaranya Authority and invest it with wider powers.

The re-constituted Authority, according to an official Press Note, will have a whole-time Chairman and enjoy considerable autonomy.

Other members of the Authority will be the Chief Secretaries of Madhya Pradesh, Orissa and West Bengal, the Chief Administrator of the Authority and a representative each of the Central Home and Rehabilitation Ministries.

The Conference was attended by the West Bengal Chief Minister, Dr. B. C. Roy, and his Rehabilitation Minister, Mr. P. C. Sen, the Central Law Minister, Mr. Asoke Sen, and the Central Rehabilitation Minister, Mr. Mehr Chand Khanna.

There was general agreement as to the steps to be taken to expedite the rehabilitation of displaced persons and the proper functioning of the Dandakaranya Authority.

It decided that the Authority should prepare a general five-year plan and a more specific plan for each year. It will prepare its own budget which will then have to be approved by the Central Government. The Authority will be entitled to make minor adjustments in the budget within the major allocations.

The Press Note said: "The scheme will continue to develop in a big way for many years to come. To begin with, however, its chief function will be to rehabilitate displaced persons from East Pakistan. For this purpose, the first priority will be given to the displaced persons at present in camps in West Bengal. Later, other displaced persons will also be considered for further rehabilitation. The attempt will be to build up integrated communities which means not only agriculturists but also skilled workers and artisans.

"Displaced families sent to Dandakaranya will be provided with shelter, certain facilities and work pending full rehabilitation. During the initial period, their work may be subsidized. All those who are sent to Dandakaranya will have the assurance of being rehabilitated there.

"It is hoped that the major part of the work of the Ministry of Rehabilitation will be over within a period of 12 to 15 months. Some part may then still remain. This can be distributed to other Ministries of the Central Government or to the West Bengal Government so that the Ministry of Rehabilitation as such can be closed.

"It was agreed that there should be the fullest consultation and co-operation between the Central Government in all matters concerning the rehabilitation of displaced persons and the Dandakaranya Scheme. The Chief Minister of West Bengal was invited to attend all meetings of the Rehabilitation Committee of the Central Cabinet."

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3056:INI:A]

N. Guarantee Of Advances Scheme: The Reserve Bank of India announced in Bombay on June 22 that to start with the Government of India's scheme for the guarantee of advances granted to small-scale industries by approved credit institutions would come into force from July 1, 1960 in 22 selected districts of the country.

The Reserve Bank (which has been entrusted with the administration of the scheme as agent of the Government of India and designated as "Guarantee Organization" for this purpose) said in a press communique that these 22 districts had been selected on the basis of the relative importance of outstanding loans to small-scale industrial units and the potentiality for further expansion of such loans.

It also announced the names of credit institutions specified for the grant of facilities under the scheme. These include the State Bank of India and its eight subsidiaries, 49 commercial banks, 22 State co-operative banks and 14 State Finance Corporations.

The scheme would be introduced initially in the following districts: Agra (Uttar Pradesh), Ahmedabad (Gujerat), Amritsar (Punjab), Bangalore (Mysore), Calcutta (West Bengal), Coimbatore (Madras), Cuttack (Orissa), Delhi—Union Territory (Delhi), Gird (Madhya Pradesh), Greater Bombay (Maharashtra), Howrah (West Bengal), Hyderabad (Andhra Pradesh), Jaipur (Rajasthan), Kamrup (Assam), Kanpur (Uttar Pradesh), Kolhapur (Maharashtra), Kistna (Andhra Pradesh), Ludhiana (Punjab), Madras (Madras), Ranchi (Bihar), Surat (Gujerat) and Trivandrum (Kerala).

The communique said that the Government of India had formulated the scheme on an experimental basis for a period of two years from July 1, 1960. "The object of the scheme is to enlarge the support of institutional credit to small-scale industrial units by granting a degree of protection to the lending institutions against possible losses in respect of such advances. The scheme provides for the sharing of losses between the lending institutions and the Government of India, subject to the condition that the maximum amount recoverable against the guarantee issued under the scheme in respect of any one advance will not exceed Rs. 1,00,000."

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3159:INI:D]

O. Andhra Pradesh Legislature—Governor's Address: The Governor of Andhra Pradesh, Mr. Bhimsen Sachar, told a joint session of the Andhra Pradesh Legislature in Hyderabad on June 22 that a Bill providing for free compulsory primary education for the 6-11 age group would shortly be introduced in the House. The Bill would replace the existing separate Education Acts in the Telengana and Andhra regions of the State. The Government proposed to introduce compulsory primary education for this age group by the end of the Third Five-Year Plan period according to schedule.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He expressed satisfaction at the economic progress made in the State. With a view to controlling prices, the Government proposed to hold buffer-stocks and open fair-price shops. The West Godavari district had been selected for experimenting the 'package programme'. If it proved successful, the programme would be extended to other districts. The cost of the programme would be shared by the Ford Foundation, the State and the Centre.

The pilot schemes for the provision of adequate finance to small agriculturists would be taken up in 20 blocs of 10 villages each.

He announced that an integrated scheme for the supply of milk to the twin cities of Hyderabad and Secunderabad would be undertaken shortly. This Rs. 3.5-crore scheme would be started with the assistance of the UNICEF.

Discussing industrial progress in the State, he said that a paper mill would be established in Bodhan. Also a synthetic drug plant would be located in Hyderabad.

He said that the State had been pressing the Centre for the establishment of a machine tools factory in Hyderabad and a marine diesel factory at Visakhapatnam.

Compared to some other States, he added, Andhra Pradesh still lagged behind in the matter of industries. It was, therefore, the aim of the Government to utilize all available industrial potential to the maximum.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 2819:INI:O]

P. Kerala Industrial Policy Statement: The Kerala Government announced a series of measures on June 3 to attract all types of industrial entrepreneurs to the State.

In an industrial policy statement, it expressed marked preference to large-scale industries in both the public and private sectors.

The statement said: "Large-scale industries are absolutely essential as they are the nucleii around which many small-scale industries can grow."

The following specific measures of assistance to large-scale industries were announced: (1) provision of land by acquisition, if necessary; (2) supply of cheap power; (3) assistance to obtain licences; and (4) financial participation either by investment in shares or by loans and guarantees in suitable cases subject to the overall policy of the Government of India.

For medium-scale industries, it added, the Government would provide sites for industrial townships if a number of medium industries could be grouped together. These industries would receive all assistance offered to large-scale industries. The industrial township site would be fully developed with communications, water and power facilities. However, there would be no buildings.

Small-scale industries would get factory accommodation in industrial estates, machinery on easy hire-purchase terms, special credit facilities, assistance to obtain raw materials, concessions for store purchase programmes and marketing and technical assistance.

The Government would also be prepared to participate in the share capital of sound small-scale industrial schemes and to make available developed plots with loan assistance for factory construction.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3244:INI:K]

Q. Madras Government Employees Pay Scales Revised: The Madras Government announced on June 20 the acceptance of all the main recommendations of the State Pay Commission with effect from July 1, 1960. This would involve an annual expenditure of over Rs. 7 crores. The expenditure for the current financial year would be Rs. 5 crores.

The most important recommendation of the State Pay Commission was a minimum wage of Rs. 60 for a last-grade Government servant and Rs. 100 for a white-collar worker.

The Commission had also recommended that the bulk of dearness allowance should be merged with pay, the revised dearness allowance being only relatively a small balancing factor. The present rates of dearness allowance were a result of increases given from time to time. These rates were: Rs. 10 up to a basic pay of Rs. 150; and Rs. 20 for a basic pay of Rs. 150 and above but below Rs. 300.

There would be no dearness allowance for employees drawing more than Rs. 300 as basic pay, though there would be marginal adjustments in the case of those drawing between Rs. 300 and Rs. 320.

A Press Note issued in this connexion said that the revised pay scales had to be understood as representing a formal increase due to absorption of the bulk of dearness allowance with pay and a real increase representing improvement of revised scales over the existing scales and that a like-for-like comparison could be only between total emoluments in both cases.

The Commission had stressed that the employees should show greater sense of efficiency and devotion to duty in view of the increase in emoluments. The clerks entering Government service should be made to pass a test on principles of "general administration" so as to improve general efficiency.

It had also suggested falling in line with the second Central Pay Commission recommendations regarding the number of holidays. Working hours may be altered to 10-30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The present hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2124:INI:G]

R. Burdwan University Inaugurated: The University of Burdwan in West Bengal formally came into being on June 15. This is the fourth University in the State.

The ceremony was without any ostentation. The former Election Commissioner of India, Mr. Sukumar Sen, assumed charge as Vice-Chancellor.

Initially, the University will have under its jurisdiction over 30 degree colleges hitherto affiliated to Calcutta University.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

S. Telex Link With UK: A telex service between India and UK, India's first international telex link, was introduced on June 16.

The International Telex Service enables individual telex subscribers in a country to have direct tele-printer contact with telex subscribers in other countries.

A telex subscriber does not have to lease a whole channel to himself. He is charged on a call basis according to the time consumed by him.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

T. Dacoits Surrender To Acharya Vinobha Bhave: As many as 20 outlaws who had been terrorizing the countryside in the northern districts of Madhya Pradesh and Agra district in Uttar Pradesh surrendered to Acharya Vinobha Bhave who toured the dacoit-infested areas in the second and third weeks of May.

For several years, the bandits had been eluding the police. Many of them were former members of gangs led by bandit chiefs like Man Singh and Roopa, whose names struck awe in the minds of villagers.

Acharya Bhave's approach was to reform by persuasion, and his supporters claimed that the dacoits who had surrendered had undergone a genuine "change of heart".

The dacoits, including Lukka, "wanted" in several cases of murder, surrendered unconditionally. They were later handed over to the police.

However, Acharya Bhave's peace mission did not pass off without any criticism. The Madhya Pradesh Inspector-General of Police, Mr. K. E. Rustomji, complained that the dacoits were being glorified as heroes and that, in the process, the police had become demoralized.

Commenting on this criticism, Acharya Bhave said that it was never his object to lower the morale of the police but only to seek a change of heart on the part of those who had taken to crime as their career.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

JAPAN

SUMMARY: Strikes And Demonstrations Against Government And Security Treaty With USA—Socialist Threat Of Mass Resignation From Diet—Mr. N. Kishi Defends Treaty—Mr. J. Hagerty's Visit—Socialists Reject Move For Truce During Mr. Eisenhower's Visit—Demonstrators Storm Diet— Soviet Note—Mr. N. Kishi Requests Mr. Eisenhower To Postpone Visit; Reparation Payments.

A. Demonstrations Against Japan-US Mutual Security Treaty: On June 4, trade unionists and students combined their protests against the Government and the Mutual Security Treaty with USA and set off strikes and demonstrations on an unprecedented scale.

The police estimated that 830,000 persons throughout the country took part in the strike on June 4 while 24,000 police were lined up to keep order.

Nearly 250,000 people held rallies in 254 places and there were other demonstrations in 178 centres. But there was little violence.

In Tokyo, as in other major cities, thousands of striking transport workers brought public services to a standstill.

The General Council of Trade Unions (Sohyo) claimed that 130,000 demonstrators were out in Tokyo's streets, but the police pruned down this figure to 60,000.

The only violence reported was at Tokyo's railway station at dawn, when striking railwaymen and supporting students clashed with the railway security guard, more than 30 of whom were injured.

The police confined themselves to cordoning off public buildings, and orderly crowds eventually drifted away.

Mass Resignations From Diet Threatened—Socialist Party Convention:

On June 6, an extraordinary Convention of the Opposition Socialist Party approved a proposal for the mass resignation of all the 125 So-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

cialist members of the Lower House of the Diet in a bid to force the Government to dissolve the Diet and hold fresh General Elections.

The Convention left it to the discretion of the Chairman of the Party, Mr. Inejiro Asanuma, to decide when the resignation should be handed over to the Speaker of the Lower House.

[Mr. N. Kishi had already said that he would call for a series of by-elections rather than a General Election if the Socialists resigned en masse.]

It also unanimously approved resolutions calling for the resignation of the Cabinet of Mr. N. Kishi, dissolution of the Diet and the holding of early General Elections.

A resolution opposing the ratification of the Mutual Security Treaty with USA was also approved.

The mass resignation would be symbolic since it was certain to be rejected by the Lower House dominated by Mr. N. Kishi's Liberal Democrats. Socialist Party sources themselves admitted that they realized it would be a "symbolic gesture." They also pointed out, however, that the gesture had to be made at all costs for the dual purpose of echoing the waves of violent demonstrations and the general strike against Mr. N. Kishi's Government and against the Security Treaty with USA.

Following the Convention, its 800 delegates staged a parade through Tokyo's main streets towards Mr. N. Kishi's residence and the American Embassy.

Mr. N. Kishi On Treaty With USA:

Speaking in an ad hoc Committee of the Upper House on June 8, the Prime Minister, Mr. Nobusuke Kishi, defended the Security Treaty with USA and said that Japan must "tie up with free nations" and could not afford to follow a neutralist policy.

He said that those who opposed revision of the Treaty were either "outright communists" or were trying to make Japan go communist while speaking against communism and advocating a neutralist policy."

"To stand neutral," he said, "means to go not one step but ten steps towards communism."

Mr. D. Eisenhower's Proposed Visit:

On June 8, in Washington, the White House issued a special statement re-affirming President D. Eisenhower's intention to visit Japan later in the month (June).

The White House added that, in response to several questions from the Press, the following statement was being issued: "No change is contemplated in the President's visit to Japan. The purpose of the visit was and remains the paying of a courtesy call on a great sister democracy and the furtherance of United States—Japanese friendship in connexion with the United States—Japanese centennial celebrations this year."

President Eisenhower was scheduled to arrive in Tokyo on June 19 and to remain there until June 22.

The same day (June 8), the Socialist Party officially asked the Government to seek a postponement of Mr. Eisenhower's visit.

The Secretary-General of the Socialist Party, Mr. Saburo Eda, and four senior Party members separately met the Chief Cabinet Secretary, Mr. Etsusaburo Shiina, and the Foreign Minister, Mr. Aiichiro Fujiyama, on June 8 to present the Socialist request.

The statement said that the Socialist Party would welcome the US President to Japan at another time but considered his visit now, in view of internal difficulties, as "improper".

Also, on the same day (June 8), the Left-wing Students' Federation gave an "ultimatum" to President Eisenhower warning him against visiting Japan.

The "ultimatum" took the form of an open letter which said that if the President "forced an entry into Japan and trampled upon the ideals of peace and neutrality of the students", they would do what they regarded as their "sacred duty in defence of their racial pride and in response to the hopes of the peace-loving peoples of the world."

Demonstrations against the planned visit of Mr. Eisenhower were again staged on June 10 when the US Presidential Secretary, Mr. James Hagerty, arrived in Tokyo to make arrangements for the President's visit.

About 3,000 students blocked the road and prevented Mr. Hagerty's departure from the airport. He and the US Ambassador in Japan, Mr. Douglas MacArthur II, had to be rescued from the crowds by a helicopter.

In Washington, later in the day (June 10), a White House spokesman said that Mr. Eisenhower was still planning to visit Tokyo on June 19 in spite of the hostile demonstrations against Mr. Hagerty.

As anti-American tension mounted, Mr. Hagerty slipped out of Tokyo to Anchorage, in Alaska, on June 11 to join the US Presidential party then on its East Asian tour.

On June 11, Mr. Kishi told a parliamentary committee that the airport demonstration against Mr. Hagerty was linked with the infiltration strategy of international communism against democratic nations. His Government would now adopt any policy to cope with the country's domestic situation which might spread the impression that it was bowing before the violence of students and trade unionists.

He added that Japan should strive to regain international trust and confidence by extending a friendly welcome to Mr. Eisenhower.

Meanwhile, demonstrations continued in Tokyo and elsewhere. On June 11, about 80,000 persons paraded Tokyo streets denouncing the Government and the Security Pact with USA. They surrounded the Diet building and stoned the house of the Prime Minister, Mr. N. Kishi.

On June 13, the Socialist Party rejected a political truce during Mr. Eisenhower's visit proposed by the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

The Chairman of the Socialist Party, Mr. Inejiro Asanuma, said that the prerequisite for a re-consideration of the Party's opposition to Mr. Eisenhower's visit was Mr. N. Kishi's resignation.

He, however, pledged to urge the organizations participating in the demonstrations against Mr. Eisenhower's visit and the US-Japan Security Treaty to avoid such incidents as those that occurred during Mr. Hagerty's visit.

The newly-formed Democratic Socialist Party leader, Mr. Suehiro Nishio, believed to be a moderate among Left-wing Japanese politicians, demanded as the price of his co-operation during Mr. Eisenhower's visit the immediate adjournment of the Diet.

The extreme Leftist students' organization, Zengakuren, and the Federation of Japanese Trade Unions (Sohyo) expressed their determination to hold anti-Treaty and anti-Eisenhower demonstrations. Large numbers of students resolved to resort to a sit-down strike on the runway at the air-port to prevent Mr. Eisenhower's plane from landing or, alternatively, to be run over by the plane as it landed.

On June 15, the demonstrators stormed the Diet and in the ensuing clash with the police, at least three students were killed.

The demonstration erupted shortly after Mr. Kishi's Government had abandoned efforts to win final ratification of the revised US-Japan Security Treaty by the time Mr. Eisenhower arrived in Tokyo on June 19.

Mr. Kosaku Shinoda, Public Relations Officer of Mr. Kishi's ruling Liberal Democratic Party, told newsmen that the Government had yielded on the Treaty ratification issue in the interests of "a political truce so that Mr. Eisenhower's visit could be made a success."

He said that the Government would recess the Diet until the end of Mr. Eisenhower's visit to Japan. This meant that the ratification of the Treaty would not become final at least until June 26. If the Diet had remained in session, ratification of the Treaty would have been automatic on June 19, 30 days after the approval of the Treaty by the Lower House, thus coinciding with Mr. Eisenhower's arrival.

Soviet Note:

In Moscow the same day (June 15), the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, in a Note handed over to the Japanese Ambassador to USSR, Mr. Suemitso Kadawaki, alleged that the Japanese Government was supporting "those forces which wanted to make Japan a shield for USA."

The Note said that these forces wanted "to prevent the development of good relations between Japan and USSR".

It recalled that the Japanese Government had not yet replied to the Soviet Note of May 20 dealing with alleged American spy planes based in Japan.

It said: "This delay leads to the conclusion that the Japanese Government obviously does not take into account the seriousness and danger of the situation which could result from the use of these planes for aggressive acts against USSR."

It warned Japan that she was courting "terrible tragedies" if she continued to follow her present policy and ratified the Mutual Security Treaty with USA.

It said that the "US-Japanese Military Agreement" ensured the use of Japanese territory by a foreign State for aggressive aims against Russia and other countries neighbouring Japan.

Mr. D. Eisenhower's Visit Postponed:

The storming of the Diet on June 15 and mounting tension set the Government thinking on whether even the best of security arrangements would be adequate during Mr. Eisenhower's visit.

At an emergency meeting held on June 16, the Cabinet "regretfully decided" to request President Eisenhower to postpone his visit.

This was later conveyed in a message by Mr. N. Kishi to Mr. Eisenhower, who was then on a tour of the Philippines.

Mr. Kishi later told a news conference that Mr. Eisenhower's visit had been called off "until the Japanese people could welcome him with unanimous cordiality."

He said: "To my regret, the present conditions in Japan are not appropriate to welcome a State guest.

"In view of the incident involving Mr. Hagerty, who had to be rescued by helicopter when his car was stormed by rioters, it has become obvious that planned and collective violence, influenced by communists, is disturbing order in Japan.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"For the freedom, peace and prosperity of the Japanese people, such subversive activity must be eliminated by all means.

"The Japanese people have been known to be courteous and to extend a hearty welcome to foreign guests.

"The majority of the Japanese people have been ready to extend a hearty welcome to President Eisenhower, but only the minority of the people have been opposing the visit.

"As the Prime Minister of Japan, I had to make every effort in line with this feeling of the majority of the people. The fact that I had proposed a meeting of the heads of the three political parties was part of my efforts.

"I have also re-iterated that President Eisenhower's visit to Japan was divorced from politics and, therefore, I asked for the co-operation of the Press.

"Despite such a desire by the majority of the people to welcome President Eisenhower, the current condition was brought about by the violence influenced in turn by international communism.

"I think a postponement of the visit could not be helped if President Eisenhower has to be greeted courteously. So I decided to ask the US Government to postpone the visit.

"It is most regrettable that the earnest desire of the Japanese people to extend a friendly welcome to President Eisenhower was hampered.

"We will bring about by all means the time when Japan can extend a friendly welcome to the US President and so serve the friendship between USA and Japan."

Replying to a question, he said that he did not intend to resign nor would he dissolve the Diet and so prevent ratification of the Security Treaty with USA.

He did not also say when a new invitation might be extended to President Eisenhower, but said that his Government still planned to ratify the Security Treaty by June 19.

An earlier proposal that the current Diet session be recessed was dropped.

In Manila, Mr. Hagerty announced that President Eisenhower had accepted the decision of the Japanese authorities that his visit to Japan should be postponed.

He said: "The President has been informed of the Japanese Government's request that he postpone his visit to Japan.

"Although he would have liked to fulfil his long-held ambition to pay his respects to the Emperor and to the people of this great sister democracy and ally of USA, he, of course, fully accepts the decision of the Japanese authorities and, therefore, will not visit Japan at this time.

"In so doing, the President wishes to express his full and sympathetic understanding of the decision taken by the Japanese Government.

"He would like also to express his regrets that a small organized minority led by professional communist agitators, acting under external direction and control, have been able by resort to force and violence to prevent his goodwill visit and to mar Japan-American relations.

"At the same time, the President remained confident that deliberate challenge to law and order, which have caused the Japanese Government to reach its decision, will not and cannot disrupt the abiding friendship and understanding which unite our two nations and our two peoples."

Jubilation Among Opposition Parties:

As the news of the postponement of Mr. Eisenhower's visit to Japan spread, Left-wing demonstrators in Japan went wild with joy. Crowds sang, danced and shouted round the residence of Mr. N. Kishi.

The Leftist students' organization, Zengakuren, declared that, having "won the first round" in their fight against the US-Japan Security Treaty, they would "fight on until the Treaty was quashed" and Mr. N. Kishi resigned.

It said that demonstrations outside the Diet would be continued until it was dissolved and the Kishi Cabinet resigned as a body.

The Socialist Party, whose supporters had taken a leading part in the demonstrations, issued the following statement:

"The indefinite postponement of President Eisenhower's visit to Japan is a victory for the opinions of the people who desire peace and friendly relations between USA and Japan.

"The Kishi Government has been given a decisive blow by the united actions of the people on an unprecedented scale. It is now on the verge of collapse.

"We cannot forget the death of Miss Michiko Kamba (the girl student who died in the riots outside the Diet) and the other sacrifices behind the victory.

"The fire of our anger will continue to blaze until the day of our final victory. The only step left for the Government of Mr. Kishi is immediate resignation."

Ratification Of Treaty:

While massive demonstrations against the Security Treaty with USA continued (for background see page 3367), the Treaty got automatic approval of the Diet at one minute past midnight on June 19-20 when the ruling Liberal Democratic Party decided not to call for a plenary session of the House of Councillors (Upper House of the Diet).

[Under the Japanese Constitution, a Treaty passed by the Lower House gets the automatic approval of the Upper House if the Upper House fails to act on it within 30 days of its passage by the Lower House.]

The Security Treaty had been rushed through the Lower House by the ruling Party on the night of May 17, although the Opposition had boycotted the session. The ruling Party had been seeking to submit the Treaty to a plenary session of the Upper House instead of getting it passed automatically. However, the Opposition had threatened to block any such move physically, and further a tense atmosphere prevailed around the Diet, as demonstrators assembled in its vicinity. In view of the situation, the Government decided not to call the Upper House into session.

Soon afterwards, the Socialist Party's Central Committee issued a "declaration" against the Treaty calling it null and void.

It said that the Treaty violated the Japanese Constitution when it provided Japanese territory for US forces, and it violated the UN Charter in that it virtually regarded the Soviet Union and communist China as imaginary enemies under the guise of maintaining peace in the Far East. It concluded: "Based on our serene and calm judgment and consideration, therefore, the Socialist Party declares that it does not approve the new US-Japan Security Treaty."

The Cabinet Secretary, Mr. E. Shiina, said in a statement that the recent series of anti-Government demonstrations made it clear that there was within Japan itself a clash between East and West.

He added that the Soviet Union had repeatedly intervened in the domestic politics of other countries and had issued statements opposing the Security Treaty. The present opposition to the Treaty in Japan itself came from only a minority of communists inspired by international communism. But, almost all the Japanese people supported the Treaty "from the bottom of their hearts."

By June 22, the Government had completed all formalities to facilitate the ratification of the Security Treaty. Thirty-two Bills were rushed through the Diet while the Socialists, who were determined to wreck every move of the ruling Liberal Democrats, absented themselves from the House.

Emperor Hirohito's attestation of the Treaty was obtained on the night of June 21 after all the Cabinet members had signed it.

On June 22, thousands of rain-soaked students and trade unionists, waving sodden anti-Government banners and shouting slogans, marched on the Diet protesting against the Treaty.

At the height of the demonstration, the police estimated the crowd at about 17,000—well below the 200,000 the Left-wing organizers had hoped to turn out.

The same day (June 22), in Washington, the United States Senate ratified the US-Japanese Security Treaty by an overwhelming majority—by 90 votes to 2.

The two Senators who voted against the ratification of the Treaty were two Southern Democrats—Mr. Russell Long of Louisiana and Mr. Richard Russel of Georgia.

(The New York Times and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3367:JAP:A]

B. Payment Of Reparations: Trade Ministry sources in Tokyo said on June 9 that Japan had paid so far about 22 per cent of her total war reparation obligations to three South-East Asian countries—Burma, the Philippines and Indonesia.

A total of 78,500,000,000 yen worth of war preparations in goods and services had been delivered to the three countries to which Japan had contracted to pay 350,308,800,000 yen.

To Burma, now in the fifth payment year, Japan had paid by April, 1960 about 34,660,000,000 yen worth of material and services.

To the Philippines, now in the third payment year, a total of 33,450,000,000 yen had been paid, including 19,300,000,000 yen worth of shipping.

To Indonesia, now in the second payment year, Japan had paid 10,469,000,000 yen, including 3,600,000,000 yen worth of shipping and 3,000,000,000 yen of machinery.

To South Viet-Nam, Japan had pledged 14,040,000,000 yen in war reparations in a Treaty which took effect in January, 1960, but nothing had yet been paid. A Viet-Namese War Reparations Mission had just arrived in Japan to formulate an implementation programme with the Japanese Government just as the three other recipient nations had done previously.

With South Viet-Nam included, Japan's war reparation obligations aggregated to 364,348,800,000 yen.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3128:JAP:D]

KOREA (South)

A. Mr. D. D. Eisenhower's Visit: President D. D. Eisenhower of USA paid a goodwill visit to Seoul on June 19 and 20 when he received the biggest welcome of his East Asian tour.

In a statement on arrival he said: "For me and my party, as for all who love freedom, a visit here vividly recalls the memory of many months when Korea was a rallying place for the fighting men of the free world. Hence they came from every continent and hemisphere. Here in their blood and valour, they proved their devotion to freedom, knew no boundary of land or ocean. Here they demonstrated that a people determined to preserve their freedom against brutal aggression can depend on the help and arms and food—from all over the world.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"I first came here only a few months after the Korean Republic was established. Six years later, in 1952, I saw the winter fighting in the mountains, and felt the spirit and will for sacrifice and the courage out of which greatness in freedom is built.

"This third time I come here to learn better and, at first hand, the progress you have made since war had devastated your land, to discuss with the leaders of the Republic our common concerns and purposes, to help fortify and strengthen our mutual exports in support of collective security and to assure you that the United States, with all its heart, works for the noblest goal of mankind—peace and friendship in freedom.

"I am proud to salute the men and women of Korea who have so amply proved their love of liberty, and I bring from the people of the United States their heart-felt wish for Korea's growth and progress in the years ahead."

In a speech of welcome, the acting South Korean President, Mr. Huh Chung, said that South Korea regarded USA as her closest friend and most powerful ally.

His country, he said, regained her independence after World War II through American sponsorship without which "this country would still be dominated by a foreign Power."

He added: "America was the first to come to our aid when the communists invaded our country. Without that aid, those of us who survived would even now be firmly locked behind the iron curtain. And, without American aid, the reconstruction of the country after the ruins of the war would be impossible."

Referring to the recent student demonstrations which ousted Dr. Syngman Rhee and what he termed as psychological rehabilitation, he said: "We are now engaged in the difficult task of consolidating the achievements of those students, so that the principles and practice of true democracy will become the natural heritage of our future generations."

Address To National Assembly:

In his address to the National Assembly on June 19, Mr. Eisenhower said: "Events over the past few months in the Republic of Korea have demonstrated how aware its citizens are of the rights and obligations of a free people.

"In all your efforts, you have the sympathetic understanding and best wishes of the American people.

"On behalf of the Government and people of the United States, I solemnly re-affirm the pledge of full American support to the Republic of Korea in accordance with our commitments under the Mutual Defence Treaty."

Joint Communique:

In a joint communique issued later, Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Huh Chung agreed that Korea should be peacefully re-unified in accordance with the principles set forth in United Nations resolutions.

They also agreed that South Korea was entitled to United Nations membership, and that continued US economic aid was needed to help South Korea maintain her economic growth and achieve economic viability as soon as possible.

They pledged that their countries would continue to uphold United Nations principles and work unreservedly and unceasingly toward maintaining peace.

To this end, both leaders recognized the vital importance of preserving the alliance between South Korea and USA and of maintaining vigilance and strength, patience and farsightedness, in carrying out the purpose for which this alliance stands.

Mr. Eisenhower left Seoul on June 20 for Honolulu to rest at the end of his curtailed Far East tour.

(The New York Times and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2447:KRS:A, 3328:KRS:A]

NEPAL

A. Ganesh Himal Climbed: A Briton, P. Wallace, organized a one-man Expedition and climbed the 24,299-ft. high Ganesh Himal, north-west of Khatmandu, on May 31.

Ganesh Himal was first climbed four years ago by the famous Swiss mountaineer, Raymond Lambert. His partners on that Expedition were the late Mme. Claude Kogan and the late Eric Gauchet. Gauchet was killed in an accident on the way down and Mme. Kogan lost her life on Cho Oyu in 1959.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

VIET-NAM (DR)

A. ITSC's Tenth Interim Report: An account of the activities of the International Truce Supervisory Commission from February 1, 1959 to January 31, 1960 and a brief review of the progress made by the parties concerned in the implementation of the provisions of the Geneva Agreement on the cessation of hostilities in Viet-Nam was contained in the ITSC's tenth interim report published on June 10.

The report of the Commission, consisting of the representatives of India, Poland and Canada, had since been passed to all member-Governments which participated in the 1954 Geneva Conference that ended the Indo-China War.

During the period under review, the Commission received as many as 111 complaints from North Viet-Nam and 18 complaints from South Viet-Nam, each party charging the other with violations of the demilitarized zone.

The report said that the North Viet-Nam Military High Command had alleged that under the terms of an Agreement, the United States was to place at the disposal of South Viet-Nam six kilograms of uranium. The South Viet-Nam Government had declined to produce to the Commission a copy of the Agreement but said that it related to the peaceful uses of nuclear energy only.

It added: "The reply is under consideration."

The report also said that the Commission was considering nine outstanding complaints by the North Viet-Nam Military High Command of association between South Viet-Nam and S-EATO.

The Commission reported South Viet-Nam's reply to North Viet-Nam's allegations that its representatives had participated in S-EATO meetings and manoeuvres in 1957 and 1958.

The South Viet-Nam Government said that it considered the despatch of observers and military personnel abroad to be "an international question, which falls under the sovereignty of the Republic of Viet-Nam and does not in any way concern the Geneva Agreement."

The Polish representative on the Commission, Mr. Tadeusz Wisniewski, recorded his opinion dissenting from the majority view that the period of operation in South Viet-Nam of the United States Temporary Equipment Recovery Mission (following the end of the Indo-China War) should be extended to the end of 1960.

Mr. Wisniewski claimed that the Mission should be able to complete its work by the end of March, 1960.

The Commission stated that it was pursuing the reports of the alleged establishment in South Viet-Nam of a "United States Air Force Detachment."

It said that this organization was claimed by the South Viet-Nam Government to be a section of the US Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG) there.

It stated that it had continued to receive complaints from North Viet-Nam of an increase in the strength of US military personnel in South Viet-Nam.

South Viet-Nam had explained an apparent increase of 759 persons between January 7, 1956 and December, 1957 by saying that most US military personnel entered by military aircraft and left in civilian clothes by commercial aircraft not controlled by the Commission.

It expressed concern about the break-down of the Joint Commission which had to maintain order in the demilitarized zone following the withdrawal of the French High Command from Viet-Nam.

It said: "The International Commission re-iterates the hope that the parties will scrupulously maintain the status of the demilitarized zone and will refrain from any action which may endanger peace in Viet-Nam."

It stated that the Commission had urged the co-Chairmen of the 1954 Geneva Conference—the Soviet and British Foreign Ministers—to give urgent attention to any action they considered necessary in view of the break-down of the arrangements for controlling the zone.

Pointing out that no progress had been made to unify Viet-Nam under the Geneva Agreement, the report said that it was confident "that this important problem is engaging the attention of the co-Chairmen and the Geneva Powers and that they will take whatever measures they deem necessary to resolve it."

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2692:RVN:B]

VIET-NAM (RVN)

A. Highway Programme: A 151-kilometre highway between Bommethurot in the mountainous area in Central Viet-Nam and Ninh Hoa near the coast was completed on May 28.

The road opened up a hitherto remote area facilitating the conversion of wild forests into productive farms.

The highway known as Route No. 21 took two years to complete. It was constructed as part of the new road net-work undertaken with American aid.

It has cut travel time between Bommethurot and Ninh Hoa to 2½ hours. It used to be a full day's journey in the dry season. In the rainy season, the mountain was impassable.

Since 1954, the Government had allotted, out of American aid funds, $14,000,000 in US currency and 1,300,000,000 plastres for the road construction programme.

(The Times of Viet-Nam, Saigon)

[Prev. ref. 2910:RVN:A]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10, Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95/-; Foreign Rs. 115/- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

July 2—8, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 27

ADEN

A. New Governor: It was announced in London on June 2 that Sir Charles Hepburn Johnston had been appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Aden in succession to Sir William Luce.

Sir Charles (48) who has been British Ambassador in Amman since 1956 would take up his new appointment in October, 1960. Sir William Luce's term of office would end in August, 1960.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 1749:ADN:A]

BURMA

A. Supreme Court Upholds Parliament's Right To Approve Border Agreement With China: The Supreme Court gave its opinion on June 17 that Parliament had the right to accord approval to the Sino-Burmese Border Agreement signed in Peking on January 29 by the former Prime Minister, Gen. Ne Win, and the Chinese Premier, Mr. Chou En-lai.

The Court's opinion was sought by the President, U Win Maung, through a reference, in view of the contention by the opposition Stable A-FPFL that the Agreement was ultra vires the Constitution.

Under the Agreement, Burma had agreed to return to China the three villages of Hpimaw, Gawlum and Kangfang in Kachin State.

China, in turn, had agreed to abrogate the perpetual lease by Burma of the Namwan-assigned tract (belonging to China at present).

The Supreme Court was asked to give its opinion on two questions: (1) whether the Burmese Parliament was competent to accord its approval to the Agreement; (2) if the approval given by Parliament was contrary to the provisions of the Constitution.

The Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court was unanimously of the view that Parliament had the right in according its approval to the Agreement and that it was not contrary to the provisions of the Constitution of Burma.

In view of this opinion, the judges ruled that it was not necessary for them to answer the second question.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3351:BUR:A]

B. Pyidaungsu Executive Overrules U Nu: The Executive Committee of the ruling Pyidaungsu Party on June 11 rejected a proposal by its President, Prime Minister U Nu, that the election petitions of unsuccessful candidates of the Party be withdrawn.

He made the proposal with a view to alleviating political tension. However, the Executive rejected it.

A resolution adopted by it in this connexion read: "The Executive Committee has carefully considered for two weeks the proposal made by the President of the party that, in order to alleviate political tension and for the good of the country, the election petitions of unsuccessful party candidates should be withdrawn although they are legally justified. As the submission of election petitions concerned all the voters in their respective constituencies and is in accordance with the democratic rights of the petitioners, the Executive Committee resolves not to interfere with their action."

On June 13, the President of the Opposition Stable Anti-Fascist People's Freedom League, U Ba Swe, said that his party could stick to its decision to withdraw the election petitions.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3263:BUR:A]

CAMBODIA

A. Prince Norodom Sihanouk To Become Head Of State: The National Assembly adopted on June 13 the Constitution Amendment Bill designed to permit the appointment of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as Head of State.

It was then ratified by the Regency Council and promulgated by the Chairman of the Assembly who had been exercising the powers of the late King Norodom Suramarit on a care-taker basis.

The Bill made it constitutional for "a personage of undisputed authority specifically designated by the national electorate to become Head of the Cambodian State."

It stipulated that, in case neither a sovereign nor a Regency Council could be appointed, the National Assembly and the Council of the Kingdom entrust the powers and responsibilities of Head of State to a man duly designated through national suffrage. Such a leader would take the oath provided under the Constitution with the added pledge to remain "faithful to the Throne."

It also provided that in the case of the absence of Head of State, the President of the Assembly could perform his functions.

In a nation-wide broadcast on the same day (June 13), Prince Norodom announced that he was willing to assume the duties of Head of State in response to the people's wishes and said that he was ready to accept these duties in order to settle the problem of royal succession created by the death of his father, King Suramarit.

Earlier, on June 11, the Regency Council, the armed forces, the police and the National Assembly, had sent petitions to Prince Norodom Sihanouk urging him to agree to become the Head of State.

Prince Norodom was sworn-in as Head of State on June 17.

Referendum On Neutrality:

On June 6, in a national referendum, an overwhelming majority of Cambodians declared their support for the policy of neutrality advocated by Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

They were asked to cast their ballots either for Prince Norodom and his "Popular Socialist Community", or for the Communists, or for the "Free Khmers (Cambodians) Movement", which had accused Prince Norodom of being a dictator.

A fourth ballot paper bearing only a question mark was provided for those wishing to register disapproval of all the three policies.

Polling was orderly.

Of 1,473,361 voters in 10 of the 16 Provinces, Prince Norodom and his Popular Socialist Community won 1,383,793 votes. Next came the Communists with 72 votes.

The Free Khmers (Cambodians) Movement got 48 votes, and those who voted for the "Don't know" ballot paper, marked only with a question mark, numbered 54.

In Pnom Penh Prince Norodom won 99.66 per cent of the votes.

Prince Norodom had abdicated as King in 1955 and then won 99 per cent of the votes in a General Election. He stood down as Prime Minister recently, saying that he wanted "a rest."

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3287:CAM:A, 3300:CAM:A]

INDONESIA

A. Military Units Alerted: Indonesian military units in Maluku adjoining the Dutch-occupied territory of West Irian had been alerted since the last week of May in view of the Dutch Government's intention to strengthen the defences of its overseas colony.

All leave for Army men was withdrawn and troops were ordered to barracks.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Maluku and West Irian military region, Col. Herman Pieters, told Antara on May 26 that since the Dutch military build-up in West Irian began, unidentified aircraft had been noticed several times over the territory under his jurisdiction.

He said: "We presume that these planes came from the direction of Dutch-occupied West Irian... Whatever intimidation or provocations the Dutch are imposing on us, the population of Maluku has never been frightened and is prepared and ready to face the Dutch whatever the consequences."

Letter To Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld:

On June 15, Indonesia's chief delegate to UN, Mr. Sukardio Wirjopranoto, sent a letter to the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, alleging that an "explosive situation" had been created by the "hostile attitude of the Dutch Government."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He appended to his letter a supplementary statement of the Indonesian Government about "Dutch aggressive provocations in West Irian."

He said: "On the basis of its view that the despatch of Dutch armed forces to the West Irian must ultimately endanger peace and security in South-East Asia and could even lead to the outbreak of a major Pacific conflict, the Indonesian Government has issued strong protestations and warnings in denunciation of the Dutch action.

"Despite these protests and warnings, the Dutch Government appears determined to risk an armed conflict with Indonesia.

"The Dutch Government's decision to back up its policy in West Irian is considered a flagrant violation of the Charter of the United Nations, which prohibits the use of force in the settlement of international disputes."

The letter drew these conclusions:

(1) The Dutch Government was "determined to use force in executing its policy in West Irian."

(2) The decision to despatch Dutch naval, air and ground forces to West Irian was "clearly contrary to the Charter of the United Nations."

(3) "As the Dutch Government has formally adopted a belligerent policy in West Irian, thereby raising an open armed conflict with Indonesia, the responsibility for such eventual conflict must rest solely with the Dutch Government. Any counter-move on the part of the Indonesian Government would only result from provocative action by the Dutch Government."

(4) The Netherlands had "intensified her policy of force and, up to the present, has made no formal repudiation of its official statement concerning the despatch of its armed forces to West Irian."

(Information Service Indonesia and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3305:IND:A]

B. Guarantee To Investors: The acting President, Dr. Djuanda, said in Djakarta on May 14 that guarantees and protection based on regulations would be given to private investors participating in the future development of the country.

An "overall development bank" and a "private development bank," he said, would be established by the Government which would call for the participation of private capital in the country's reconstruction programme.

The guarantees to investors, he said, would include a law on banks' secrecy. Besides, the Government would also dissolve the Committee for the Supervision of Property.

(Information Service Indonesia)

[Prev. ref. 2962:IND:A]

C. Protest To China On Anti-Indonesian Broadcasts: The Foreign Affairs Department spokesman, Mr. Ganis Harsono, said in Djakarta on May 21 that the Government had sent a protest Note to the Chinese Embassy in regard to Peking Radio's anti-Indonesian broadcasts.

The protest Note demanded that such broadcasts be stopped immediately for the sake of the maintenance of friendly relations between the two countries.

Meanwhile, the Chinese Press and Radio had intensified their criticism of the Indonesian authorities over the treatment of Chinese nationals in Indonesia whom, it was alleged, Indonesia had prevented from trading.

On May 21, Peking Radio broadcast the text of a Note presented by the Chinese Embassy to the Indonesian Government on May 13 "seriously protesting" against the house arrest of a Chinese Consul by the Indonesian military authorities at Samarinda in East Kalimantan (South Borneo).

The Peking Press also published angry reports complaining that local military authorities in Indonesia had insisted on excessive finger-printing of Chinese, and that the Indonesian Foreign Ministry officials had "openly distorted facts and created pretexts for declaring officials of the Chinese Embassy and Consulates in Indonesia as Personae non grata."

Diplomatic Rights Of Two Chinese Consuls Withdrawn:

On June 1, the Indonesian Government announced that it had withdrawn the diplomatic rights of two Chinese Consuls.

Mr. Harsono told newsmen in Djakarta that the "rights and authority" of the Chinese Consul, Mr. Chiang Yen, in South Borneo, and the Consul for Medan, Mr. Lee Ching-yu, had been withdrawn as from May 31.

The move against the two Chinese officials followed allegations that they had obstructed Indonesian authorities from interviewing Chinese nationals before their repatriation to China.

Indonesian officials had charged that the two Chinese diplomats had adopted a defiant attitude against the Indonesian ban and had made statements which inflamed the feelings of the Chinese nationals in the country.

The latest allegation against the two Chinese Consuls was that they encouraged the Chinese not to submit to finger-printing and official questioning before their repatriation to China.

The Government had earlier asked Peking to withdraw the two diplomats from Indonesia, but so far no action had been taken by the Chinese Government.

Relations between Indonesia and China had been strained after the Indonesian Government's decision in January, 1960 to ban alien retail traders, mostly Chinese, from operating in rural areas.

(Information Service Indonesia and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3356:IND:A]

D. Agreement With India On Army Training Facilities: Representatives of India and Indonesia signed an Agreement in Djakarta on June 3 providing for co-operation between the armies of the two countries for their mutual benefit.

The Agreement provided for the attachment of officers and training of selected Army personnel of one country with the Army of the other country.

It would be in force for five years in the first instance.

Similar Agreements were signed between the Air Forces of the two countries in February, 1956 and between the Navies of the two countries in December, 1958.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2446:IND:B]

ISRAEL

A. Mr. D. Ben-Gurion Questions Bible Version Of Flight Of Jews Into Egypt: A report from Tel Aviv on May 26 said that the Israeli Prime Minister, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, had perturbed Jewish orthodox opinion by saying at a meeting that the story of the flight of Jews into Egypt as given in the Book of Exodus in the Bible was incorrect.

He said that the Bible had added three noughts to the number of Jews who followed Moses from Egypt to Canaan. "It should have been 600 and not 600,000."

New evidence on this migration, he said, was now available and that the entire story should be re-written because of this.

He declared that only 70 families had made the migration.

Jewish leaders in Tel Aviv expressed themselves as "shocked and dismayed" by Mr. Ben-Gurion's statement which they described as "completely unfounded."

(The Hindu, Madras)

KOREA (South)

A. Second Republic Promulgated: The Government promulgated on the afternoon of June 15 the Constitutional Amendment Bill, five hours after it was passed by the National Assembly, thus ushering in the Second Republic.

In promulgating the Constitution Bill, the President, Mr. Huh Chung, announced that General Elections would be held within 45 days under the new Constitution and the date would be announced immediately after President Eisenhower's visit on June 22.

Mr. Huh Chung said that he preferred the elections for both the Lower House and Upper House to be held simultaneously in order to save time and expense, although the new Constitution stipulated that the Upper House elections should be held within six months.

The Bill was presented to the National Assembly on May 11 by the South Korean Constitution Revision Committee.

It provides for a new election for the Lower House within 45 days of being adopted.

It also specifies that the President can be elected for only two terms.

The Assembly passed the Bill by 208 votes to 3.

As the Speaker announced the voting, a unanimous cry of "mansei" (victory) went up from the floor of the Chamber. Outside, a large crowd listening to the proceedings through loud-speakers echoed the shout with wild cheers.

Then, the Assembly members prayed for a minute for the students who fell during the April uprising which brought down Dr. Syngman Rhee's 12-year regime.

Meanwhile, jubilant students paraded the streets to celebrate the passage of the Bill.

Under the new Constitution, the new Lower House will be convened early in August, 1960 to elect a President within five days and in another five days the President will nominate a Prime Minister whose task it will be to form a Cabinet.

The new Constitution Bill introduces a responsible Parliamentary system of Government.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3342:KRS:A]

B. Defections From Dr. S. Rhee's Party: More than two-thirds of ex-President Syngman Rhee's followers in the National Assembly left his Liberal Party on June 1.

A total of 104 National Assembly members resigned from the Party, leaving only 34 Liberals in the Assembly.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Until then, the Party had a majority in the Assembly, which had 70 Democrats and eight Independents, besides the Liberals.

The latest party position in the National Assembly was: Liberals 34, Democrats 70 and Independents 114 (vacant seats 15).

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3342:KRS:A]

LAOS

A. New Cabinet: Following the General Elections (see page 3357), the 'care-taker' Government of Mr. Kou Abhay resigned on May 30 to make room for a new Government.

On May 31, King Sisavang Vattana asked the former Interior Minister, Mr. Tiao Somsanith, to form a new Government.

Mr. Somsanith, a nephew of the late King Sisavanvong and a distant relative of the present King, was the parliamentary leader of the Party for Democracy and Social Progress popularly known as the Youth Group. The Party was headed by the Secretary of State for Defence in the out-going Cabinet, Brig-Gen. Phoumi Nosavan.

Mr. Somsanith is a devout Buddhist. He was born at Luang Prabang in 1913. He took part in the Resistance Movement against the French and was Minister of the Interior in the Government exiled to Thailand in 1949.

He returned to build up the police force and was named its Director in 1954. He again became Minister of the Interior in the last days of Mr. Phoui Sananikone's Government in 1959.

The choice of Mr. Somsanith was formally approved by the National Assembly on June 4.

His Cabinet consisted of the following:

Mr. Tiao Somsanith—Prime Minister and Minister of Interior;

Mr. Khampan Panya—Minister of Foreign Affairs;

Brigadier-General Phoumi Nosavan—Minister of Defence, Veterans, Sports and Youth;

Mr. Keo Viphakorn—Minister of Economy and Rural Affairs;

Mr. Inpeng Suryadhai—Minister of Plans and Finance;

Mr. Ngon Sananikone—Minister of Justice;

Mr. Joukeo Savcocie—Minister of Health;

Mr. Phanga Nith Singharaj—Minister of Posts and Telegraphs;

Mr. Nhou Abhay—Minister of Education;

Mr. Leuan Insislenmay—Minister of Information;

Mr. Phouangphet Phanareth—Secretary of State for Finance and Plans;

Mr. Bouvannora Singh—Secretary of State for Justice;

Mr. Ou Voravong—Secretary of State for Public Works, Posts and Telegraphs; and

Mr. Touby Lyphong—Secretary of State for Information.

Policy Statement:

In a policy statement in the National Assembly on June 4, Mr. Somsanith forecast an increased campaign of subversion from the Pathet Lao guerrillas and said that the security of the country was a matter of serious concern.

He said that the main aim of his Government would be to guarantee the security of the population and restore the Government's authority throughout the Kingdom.

He said: "We will follow a policy of neutrality because it fits in with our Buddhist temperament, our geographical situation and our conditions of existence."

He expressed concern for the country's economy which, he said, was gravely affected by the prevailing insecurity.

He said that "money was scarce," imports were not coming in and a budgetary balance was far from realizable.

Faced by this serious situation, he said that his Government sought peace, but not peace at any price.

[The new Government won an overwhelming vote of confidence in the National Assembly. The vote was 40 for the Government, none against and eight abstentions. Mr. Somsanith's victory startled most political observers who had expected only a slender majority for him.]

Experts believed many members voted for Mr. Somsanith because there was no other possible Government, and moreover they were not keen about taking on themselves the job of solving Laos' internal troubles.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3357:LAO:A]

B. Prince Souphanouvong's Escape: The Pathet Lao leader, Prince Souphanouvong, and 15 other political prisoners escaped on May 25 from Army barracks in Vientiane where they had been confined.

The authorities assumed that the fugitives would have made for the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam (North) or the mountains of northern Laos where there were groups of Pathet Lao guerrillas.

A Government statement said that their escape was made possible by the recent decision of the Government to ease security precautions around Prince Souphanouvong.

It said that the prisoners had now "placed themselves irrevocably in the position of traitors to the country."

[Prince Souphanouvong organized the Pathet Lao in 1950. He is half-brother to the former Prime Minister, Prince Souvanna Phouma. The Pathet Lao leader and his followers have been in custody since the outbreak of the revolt in the Northern Provinces in July, 1959. Their trial, originally set for October, 1959, was postponed several times and has not yet been held. The Communist States, led by the Soviet Union and China, had repeatedly sought the release of the Prince and his followers, and had asked Britain to intervene to effect it. Britain and Russia were co-Chairmen of the 1954 Geneva Conference which ended the eight-year Indo-China war. In November, 1959, Britain rejected a Chinese suggestion that she should intervene with Russia to prevent the trial.]

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3027:LAO:A]

LEBANON

A. Development Programme: A limited programme of development became operative in Lebanon from May, 1960 while long-term plans of economic development continued to be studied by Lebanese and foreign economists.

Approval of the limited development programme by the Chamber of Deputies was announced by a Government Decree published on May 5.

According to the details of the programme, the Chamber of Deputies had approved a total expenditure of £L151,430,000, of which £L17,720,000 would come from State reserves and £L33,710,000 from oil transit revenues.

[It will be remembered that the Iraq Petroleum Company has agreed to pay £L51,000,000 in settlement of past claims].

The main heads of expenditure were: Road construction—£L16,480,000; New supplies of drinking water in rural districts—£L12,400,000; Irrigation—£L6,550,000; Electrical net-work—£L3,000,000; Public buildings—£L9,250,000; Surveys—£L3,000,000; Smaller social aid projects—£L750,000.

These targets for 1960 differed very little from the achievements of 1959 when £L54,500,000 was spent on communications, water and electricity supplies. (£ Lebanese 6.16 makes a £ 1 sterling).

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2725:LEB:A, 2737:LEB:A]

MALAYA

A. University To Be Split: The representatives of the Governments of Malaya and Singapore met in Kuala Lumpur on May 22 and agreed on the broad principles of splitting the University of Malaya into two divisions — Singapore and the Federation.

An official statement said that the purpose of the meeting was to discuss "matters relating to the University of Malaya, in particular, the procedure for inter-Governmental consultations on problems arising from the proposal to set up separate universities in Kuala Lumpur and Singapore, if possible, as from 1962.

It added: "The principle of separate universities was endorsed and it was agreed to set up an inter-Governmental committee at official level to examine the financial and administrative implications, in particular, reciprocity in the admission of students between Singapore and the Federation."

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 1345:MAL:A]

B. Agriculture Faculty At University: A Faculty of Agriculture at Malaya University, established at a cost of $2,000,000 (Malayan), was declared open at Kuala Lumpur by the New Zealand Prime Minister, Mr. Walter Nash.

The Faculty was a gift from New Zealand under the Colombo Plan.

In doing so, Mr. Nash said that the Colombo Plan had established an "ideal basis" of association and partnership between the member-countries to share their wealth and technical skills for each other's benefit.

He said that his Government was much interested in the Colombo Plan and took an active part in it because "it calls for those qualities of co-operation, inter-dependence and social welfare which we believe are essential to human advancement."

Earlier, Mr. Nash made a trip by air to Taiping in northern Malaya to visit troops of the 2nd Battalion New Zealand Regiment.

The Battalion is part of the 28th Independent Commonwealth Infantry Brigade which is engaged in operations against remnants of the Malayan Communist Party in the area.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 1345:MAL:A]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MALDIVES

A. Mr. Abdullah Afif Pardoned: It was announced in Colombo by the Maldivian Government's representative on June 5 that the Prime Minister, Mr. Ibrahim Nasir, had granted pardon to Mr. Abdullah Afif and others who rebelled against the Government in 1959.

(The Times of Ceylon, Colombo)

[Prev. ref. 3205:MAL:A]

MONGOLIA (Outer)

A. Mr. Chou En-lai's Visit: The Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, paid a visit to the People's Republic of Mongolia from May 27 to June 1.

Amidst a packed programme of public receptions and talks with Mongolian leaders, Mr. Chou En-lai took time off to inspect cultural, educational, industrial and agricultural centres.

At the conclusion of his visit, a Treaty of Friendship and Mutual Assistance between the two countries was signed on May 31.

Also on the same day (May 31), the Chairman of the Council of Ministers, Mr. Y. Tsedenbal, and Mr. Chou En-lai issued a joint communique on their talks.

The communique said: "During the talks, the two parties discussed the specific question of further consolidating and developing fraternal friendship and all-round co-operation between the two countries and exchanged views on important international questions.

"The talks proceeded in a cordial and friendly atmosphere and completely identical views were reached by the two parties on the various questions they discussed in the talks.

"In order to further consolidate and expand the unbreakable friendship between the two peoples and the fraternal co-operation between the two countries, the delegates of the two Governments signed in Ulan Bator on May 31, 1960 the Treaty of Friendship and Mutual Assistance Between the People's Republic of China and the People's Republic of Mongolia, the Agreement Between the Governments of the People's Republic of China and the People's Republic of Mongolia on Economic and Technical Aid Given by the Government of the People's Republic of China to the Government of the People's Republic of Mongolia and the Agreement on Scientific and Technological Co-operation Between the People's Republic of China and the People's Republic of Mongolia.

"In accordance with the Agreement on economic and technical aid, the Government of the People's Republic of China will, in the period between 1961 and 1965, give the Government of the People's Republic of Mongolia a long-term loan of 200 million roubles, and help the People's Republic of Mongolia build a number of industrial enterprises, water conservancy works and public utilities. The Government of the People's Republic of Mongolia expressed its heart-felt gratitude to the Chinese people for their many-sided assistance to the Mongolian people in their socialist construction."

Treaty Of Friendship And Mutual Assistance:

The following is the text of the Treaty of Friendship and Mutual Assistance:

"The Chairman of the People's Republic of China and the Presidium of the Great People's Hural of the People's Republic of Mongolia,

"Being eagerly desirous of further developing and strengthening the unbreakable fraternal relations of friendship and mutual assistance between the People's Republic of China and the People's Republic of Mongolia on the basis of the principle of proletarian internationalism and of mutual respect for State sovereignty and territorial integrity, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, and equality and mutual benefit,

"Determined to make every effort to contribute to the maintenance and consolidation of Asian and world peace and to the safeguarding of the security of all peoples,

"And deeply convinced that the development and consolidation of the relations of friendship and mutual assistance between China and Mongolia accord with the vital interests of the Chinese and Mongolian peoples and, at the same time, also with the interests of all peoples of the world,

"Have decided for this purpose to conclude this Treaty and appointed as their respective plenipotentiaries:

"The Chairman of the People's Republic of China: Mr. Chou En-lai, Premier of the State Council.

"The Presidium of the Great People's Hural of the People's Republic of Mongolia: Mr. Yumjagin Tsedenbal, Chairman of the Council of Ministers.

"The plenipotentiaries of the two parties, having examined each other's credentials and found them in good and due form, have agreed upon the following:

"Article 1: The Contracting Parties will make every effort to safeguard Asian and world peace and the security of all peoples.

"Article 2: The Contracting Parties will consult with each other on all important international questions of common interest to the People's Republic of China and the People's Republic of Mongolia.

"Article 3: The Contracting Parties will render each other every possible economic and technical aid in the cause of peaceful construction of the two countries.

"Article 4: The Contracting Parties reiterate that they will continue to consolidate and develop economic, cultural and scientific and technological co-operation between the two countries in accordance with the Agreement on economic and cultural co-operation signed by the People's Republic of China and the People's Republic of Mongolia on October 4, 1952.

"Article 5: The present Treaty is subject to ratification and shall come into force on the day of exchange of Instruments of Ratification, which will take place in Peking.

"The present Treaty will remain in force until the Contracting Parties agree to amend or terminate it."

(China Today)

[Prev. ref. 3233:MON:A]

B. Broadcasting Station Opened: A new Central Broadcasting Station, built with the help of the Soviet Union, was inaugurated in Ulan Bator on April 21.

(Mongolia Today)

[Prev. ref. 3206:MON:C]

PAKISTAN

A. US Wheat: The US Agriculture Department announced on June 8 the amendment of a PL 480 authorization issued to Pakistan. This would permit Pakistan to buy an additional 100,000 metric tons of US wheat or wheat flour worth $6,200,000.

The total authorization, as amended, said that the US Agriculture Department had provided for the purchase of 400,000 metric tons of wheat worth $24,200,000 by Pakistan.

It added that the purchases of about 260,000 metric tons by Pakistan previously authorized had been completed.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3309:PAK:D]

B. Mr. Amir Mohammed Khan Sworn-in As Governor Of West Pakistan: Mr. Amir Mohammed Khan was sworn-in as the new Governor of West Pakistan in Lahore on June 1.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3309:PAK:H]

PHILIPPINES

A. Mr. D. D. Eisenhower's Visit: The US President, Mr. D. D. Eisenhower, paid a goodwill visit to the Philippines at the invitation of President Carlos P. Garcia from June 14 to 16.

Mr. Eisenhower was given a warm reception on his arrival. Half the population of Manila turned out to greet him.

There was, however, a brief demonstration against him. Members of the Nationalist Youth Movement hoisted placards saying "We want economic freedom," "America, pay our claims", and "Why is USA giving more aid to Japan?"

But, the signs quickly disappeared, leaving "We Like Ike" placards in possession of the field.

President Carlos Garcia, welcoming Mr. Eisenhower, said: "You will be long-remembered by our people and other free peoples in Asia for your patient, passionate and unrelenting quest for a permanent and just world peace, in whose environment man may finally subdue such age-old adversaries as ignorance, disease, poverty and vice and fulfil his highest destiny."

Replying, Mr. Eisenhower affirmed the determination of USA to stay a true partner with the Philippines in "defence of the ideals of freedom and human dignity in which we alike believe."

After the welcome, the two Presidents drove together in an open car to the Presidential Palace. Thousands lined the procession route from the airport to Malacang Palace.

Address To Congress:

Mr. Eisenhower's programme in Manila included an address to a joint session of the Philippines Congress.

Addressing the Congress on June 15, Mr. Eisenhower said that communism feared constructive nationalism as a "mortal foe" and added that this was evident "in the continuing efforts of the communist conspiracy to penetrate nationalist movements to pervert them and to pirate them for their own evil objectives."

Bitterly attacking communism, he said that nationalism was a mighty and relentless force, and "no conspiracy of power, no compulsion of arms can stifle it for long."

He went on: "To dominate—if they can—the eternal impulse of national patriotism, the communists use the age-old tactics of divide to conquer.

"They use force and threats of force, subversion and bribery, propaganda and spurious

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

promises. They deny the dignity of men and have subjected many millions to the execution of master plans dictated in far away places.

"Communism demands subservience to a single ideology, to a strait jacket of ideas and approaches and methods. Freedom of individuals or nations to them is intolerable.

"Free men, free nations make their own rules to fit their own needs within a universally accepted frame of justice and law.

"We readily accept the fact that there are a great variety of political, social and economic systems in the world: and we accept the further fact that there is no single, best way of life that answers the needs of everyone everywhere.

"Communist propaganda tries to obscure these facts and present USA as an imperialistic seeker of limitless power over all the peoples of the world. You, as a Republic, know that our Republic is no empire of tyranny.

"In your sister Republic of USA, the greatest achievement of our history is that our rebels against colonialism, against subjection, against tyranny, were the first in this era to raise the banner of freedom and decent nationalism, to carry it beyond our own shores to honour it everywhere.

"The basic antagonism of the communist system to anything which it cannot control is the single most important cause of the tension between free nations in all their variety on the one hand, and—on the other—the rigidly controlled Communist bloc.

"Under freedom, thriving sovereign nations of diverse political, economic and social systems are the basic, healthy cells that make up the thriving world community.

"Freedom and independence is in the interest of all and, for that reason, the purpose of American assistance programmes is to protect the right of nations to develop political and social institutions of their choice rather than having to accept extremist solutions under the whip of hunger or the threat of armed attack and domination.

"What we have in common with free nations in Asia, Africa, Europe and Latin America are basic, weighty convictions, more important than differences of speech, colour and culture.

"USA would never attempt to dictate or exercise unfair pressure or forget or ignore the Philippines, its equal in sovereign dignity.

"And never, I pray, will the Philippines take advantage of world sympathy for a small nation to make a whipping boy of USA.

"Each of us is proud to recognize the other as a sovereign equal."

Public Reception:

Mr. Eisenhower was given a public reception in Manila on June 16.

Speaking on the occasion, he said that the arms race must be brought under control.

He said: "The goal of a world at peace, in friendship with freedom, is so worth attaining that every feasible and honourable avenue must be explored.

"Communist intransigence at the conference table, whenever they do agree to sit at one, makes the attainment of an equitable agreement difficult.

"Moreover, the record of communist violations of agreements is long. The continuation of communist provocations, subversion and terrorism while negotiations are under way serves only to compound the difficulty of arriving at peaceful settlements.

"But we shall never close the door to peaceful negotiations.

"We shall continue to make it clear that reason and commonsense must prevail over senseless antagonism and distorted misunderstandings and propaganda.

"The arms race must be brought under control and the nuclear menace, that is poised in delicate suspension over the heads of all mankind, must be eliminated. This, I am convinced, can be done without appeasement or surrender, by continuing a course of patient, resourceful and businesslike dealings with the Soviet leaders."

State Banquet:

Speaking at a State banquet given in his honour earlier by President Garcia, Mr. Eisenhower said that new weapons had now made war a complete absurdity.

He appealed to communist nations to join in the quest for peace.

He said that there had been great technical progress in the last 20 years and it was impossible to imagine what could be the achievements of the next 20 years.

He added: "We must fight, but above all we must be prepared. I don't mean to fight wars as we have understood them. Weapons have now come upon the scene that make war as we have understood it in the past a complete absurdity and really impossible and preposterous.

"This means, in short, if used with the profusion sometimes predicted, really, the destruction of civilization as we know it.

"This cannot be.

"I am quite sure there was never in war a battle won by a pessimist.

"We must be optimistic, but optimism by no means should beget complacency. I believe that the time for working harder, more thoughtfully and in a more dedicated fashion is now with us.

"We must strengthen our spiritual powers in deeper faith in the Almighty.

"We must dedicate ourselves more to the ideals of peace, not a peace of surrender, not a peace of appeasement, but decent reasonable peace, permanent and with justice for all."

On June 16, Mr. Eisenhower received an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of the Philippines.

Later, he received from Mr. Garcia the highest Filipino decoration, Rajah of the Order of Sikatuna.

Joint Communique:

Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Garcia then signed a joint communique which said that during their talks they had emphasized the importance of close military collaboration and planning.

The communique hinted at the possible provision of modern weapons to strengthen the Philippine forces.

It said that the two Presidents expressed the view that "this close military collaboration and planning should be aimed at the maximum effectiveness in formulating and executing US military assistance programmes and in furthering Philippine defensive capability in the light of modern requirements".

It said that the two leaders noted the problems facing the free world at the beginning of the new decade and discussed "the possibility of increased tensions in view of recent statements by communist leaders in Moscow and Peking."

It said that they also assessed "the continuing threat to peace in the Far East posed by China."

In this connexion, they re-affirmed the importance of regional co-operation in ensuring the independence of the nations of South-East Asia and emphasized the important role of the South-East Asia Treaty Organization.

They noted with satisfaction the contribution being made by the Philippines towards strengthening its ties with its Asian neighbours.

President Eisenhower, on his part, renewed the assurance he had given to President Garcia in Washington that, under the provisions of the Mutual Defence Treaty, "any armed attack against the Philippines would involve an attack against the US forces stationed there and against USA and would be instantly repelled."

The two leaders noted with satisfaction the "considerable progress" made in talks between the Philippines Foreign Minister and the US Ambassador towards the settlement of problems arising from the presence of US bases in the Philippines.

They expressed confidence that the few remaining problems would be similarly resolved to the mutual satisfaction of the two Governments.

(The New York Times and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2964:PHI:A]

SINGAPORE

A. National Day Celebrations: The first anniversary of the emergence of Singapore as a self-governing State was celebrated on June 3.

Addressing a mass rally, the Prime Minister, Mr. Lee Kuan Yew, said that nothing had happened in the past year to alter the basic analysis of Singapore's position—"our political semi-independence, our economic subjugation to forces and factors for the time being beyond our control and our formula to meet this curious interim position."

Singapore, he said, must continue to maintain sane and stable conditions and to foster the growth of national unity between the people of various races.

For the immediate future, he said, no pitfalls were expected. In a world torn by ideological and power conflicts of the Great Powers, it was unlikely that Singapore would have any signal misfortune or good fortune But if Singapore could keep up the morale and confidence born out of stability and sanity of a Government which was fair, just and honest, then the year ahead should see more and more expansion of commercial and industrial enterprises, creating more jobs and bringing the good things of life.

Message To Students:

In a separate National Day message to students, Mr. Lee Kuan Yew said that it rested with them to contribute in every way to national unity.

Their fathers and mothers, he said, had come to Singapore from China, India, Indonesia and elsewhere to earn a living because life was easier in Singapore than in countries where they were born. It now rested with the young to grow up speaking the national language, prepared to share their joys and sorrows and to fight and die for each other and ready to give complete loyalty to Singapore.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2739:SGP:A]

B. New Citizenship Law: The Legislative Assembly adopted an official Bill on May 16 amending the Citizenship Ordinance of 1957. Voting on the Bill was unanimous.

In effect, it tightened up the citizenship law by bringing it in line with that of the Federation of Malaya.

Under the 1957 Ordinance, any Indian or other Commonwealth citizen was required to have only a minimum of two years' residential qualification for entitling him to be registered as a Singapore citizen; but now, under the amending Bill, he must have been resident in Singapore for at least eight years out of the 12 preceding the date of application, must give satisfactory proof of his intention to reside in Singapore permanently and must also take an oath not to exercise the rights, powers or privileges to which he may be entitled by reason of the nationality or citizenship of any State or country outside Malaya (which is the collective name for Singapore and the Federation). Hitherto, a declaration and oath of this nature were required only in the case of an alien desiring to apply for citizenship by naturalization.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The amending Bill also increased the qualifying period of residence for naturalization from eight to ten years out of the 12 immediately preceding the date of application.

The provisions of the amending Bill were operative with retrospective effect from April 6, 1960. That was why registration of new applicants for citizenship was suspended as from that date, pending the passage of the Bill. Now that the Bill had been passed, registration of new applicants would be resumed. April 6 was the day on which the Bill was first introduced in the Assembly, and if it had not been made operative from that date, those who did not have the eight years' residential qualification would have applied for registration during the intervening period and become citizens under the old provision, thus beating the deadline. The authorities did not want this to happen, and hence the suspension of registration pending finalization of the new measure. But, the applications that had been received before April 6 were dealt with during the intervening period. That, of course, was only fair to those who had acted within their legitimate rights and without anticipating the new legislation.

Though the immediate effect of the amendment was to bring the citizenship law in line with that of the Federation of Malaya, its main objects were officially described as the inculcation of a spirit of loyalty among the citizens and the eradication of unemployment among them.

The Minister for Home Affairs, Mr. Ong Pan Boon, who piloted the Bill, said during its second reading that a large number of the 400,000 new citizens had taken advantage of the liberal citizenship law to obtain citizenship "for the sake of convenience in order to enjoy the rights and privileges of a citizen, such as employment, public assistance or other social services with little obligation on their part."

The purpose of the Bill, therefore, he said, was to confine citizenship to those who had demonstrated their undivided loyalty to the State and their intention to reside there permanently and to debar those who seek to obtain citizenship for reasons of convenience or expediency, thereby hoping to enjoy the best of the two worlds, as in the case of those possessing dual citizenship.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 1699:SGP:A, 3360:SGP:A]

TURKEY

SUMMARY: Army Seizes Power—Arrest Of President, Premier And Others—General Cemal Gursel's Statements—Inquiry Into Menderes Regime—Commission Appointed To Draw Up New Constitution—Recognition Of New Regime—Restoration Of Civil Administration—Events Leading To Coup—Students' Demonstrations—Army Cadets' Protest Parade—Deputies Fight In National Assembly—Background.

A. Army Seizes Power: The Army seized control of Turkey in a swift, pre-dawn coup d'etat on May 27.

The President, Mr. Celal Bayar, the Prime Minister, Mr. Adnan Menderes, and other key members of the Government were arrested.

An iron grip was imposed on the main cities in the country. Armoured cars, cavalrymen and troops patrolled the streets as citizens stayed indoors beside their radio sets to listen to a series of announcements by the new regime.

All communications out of Turkey were cut.

Ankara and Istanbul Radios said that the bloodless coup was temporary and that the Government would be handed over to the winning party after free elections.

The man who led the coup was General Cemal Gursel. He was until early in May, 1960 Commander of the Turkish Land Forces. A few days earlier, he was given two months' leave of absence, preparatory to retirement. He was, in effect, forced to retire.

General Gursel fought with Kemal Ataturk, founder of modern Turkey, against the British at Gallipoli and later in Palestine as an Artillery Officer. He had never involved himself in politics.

Immediately after the coup, General Gursel set up a Committee of National Union under his chairmanship to rule Turkey.

The Committee of National Union charged a Commission of professors with the task of drafting a new Constitution for Turkey.

The Rector of Istanbul University was named as the Chairman of the Constitution Commission.

An official communique said that General Gursel had assumed the powers of President, Prime Minister, and Commander of Security Forces.

A communique signed by General Gursel and broadcast repeatedly by Ankara Radio said that the Army stepped in to avert a catastrophe in the country.

It said: "I (General Gursel) have taken over the Government and command of the State and Turkish Armed Forces. I expect true co-operation from officials, from my brothers-in-arms and citizens."

Another communique issued by General Gursel said that the Prime Minister, Mr. A. Menderes, and the Minister of Finance, Mr. Hasan Polatkan, had been intercepted on the Kutahya road in Central Turkey and brought to Ankara under arrest.

Ankara Radio said that the coup was not directed against any party or class.

It added that Turkey would remain loyal to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and the Central Treaty Organization (CENTO).

Radio announcements went on throughout the day on May 28 outlining measures to restore freedom of the Press, release of arrested students, freezing of bank operations, closing of airports and placing the police under Army control.

Key Man In Coup:

It was disclosed in Ankara on May 28 that the key man in the coup was the jovial Admiral Sargut, Director of Military Information Services.

Admiral Sargut, working in close co-operation with the group of Staff Officers which planned Mr. Menderes's overthrow filtered all information passing through to the Government and hid all knowledge of the Army's intentions from the authorities.

Up to the last moment, the overthrown Foreign Minister, Mr. Fatin Zorlu, was reporting confidently that the Army raised no problems for the Government.

General Gursel himself, elected to lead the revolt because of his immense prestige, was only informed of his role in the uprising at the very last moment.

At 11 o'clock on the night of the coup, cadets of the Army Training School were informed. Their tempers, white-hot following police action against some of their officers and impatient for action, the cadets refused to rest in the short time remaining before the zero hour.

At midnight, the order was given by radio to Army Commanders to proceed to action.

The Government was thus taken completely by surprise.

A representative of the Committee for National Unity told a news conference in Ankara on May 28 that it had taken the Army only six hours to take control of Turkey.

He said: "We wanted to make the move speedily at night when people are not in the streets. We aimed not to spoil the citizens' sleep."

He added that the coup was meticulously organized and the most minute details were planned out. The date of the coup was postponed several times during recent weeks and on May 26, the definite date was fixed. Once the coup had succeeded, General Gursel, who was in Izmir, was asked to take over the leadership—a tribute to his impeccable reputation as a soldier and as a mark of respect for the man who, when he was retired 24 days earlier from his Command after a dispute with Mr. Menderes, left this last message to his troops: 'Let the Army beware of being a prisoner in the hands of political factions'.

Gen. C. Gursel's Broadcasts:

General Cemal Gursel went on the air on May 28 to explain to the Turkish nation and the world the reasons for the coup.

He said that the incidents over the past month were driving the nation to a terrible catastrophe. [He was referring to various demonstrations in cities and the harsh measures taken by the Menderes Government to suppress opposition.]

He said: "This was leading the country to a civil war. I am convinced that the political ambitions which were leading the country to a moral and material waste at a time when the International situation was worsening continuously were deplored by all citizens with a conscience."

He added that he had no ambition to be a dictator. He aimed at establishing a sound democratic regime, but he had banned party political activities until the new Constitution started functioning.

He asked: "How far was the situation to be allowed to go on? Were we just to watch, with our country, this terrible spectacle? My countrymen, I deliberated over the situation for months. I told the old leaders the various aspects of the dilemma, but their personal ambitions blinded them to such an extent that they tried to carry on by force. Their actions clearly showed that they were determined to chain the Turkish people.

"To think that such a rule by force could possibly be administered in this country would be to consider the Turkish nation a dumb flock."

General Gursel told a group of foreign correspondents on May 28 that it would be a month or six weeks before Turkey would have a new Constitution.

The new Cabinet of 18 Ministers would rule Turkey until new Elections were held. The new Constitution would provide for a two-Chamber Parliament and a Constitutional Court to prevent further abuses.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Constitution would be submitted for approval to a Council of leading personalities. There would be no popular referendum on the Constitution. The administration would then be handed over to the people who won the Elections.

When questioned about the possibility of his visiting the Soviet Union, he said that he would not be able to go to Moscow.

He added: "I have a lot of work to do; so I will be unable to visit USSR whose scientific and technical development is admired the world over." [The ousted Prime Minister, Mr. A. Menderes, had been invited to Moscow by the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev.]

In answer to other questions about the arrest of the members of the Menderes regime, he said: "The number of persons arrested throughout Turkey is 200 at the most." Mr. Menderes would probably remain under arrest until after the Elections. "Perhaps a little rest will do him and his Party no harm."

At one point, he launched an attack against the political exploitation of religion under the Menderes regime and said that Islam was being debased by backward and ignorant priests. If Islam was intelligently interpreted it could be a factor for progress.

He added that the situation had reached such a peak of gravity that force alone could save the country.

A day after the coup (May 28), the two main Turkish cities, Ankara and Istanbul, returned to normal.

In another broadcast on May 29, General Cemal Gursel said: "We shall always be on the side of the law. Each citizen is protected by the law, and all are children of one and the same nation.

"We are happy to have been able to do our duty. We are proud of our action. I am happy to note that the Turkish people have shown sympathy and understanding with this action. I thank them for it."

Turning to the foreign policy of the new Government, he said: "Our aim is to remain faithful to the UN Charter and the rights of man. We shall never deviate from this path. The motto of our great (Kemal) Ataturk (founder of the Turkish Republic)—'peace at home and peace in the world'—is the beacon which guides us. Our Agreements and alliances will remain in vigour. We are linked with NATO and CENTO."

General Cemal Gursel told newsmen in Ankara on June 7 that "if the nation's interests require it," he would assume the leadership of a political party aimed at applying "the principles of the revolution" which swept the previous Government out of power.

He added: "Certainly, my present status as a soldier and my function as Chief of State and as supreme authority in the nation now prevent me from taking an active part in politics. But if the nation's interests require it, I will not hesitate to do so."

Enquiry Into Conduct Of Previous Government:

The new regime announced on May 31 that it had ordered the Justice Minister, Mr. Abdullah Gozubuyuk, to set up an Enquiry Committee to investigate into the activities of the members of the Menderes regime.

Those adjudged 'guilty', it added, would be brought before the Supreme Court.

A communique issued by the Cabinet said that this decision was taken to assure swift action and prevent loss of material evidence.

It also instructed Mr. Abdullah Gozubuyuk to set up an "absolutely independent and solid judicial apparatus."

Murder Of Students And Cadets:

The official spokesman for the National Union Committee, Colonel Ertugrul Alatli, said in Ankara on June 1 that a number of bodies—mostly of students—had been found in Ankara and Istanbul and members of the overthrown Menderes regime might face possible death sentences for responsibility for them.

The bodies, he said, were found in common graves and refrigeration chambers.

[Reports that students and others were killed in anti-Menderes demonstrations which preceded the coup were denied by spokesmen of the former Government.]

An investigating group in Istanbul was inquiring into the exact number of the bodies. "We have traced many of them. I cannot say how they were killed."

On June 3, the National Union Committee, in a communique, said that some victims of the former Menderes regime had been minced and served to animals.

The communique, broadcast by Ankara Radio, said: "Some innocent people were attacked when they had no means of defending themselves and their bodies were dumped in remote places and in wells."

Some of the bodies, it said, were stored in refrigeration chambers "and some were even minced and served to animals."

The murders took place between April 28, when student demonstrations started and May 27, the day of the coup.

General Cemal Gursel told the Army Staff Officers on June 3 that leaders of the former Menderes regime had planned to murder all 1,500 cadets of the Turkish Military Academy.

He described the former leaders as "guilty people such as we have never seen before in our history, who planned to shoot the sons of our country."

The former Commanding Officer of the Presidential Guard, Colonel Osman Koksal of the Turkish Army, said in Ankara on June 5 that a plan by the leaders of the ousted regime to annihilate all the Cadets in the Turkish Military Academy "if it became necessary" was revealed to him on May 22 by General Argun, who was Military Governor of Ankara before General Gursel took over.

Colonel Koksal said that an emergency meeting of the Cabinet was held at the President's Office in the pre-dawn hours of May 22, the day after the cadets of the Military Academy had staged their protest demonstration in the streets of Ankara. This pre-dawn meeting was attended by the top members of the ousted regime, including Mr. A. Menderes, Mr. Fatin Zorlu and Army officers loyal to the regime who held key posts at the time.

According to Colonel Koksal, the following dialogue took place between him and General Argun.

Gen. Argun: "We have decided to close all schools in Turkey, including the Military Academy."

Col. Koksal: "Why?"

Gen. Argun: "You saw the demonstration staged by the Cadets of the Academy? We must protect high-ranking officers."

Col. Koksal: "Have you considered the attitude which the officer corps will take after you expel the students from the Military Academy? I am certain they will protect the Cadets."

Gen. Argun: "We will dismiss the whole Army, if necessary."

Col. Koksal: "This is a frightful decision you have taken."

Gen. Argun: "That is not all. If necessary, we will annihilate all the students in the Military Academy."

This conversation was reported to the officers who were preparing the revolution, and it quickened their activity.

Recognition Of New Regime:

By June 4, several Governments had recognized the new regime in Turkey. These included India, Pakistan, Russia, UK and USA.

In Washington, the State Department said on May 30 that the fact that USA maintained its "usual relations" with high officials of the Turkish Government was tantamount to recognition of the new Government of General Cemal Gursel.

It added: "No other formal act of recognition is necessary. We expect that our close and friendly relations with Turkey will continue as in the past."

Resumption Of Civil Administration In Provinces:

Civil administration in the Provinces was restored on June 7 with the exception of important centres like Ankara, Istanbul and Izmir, which were still under Army command.

General Cemal Gursel told a group of civil administrators in Ankara on June 7: "In recent years, the old regime sabotaged the morale and violated the confidence of the people. Now, these will be restored. I count on you and wish you full success."

An Ankara message on June 8 said that many uncertainties in civil life remained despite the restoration of civil administration.

It was evident, the message said, that the Army would retain possession of the instruments of power longer than had been thought and, doubtless, longer than the Army itself thought.

Arrest Of 16 Provincial Governors:

The official spokesman of the National Union Committee, Colonel Ertugrul Alatli, announced in Ankara on June 9 that 16 Provincial Governors had been arrested and that new men had been appointed in their places.

He told newsmen that new members had been appointed to the National Union Committee, but he declined to give their names "for reasons of security."

At the same time, he declared that there was no unrest in the country and no danger of unrest.

He added that the new Head of Government, General Cemal Gursel, would either approve the text of the new Turkish Constitution or send it back to the National Union Committee by June 13.

When asked whether General Gursel was constitutionally obliged to abide by the decisions the Committee had taken, he replied that the Committee was Turkey's supreme legislative organ and its decisions were binding on General Gursel as well.

Mr. Ismet Inonu's Statement:

The leader of the Opposition Republican People's Party, Mr. Ismet Inonu, told foreign correspondents in Ankara on June 1 that he had not been told beforehand by the military authorities that they were planning to carry out a coup.

He recalled that he had warned the Government and the Parliamentary majority party before the change:

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Your Government makes a revolution legitimate".

"In my opinion," he added, "the action of the Army was a legitimate action in the service of the country. This action received the approval of the masses so rapidly and so clearly that one could say that the masses themselves participated in the revolution".

Asked about the arrests now being made by the new regime, he denied that his party had furnished lists of people to be arrested.

He said he had called on General Gursel and had expressed his best wishes to him.

Asked by an Israeli correspondent whether his Republican People's Party would change the Turkish foreign policy, especially in West Asia, he replied: "There will not be any change in foreign policy. In any case, it was ourselves who established Turkish foreign policy. What we want in West Asia is peace. We shall be happy if we can serve the cause of peace among the West Asian nations".

Mr. N. Khruschev's View:

Speaking at a communist workers' meeting in Moscow on May 28, the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, said that the Soviet Union wished to improve her relations with Turkey.

He added that the previous Turkish Government (overthrown on May 27) had not contributed to an improvement in their relations, but the Soviet Union hoped that the new regime would do so.

Events Leading To The Coup—Students' Demonstrations:

The harsh and draconian methods used by the Menderes Government in its efforts to suppress opposition led to great student and popular unrest all over Turkey, particularly in the cities.

Students' demonstrations began on May 28 in Ankara and Istanbul. There were clashes between the students and the police in Ankara where Martial Law was declared.

In Ankara, several thousand people held a demonstration in the University area calling for the resignation of the Government and shouting slogans in support of the Opposition leader, Mr. Ismet Inonu.

According to unofficial reports, police and troops opened fire in several areas in Ankara and some persons were reported killed. The streets were full of fainting women and crying children. According to an eye-witness account, two Army officers were seen openly crying. Ambulances were seen carrying injured students to hospital.

In Istanbul, the University was surrounded by tanks and infantry. About 2,000 students were arrested and taken away in Army trucks to military detention camps.

One thousand students began a sit-down strike on April 29 in the University campus. They said that they would not leave the campus until the Prime Minister, Mr. Adnan Menderes, resigned.

In Izmir, police broke up a demonstration by about a thousand students in front of the Governor's residence.

Schools and universities in Istanbul and Ankara had been closed for a month.

Several Opposition members had been suspended from the Assembly for short periods.

The Turkish Government imposed Martial Law in Istanbul and Ankara on April 28 following students' demonstrations in which the police opened fire with pistols killing about five persons and injuring 15. Three policemen were reported injured.

Simultaneously, a state of siege was proclaimed in Ankara and Istanbul.

All meetings and publication of news about the demonstrations were banned, and a curfew was imposed between 9 p.m. and 5 a.m. local time.

On April 29, the Turkish National Assembly approved a Government decree that Martial Law should remain in force in Ankara and Istanbul for three months.

During the debate on the decree, Opposition Deputies stood in silence for one minute in honour of those killed in police firings.

The order to continue Martial Law in Ankara and Istanbul for three months was issued after another day of clashes on April 29 between the students on the one hand and the military and police on the other.

In Ankara, there was a pitched battle when the police, using tear-gas and truncheons, tried to disperse thousands of students demonstrating against the Government. When the local Military Commander threatened to open fire at the demonstrators, they shouted back: "Shoot, we are ready". Several hundreds of students were arrested.

Student demonstrators shouting "Freedom" had stoned the mounted police, who first fired warning shots in the air and then at the crowd.

Tanks stood by while the students paraded with Turkish flags and pictures of Ataturk, founder of modern Turkey.

The students were angry over the suspension of Mr. Ismet Inonu and 12 other Opposition members from Parliament.

Mr. Inonu was expelled because of a speech he delivered in which he was alleged to have incited rebellion, resistance to the laws of the country and aggression against the nation, the Army and the "spiritual being" of the National Assembly.

The 12 other members were expelled with the help of the police for repeatedly thumping the tables and shouting "loathsome words".

The uproar came as the Assembly debated a Bill giving Parliamentary Investigation Committees authority to ban the publication of all kinds of news, close down newspapers which violated the ban and imprison those opposing the Committees' measures and decisions. The Bill was later approved.

Students of the Istanbul Cultural Institute staged an anti-Government demonstration on April 30.

A communique issued by the Istanbul State of Siege Command said that the Army had been obliged to intervene to restore order.

The Institute was ordered to be closed.

Mr. Menderes said in his third radio broadcast to the Turkish nation in three days, on May 1 that the Opposition Republican People's Party wanted to "spoil" the NATO Conference opening in Istanbul on May 2.

He maintained that the Opposition tactics were to attempt to seize Government by force.

He claimed that the disorders were timed to take place during the Central Treaty Organization (CENTO) Conference in Tehran, during May Day, and during the NATO Conference in Istanbul.

In May 1, the Martial Law Governor forbade all Turkish newspapers to publish any account, in any form, of the news conference given earlier that day by the Foreign Minister, Mr. Fatin Zorlu.

The news conference was held at NATO Headquarters in Istanbul before a group of 300 journalists.

Part of Mr. Zorlu's news conference had been broadcast by the official Turkish Radio, but the official news agency, Anatol, did not report it.

Mr. Zorlu had blamed the Opposition for the disturbances.

He had said that after every election the Opposition had tried to sabotage and subvert the Government.

He claimed that the riots were the culmination of the efforts on the part of the minority party to take power which the Turkish electorate denied them over and over again.

[Since the disturbances began, seven daily or weekly newspapers had been either banned or suspected. These included the two official organs of the Republican People's Party, Ulus and Dunya.]

The Istanbul State of Siege Command announced on May 2 that troops would shoot at sight if, at the end of the curfew on May 2, there were any signs of renewed demonstrations.

It said in a communique that the 24 hours' thinking time given by the curfew which went into force at 4 a.m. local time on May 2 would be followed by the most rigorous measures if the demonstrations continued.

The communique added: "The order has been given to the troops to shoot at sight any gathering of more than five persons on the expiry of the 24 hours."

It said that from May 3 pedestrians must keep away from any gathering. Distribution of flags and applauding of demonstrators were also strictly forbidden.

There were demonstrations again on May 2.

About 2,000 youths demonstrated near the building where a NATO meeting was being held. They shouted "Freedom, Freedom", as soldiers pushed them back with rifle butts. A number of demonstrators were arrested.

The superficial calm which had reigned in Turkey from May 2 to 4 was abruptly ended on May 5 when an organized demonstration was held in Ankara.

The trouble began when students strolling in groups of three—the maximum number permitted by the State of Siege regulations—on the capital's Boulevard Ataturk invaded the roadway, apparently at a secret signal.

They were joined by Government workers emerging from their offices at closing time and soon there was a crowd of some 3,000 round the statue of Kemal Ataturk shouting "Liberty" and singing the National Anthem.

The demonstration, which lasted 40 minutes, was broken by club-wielding policemen. About 40 demonstrators were arrested.

In a street in Ankara on the night of May 5, about 1,000 students mobbed the Prime Minister, Mr. Adnan Menderes, and two of his Cabinet colleagues. About 50 demonstrators were arrested.

Students shook their fists in Mr. Menderes' face, and he was reported to have shouted at them: "Why don't you kill me."

Mr. Menderes was driving through the capital with his Interior Minister, Mr. Namik Gedik, and the Education Minister, Mr. Atif Benderlioglu, when the demonstrators crowded round his car. Mr. Menderes then got out, tightly ringed by police, walked towards the demonstrators who were shouting "Freedom"

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

and "Menderes resign". Looking pale and drawn, he walked up to the demonstrators and asked one of them: "What do you want, what do you want."

The crowd was dispersed without violence.

There were further demonstrations in Ankara and other parts of the country on May 14.

The police and Army had to intervene. The police used tear-gas to disperse the crowds. Some 50 students were arrested.

The demonstrations coincided with the anniversary of the first free elections in Turkey. The students were booing the police and throwing manifestoes carrying the statement made recently by Mr. Ismet Inonu (who said that the Turkish people would not submit to oppression). The leaflets had been printed in defiance of the Martial Law.

On May 15, the Government and Opposition supporters clashed in Izmir during a speech by the Prime Minister, Mr. A. Menderes.

Fighting broke out when several thousand Opposition supporters tried to stage an anti-Government demonstration as a large crowd gathered to welcome Mr. Menderes. Police and troops intervened and took into custody a number of persons. Several of the demonstrators were injured.

Army Cadets Parade:

There was an orderly parade by Cadets of Turkish Military Academy and high-ranking officers down Boulevard Ataturk in Ankara on May 21. This was the first time that the Army appeared in a demonstration. The police fired tear-gas shells to disperse the demonstrators.

The demonstration by Cadets was understood to be in protest against the ban on the demonstrators on the anniversary of the landing of the Turkish leader, Kemal Ataturk, at Samsun on the Black Sea. This was a day traditionally dedicated to Ataturk's message to youth.

Universities And Schools Closed:

The Turkish Government decided on May 22 that all universities and schools for higher education should remain closed for the duration of Martial Law.

Deputies Fight In National Assembly:

Deputies of the ruling Democratic Party and the Opposition Republican People's Party fought for 15 minutes in the National Assembly in Ankara on May 25 with fists, chairs and pieces of broken benches.

The fight came after a month of anti-Government demonstrations in various parts of the country.

The fight in the Assembly occurred after the Chairman, Mr. Agah Erozan, refused Mr. Osman Bolukbasi, leader of the Opposition Republican People's Party, permission to speak.

Mr. Kasim Gulek, a former Secretary-General of the People's Party, then walked to the Speaker's chair and began to speak without asking the Speaker's permission.

When the Democratic Party Deputies tried to drag Mr. Gulek down, fighting broke out between the Government and Opposition Deputies. A Democratic Party Deputy seized a chair and charged at Mr. Gulek.

Chairs then began flying. The Chairman stopped the session, but the fights continued.

The Deputies hurled whatever they could lay their hands on, and microphones and lamps were broken. Several Deputies were injured, and blood streamed from their faces. The Deputies also fought the police who entered the Assembly hall to intervene.

The Assembly met again later in the day (May 25) and adjourned to meet again on June 20.

The Republican People's Party, which met on May 1 under the chairmanship of Mr. Ismet Inonu, issued a communique rejecting the Government's explanation of the demonstrations in Ankara and Istanbul on April 28 and 29.

The communique agreed with the complaint that the Opposition members had taken part in the students' uprisings, but said that they were "carrying out their duty as the representatives of the people".

Mr. Inonu said in a statement in Ankara on May 6 that the Turkish people would not submit to oppression.

He told foreign correspondents that the United States should not encourage the present Turkish regime.

Criticizing the Menderes regime, he said that while injustice continued in the country, the people's and his Party's reaction would continue. He added: "Till now we did not think of revolution."

He said that one of his Party's principles was not to involve the Army in politics and he had not wished any interference by the United States or any other friendly nation. He desired continued American aid.

Background:

The Times, London, carried late in April the following background to the events from its Ankara correspondent.

"If delegates in the North Atlantic Council meeting in Istanbul take a brief look at Turkish internal affairs, they will not find the international detente reflected there. Inside Turkey the difficulties of co-existence between the two main political parties seem greater than those between the Communist world and the West. The chances of a 'summit' meeting are much more remote.

"The Turkish domestic scene has been simmering with turbulent deadlock for years now, and especially since the Opposition Republican People's Party refused to accept the results of the General Elections of October, 1957. The most severe crisis so far has boiled up in the past few days. It began early in April, when the indefatigable old Ismet Inonu, the leader of the Opposition, set off on one of his quasi-political, quasi-military campaigns —this time to central Anatolia. The Democratic Party Government, which had its own reasons for not wanting him to go to this particular area, barred Mr. Inonu's way with the Turkish Army. It was the first time it had used the Army for this purpose. After this, three Army Officers resigned. They were later arrested.

"These exciting events were followed closely by the whole nation. Immediately after them came a violent scene in the Grand National Assembly, and strong measures were taken by the ruling party against its political opponents. The large Democratic Party majority voted into existence an Extraordinary Commission, composed of 15 of its own members, invested with quite exceptional powers, to investigate into what were described as the 'subversive and illegal activities' of the Opposition Republican People's Party. Almost the first action of the Commission was to prohibit all political activities in Turkey for three months. It also clamped a complete Press ban on the publication of all reports about its own actions. The Opposition, led by Mr. Inonu, contented itself with denouncing the Commission as illegal and unconstitutional.

"What happens next is doubtful. It seems to depend largely on how the Commission interprets its powers and its duties. As far as can be seen, it has been given powers by the Assembly to by-pass normal judicial and executive processes, close down newspapers and political parties, and even, if it deems it necessary, arrest people. It is not certain yet whether it will behave as a sort of a Spanish Inquisition or whether it will dwindle into a mild and inoffensive body letting off Governmental steam. Probably if Mr. Menderes wanted to hamper, cripple or even abolish the Opposition, he could now do so. The People's Party, for its part, having declared the whole business illegal, is sitting back and awaiting developments.

"What is it all about? Why are there these constant crises in Turkish politics? Is it, as some cynics suggest, merely a tense struggle for power between two indistinguishable sets of men? Or, are great principles involved?

"The Turkish Government accuses its political opponents of going beyond the constitutional limits assigned to an Opposition in a democracy, of trying to return to power by illegal means, and even of inciting the Turkish people to rebellion. It also blames the Republican People's Party, among many other things, for giving no credit whatever for the economic progress achieved during the ten years that the Democratic Party has been in office. The Opposition charge is that the Democratic Party Government is clearly suppressing civil liberties in Turkey, has installed a regime of flagrant political pressure and partisanship and has indeed repudiated the lofty principles of democracy on which it got itself elected in 1950. On the economic side, the Republic People's Party declares that the Government, for all its boasted progress, has run the country into an appalling foreign debt, thereby debasing Turkish credit abroad, and has no sort of rational economic plan other than the determination to obtain as much money as possible from anybody who will give it to Turkey.

"The economic question is germane to the whole issue of Turkish democracy. The main plank of the Democratic Party programme is economic progress. Mr. Menderes is probably sincere in his determination to raise the living standards of the people as fast as he can, while he can. The Opposition, mordantly critical and rightly defending political freedom, gives less credit than is due perhaps to the difficulty of developing a poor country rapidly and at the same time practising democracy. Yet this argument, which might constitute a defence for the Government, would carry more weight if the economic activities of the Democratic Party in recent years had been less spendthrift and random. Mr. Menderes cannot justify his autocratic tendencies on the same grounds as Dr. A. Salazar of Portugal.

"As against progress, the Opposition Republican People's Party sets freedom. Turkey, it says, has been a democracy since 1945 and a member of the Council of Europe, for which club a democratic regime is the pass-word. But, in recent years, the drift towards autocracy in Turkey has been quickened. All kinds of restrictions have been imposed by the Government to try to stifle the swelling chorus of criticism. The odd fact has been that the sterner the repression, the more needs to be repressed. The harder the Government beats the Opposition, the stronger the opposition becomes.

"The situation now is that both parties have arrived at the limits of moral indignation. It will be difficult, if things go on as they are, to avoid a major clash. Excitement becomes self-generating. There is small chance of a 'summit' meeting between the top men on either side. President Celal Bayar, theoretically an impartial Head of State, is unluckily completely identified, as was his predecessor, Mr. Inonu, with the Party in power. President Bayar and ex-President Inonu nourish for each other a cordial personal dislike. There are very slim chances, as long as both are there, that olive branches will be either offered or accepted.

"In a condition which is mid-way between Party politics and civil war, the Turkish Army could well be the arbiter. The importance of the latest events is that the sympathies of the Army are now, for the first time, being openly discussed. The Turkish Army has, it is true, a long tradition of non-interference in politics. Its sympathies are largely unknown. It can be safely assumed that Mr. Menderes has ensured that most of the high command is loyal to the Government. But the veteran Mr. Inonu—as a close comrade of Ataturk, as the hero of the Greek War, as victor of Lausanne, or simply as former General—has a strong personal link with the Army. This link may be very important to the People's Party.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"The danger is that suspicions on both sides run ineradicably deep. The Government really believes the People's Party capable of preparing a military coup. The Opposition Liberals genuinely suspect a complete relapse by the Government into autocracy. There are backwoodsmen in the Democratic Party to whom Locke and Montesquieu are not even names, and to whom a political opposition is synonymous with a political nuisance. How far Mr. Menderes himself inclines to such a view is uncertain. He is known at one time to have been much influenced by his friend and associate, the late Nuri Said Pasha of Iraq. It is to be hoped that when Mr. Menderes visits Moscow in July, 1960, Mr. Khrushchev will not paint too persuasive a picture of the conveniences of governing without an opposition.

"It is here that principles dignify the struggle. What is so striking about modern Turkey is less its economic progress—remarkable though that is—than the fact that it adopted democracy by the decision of its own leaders and has stuck to it for 15 years. It is ideology, not merely a military alliance, which binds Turkey to the West. If Turkey were to follow the Sudan, Thailand and Pakistan into the dreary rigmarole of the coup d'etat, it would mean the loss of all that has been gained. It would mean for Turkey a retreat from Europe, and from everything that Ataturk intended for his country.

"What is hopeful is that the Turks, though new to the practice of democracy, are a people of great political experience and ability. The Turks ruled a great empire for 600 years. They are a people of sobriety and unity. There is hope too that the Army will be a factor for stability rather than revolution. The Turkish peasant values his new power to turn his rulers out of office. Turkey's future will depend much on the scrupulous fairness of the next General Elections. It is not known when these will be, but many eyes will be fixed on them."

(The Times, London, Ankara Radio, The Hindu, Madras, The New York Times and The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 1875:TUR:A]

B Mr. I. MacLeod's Statement On Cyprus Talks: In a statement in the British House of Commons on June 2 on the Cyprus talks in Nicosia, the British Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Iain MacLeod, said: "The House will have seen Press reports, according to which Archbishop Makarios considers that the remaining issues (about Cyprus independence) could be quickly settled. I hope, therefore, that the Archbishop will soon see his way to resume discussions with the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies."

He added: "By the Archbishop's wish, there have been no formal meetings between the leaders of delegations for some time. I feel confident that the points which are still causing difficulty can, in practice, be resolved by discussion.

"We have done our utmost to meet Cypriots wishes on Cypriot participation in the administration of those areas within the framework of British sovereignty. It is common ground that the areas to be retained have to serve a military purpose. Military considerations must, therefore, be given full weight as regards boundaries and administration.

"On a long-term view of the military bases, it is difficult to foresee circumstances in which we might want to relinquish them. This is a hypothetical situation to which many factors might apply. At present, we are seeking a settlement in which retention of these bases under British sovereignty is one of the principal elements. But, we recognize that the Cypriots have an interest in this matter, and we shall be glad to discuss it with them.

"The other main outstanding question is financial aid. On this, our offer of £10,000,000 over five years is, I think, generous.

"We have approached these negotiations throughout in a spirit of accommodation and goodwill. We are sure that if outstanding questions are tackled together in that same spirit, agreement can very soon be reached and, for our part, we are very anxious to seek such an agreement."

Archbishop Makarios said in Nicosia on June 2 that the people of Cyprus wanted an assurance from the British Government that the military bases would be returned to Cyprus when they were no longer required by Britain.

He added that he was willing to resume talks on the question of military bases provided there was sufficient common ground between him and the British Government.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3331:TUR:A]

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Nationalization Of Press: The Egyptian Press was virtually nationalized on May 24 as the ownership of four major publishing houses in Cairo was transferred to the Government-controlled National Union—the United Arab Republic's only political organization.

A Presidential decree which brought about the change ordered that all Egyptian journalists would have to obtain permits from the National Union within 40 days to continue in the profession.

The four privately-owned firms affected by the decree are Al Ahram, Al Akhbar, Al Hilal and Rose El Youssef.

Egypt's only other major publishing house, Al Tahrir, is already Government-owned.

The decree stipulated that the owners of the publishing houses would be compensated in State Bonds bearing a three per cent interest over a period of 20 years. A Special Committee would decide the amount of compensation, and its decision would be final.

The decree ordered the amalgamation of Al Ahram and Al Hilal publishing houses and appointed three Boards of Directors for the newly-nationalized firms.

Mr. Mohammed Hasmein Heikal, Editor of Al Ahram and a close friend of President Nasser, was nominated a Director, but Mr. Mustafa Amin and Mr. Aly Amin, the two brothers who founded and owned Al Akhbar, were left out.

A number of minor weeklies in Cairo and Alexandria, however, remained unaffected by the decree.

In New York, the International Federation of Newspaper Publishers denounced the take-over on May 24.

Members attending the Federation's 13th Congress unanimously adopted a resolution denouncing the decree as "an intolerable and truly unbearable violation of the freedom of the Press."

The resolution stated that the Federation, a consultative body of United Nations, intended to take the matter to the world organization.

(The New York Times and The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3198:UAR:A]

B. US Picketing Of "Cleopatra" Lifted: The US State Department said in Washington on April 27 that the picketing in New York of the United Arab Republic ship Cleopatra was "embarrassing to the conduct of our Government's foreign relations" and that it might have unfortunate consequences.

It expressed the hope that it would not lead to strong counter-action against American shipping and seamen in foreign ports.

It added that "from the foreign policy stand-point, it should be made clear that the picketing is regarded abroad as a political demonstration related to UAR restrictions against Israel."

The US Court of Appeal in New York postponed on April 27 a decision on an appeal by Cleopatra's owners—the Khedivial Line of Alexandria—against a lower court's decision denying an injunction against the picketing.

The US State Department sources said that between 26 and 36 American flag vessels regularly used the Mediterranean ports every month whereas only one UAR vessel came to the United States.

Retaliatory Boycott:

Cairo Radio announced on the night of April 28 that at midnight the following day (April 29) 1,000,000 Arab dockers would start a boycott of American and Canadian ships in all Arab ports in retaliation of the picketing of UAR ships in New York and Montreal.

[Picket lines were set up round the 5,464-ton Star of Assuan in Montreal on April 27 in retaliation against what a Union spokesman described as Egypt's black-listing of certain Western ships].

Cairo Radio added that the Executive Committees responsible for supervising the implementation of the boycott in Arab ports had completed their arrangements.

It quoted a responsible source in the Federation of Arab Workers as saying that the "decision to boycott American ships shall be applied to the ships of any State in which Arab ships are picketed."

Cairo Radio also quoted the Saudi Arabian Charge d'Affaires as saying that his country had decided to boycott American ships.

A statement by the General Federation of Iraqi Trade Unions broadcast by Baghdad Radio said that it had decided to boycott all American ships in Iraqi ports in solidarity with Arab workers elsewhere.

US Senate On Aid To UAR:

The US Senate confirmed on May 2 its earlier decision to empower President D. D. Eisenhower in effect to cut off aid to UAR as long as it restricted Israeli commerce through the Suez Canal.

By a vote of 45 to 39, it rejected an amendment to the Mutual Security Bill which would have toned down its earlier restrictive decision.

The amendment was submitted by Senator William Fulbright, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, who said that the Senate action taken earlier amounted to political coercion by USA on behalf of one side to the Arab-Israeli dispute.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Call To End Boycott Of "Cleopatra":

The head of the combined United States Trade Union Movement called for an end to the picketing of the Cleopatra on May 3.

The announcement came after a meeting between the acting Secretary of State, Mr. Douglas Dillon, and Mr. Arthur J. Goldberg, Special Counsel for the American Federation of Labour-Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO), which had supported the picketing of Cleopatra.

For the first time in three weeks, there were no pickets alongside Cleopatra on May 7. Unloading of the ship began on May 9.

This was announced on May 6 in New York after the Seafarers' International Union had called off the boycott imposed on Cleopatra, on condition that it would renew picketing if the Government failed to give "practical implementation" to the assurance given by Mr. Dillon that the Government would fully investigate the grievances of US seamen.

On May 4, a Court of Appeals upheld the lower court's decision to refuse to restrain New York dockers from picketing Cleopatra.

The US State Department had informally asked the Dockers' Union to end the boycott because of the repercussions of a counter-boycott started by port workers in Arab countries.

It was revealed in Washington on May 2 that US ships bound for Arab ports had been re-routed in order to avoid being immobilized by the Arab dockers' counter-boycott of American vessels.

President G. A. Nasser said on May 7 that Arab workers had triumphed in their boycott battle with American ships.

He declared: "This is a great lesson for us in our battle for Arab nationalism and freedom."

On May 9, dockers in New York began unloading Cleopatra and the Arab Trade Union Federation decided that their retaliatory boycott of American ships would be terminated immediately.

The following day, Cleopatra sailed from New York for Philadelphia and Baltimore.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3333:AOA:C]

C. Insurance Companies To Be Nationalized: A Press Note issued by the United Arab Republic Embassy in New Delhi on June 2 quoted the Vice-Chairman of Commerce Chambers' Federation and Managing Director of the Misr Insurance Company, Mr. Aly El Shafei, for the statement that all insurance firms in the Southern Region of UAR (Egypt) would have been nationalized at the end of 1961.

Dealing with the success already achieved by the Southern Region (Egypt) insurance and re-insurance companies following the nationalization of foreign insurance concerns, he said that nationalization had so far raised the share of national companies in the country's insurance business to 85 per cent and would further raise it to 100 per cent at the end of 1961. The number of national companies now engaged in insurance business was already 16.

He added that fresh encouragement was being given by the authorities to the formation of new insurance companies.

(UAR Embassy, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2909:UAR:B]

D. Indo-Arab Society Formed: An Indo-Arab Society was formed in Cairo in June 3 with the Chairman of the Suez Canal Authority, Mr. Mohammed Yunus, as President.

The initiative for forming the Society was taken by the Vice-President of the Indo-Arab Society in Bombay, Mr. H. Ismail, who was then in Cairo as a member of a three-man Goodwill Mission.

Mr. Yunus said that the formation of the Society was a happy event in the history of Indo-UAR relations, as it was "a manifestation of love and friendliness between the two countries."

This love and friendship, he added, were clearly expressed during President G. A. Nasser's recent visit to India and Mr. Nehru's return visit to UAR.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 3289:INI:B]

VIET-NAM (DR)

A. Complaint To ITSC: The Commander-in-Chief of the Viet-Nam People's Army, Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, sent to the International Truce Supervisory Commission on May 27 a complaint alleging that the South Viet-Nam authorities had brought in additional US military personnel for the Military Aid Advisory Group (MAAG).

The message said:

"The US imperialists and the South Viet-Nam authorities have not only illegally maintained but also have unceasingly reinforced MAAG with new military personnel in an attempt to carry out military re-inforcements and to continue the state of war so as to massacre the South Viet-Namese people. From the figure of 200 at the time of cessation of hostilities (1954), MAAG strength has now increased to 2,808 military personnel. Many new subsidiary organizations of MAAG have been set up and as a result, the MAAG has been a US High Command in South Viet-Nam. At present, MAAG is striving to carry out military re-inforcement plans and to push up the organization, training and equipment of the South Viet-Nam military forces, directing the construction of military bases, of store-houses and strategic roads in South Viet-Nam, supervising and directing the terrorist raids of the South Viet-Nam armed forces aimed at persecuting and massacring former resistance members and patriots. Its existence after the restoration of peace and its activities during the last few years obviously constitute the most serious violation of the Geneva Agreements.

"In raising the question of bringing in new US military personnel into South Viet-Nam the US Government and the South Viet-Nam authorities have made a further step in sabotaging the Geneva Agreements.

"The International Commission's majority decision sanctioning the introduction of US military personnel allegedly to replace former French military personnel is in complete contradiction with the spirit and letter of the Geneva Agreements and will not fail to bring disastrous consequences.

"Nobody forgets that the South Viet-Nam authorities have availed themselves of the Commission's 1958 decision authorizing the introduction of fresh armaments in replacement of those of the French Expeditionary Corps to import great quantities of new American arms into South Viet-Nam, promulgated the fascist law 10|59 to massacre former resistance members and are satisfied with the Commission's non-intervention attitude. They are colluding with the US imperialists to introduce additional US military personnel into South Viet-Nam. Together with the entire Viet-Namese people, the High Command of the Viet-Nam People's Army, greatly surprised at the International Commission's majority decision, cannot accept it and requests the Commission: (1) To recommend to the South Viet-Nam authorities to end the introduction of additional US military personnel into South Viet-Nam, to dissolve and drive out MAAG from South Viet-Nam—the US instrument of intervention and war preparation; and (2) To cancel the Commission's above-mentioned decision so as to avoid serious consequences for the continued implementation of the Geneva Agreements for the consolidation of peace in Indo-China and South-East Asia."

(Consulate-General of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2766:VND:A]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

A. USA Launches Spy Satellite "Midas": The United States launched on May 24 a 5,000-lb. military reconnaissance satellite called Midas from Cape Canaveral. The satellite was equipped to detect immediately the launching of ballistic missiles. It was going round the world once every 94 minutes. It derived its name from the first letters of "missile defence alarm system".

It was stated that the Midas would be able to detect launching of ballistic missiles shortly after they had left the ground through extremely complex electronic equipment involving the use of infra-red rays.

The considerable discharge of heat through the gas exhaust of any ballistic missile would be recorded by infra-red ray detectors on the Midas. These recordings would be relayed to ground listening posts. As a result, there would be lengthier warning against a rocket attack than had been possible before.

The satellite, 22 feet long and about 5 feet in diameter, constituted the second stage of an Atlas-Agenda rocket.

The USA announced 12 minutes after the launching that the second stage of the rocket had separated from the first and had been successfully fired.

The satellite had an apogee of 316 miles and a perigee of 219 miles.

A US State Department spokesman said that the perfecting of the satellite, which could rapidly detect the launching of missiles, should exert a stabilizing influence on the world situation by minimizing the danger of surprise attacks. A Midas type satellite could greatly contribute to armaments control.

Commenting on the launching of the Midas, the official Soviet news agency, Tass, said that in the light of current US policy, the satellite's name should be "Spy in the Sky." It alleged that the Midas contained apparatus intended to collect military information.

(The New York Times and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3319:AOA:F]

B. Inter-continental Missile Fired By USA: The United States Air Force on May 20 fired an Atlas inter-continental missile from Cape Canaveral (Florida) 9,000 miles into the Indian Ocean—further than any missile had travelled before.

It bettered the 7,760 miles claimed by the Russians for a rocket they fired into the

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Pacific in January, 1960. The greatest distance fired earlier was 6,325 miles by an Atlas missile.

A USAF spokesman said in Washington: "Preliminary telemetry data indicates that the test objectives were achieved."

The nose-cone, he added, dropped into the planned impact area, 1,000 miles south-east of Capetown and about 500 miles north-east of Prince Edward Islands. Two American planes and a ship, equipped with special detection and tracking equipment waited for the nose-cone to drop. It was filled with ballast to give it the weight of a hydrogen war-head. The 120-ton rocket carried a full instrumentation load of about 1,000 lbs and the fuel load had not been increased. The extra range was achieved by increasing velocity and firing on a higher trajectory.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3184:AOA:F]

C. US Democrats Urge Recognition Of China And West Germany's Withdrawal From NATO: A group of Democratic members of the US House of Representatives, foreign policy experts, scientists and scholars, on May 22 proposed US recognition of China and West Germany's withdrawal from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

The group, known as the Liberal Project, consisted of 52 members, including 12 members of the House of Representatives.

In a report completed before the breakdown of the 'Summit' Conference in Paris, the group described America's post-War foreign policy as sterile and ineffective.

Recognition of China and its eventual admission to United Nations, the report said, was of vital importance to any future policy.

It added: "We cannot see how our Government can hope to ease tensions, arrive at fair settlements of disputes or, above all, achieve disarmament without establishing direct channels of communications with Peking."

It said that once such channels were open, USA could seek arrangements with Peking and Moscow leading to the unification of Korea and Viet-Nam.

It favoured re-unification of Germany and said that the two German States should settle the arrangements without outside interference.

It suggested that the Western Powers "must decide which of two things they want most—a German military contribution to NATO or re-unification of the two German States. They cannot have both."

It added: "West Germany's continued participation in NATO means permanent partition of the country and the almost inevitable loss of West Berlin to East Germany."

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

D. British Somaliland To Be Independent: It was announced in London on May 12 at the close of the Constitutional Conference that the British Somaliland Protectorate would receive independence on June 26, 1960.

The territory had been linked with Britain for well over 100 years.

The Conference report, signed by the British Colonial Secretary, Mr. Iain MacLeod, the four members of the Somaliland delegation and the Protectorate Governor, Sir Douglas Hall, said that the British Government had agreed to this date—which had been put forward by the Somali representatives.

The Somali Minister for Local Government, Mr. Mohammed Haji Ibrahim Egal, summed up his delegation's feelings as: "We are beside ourselves with joy."

He said that it was "generally understood all round" that Somaliland would unite with the neighbouring north-east African territory of Somalia on July 1, 1960 when the UN mandate over the territory ended.

The report said that Britain would continue to give aid to Somaliland, both financial and by way of serving officers, for some time after the independence of the territory.

It said that, in accordance with the wishes of the elected Ministers' delegation, Mr. MacLeod proposed that for an interim period of six months after independence, a British Aid Mission would be available to the Public Service of Somaliland, at the request of the Somaliland Government. Similar arrangements were offered for the continued secondment of British military personnel to the Somaliland Scouts, the territory's British-trained forces.

It recalled the British Government's previous undertaking to give sympathetic consideration to the continuation of financial assistance and said that Mr. MacLeod had proposed that, subject to parliamentary approval, Somaliland should receive £1,500,000 in the first year of independence, of which half would be devoted to development expenditure. This sum included the cost, which the British Government would meet, of the British Aid Mission and of military personnel on secondment.

It concluded: "The Secretary of State said that while Her Majesty's Government is glad to give financial help to the people of Somaliland for a period after independence, he would expect that, in due course, dependence upon the United Kingdom for financial assistance would diminish and that to this end the level of aid would be subject to annual review."

The Somaliland Legislative Council which met for the first time with a Somali elected majority on April 6, 1960 passed a motion calling for independence by July 1, 1960 and union with Somalia.

On May 15, the Italian Cabinet approved a Bill granting independence to Somalia on July 1, 1960.

The East African territory of Somalia had been administered by Italy under UN Trusteeship since 1950.

Ethiopian Reaction:

Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia summoned the Ambassadors of Eastern and Western countries, including Britain, in Addis Ababa on May 11 to discuss what he called "a thinly disguised conspiracy for the seizure of Ethiopian territories".

He said that claims for a union of so-called Somali territories were, in fact, the first step aimed at the dismemberment of Ethiopia.

The so-called Somali demands, he added, constituted a thinly-disguised conspiracy, which he would oppose with all means in his power.

Other Ambassadors summoned, at separate audiences, were from USA, France, Soviet Union, Yugoslavia and UAR.

(The Statesman, Calcutta and UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3334:AOA:E]

E. New Moroccan Cabinet: Mr. Abdullah Ibrahim, Moroccan Prime Minister, presented his resignation and that of his Cabinet after a half-hour audience with King Mohammed V in Rabat on May 20.

A communique issued on the same day (May 20) said the King charged the Prime Minister and his colleagues "to continue carrying out the country's business."

The Cabinet of Mr. Ibrahim was sworn-in on December 24, 1958. Its main task was to organize the municipal and county council elections.

The mission, it was stated, had now ended.

On May 26, a new Moroccan Government headed by King Mohammed V was sworn-in at a ceremony in the Royal Palace in Rabat.

Crown Prince Moulay Hassan was appointed Vice-Premier, Mr. Bekkai, a former Premier, as Minister of the Interior, and Mr. Driss Mohammedi, formerly Interior Minister, as Foreign Minister.

(The Times, London)

F. Russia Presents Symbolic Statue To UN: At a ceremony at UN Headquarters in New York on May 21, the Soviet Permanent Representative at UN, Mr. Arkady Sobolev, presented a statue to United Nations.

The statue, which was received by the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, showed a blacksmith beating a sword into a ploughshare.

Making the presentation, Mr. Sobolev said that the statue embodied the dreams of the Soviet people and of people throughout the world to beat the means of destruction into means of creation and to pave the way for life without weapons, i.e. without wars.

Acknowledging the gift, Mr. Hammarskjoeld said that United Nations provided the means for a solution of international conflicts through the peaceful methods of conciliation, negotiation and mediation.

(The New York Times)

G. New Plastic Material Discovered In Britain: The discovery of a new plastic material which could revolutionize rocket construction was announced at the opening of a chemical factory at Camberley (Surrey) on May 20.

The Director of the plan said that the new plastic could withstand a heat of 1000°C or four times that engendered by supersonic speeds. It was classed as a military secret but it could entirely revolutionize the construction of rockets, notably in reducing their weight and volume.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3114:AOA:H]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10 Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95/-; Foreign Rs. 115/- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

76449

July 9—15, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 28

INDIA

SUMMARY: Third Five-Year Plan Draft Outline; Russian Aid In Oil Production; Shipping Agreement With Poland; INSOA Annual Meeting; HMT Progress; Heavy Electrical Factory Goes Into Production; Fresh Taxation In Kerala.

A. Third Five-Year Plan Draft Outline: The Draft Outline of the Third Five-Year Plan for the period 1961-66 was published by the Planning Commission of the Government of India on July 6, 1960 after 18 months of study and preparation.

In an Introduction to the Draft Outline, the Deputy Chairman of the Planning Commission, Mr. V. T. Krishnamachari, said: "The Third Five-Year Plan represents a crucial stage in the fulfilment of our basic social and economic objectives. The goals set out in the Draft Outline are within the capacity of the nation and are a measure of the advance that has to be achieved in the five years of the Third Plan."

The goals set in the Draft Outline were: a total investment of Rs. 10,200 crores in the economy—Rs. 6,200 crores in the public sector and Rs. 4,000 crores in the private sector, a Plan outlay of Rs. 7,250 crores in the public sector, a rise in national income of over five per cent per annum, a production of 100 to 105 million tons of foodgrains, a capacity target of 10 million tons of steel ingots, an increase in the total generating capacity of power from 5.8 million kw to 11.8 million kw, creation of additional employment for 13.5 million persons, extension of the Community Development Projects, co-operative movements to cover all the villages in the country, free and compulsory education for all children in the 6-11 years age group, the provision of minimum amenities to all rural areas including drinking water, roads linking each village to the nearest main road or railway station and a village school building which may also serve as a Community Centre and provide facilities for the village library.

The Outline presented the Third Plan in its broad frame-work. It took into consideration the present needs of the national economy, the progress realized since Independence and the perspective of development during the next 15 years or so.

Aims Of The Plan:

The Third Plan, it said, represented another important phase in the development of the country's economy. Its broad aims were:

"(i) to secure during the next five-year period a rise in national income of over five per cent per annum, the pattern of investment being designed also to sustain this rate of growth during the subsequent Plan periods:

"(ii) to achieve self-sufficiency in foodgrains and increase agricultural production to meet the requirements of industry and exports;

"(iii) to expand basic industries like steel, fuel and power and establish machine-building capacity, so that the requirements of further industrialization could be met within a period of 10 years or so mainly from the country's own resources;

"(iv) to utilize to the fullest extent possible the man-power resources of the country and to ensure a substantial expansion in employment opportunities; and

"(v) to bring about a reduction of inequalities in income and wealth and a more even distribution of economic power."

One of the principal objectives of the Plan was stated to be to secure a marked advance towards self-sustaining growth. Basically, self-sustaining growth implied that savings and investment in the economy rise sufficiently to secure a high rate of growth of income on a continuing basis.

An important aspect of this problem, however, was that of creating within the country the capacity to produce the capital goods and equipment necessary to support the scale of investment proposed. In determining the pattern of investment in the Third Plan, this consideration had been kept in mind. Self-sustaining growth could only be achieved by balanced development both in agriculture and industry. The Third Plan called for effort both to enlarge the capital base and to raise the output of food and raw materials.

"Socialist Pattern Of Society":

Another important objective of the Plan was to devise means for reducing inequalities in incomes and wealth, the aim being to bring about a 'socialist pattern of society' in which all citizens would have the fullest opportunity for a rich and diverse life and for the development of their full potentialities.

The term 'socialist pattern of society' implied that the basic criterion in determining social policies and the lines of the economic advance should be not private profit or the interests of a few but the good of the community as a whole. Reduction in inequalities in income and wealth had to be achieved through a large variety of measures and institutional changes undertaken as part of the Plan.

Population Problem:

According to latest estimates, India's population in 1966 would be 480 million instead of 434 million assumed in the Second Plan Report.

In an economy with low levels of income and consumption, high rates of population growth severely limit the pace of economic development. It was essential, therefore, to stabilize the population. The accelerated growth of population also emphasized the urgency of rapid economic development.

Priority For Agriculture:

The Outline emphasized that in the scheme of development, the first priority necessarily belonged to agriculture. The importance of achieving self-sufficiency in foodgrains and meeting the requirements of industry and export was one of the major aims of the Third Plan.

Agricultural production had to be increased to the highest levels feasible so that the incomes and levels of living, as the rural population rose, should keep pace with incomes in other sectors.

It provided for an outlay in the public sector of Rs. 1,025 crores for Agriculture and Community Development and Rs. 650 crores for major and medium irrigation. Investment by the private sector (exclusive of assistance received from the public sector) was estimated at Rs. 800 crores. As the Plan proceeded, if larger resources were needed for assuring more rapid advance within the rural economy, specially through the fuller use of man-power, these would be made available.

Agricultural production would have to be stepped up by 30 per cent to 33 per cent depending upon the targets which might be finally decided as a result of work on area agricultural plans.

The targets of production proposed for some of the important agricultural commodities were as follows:

Commodity	Annual Production
	1960-61 (Expected)	1965-66 (Target)
Foodgrains (million tons)	75	100-105
Oilseeds (million tons)	7.2	9.2-9.5
Sugarcane (in terms of gur) (million tons)	7.2	9.0-9.2
Cotton (million tons)	5.4	7.2
Jute (million bales)	5.5	6.5

In addition, measures would have to be taken to increase the production of food articles, like fruits and vegetables, milk, fish, meat, eggs, as also of other commodities like coconut, arecanut, cashewnuts, pepper, cardamom, tobacco, lac and timber.

The target proposed for foodgrains would allow for consumption of about 15 ozs. of cereals and 3 ozs. of pulses per capita per day, besides providing some margin against emergencies. The target for raw cotton was expected to be sufficient to provide about 17.5 yards of cotton textile per annum per capita and in addition, allow for some exports.

The net irrigated area was proposed to be expanded to about 90 million acres by the end of the Third Plan as against 70 million acres expected at the end of the Second Plan. About 40 million acres would have to be covered by dry farming techniques. Soil conservation measures would have to be extended to an additional area of 13 million acres. The consumption of nitrogenous fertilizer would have to be increased from 360,000 tons in terms of nitrogen in 1960-61 to one million tons in 1965-66. Plant protection measures would be extended to 75 million acres. The Community Development Programme would be extended to the entire rural area by October, 1963; the programme of co-operative development would be intensified. Finance through co-operative agencies would play a considerable part in increasing agricultural production.

Large-Scale Industry:

A high priority was also being given to industry, power and transport because development in these fields was vital for lifting the economy to a higher level and for its accelerated growth.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Public sector outlay in large-scale industry and mineral development would be Rs. 1,500 crores and private sector investment (exclusive of assistance from public sector) was expected to be Rs. 1,000 crores.

Special emphasis was placed on heavy industries which would help make the economy self-sustaining, namely, steel and machine-building and the manufacture of producer-goods.

Steel:

Developments in iron and steel, it said, were linked with the capacity target of 10.2 million tons in terms of steel ingots and 1.5 million tons of pig-iron for sale. The additional capacity and output in this field was expected to be realized almost entirely in the public sector.

The Bhilai, Rourkela and Durgapur steel plants would be expanded, contributing jointly 5.5 million tons of steel ingots.

The Outline also provided for a fourth steel plant in the public sector to be started at Bokaro.

Machine-Building:

Proposals for machinery and engineering industries during the Third Plan included a heavy machine-building plant, a foundry forge, a coal-mining machinery plant, a heavy machine tool factory, doubling of the output of Hindustan Machine Tools in Bangalore, expansion of the Heavy Electrical Project in Bhopal, two additional heavy electrical projects and a scheme for the production of high pressure boilets and precision instruments.

Machinery manufacturing programmes in the private sector would supplement considerably the efforts of the public sector. Near self-sufficiency was expected in regard to textile, sugar, cement and paper machinery.

Fertilizers:

The production of nitrogenous fertilizers would be stepped up from 210,000 tons of nitrogen at the end of the Second Plan to 1,000,000 tons at the end of the Third Plan and of phosphatic fertilizers from 70,000 tons to 400,000 to 500,000 tons in terms of P_2O_5.

Coal:

Production of coal would be increased to 97 million tons at the end of the Third Plan as against the target of 60 million tons at the end of the Second Plan.

Oil:

On the basis of the present proved reserves, the Nahorkatiya area was expected to produce 2.75 million tons of crude oil per year. Provision had been made both for the completion of refineries at Nunmati and Barauni for processing the Nahorkatiya crude oil and also for further exploration with a view to obtaining additional production of crude oil from Cambay and other areas where prospects were favourable.

Other Industrial Targets:

Among the other important industrial targets which have been proposed were:

	Annual production 1960-61	1965-66
Aluminium (thousand tons ..	17.0	75.0
Cement (million tons) ..	8.8	13.0
Paper (thousand tons) ..	320.0	700.0
Sulphuric acid (thousand tons) ..	400.0	1250.0
Caustic Soda (thousand tons) ..	125.0	340.0
Sugar (million tons) ..	2.5	3.0
Cotton textiles (mill cloth) (million yards) ..	5000.0	5800.0
Bicycles (organised sector) (thousand Nos.) ..	1050.0	2000.0
Sewing Machines (thousand Nos.) ..	300.0	450.0
Automobiles (Nos.) ..	53,500.0	100,000.0

Village And Small Industries:

Considerable emphasis was laid on the development of village and small industries.

Provision was made for positive forms of assistance like facilities for training, technical 'know-how', supply of credit and raw materials, etc.

Production of cloth in the decentralized sector would be increased from about 2,600 million yards in 1960-61 to 3,500 million yards in 1965-66. The number of industrial estates would increase from 60 in the Second Plan to 360 in the Third Plan.

In the programmes for small-scale industries, the emphasis would be on promoting their development in small towns and rural areas and on linking them up more closely with large-scale industries as ancillary or feeder units.

Power:

As regards power, it was proposed to increase the total generating capacity from 5.8 million kw at the end of the Second Plan to 11.8 million kw at the end of the Third Plan.

The programme for power included a project for nuclear power generation of 300,000 kw.

It was expected that 15,000 additional towns and villages would be electrified during the Third Plan, bringing the total to 34,000.

Transport And Communications:

It was expected that the Railways would be able to carry goods traffic to the extent of about 235 million tons in 1965-66 as against 162 million tons in 1960-61.

About 1,200 miles of new railway lines would be constructed.

Under the road development programme, it was proposed to expand surfaced roads from 144,000 miles in 1960-61 to 164,000 miles in 1965-66. The expansion of road transport would be mainly in the private sector. The number of commercial vehicles would go up from about 200,000 to about 300,000.

The shipping target proposed to add about 200,000 GRT to the tonnage of 900,000 GRT expected to be achieved at the end of the Second Plan.

Social Services:

It was proposed to provide for free and compulsory primary education in the age group 6-11 years.

Making allowance for slow progress in women's education in certain backward areas, it was estimated that the proportion of pupils to the number of children would go up from 60 to 80 per cent in age-group 6-11, from 23 to 30 per cent in the age-group 11-14 and from 12 to 15 per cent in the age-group 14-17. The total number of students in schools would go up from 41 million in 1960-61 to 60 million in 1965-66.

Scientific and technical education would be given increasing support. The in-take capacity of engineering colleges and polytechnics would increase from 37,200 at the end of the Second Plan to 53,500 at the end of the Third Plan.

The number of registered doctors would increase from 84,000 to 103,000, of hospitals and dispensaries from 12,600 to 14,600 and of primary health centres from 2,800 to 5,000. The number of family planning centres would increase from 1,800 to 8,200.

Outlay And Investment:

For achieving the above targets, the Draft Outline envisaged a total investment of Rs. 10,200 crores in the economy during the Third Plan period.

Of this amount, Rs. 6,200 crores would be in the public sector and Rs. 4,000 crores in the private sector.

The total outlay in the public sector would be Rs. 7,250 crores. About Rs. 200 crores was expected to be transferred from the public sector for capital formation in the private sector.

In the following table, the total outlay and investment in the Third Plan are compared with those of the Second Plan:

(In crores of rupees)

	Public Sector Plan outlay	Current outlay
Second Plan	4600	960
Third Plan	7250	1050

	Investment	Private sector	Total investment
Second Plan	3650	3100*	6750
Third Plan	6200	4000*	10,200

[* exclusive of Rs. 200 crores of assistance transferred from public sector]

The general pattern of investment in the Second Plan was being continued in the Third Plan. But in the public sector, there would be greater emphasis on agriculture, industry and power and on certain aspects of social services.

The distribution of plan outlay in the public sector in the Second and Third Plans is given in the following table:

(In crores of rupees)

	Outlay Second Plan	Outlay Third Plan	Percentage Second Plan	Percentage Third Plan
(1) Agriculture and minor irrigation	320	625	6.9	8.6
(2) Community development & co-operation	210	400	4.6	5.5
(3) Major and medium irrigation	450	650	9.8	9.0
(4) Total 1, 2 & 3	980	1,675	21.3	23.1
(5) Power	410	925	8.9	12.8
(6) Village & small industries	180	250	3.9	3.4
(7) Industry & minerals	880	1,500	19.1	20.7
(8) Transport & communications	1,290	1,450	28.1	20.0
(9) Total 5 to 8	2,760	4,125	60.0	56.9
(10) Social services	860	1,250	18.7	17.2
(11) Inventories	—	200	—	2.8
(12) Grand total	4,600	7,250	100	100

The allocations proposed at present, the Draft Outline said, were necessarily provisional. They were intended to assist the Central and State Governments in undertaking detailed studies of their programmes and projects and in establishing priorities within each sector.

It was stated that for approved programmes and targets under agriculture, village and small industries, primary education, technical education, special works programmes for utilizing man-power resources etc., additional domestic resources would be made available, if found necessary, after examination by States and Ministries.

Out of the total outlay in the public sector of Rs. 7,250 crores, Rs. 3,600 crores would be in the Centre and Rs. 3,650 crores in the States. Central assistance to States was estimated at Rs. 2,500 crores.

Resources For The Plan:

The step-up in investment from a total of Rs. 6,750 crores in the Second Plan to a total of Rs. 10,200 crores for the Third Plan, it said, would call for a large effort for mobilizing domestic resources. National income was expected to increase during the Third Plan period at a rate of over five per cent per annum. It was from this source that the additional demands for investment and for consumption had to be met.

The Plan aimed at raising the level of investment in the economy from about 11

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

per cent of national income by the end of the Second Plan to about 14 per cent by the end of the Third Plan. The rate of savings in the economy was at present about eight per cent of national income. This had to be raised to about 11 per cent by the end of the Third Plan, the balance representing the in-flow of resources from abroad.

The Third Plan would start, unlike the First and Second Plans, with a low level of foreign exchange reserves. There was no further scope for drawing on these reserves. Moreover, the level of prices now was more than 20 per cent above the level at the beginning of the Second Plan. Both these considerations demanded that inflationary financing of public outlays must be kept down to the barest minimum.

On the other hand, the situation now was in several respects more favourable than in the earlier Plans. There had been a substantial step-up in investment over the last ten years. There had also been substantial progress in irrigation, power and transport.

The Scheme Of Financing:

The scheme of financing the Third Plan outlay in the public sector is given in the table below:

(In crores of rupees)

	Second Plan	Third Plan
(1) Balance from revenues on the basis of existing taxation (—)	100	350
(2) Contribution of the Railways on the existing basis	150*	150
(3) Surpluses of other public enterprises on the existing basis		440
(4) Loans from the public	800	850
(5) Small savings	380	550
(6) Provident funds, betterment levies, steel equalization fund and miscellaneous capital receipts	213	510
(7) Additional taxation, including measures to increase the surpluses of public enterprises	1,000	1,650
(8) Budgetary receipts corresponding to external assistance	962	2,200
(9) Deficit-financing	1,175	550
Total :	4,600	7,250

[* Inclusive of increased fares and freights.
 Included in (1) above.]

Additional Taxation:

The fulfilment of the additional taxation target of Rs. 1,650 crores over the five-year period, it said, was vital for the successful implementation of the Plan.

Tax revenues in India now total about 8.5 per cent of national income. With the normal increases in tax yields and with the additional taxation proposed for the Third Plan, the proportion should go up to about 11 per cent. This could not be considered an excessive increase in the tax burden when the developmental activities of Government were being rapidly accelerated. Nevertheless, an additional target of Rs. 1,650 crores would involve considerable tax effort on the part of the Central and State Governments, the share of the States being about one-third of the total.

The Third Plan would necessitate increases both in direct and in indirect taxation, as also measures to raise the surpluses of public enterprises.

Deficit-Financing:

A distinction was, however, made between the effect of indirect taxes as compared to that of deficit-financing on prices.

It said: "Indirect taxation 'works off' the inflation potential by raising prices, deficit-financing builds up the inflation potential further. Deficit-financing is, therefore, proposed to be limited to Rs. 550 crores in the Third Plan as against Rs. 1,175 crores in the Second Plan."

Foreign Exchange:

The Third Plan, with its emphasis on rapid industrialization, would involve a considerable amount of foreign exchange expenditure.

It was estimated that the direct foreign exchange component of the Plan would be of the order of Rs. 1,900 crores. In addition, it would be essential to provide for imports of about Rs. 200 crores worth of components, balancing equipment, etc., needed to increase the production of capital goods within the country. Thus, for the Plan and for imports of components, etc., foreign exchange of the order of Rs. 2,100 crores was needed.

The estimates made showed that even if the Plan requirements were not taken into account, the balance of payments position, because of the re-payments of capital and payment of interest due in the Third Plan period, would show a deficit of Rs. 500 crores. The requirements of foreign exchange in the Third Plan period would thus come to Rs. 2,600 crores. To this total of Rs. 2600 crores had to be added the estimated receipts of Rs. 600 crores by way of PL 480 commodity assistance from USA. On this basis, the total balance of payments deficit for the Third Plan would come to about Rs. 3,200 crores.

As to the prospects of securing external assistance of the order required, it said, no prediction could be made. The Plan would have to be flexible and the commitments in regard to foreign exchange expenditure would have to be made only on the basis of external resources that were clearly in sight. The fact that the commencement and execution of projects both in the public and private sectors would depend upon the external assistance that was forthcoming highlighted the need for keeping ready, well in advance, a sufficient number of projects that could be executed as soon as the necessary foreign exchange had been secured. Any delay in utilizing the external assistance offered cannot but upset the schedule for increased production during and by the end of the Third Plan period.

The balance of payments difficulties the country was facing were not a temporary or fortuitous phenomenon. They were part and parcel of the process of development. For a period, the excess import requirements had to be met from external assistance. But it was important to aim at a progressive reduction in the imbalance so as to eliminate it within a forseeable period. This was not to suggest that no inflow of resources from abroad would be desirable after this period. Commercial capital in-flows could and should continue, but the reliance on special aid programmes had to be steadily reduced and, after a period of years, dispensed with.

Private Investment:

Investment in the private sector, it said, covered not only organized industry, mining, electricity and transport but also large and dispersed fields like agriculture, village and small industries, rural and urban housing etc.

The following table sets out the likely levels of investment in the private sector in the Second and Third Plans:

(In crores of rupees)

	Second Plan*	Third Plan*
(1) Agriculture (including irrigation)	675	850
(2) Power	40	50
(3) Transport	135	200
(4) Village and small industries	225	325
(5) Large and medium industry and minerals	700	1,050
(6) Housing and other construction	1,000	1,125
(7) Inventories	525	600
Total	3,300*	4,200*

[* inclusive of Rs. 200 crores transferred from the public sector by way of assistance.]

The Third Plan, it added: envisaged a substantial step-up in private investment mainly in the field of large and medium industries—from Rs. 700 crores in the Second Plan to Rs. 1,050 crores in the Third Plan. Increased investments in other sectors were relatively small and it was assumed that they would be financed from their normal sources which included savings by agriculturists, by those engaged in arts and crafts and in trade in small industries.

It concluded: "Under the Plan, there is a considerable scope for the private sector in the industrial sphere. This is due, in the main, to the wide opportunities provided by the expansion of the economy under the impact of successive Five-Year Plans. One of the main objectives of policy is that the opportunities which thus arise for private enterprise should be availed of by a large number of comparatively small and middle entrepreneurs and that possible trends towards concentration of economic power should be checked in the early stages."

Review Of First And Second Plans:

A Review of the First and Second Five-Year Plans, also published at the same time as the release of the Third Plan Draft Outline, said that the first decade of planning marked the first phase in fulfilling the economic and social objectives of India's planned development.

The balance-sheet for the ten years, it added, showed a steadily rising trend in national income, agricultural and industrial production and in the development of India's human resources.

The period was also marked by a quicker rate of growth of the national economy and greater emphasis on increasing employment opportunities, reducing disparities in income and wealth and preventing the concentration of economic power.

Outlay And Investment:

The total investment in the economy during the first two Plans would be a little over Rs. 10,000 crores, of which the outlay in the public sector would amount to about Rs. 6,560 crores.

The following table gives outlay figures:

(In crores of rupees)

	First Plan 1951-56	Second Plan 1956-61 (anticipated)	Total 1951-61
Public Sector outlay	1,960	4,600	6,560
Public Sector investment	1,560	3,650	5,210
Private Sector investment	1,800*	3,100*	4,900
Total investment	3,360	6,750	10,110

[*These are estimates revised in the light of fuller information and are in lieu of the estimate of Rs. 1,600 crores in the First Plan and of Rs. 2,400 crores in the Second Plan.]

Increase In National Income:

During the First Plan, owing largely to the progress recorded by agricultural production, the national income increased by 18 per cent. The Second Plan represented a larger and a more broad-based effort than the First Plan.

The increase in national income over the Second Plan period was expected to be about 20 per cent. Over the ten years 1951-61, the national income would have, therefore, increased by about 42 per cent, per capita income by about 20 per cent and per capita consumption by about 16 per cent. Agricultural production would have gone up by 40 per cent and industrial production by 120 per cent.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The following table gives a summary of agricultural production trends since 1949-50:

(Index of Agricultural Production 1949-50=100)

	1950-51	1955-56	1958-59	1960-61 (expected)
All commodities	95.6	116.9	132.0	135.0
Food crops	90.5	115.3	130.0	131.0
Other crops	105.9	120.1	136.0	143.0

The table shows that there was a rising trend but variations from year to year had been considerable.

The increase in the production of major agricultural commodities was as follows:

Commodity	1950-51	1960-61 (likely achievement)
Foodgrains (cereals and pulses) (million tons)	52.4*	75
Oilseeds (million tons)	5.1	7.2
Sugarcane (in terms of gur) (million tons)	5.6	7.2
Cotton (million bales)	2.9	5.4
Jute (million bales)	3.3	5.5

[*Estimate of production adjusted for changes in statistical coverage, etc. up to 1956-57.]

The most significant decision taken under the First Five-Year Plan was the introduction of Extension Services throughout the country as an integral part of the Community Development movement. This programme would extend to all rural areas in the country by October, 1963. At the end of the Second Plan, the extension organization at the Bloc and village level would consist of about 31,000 village level workers and about 28,000 Extension Officers at the Bloc level for agriculture, animal husbandry and other fields of development.

The total irrigated area would increase from 51.5 million acres in 1950-51 to 70 million acres in 1960-61. About 4,000 seed farms were being established during the Second Plan as part of a programme for covering the entire cultivated area with improved seeds. The consumption of nitrogenous fertilizers would increase by six times from 55,000 tons (in terms of nitrogen) in 1950-51 to 360,000 tons in 1960-61.

Industry And Minerals:

Industrial development during the past decade showed progress in basic, capital and producer-goods industries, especially machinery and engineering industries.

Three new steel plants would have been completed in the public sector and the total finished steel capacity would increase to 4.5 million tons as compared to one million tons at the beginning of the First Plan and 1.3 million tons at the beginning of the Second Plan. There was considerable increase in the production of essential industrial materials like cement, coal, aluminium, etc.

The aggregate value of all kinds of industrial machinery produced in the country rose from Rs. 11 crores in 1951 to about Rs. 79 crores in 1958. By the end of the Second Plan, much of the equipment required by the Railways would be available from indigenous production.

A beginning was made in the production of heavy electrical equipment, chemical industries including heavy chemicals. Drugs and pharmaceuticals, fertilizers etc. also recorded progress. During the Second Plan period, programmes for modernizing jute and cotton textile industries were undertaken. In a number of industries, the import component was greatly reduced.

The following table gives the likely achievements in 1960-61 in the production of important producer goods:

	1950-51	1960-61 (likely production)
Finished steel (Million tons)	1.0	2.6
Aluminium (Thousand tons)	3.7	17
Diesel engines (Thousands)	5.5	33
Electric cables (ACSR) conductors (Tons)	1,674	18,000
Locomotives (number)	3	295
Nitrogenous fertilizer (N) (Thousand tons)	9	210
Sulphuric acid (Thousand tons)	99	400
Cement (Million tons)	2.7	8.8
Coal (Million tons)	32	53
Iron ore (Million tons)	3	12

Similarly, there were substantial increases in the production of consumer goods like cotton textiles, sugar, bicycles and automobiles.

The manufacture of a number of new products was established in the country for the first time, e.g., industrial boilers, milling machines and other types of machine tools, industrial explosives, sulpha and antibiotic drugs, DDT, newsprint, etc.

Prices And Employment:

In varying degrees, throughout the first four years of the Second Plan, prices of foodgrains and agricultural raw materials as well as of several industrial commodities tended to rise.

The index of wholesale prices (1952-53=100) which stood at 99.2 in the last year of the First Plan rose to 105.1 and 106.1 during the two following years. Thereafter, it rose to 111.7 in 1958-59, the highest level reached during the year being 116.3. By the end of 1959-60, it stood at 118.6.

The increase in employment during the Second Plan did not keep pace with the growth of the labour force. It was hoped that the development programmes envisaged would lead to the creation of 8 million additional jobs outside agriculture. The achievement for the Plan period is at present estimated at about 6.5 million.

(PIB, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3251:INI:A, 3291:INI:E, 3304:INI:F]

B. Russian Aid In Production Of Oil: The Central Minister for Mines and Oil, Mr. K. D. Malaviya, told newsmen in New Delhi on June 30 on his return from Russia (where he had gone to discuss Russian collaboration for oil exploration in India) that Russian help to the public sector of India's oil industry, so far confined only to exploration, would soon be extended to the production of oil.

The new Russian offer, he said, was confined to the oilfields at Cambay and Ankaleswar, but there was a general understanding that similar help in production would be available wherever oil or gas was found by the Oil and Natural Gas Commission.

During his Russian visit, he added, no discussion was held, however, about the refining of oil found and to be produced in collaboration with the Soviet Union. Nor had any discussion taken place about establishing an oil refinery in India to process Russian crude oil. But, the Soviet offer for the supply of crude oil to India still stood. India would take the oil only when she could use it. Discussions between the Government and the oil refineries for the use of Russian crude oil were still in progress.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3278:INI:F, 3355:INI:B]

C. Loan Agreements With DLF: The US Development Loan Fund (DLF) announced in New Delhi on June 30 the simultaneous signing of seven Loan Agreements covering loans totalling $89.2 million (Rs. 42.2 crores) for enterprises in India.

Five of the loans were for power generating facilities, one for a development bank and one for the import of American-made jeep and truck parts into India.

The road transport loan of $13.1 million (Rs. 6.2 crores) would enable private manufacturing firms in India to procure American-made auto parts to be assembled into jeeps and trucks in India. The firms would receive licence from the Government to import auto-components and pay the US suppliers with dollars provided by DLF. These components would be combined with other components manufactured in India to produce 5,000 jeeps, 800 jeep station-wagons, 800 jeep trucks, 600 Dodge one-ton trucks and 6,000 Dodge 3-ton trucks.

The loans for power generating projects were made to the Ahmedabad Electricity Co., the Barauni Thermal Power Project, the Sharavathi Hydro-Electric Power Project, the Durgapur Thermal Power Station and the Chandrapura Thermal Power Project. These will together amount to $66.1 million.

The loan to the development bank was to the Industrial Finance Corporation—a sum of $10 million.

(USIS)

[Prev. ref. 3291:INI:D]

D. West German Credit: The Indian Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, who was visiting West Germany announced in Bonn on June 24 that the West German Government had granted a $30 million credit to help finance the last year of India's Second Five-Year Plan.

A communique issued in Bonn on June 24 said that the West German Government was prepared to extend the period of settlement of two-thirds of India's liabilities for the Rourkela Steel Plant by an initial period of four years from March 31, 1961.

It added that the West German Government confirmed its fundamental readiness to contribute towards the execution of India's Third Five-Year Plan by sharing in multilateral measures still to be decided in detail.

West Germany also agreed in particular to support the Indian Government in the construction of the Rourkela Steel Works. The Government would see that India received appropriate credit facilities in West Germany.

It also announced a $30-million West German aid for India, in addition to the $70 million already guaranteed, to cover her Second Five-Year Plan deficit of foreign exchange.

The West German Government further agreed to try to make it possible for the Indian Government to place immediate orders, including those for items required for the extension of the Rourkela Steel Works, within the frame-work of the Third Five-Year Plan. It would endeavour to grant long-term payment facilities for such orders.

It said that Mr. Morarji Desai's visit to West Germany had given the German side a

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

renewed opportunity to appreciate the problems of Indian construction and arrangements for German co-operation. The visit had also enabled Mr. Desai to realize that all sections of West German opinion were decided and ready to co-operate with India for a solution of her problems and for the achievement of her great tasks.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3384:INI:B]

E. Trade And Payments Agreement With Hungary: A new Trade and Payments Agreement between India and Hungary was signed in New Delhi on June 25.

The Agreement, which came into force on July 1 and would remain valid for 3½ years, replaced the present Protocol, which was valid up to the end of June, 1960.

Under the new Agreement, all economic transactions between India and Hungary would be in non-convertible Indian rupees.

At present, India is having an adverse balance of trade with Hungary, and the new Agreement would increase and diversify India's exports to that country.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2744:INI:B]

F. Shipping Agreement With Poland: A shipping Agreement between the Governments of India and the Polish People's Republic was signed in New Delhi on June 27 at the conclusion of the negotiations between an official Polish delegation and representatives of the Government of India.

The Western India Shipping Corporation, in co-operation with the Scindias and the Indian Steamship Co., according to it, would operate a service between the two countries on behalf of India, and the Polish Ocean Lines for Poland.

The two Governments undertook to give to the ships, crew and cargoes of either country the same treatment as was given to the ships, crew and cargoes of the most-favoured countries.

Payments arising out of the Agreement would be made in accordance with the Trade and Payments Agreement between India and Poland.

The Agreement replaced the Shipping Agreement between the two countries signed in 1956, which could not be implemented owing mainly to the Suez crisis.

The two shipping organizations nominated by the two Governments under the Agreement (for its implementation) have already met and drawn up an agreement for operating a scheduled service between the two countries. It is proposed to have 12 sailings each way per year. In other words, there will be one Indian ship and one Polish ship sailing from Indian and Polish ports every month each way. This service will maintain a regular schedule and will charge a common agreed tariff and will be operated otherwise in close co-operation so as to achieve equality in all aspects in regard to the operation and maintenance and results of the service.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 843:INI:C, 1949:INI:B]

G. Rayon Mill To Be Established With Japanese Collaboration: An Indo-Japanese contract to establish a rayon mill in India using Japanese materials and technique was announced in Tokyo on June 28.

The Baroda Rayon Company and three Japanese firms signed a provisional Agreement to build a mill producing 5,000,000 lbs. of filament rayon annually.

Equipment costing some 2,260,000,000 yen would be supplied by the Japanese group. Engineers to operate the mill would also be supplied.

The Japanese would finance about 10 per cent of the cost of the new mill as their share in the joint venture.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3253:INI:G]

H. New Border District Created In Punjab: The Punjab Government constituted a new district of Spiti and Lahaul, bordering western Tibet on July 1.

The new district, the 19th in the Punjab, has a population of 19,000 and an area of 4,000 square miles.

The headquarters of the district will be at Keylong. It will have two tehsils known as Lahaul and Spiti, with tehsil headquarters at Keylong and Kaza respectively.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Pref. ref. 3202:INI:L]

I. New Governors For UP and Kerala: It was announced in the second week of June that the President of India, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, had appointed Mr. V. V. Giri as Governor of Kerala and Dr. B. Ramakrishna Rao as Governor of Uttar Pradesh.

Mr. Giri had so far been Governor of Uttar Pradesh and Dr. Ramakrishna Rao had so far been Governor of Kerala.

It was thus an exchange of places for them.

Both Mr. Giri and Dr. Ramakrishna Rao were sworn-in as Governors of Kerala and UP respectively on July 1.

(The Hindu, Madras and National Herald, Lucknow)

[Prev. ref. 1099:INI:A, 1465:INI:D]

J. INSOA Annual Meeting — Dr. P. Subbaroyan On Government's Shipping Policy: Inaugurating the annual session of the Indian National Steamship Owners' Association in Bombay on June 22, the Central Minister for Transport and Communications, Dr. P. Subbaroyan, announced that a provision of Rs. 55 crores had been made by the Government of India in the Third Five-Year Plan for the development of shipping.

The importance of shipping, he said, had been fully emphasized by the Ministry of Transport to the Planning Commission, and, resources permitting, it might be possible to consider a higher allocation. However, before an additional allocation could be justified, it was necessary that the funds already provided by the Government were fully and speedily utilized. He asked the ship-owners to come forward with their proposals to acquire new ships.

The Government, he went on, was trying to secure funds and foreign exchange for shipping, and "if we are successful," they would be placed at the disposal of Indian ship-owners, who could make full use of the resources to acquire more ships.

Referring to the relationship between the public and the private sectors in the field of shipping, he said that his predecessors had stated in the past that, as far as possible, the public sector would not be allowed to compete with the private sector. "While this may still remain our objective generally, I feel that the time has come when it must be realized that it is no longer feasible to keep the two sectors in completely separate water-tight compartments."

He believed in the two sectors working hand-in-hand to conduct the country's trade, and "it is not the intention that the two sectors should fritter away their energies by fighting among themselves."

The National Shipping Board had recommended that tankers should be acquired exclusively in the public sector, and the Government had fully accepted the recommendation which closely followed the Refinery Agreements with the oil companies.

Referring to the coastal trade and the recommendations of the Rail-Sea Committee, he said that Indian coastal ships were experiencing hardships in securing adequate cargoes. The Railways were also reluctant to take more coal cargo by the rail-cum-sea route than at present. In fact, the Railways had been "actually threatening" to reduce the volume of coal cargo. He had been pressing the Railway Ministry not to effect any such reduction. Efforts were being made to ensure that certain cargoes were diverted from the rail route to the sea route as recommended by the Rail-Sea Committee.

The Chairman of INSOA, Mrs. Sumati Morarjee, in her speech earlier, said that Indian tonnage had been steadily expanding during the last few years in spite of difficulties. But, considering the phenomenal growth of world tonnage, international trade and India's own overseas trade, the growth of Indian tonnage could not be regarded as very satisfactory.

She pleaded for a revision of the terms and conditions of the availability of foreign exchange to ship-owners. Even though the values of ships had begun to rise, "the present is still a favourable time" for purchasing a sizable amount of tonnage.

The country's coastal shipping, she added, was "languishing," and urged Dr. Subbaroyan to give a fresh impetus to coastal shipping by the immediate implementation of the Rail-Sea Co-ordination Committee's recommendations in toto.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3191:INI:K]

K. Hindustan Machine Tools Factory's Progress: The Managing Director of the State-owned Hindustan Machine Tools (HMT), Mr. M. K. Mathulla, announced in Bangalore on June 29 while releasing the annual report of HMT for the year ended March 31, 1960 that HMT would make a "gift to the nation of another factory of the same dimensions as itself out of its own resources without the assistance of the Government of India."

He said that with the expansion programme costing Rs. 2.87 crores, HMT would be able to double its production from 1,000 to 2,000 machines per year.

According to the annual report, HMT had been able to build adequate financial resources during the short period of its four-year operation, which would be ploughed back into the expansion programme.

In terms of value, the annual output of HMT, after doubling its capacity, would be about Rs. 7 crores with the share capital remaining at Rs. 5.31 crores as at present.

The expansion would be completed within two years as against seven years taken for the completion of the original factory.

He indicated that during the Third Plan period, HMT might be converted into a corporation with two more machine tool plants being put under its management.

The question of reviving the scheme of workers' participation in management, which

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

was tried in HMT for a time and ceased to function early in 1959, he said, would be taken up after the representative character of the two existing rival trade unions had been decided.

HMT made a net profit of over Rs. 37,00,000 in the last financial year (1959-60). This represented a return of 8.22 per cent on the share capital. The returns in the previous years were 1958-59—7.15 per cent; 1957-58—5.54 per cent; and 1956-57—1.02 per cent.

During 1959-60, HMT turned out 702 machines valued at Rs. 2.8 crores. The previous year's production was 552 machines. During 1959-60, it sold 1,020 machines. It received 1,222 orders. A study of these orders showed that 45 per cent of them came from private customers, 35 per cent from Government corporations, 11 per cent from State Governments and nine per cent from the Government of India, including the Railways.

Under its diversification programme, HMT was now in a position to produce 90 types of machine tools.

(The Hindu, Madras and The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 2712:INI:Q]

L. Heavy Electrical Factory Goes Into Production: The Heavy Electrical Factory at Bhopal, the first of its kind in India and the biggest in Asia, began production on July 1, 1960, according to schedule.

The production range in the Factory will include a variety of equipment essential for the development of power-switch-gear, control panels, power transformers, traction motors, equipment for electric locomotives, industrial motors, and hydro and thermal generators. It is expected to be in full stride in about seven years.

The first factory block with seven bays—each 800 ft. long and 60 ft. wide and equipped with cranes—has been completed and the other block is nearing completion. Foundry and pattern shops are located away from the factory blocks and a maintenance block for repair work is already complete. A well-equipped laboratory for testing and research is also getting ready.

The annual output of the Factory will be of about Rs. 25 crores. The workshop design and equipment have been adjusted to suit the manufacture of heavy generators and transformers.

It is expected to meet a major part of the country's annual requirements of heavy electrical machinery.

The Government of India has decided to establish two more heavy electrical factories during the Third Five-Year Plan period.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2489:INI:I]

M. Estate Duty (Amendment) Acts Come Into Force: The Estate Duty (Amendment) Act, 1958 and the Estate Duty (Amendment) Act, 1960 came into force on July 1, 1960.

The amending Act of 1958 had made some important changes in the provisions of the Estate Duty Act, 1953. Under the amending Act, the general exemption limit was reduced from Rs. 1,00,000 to Rs. 50,000 and the rates of duty were also slightly reduced in respect of lower slabs. In the case of a deceased member of a Hindu undivided family governed by the "Mitakshara", "Marumakkattayam" and "Aliyasanthana" school of law, the amending Act made provision for taking into account for rate purposes not only the co-parcenary interest of the deceased in the joint family property but also the interests therein of his lineal descendants. The assessment and appellate procedures were also generally brought into line with those under the other direct taxes Acts.

The new provisions relating to exemption limit and rates of duty, and for the addition for only rate purposes of interests of lineal descendants of a deceased co-parcener, will have effect only in case where death occurs on or after July 1, 1960.

The revised procedures for assessment and appeals came into force as from that date (July 1, 1960) irrespective of the date of death but subject to the reservation that any appeal under Section 63 of the Estate Duty Act, 1953, already pending before the Central Board of Revenue, or any right or remedy by way of appeal which has accrued to any person in respect of any order made by the Controller before July 1, 1960, will continue to be governed by the provisions of the Estate Duty Act, 1953.

The amending Act of 1960 was passed in order to give effect to the resolutions of State Legislatures under Article 252 of the Constitution regarding application of the provisions of the Estate Duty Act, 1953, as amended, to agricultural lands in the States concerned.

The Act clarifies that its provisions will apply to the levy of "Estate Duty" on agricultural lands situated in all States except the States of Jammu and Kashmir, Orissa and West Bengal.

It further clarifies that the Estate Duty Act, 1953 ceased to apply from April 1, 1959 to the levy of Estate Duty in respect of agricultural lands situated in the State of Orissa and in the territories transferred to West Bengal under the Bihar and West Bengal (Transfer of Territories) Act, 1956.

The Estate Duty (Amendment) Act, 1958 came into force by virtue of a Notification dated May 30, 1960 published in the Gazette of India on June 11, 1960. This notification automatically brought into force the Estate Duty (Amendment) Act, 1960 also from July 1, 1960 as provided in Section 1(2) of that Act.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2019:INI:A]

N. Fresh Taxation In Kerala: The Deputy Chief Minister and Finance Minister of Kerala, Mr. R. Shankar, proposed on June 24 new taxes to reduce this year's estimated deficit of Rs. 2.24 crores by Rs. 1 crore of Kerala State.

At the same time, he offered a pension to the destitute and old and increased the pensions of retired Government employees.

He also removed the disparity in the existing scales of pay for some grades of Government employees.

These proposals were announced in the State Legislative Assembly on June 24 when he presented the revised Budget estimates and a review of the economic condition in the State.

The original proposals were presented by him in the last session of the Assembly (see page 3244) which had, at that time, voted only advance grants for four months.

The new taxes were: (1) The plantation tax was raised to Rs. 10 per acre instead of the existing basic tax of Rs. 2 per acre. This would be applicable to rubber, coffee, tea, cardamom, coconut, arecanut and pepper plantations of over five acres. The additional revenue yield from this tax was estimated at Rs. 80,00,000.

(2) The sales-tax on soap and bicycles was raised from two per cent multi-point rate to five per cent single point. The sales-tax on paints, powders, scents and lubricating oils was raised from two per cent multi-point rate to six per cent single point rate. These two changes would yield Rs. 20,00,000 this year.

(3) The surcharge on sales-tax collected from merchants having a turn-over of not less than Rs. 30,000 annually was raised from 2½ per cent to five per cent. Its result would be an additional income of Rs. 13,00,000 this year and Rs. 15,00,000 in later years.

Mr. Shankar also proposed tax relief measures in agricultural income-tax to the extent of Rs. 3,00,000 annually. The minimum taxlimit was raised from Rs. 3,000 to Rs. 3,500 for the first tax slab in this category. The tax was compounded at a lump sum of Rs. 75.

He assured the Assembly that these new taxes would not hit the poorer sections of the community.

Even after the new taxes, he added, the current Budget estimates would leave a deficit of Rs. 1,24,58,000. Revenue estimates had shown an increase of Rs. 76,00,000 from the original Budget estimates. They now stood at Rs. 43.71 crores, excluding income from the new tax proposals.

The old age pension for destitutes was proposed to be given to all those over 70 years of age at Rs. 15 a month. This social relief programme, outlined in the directive principles of the Constitution, would account for Rs. 3,00,000.

He earmarked Rs. 5,00,000 more to increase the monthly pensions by Rs. 10 to all pensioners receiving up to Rs. 100 now. The minimum pension rate was also fixed at Rs. 15 a month.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3254:INI:L]

O. Madras-Kerala River Waters Agreement: Madras and Kerala States resolved all their differences over the sharing of the waters of the two inter-State rivers—Parambikulam and the Sholayar—and as a result, an Agreement to go ahead with the projects on the rivers was signed in New Delhi on July 4 by the Chief Minister of Kerala, Mr. Pattom Thanu Pillai, and the Finance Minister of Madras, Mr. C. Subramanian.

The Agreement provided for the construction of two dams on the Sholayar, one within Madras territory and the other in Kerala, lower down. Madras would supply Kerala 12,300 million cubic feet of water for the power house to be put up by Kerala at Sholayar.

Separate Agreements concerning the designs and working tables of the projects would be drafted and executed at the official level in due course. In the meantime, Madras would proceed with the Parambikulam Project.

[The two State Governments had reached an understanding on the basic issues involved while the communists were in power in Kerala in 1958. Differences, however, arose over the interpretation of that Agreement when the present Congress-P-SP Government assumed office and the latest Agreement settled those points.]

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2374:INI:J]

P. New Caves Discovered Near Aurangabad: A new set of caves of great architectural and sculptural beauty have been "discovered" by the Archaeological Department of the Government of India near Pital Koda, 42 miles from Aurangabad.

They were said to be of the same age as Ellora and Ajanta and contained fine frescoes and remarkable works of sculpture.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

INDONESIA

A. New Parliament Installed: President Sukarno formally installed in

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Djakarta on June 25 Indonesia's new Gotong Rotong (Mutual Assistance) Parliament.

It has 283 members nominated by him from various political, military and civil groupings.

Twenty-two of them were nominated only a week earlier—on June 18—as discontent over the composition of the House came into the open. But, according to reports, the 22 additions made no concessions to moderate and Right-wing critics.

In the new nominated Parliament, the pro-Government Nationalist Party has 44 seats, the Orthodox Nahadat-ul-Ulema 36, Communists 30 and splinter parties 20.

Among the functional groups in Parliament, the Armed Forces and the Police have 35 seats, Muslim Scholars 24, Labour 26, Women 8 and Youth Groups 9. Others, ranging from farmers to Balinese Hindus, have 51.

The Deputy Speaker of the old Parliament, Mr. A. Zainul Arfin Arudjikartawinata, was chosen as the acting Chairman of the new House.

Addressing the members, Dr. Sukarno urged them to help implement his theory of "Guided Democracy" and "Indonesian Socialism."

He said that Parliament should resort to voting as seldom as possible and take decisions after consultation and agreement. When agreement was impossible, the matter should be brought to him for a decision.

He also pointed out that the Parliament's task was to assist the Government.

[Dr. Sukarno dissolved the last Parliament in March, 1960 because, he said, it had not fulfilled his hopes for mutual co-operation with the Government.]

(Information Service Indonesia)

[Prev. ref. 3230:IND:A]

B. Dr. Sukarno's Tour Abroad: The President, Dr. Sukarno, left Djakarta on April 1 on a tour which took him to Iraq, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary, UAR, Tunisia, Morocco, Portugal, Cuba, San Juan, Mexico, USA and Hawaii.

On his way back from Hawaii, he went to Japan on a 10-day private visit from May 25.

He returned to Djakarta on June 5.

In Iraq:

President Sukarno arrived in Baghdad on April 2 on a three-day official visit to Iraq.

During his visit, he and the Iraqi Prime Minister, Gen. Abdel Karim Kassem, signed a Friendship Agreement.

A Cultural Agreement was also signed by the Indonesian Foreign Minister, Dr. R. Sundrio, and the Iraqi Education Minister, Brig. Muheddin Abdel Hamid, at the same time.

The Indonesian Industries and Planning Minister, Dr. Suharto, and the Iraqi Minister of Trade, Mr. Abdel Latif Shawaaf, signed a Trade Agreement as well.

Dr. Sukarno and Gen. Kassem signed a joint communique which was released in Baghdad on April 5.

The communique denounced the continuation of colonial rule in West Irian and said that the two leaders fully agreed that this 'occupied territory' should be returned to Indonesia.

It said that the only way to end the war in Algeria was for France to recognize the Algerians' right to independence and end hostilities by negotiations.

It expressed "deep concern" at the "outrageous policy of racial discrimination" practised by the South African Government and condemned its "deliberate acts of suppression."

It said that the two statesmen sincerely hoped that the disarmament and nuclear test ban talks would achieve positive results by reaching agreement on general disarmament, making a success of the 'summit' meeting and liquidating the 'cold war.'

It added that more adequate and unbiased economic collaboration between the less developed and more advanced nations was "imperative" for promoting peace and justice.

Dr. Sukarno left Baghdad for Yugoslavia on April 5.

In Yugoslavia:

President Sukarno arrived in Belgrade on April 5 for discussions with Marshal Josip Broz Tito and flew to Pula, the north Adriatic port on the mainland opposite Brioni Island, where Marshal Tito has his private residence.

Dr. Sukarno and President Tito continued their talks on April 7.

It was understood that a large number of questions including relations between Indonesia and Yugoslavia and the general international situation were discussed.

The two main topics they discussed were said to be long-term economic co-operation between the two countries and the need for uncommitted countries to play an active role in international affairs.

The official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said that the talks were satisfactory.

Earlier, on April 7, Dr. Sukarno went on a sight-seeing tour of Slovenia and visited a steel works.

In a communique issued at the end of their talks on April 8, Dr. Sukarno and Marshal Tito said that their Governments believed that all countries, big or small, should be entitled to have a say at the 'summit' conference in Paris on May 16 (which failed).

The communique stressed the importance of international aid for countries in the process of development and said that such aid should be given "without political strings, on the basis of equal rights, and the elimination of all forms of colonialism."

It added that Indonesia and Yugoslavia would conclude a Technical and Scientific Co-operation Agreement in the near future.

In Bulgaria:

Dr. Sukarno arrived in Sofia on April 8 on an official visit to Bulgaria.

Addressing an open-air mass meeting soon after his arrival, Dr. Sukarno said that Indonesia was not alone in her struggle against colonialism and for national independence.

The people of Indonesia, he added, believed in the ultimate victory of general peace and prosperity.

President Dimiter Ganey of Bulgaria, in his speech, said that Bulgaria worked for peace in the Balkans and would like to see the establishment of an arms and rocket-free zone from the Adriatic to the Black Sea.

On April 11, Sofia University conferred an honorary doctorate on President Sukarno.

Dr. Sukarno ended his three-day visit to Bulgaria by signing a Joint Declaration with President D. Ganey stating that significant progress in the development of friendly relations between the Bulgarian People's Republic and Indonesia had been made.

The Declaration stressed that both countries were convinced that all international problems could be settled by peaceful negotiations only.

In Rumania:

Dr. Sukarno arrived in Bucharest on an official visit to Rumania on April 11.

On April 15, Bucharest Radio broadcast a joint communique signed by Dr. Sukarno and the Rumanian President, Mr. Ion Maurer, the previous day (April 14).

The communique said that Indonesia and Rumania supported the principle of friendly co-existence and total and general disarmament.

Dr. Sukarno declared his support for the Rumanian efforts to secure a zone of peace and friendship in the Balkans.

It was decided to raise the status of the diplomatic representation in the two countries to the ambassador level.

An Agreement for Technical and Scientific Co-operation and a Cultural Agreement were also signed on April 14.

The Cultural Agreement provided for the exchange of students, teachers and artistes between Indonesia and Rumania.

In Hungary:

Dr. Sukarno arrived in Budapest (Hungary) on April 15.

He was welcomed at the airport by the President of the Hungarian Presidential Council, Mr. Istvan Dobi, and the Prime Minister, Mr. Andras Negedus.

Speaking at a rally of the Hungarian Patriotic People's Front in Budapest, Dr. Sukarno said that the Afro-Asian countries and the communist bloc countries were friends who fought for the same ideals.

He added: "I have no doubt of the omnipresence of the spirit of freedom."

He said that his countrymen did not want to sit on the fence hoping for peaceful co-existence with their arms across their breasts.

He declared: "That is why I am running around the world to speak for freedom, to demand peace in the world. We do not only demand peace but are also struggling for the brotherhood of man."

He said that Indonesia's foreign policy was one of active co-existence. Indonesia's revolution was greater than many revolutions in world history, greater than the French or American revolutions. While the French and American revolutions had been political, Indonesia's revolution was national, political, economic, cultural and social. It was the summing up of many revolutions in one generation.

In a communique issued in Budapest on April 20, Mr. I. Dobi and Dr. Sukarno expressed the hope that the Disarmament Conference, then in session in Geneva, would come to an agreement.

It added that the Governments of Hungary and Indonesia had agreed to sign a long-term Trade and Cultural Agreement.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Hungarian Government also expressed its willingness to grant Indonesia technical and long-term credit.

In United Arab Republic:

Dr. Sukarno arrived in Cairo from Vienna on April 22 on a State visit to the United Arab Republic.

The talks between Dr. Sukarno and Col. G. A. Nasser ended on April 25.

Dr. Sukarno and the Indonesian Foreign Minister, Dr. R. Subandrio, also had separate talks with Algerian nationalist leaders in Cairo on April 25.

At a ceremony on April 24, Dr. Sukarno became the first Honorary Doctor of Philosophy of the 1,000-year-old Al Azhar University of Cairo.

Speaking on the occasion, Dr. Sukarno said: "I consider this award as being made to the struggling Indonesian people. Our aim and your aim is one—we work for our people's interests. The Afro-Asian people stand behind those Afro-Asians who are still fighting for their independence, supporting them morally and materially."

Col. Nasser and Dr. Sukarno issued a joint communique in Cairo on April 26 which deplored the continued bloodshed in Algeria and urged that everything should be done to give the Algerians self-determination and independence.

The communique said that the two leaders supported disarmament and 'Summit' Conference. It regretted that the West Irian question was still unsolved and deplored the Dutch Government's decision to send warships to Indonesian waters. It also condemned the French nuclear tests in the Sahara and racial discrimination in South Africa, and sympathized with the Palestine refugees.

It added that the two leaders had agreed to strengthen economic and cultural links between their two countries and to set up special liaison committees in Djakarta and Cairo for the purpose.

In Guinea:

Dr. Sukarno left Cairo for Conakry (capital of Guinea) on April 25.

A joint communique signed by Dr. Sukarno and the President of Guinea, Mr. Sekou Toure, made public on April 29, said that the two countries had decided to exchange ambassadors and to sign Agreements for economic and cultural co-operation.

It also announced President Toure's acceptance of Dr. Sukarno's invitation to visit Indonesia at a date not yet set.

Referring to the Algerian struggle for independence, it said that "the only way to end the hostilities in Algeria is for France to recognize the Algerians' right to independence."

In Tunisia:

Welcoming Dr. Sukarno at Tunis airport on April 29, President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia said that he had been waiting for nine years for the Indonesian President's visit—since the time he had gone to Indonesia to seek help for his own country, then struggling for independence.

President Sukarno had talks with Mr. Bourguiba on May 1 and received the leaders of the Algerian "Provisional Government," including Mr. Ferhat Abbas.

President Habib Bourguiba and Dr. Sukarno signed a joint communique in Tunis on May 2 declaring that their countries would support the Algerian movement until the problem had been solved on the basis of independence and right of self-determination.

The communique condemned the French nuclear tests in the Sahara and called for a ban on such tests.

In it, the two Governments also proclaimed their attachment to the Bandung principles, the principles and aims of the UN Charter and the right of peoples to self-determination and independence.

It said that the two Governments had discussed means to consolidate the economic and cultural relations between their two countries.

In Morocco:

Dr. Sukarno and his party arrived in Rabat (Morocco) from Tunis on May 2 and left next day (May 3) for Marakesh.

The Moroccan Crown Prince Moulay Hassan flew to Marakesh earlier to receive Dr. Sukarno there.

In a communique issued on May 5, Dr. Sukarno and King Mohammed V of Morocco expressed deep anxiety over the policy of racial discrimination practised by the South African Government and condemned its repressive policies which had led to considerable loss of human life among the African people.

It expressed the deep anxiety of the two leaders over the continuation of the Algerian conflict and agreed on the necessity of intensifying efforts for a solution of the problem which should be based on the recognition of the right of the Algerian people to independence and sovereignty.

It deplored the French atomic tests in the Sahara and demanded an immediate end to them. It also affirmed the attachment of the two countries to the Bandung principles.

It added that the two leaders had agreed to establish diplomatic relations on ambassadorial level and to begin negotiations for economic and cultural agreements.

Later, Dr. Sukarno visited Lisbon (Portugal), Havana (Cuba), Puerto Rico (San Juan) and Acapulco (Mexico) before going to San Francisco on his way to Hawaii and Tokyo.

(The Times of India, Bombay, The Statesman, Calcutta, The Hindu, Madras, The Times, London and The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 2825:VND:B]

JAPAN

A. Security Treaty With USA Comes Into Force: The Instruments of Ratification of the Japan-US Mutual Security Treaty were exchanged at the official residence of the Foreign Minister, Mr. Aiichiro Fujiyama, in Tokyo on June 23 with about 300 policemen standing guard outside.

The United States was represented by her Ambassador, Mr. Douglas MacArthur II.

With the exchange of the Ratification Instruments, the Treaty formally came into force.

A few hours later on June 23, the Prime Minister, Mr. Nobusuke Kishi, announced his decision to resign "to freshen public feelings."

The announcement followed riots, demonstrations and strikes which had swept Tokyo and other cities in protest against the Treaty.

In doing so, Mr. Kishi accused "international communism" for the recent unrest and violence in the country and said: "I note with particular apprehension the existence of the strategy of international communism behind the demonstrations."

He warned that the recent mass violence could "destroy parliamentary Government."

He said: "I have continued my efforts until today in the firm belief that the signing of the new Security Treaty with USA would remedy the inequalities of the old Security Treaty, place the United States and Japan on equal terms and contribute greatly to the establishment of world peace."

In a move believed to set a precedent, President Eisenhower had signed the American Instrument of Ratification and had forwarded it to the US Embassy in Tokyo before the Senate approved the Treaty.

The exact date of signature was not announced, but the State Department in Washington explained that this had been done "in anticipation of the possibility that the Instruments of Ratification would be exchanged before President Eisenhower's return to the United States (from his East Asian tour) and possibly even while he would have been present in Tokyo."

In a statement marking the Treaty's coming into force, Mr. A. Fujiyama said that the new Treaty was more rational than the old, stipulating that the peace of Japan would be guarded in accordance with the purposes and principles of the United Nations Charter and establishing Japan's independent position.

The Treaty, he added, was purely defensive in character since it did not constitute a menace to any other country and sought to prevent war. It enabled the more effective maintenance of a US-Japan Security system.

He was sure that the overwhelming majority of the Japanese people understood that such a security system was necessary to guard Japan's security and independence.

In another statement at the exchange of the Ratification Instruments, Mr. Fujiyama said: "We are convinced that the new Treaty will place friendly and co-operative relations between the two countries (USA and Japan) on an ever more durable and dependable basis and contribute to peace in the Far East."

The US Ambassador, Mr. Douglas MacArthur II, said that the Treaty was based on mutual trust, confidence and understanding not only in the vital area of national security but also in the political and economic fields.

He added: "We already have very firm bonds of friendship between our two nations. The Treaty will strengthen those bonds and will help immeasurably in building a world where there will be freedom with justice for all."

The Opposition Socialist Party issued a statement following Mr. Kishi's resignation announcement on June 23 demanding that the Socialists be given the task of forming a 'care-taker' Cabinet which would dis-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

solve the Diet and hold fresh General Elections.

The statement said the party would not recognize the new Security Treaty.

The smaller Opposition Democratic Socialists said that they would in principle take part in a plenary session of the Diet to nominate a new Prime Minister.

They too favoured a 'care-taker' Cabinet but one that was headed by one of their men.

Mr. D. Eisenhower's Broadcast:

In a television and radio report to the American nation on his East Asian tour on June 28, President D. Eisenhower said that the ratification of the Japanese-US Mutual Security Treaty was a "defeat for international communism."

Calling Japan as "a great nation, responsible, peaceful and co-operative," he said that in front of the massive area and immense population of China "the other free countries of East Asia can survive in freedom and flourish only in co-operative association with the United States and a free Japan."

He said that the withdrawal of the invitation to him to visit Japan was disappointing, but "we should not forget the favourable effects of visits elsewhere in East Asia, as well as the final approval of the Japanese-American Treaty by both Governments."

Millions of people who lined the streets of the cities he visited in East Asia, in West Asia, in Europe, in North Africa, in South Africa, in Canada and Mexico had one message: "They wanted to be partners with the United States."

He added: "Respecting Japan, in spite of the outrageous conduct of a violent and disorderly minority, I have been assured that the people there were, in overwhelming majority, anxious to welcome me as the representative of a nation with which they wished to co-operate and to have friendly relations. Of course, the basic objective of the communist-inspired disorders in Tokyo was to bring about the rejection by the Japanese Government of the Treaty. That the communists were defeated in their frantic efforts to prevent ratification of that Treaty speaks well for the future of Japanese-American relations."

(The Hindu, Madras and The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3407:JAP:A]

LAOS

A. Death Of Prince Souvanarath: The Vice-President of the Royal Laotian Cabinet, Prince Souvanarath, died in Vientiane on June 27.

After studying in Pnom Penh, in Cambodia and in France, Prince Souvanarath had entered the French administration in Laos and had a brilliant career. On March 15, 1947, he formed the first Laotian Government when Laos became independent. Since 1949, he had been a member of the Royal Cabinet. He was a half-brother of Prince Souvanna Phouma.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

NEPAL

A. Mr. B. P. Koirala On Proposed Second Plan: The Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, told a news conference in Khatmandu on June 26 that Nepal's proposed Rs. 196-crore Second Five-Year Plan was estimated to lead to a 30 per cent increase in national income and would have less reliance on foreign aid than the First Plan.

The Rs. 33-crore First Five-Year Plan, he said, still had 1½ years to run and only half the total outlay for it had yet been spent. The Government planned to spend the remaining half in the next 18 months.

The Second Plan would create 500,000 more jobs. Emphasis would be on gradual industrialization, intensification of agriculture and provision of adequate social services.

It would also aim at a gradual reduction in inequality of incomes.

Its total capital requirement for agricultural sector alone was estimated at Rs. 44.9 crores and for non-agriculural sector at Rs. 151 crores. Out of a total investment of Rs. 196 crores, Rs. 152 crores was slated for the public sector and Rs. 44 crores for the private sector. The order of priorities mentioned in the Plan was: industrial projects, road-building and agricultural production.

The main objective of the Second Plan was to build an economy for the "take-off" stage.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2844:NEP:B]

PAKISTAN

A. Second Five-Year Plan Approved: A message from Murree dated June 21 said that the Pakistan Economic Council which met under the chairmanship of the President, Field-Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan, considered the final draft of the Second Five-Year Plan (1960-65) prepared by the Planning Commission and recorded its general approval to the principles, objectives and programmes of development contained in it.

The Economic Council also considered the question of creating special machinery to ensure the successful implementation of the development programmes incorporated in the Plan.

The Plan, as now approved, superseded the Outline which was released in December, 1959. Several calculations and targets included in the Outline had been revised.

The following is an official summary of the Plan:

"It appears that in financial terms the Plan targets will be fulfilled to the extent of about 90 per cent. The total development expenditure during the Plan period is estimated at Rs. 970 crores; Rs. 630 crores in the public sector and Rs. 340 crores in the private sector. The Plan target in the private sector will be surpassed; but the target, it now seems, was based on an under-estimation of the pre-Plan level of investment so that the net increase in private investment during the Plan period will be inconsiderable. Against the Plan expectation of a 15 per cent increase in national income, the actual achievement will be of the order of 11 per cent. Because of the increase in population, however, the rise in per capita income is unlikely to exceed 3 per cent, as compared with the increase of 7 per cent envisaged in the Plan.

"In general terms, the conclusion to be drawn from the experience of the First Plan is that while progress has been a good deal less than was hoped, there has been a significant improvement in the climate for economic growth, making accelerated development possible during the Second Plan period. Conditions are now ripe for taking a decisive step forward in the advance towards a self-reliant and self-sustaining economy.

"While, despite the progress made in the First Plan period, the country is still in a serious state of under-development, the possibilities for future growth of the economy are very considerable. The country has some excellent natural resources, and the people are hardy and willing to learn. Many conditions favourable to development have been created in the past few years; social overheads have been built; external economies from past investment are emerging; new development organizations have been created; and the out-turn of technical personnel is increasing. Given political stability and sound leadership there are good prospects of economic progress at an accelerated pace. The path, however, will be long and hard.

"Shortage of foreign exchange has been, and continues to be, a serious impediment to development. To increase export earnings, various devices, including an export bonus scheme, have been launched in recent months. As a result, there has been a remarkable increase in export earnings. During 1959, for instance, the value of exports of commodities which come under the purview of the export bonus scheme rose to Rs. 57 crores as against Rs. 22 crores during 1958.

"The balance of payments position also has shown a great improvement after 1957-58. As against a deficit of Rs. 27 crores in 1956-57 and of Rs. 34 crores in 1957-58, there was a current account surplus of Rs. 4 crores in 1958-59 and further improvement in 1959-60. Gold, dollar and sterling reserves stood at about Rs. 130 crores in March, 1960, compared with Rs. 90 crores in June, 1958. Recent improvement in the balance of payments, however, has been due as much to the restriction of imports as to recovery of exports; and the increase in reserves was partly the result of extraordinary surrenders of illegal private holdings abroad.

Principal Targets:

"The principal goals of the Second Five-Year Plan are:

"(i) To increase national income by 20 per cent. After allowing for the increase in population, this will mean a 10 per cent increase in the per capita income.

"(ii) To increase the production of foodgrains by over 20 per cent. This will make the country self-sufficient in food by the end of the Plan period.

"(iii) To increase industrial production by about 50 per cent.

"(iv) To improve the balance of payments position by about Rs. 45 crores. At the same time, the level of imports of industrial raw materials and spare-parts of machinery will be substantially increased.

"(v) To achieve substantial progress towards the target of 3,000,000 new job opportunities.

"(vi) To accelerate the economic growth of relatively less developed areas in East and West Pakistan.

"(vii) To re-orientate and expand educational, health and social welfare facilities.

"(viii) To increase housing facilities, particularly for lower income groups.

"The development programme included in the Plan is estimated to cost Rs. 1,900 crores as against Rs. 1,080 crores in the First Plan. The definition of development expenditure used in the Second Plan is, however, different from the one used in the First Plan: all recurring expenditure except on a very limited class of schemes is excluded from the Second Plan. If the recurring expenditure is included, the size of the Second Plan will be Rs. 2,050 crores. On the new definition of development expenditure, the Second Plan is about 63 per cent larger than the First

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Plan. The Indus Basin replacement works have not been included in the Plan.

"The First Five-Year Plan comprised two sectors—public and private. In the Second Five-Year Plan, a third sector, namely, the semi-public sector, has now been introduced.

"This sector includes public corporations, such as the Pakistan Industrial Development Corporation, the Pakistan International Airlines, the Karachi Port Trust, the Karachi Development Authority, the Inland Water Transport Authority of East Pakistan and the West Pakistan Road Transport Board. These corporations rely partly on funds provided by the Government and partly on their own resources as well as the resources provided by private investment and loans. They also differ from the public sector agencies in that they enjoy a much greater degree of administrative autonomy.

"In a strict sense, therefore, they belong neither to the public nor to the private sector. A distinction has been made between the expenditure to be directly incurred by the Government, which is the public sector proper, and the expenditure to be incurred by public corporations, but to be financed by the Government. The estimated expenditure on development programmes by local bodies has been included in the public sector in the Second Plan.

"Out of a total of Rs. 1,900 crores, Rs. 1,150 crores will be financed by the Government. This will be over 90 per cent larger than the Government-financed programme in the First Plan.

Financial Allocations:

"The allocations proposed for different sectors are as follows:

(Crore Rupees)

	Public sector	Semi-public sector	Contributions from Government, from own resources, private investment & loans	Private sector	Total
Agriculture	168	..	..	88	254
Water and Power	314	..	19	6	339
Industry	13	104	50	238	405
Fuels and minerals	12	18	..	55	85
Transport and Communications	199	11	42	83	335
Housing and settlements	90	42	39	113	284
Education & training	89	..	..	10	99
Health	35			5	40
Man-power and social services	9			2	11
Village AID	48			..	48
Total	975	175	150	600	1900

"The large increase in the case of agriculture, education and training reflects the high priority assigned to these sectors in the Plan. The increase in the case of health, social services and man-power is much greater, as the performance in these sectors in the First Plan was particularly low. In the Second Plan, particular importance has been given to the development of human resources and to the provision of various social services for the community. It should also be noted that the proposed allocations for education, health and social services are in addition to the substantial normal expenditure provided for these sectors under the revenue budgets of the Central and Provincial Governments. The expansion in water and power allocations is in line with the growing needs of agriculture and industry. The allocations to industry, transport and housing have been substantially increased, but the acceleration in these sectors is much higher if the private sector allocations are also taken into account.

"The public-financed programmes under the Second Plan will be about twice as much as the actual performance under the First Plan as shown below:

(Crore Rupees)

	First Plan estimated expenditure	Second Plan allocations	Percentage increase over expenditure under First Plan
Agriculture	85	166	152
Village AID		48
Water and Power	177	314	77
Industry, fuels & minerals	81	147	82
Transport & Communications	145	210	45
Housing and Settlements	74	132	78
Education and training	23	89	279
Health, social services and man-power	10	44	368
Total	595	1150	93

"The resources required for development expenditure under the Plan will need to be raised as follows:

Domestic savings	Rs. 1,100 crores
Foreign aid, loans and investments	Rs. 800 crores
Total	Rs. 1,900 crores

"The average rate of savings was about 6 per cent of gross national product during the First Plan. It is estimated that the current potential rate of saving is about 7 per cent. Domestic savings amounting to Rs. 1,100 crores can be mobilized if the rate of saving is increased from 7 per cent in 1960-61 to 8.6 per cent in 1964-65.

"The foreign aid loans and investments required for the Plan are intended partly to meet the foreign exchange costs of the development schemes in the Plan, which are estimated at Rs. 650 crores and partly to serve as balance of payments support of Rs. 150 crores for increased supplies of raw material and spare parts needed for effective utilization of industrial capacity.

Resources:

"The resources for the programme to be financed by the Government will need to be raised as follows:

Surplus on revenue account	Rs. 80 crores
Capital receipts	Rs. 150 crores
Resources of local bodies	Rs. 20 crores
Counterpart funds on account of US defence support and agricultural commodities aid	Rs. 250 crores
Custom duty on commodity aid imports	Rs. 50 crores
Project aid	Rs. 100 crores
Additional taxation	Rs. 100 crores
Deficit-financing	Rs. 100 crores
Total	Rs. 1,150 crores

"It should be pointed out that the Plan does not assume that the resources required for its implementation will be easily forthcoming. The mobilization of these resources will require very determined efforts on the part of all concerned. Additional taxation and a higher level of savings will be needed to raise internal finance and economies in non-development expenditures will need to be rigorously enforced. The volume of foreign assistance, already considerable, will have to increase very substantially if the requirements of the Plan are to be adequately met.

"It is the aim of the Plan to maintain financial stability in the country. It is for this reason that the Plan relies principally on orthodox means of financing, such as taxation and borrowing from the genuine savings of the people. The Plan envisages the use of deficit-financing to a very limited extent. Also, it advocates a decisive switch-over from direct economic controls to a policy of regulation of the economy through suitable fiscal and monetary policies, and greater dependence on market mechanism.

Highest Priority To Agriculture:

"In the Plan, the highest priority is accorded to the development of agriculture. Public and private investment in Agriculture and Village-AID, and in water and power programmes directly benefiting agriculture, amounts to about Rs. 425 crores which is over 22 per cent of the total expenditure in the Plan.

"This is a much more ambitious programme than was provided in the First Plan.

"About 2,500,000 acres of land will be newly irrigated, and over 7,000,000 acres will be provided with improved irrigation, drainage, flood control and reclamation facilities. With greater use of fertilizers, improved seeds and plant protection measures, it is expected to achieve self-sufficiency in foodgrains by 1965 and to increase substantially the output of cotton, jute, tea and other agricultural products.

"The production of wheat is expected to increase by 17 per cent and of rice by 22 per cent. The total production of foodgrains including wheat, rice and other grains is expected to increase by over 20 per cent from 13,200,000 tons in 1959-60 to about 16,000,000 tons by 1964-65. The production of sugarcane is expected to increase by 35 per cent.

"A production target of about 2,300,000 bales of cotton has been set for 1964-65, compared with the expected production of about 1,700,000 bales in 1959-60. For jute, the proposed target is 7,300,000 bales in 1964-65, compared with the estimated production of 6,000,000 bales in 1959-60.

"The Plan recommends the establishment of suitable organizations for the expeditious colonization of new lands.

"The production of fish will be increased by about 25 per cent. This should help to improve the diet of the population.

"The programme for afforestation, regeneration and extraction of forest resources will be intensified, with a view to increasing timber production by about 25 per cent.

"The Second Plan, like the First Plan, regards Village-AID as the principal instrument for the enrichment of village life. Development in this field will be closely integrated with the structure of Basic Democracies.

Water And Power:

"The growth of agriculture and industry is closely linked with the development of water and power resources.

"In West Pakistan, 58 per cent of land under cultivation depends upon irrigation; and in East Pakistan, although rainfall is plentiful during certain parts of the year, lack of irrigation facilities during the dry months precludes double-cropping of vast areas in the Province. Other essential needs are: flood regulation, measures to combat water-logging and salinity in West Pakistan and to protect and reclaim tidal lands in East Pakistan and electric power for industrial use as well as for operating tube-wells and pumps for drainage and lift irrigation.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"The Plan recommends a long-range programme, the objectives of which are to raise the productivity of existing agricultural lands through rational and increased application of water, control of salinity and waterlogging, and sound land management practices. It provides for a steady increase in farm acreage through irrigation, drainage and flood regulation. It also recommends the provision of cheap and abundant power to accelerate and strengthen agricultural and industrial development.

"The water and power development programme is the largest in the public sector with an allocation of Rs. 314 crores.

"In East Pakistan, about 3,000 miles of coastal embankments will be remodelled, raised and strengthened, and some 600 miles of new embankments constructed. A barrage with head regulators will be built on the Teesta river. This will give East Pakistan a modern gravity irrigation system for the first time. A similar, smaller scheme will be completed on the Tangon river. Areas outside the command of these schemes will be irrigated by tube-wells and surface pumps for which provision has been made. The Ganges-Kobadak-Kushtia Scheme will be completed and extended to the districts of Khulna and Jessore. A large number of minor irrigation and flood control schemes are contemplated, spread over the whole Province. A number of schemes will be comprehensively surveyed and will include resuscitation of old Brahmaputra, development of the Halda, Sangha and Mathamuhari basins and reclamation of some areas. The dredger fleet will be provided greater repair facilities and be more fully utilized.

"In West Pakistan, the Kotri, Gudu, Taunsa, Thal and Warsak canals and Bolon dam projects will be completed. The Rechna Doab will be served by more than 2,000 tube-wells to depress the water table and to control salinity, and by such means as more rational and improved water applications and crop rotation.

"The programme of tube-wells will be extended to other areas.

"In the field of power, there will be a shift in priority from investment in electricity generation in the First Plan to transmission and distribution in the Second Plan period. The Plan provides for a net increase of 40 per cent over power capacity available in 1960. The total capacity by 1965 will be 1,272,000 kw. A considerable part of the generating capacity which uses imported fuels or which is uneconomical will be retired.

"The transmission line mileage of 11 kw and above will increase from 5,000 at the end of the First Plan to about 15,000 during the Second Plan.

"To increase industrial production, reliance is placed essentially on private enterprise. Conditions now exist for increased private investment, both national and foreign. Price and distribution controls have been relaxed. Incentives have been provided to stimulate production and exports. In particular, the incentives offered to the foreign investor have been liberalized. Investment treaties and double taxation avoidance agreements calculated to promote foreign private investment have been concluded with a number of countries. Local private enterprise has now acquired a measure of experience and 'know-how' which qualifies it to expand its operation either independently or in collaboration with foreign investors.

"The Plan specifically states that there should be no public sector in the sense of exclusive reservation of industries for public enterprise. It further stipulates that if at any time, private enterprise is found ready and capable of undertaking any or all of the industrial investment indicated in the Plan for the public sector, there should be no hesitation in allowing the private sector to do so.

"The Plan emphasizes the need for the production of basic metals, of machinery and equipment and of basic chemicals, and the utilization of natural gas for developing a wide range of petro-chemical industries. Fifty-six per cent of the proposed investment in the Plan relates to producer goods industries and 44 per cent to consumer goods industries.

"Investigations into the setting up of an integrated steel plant based on indigenous ore and coal will be vigorously pursued. A beginning will be made with the production of steel from indigenous ore and a pilot plant will be established to produce 16,000 tons of luppens a year. Since the completion of investigations and the setting up of an integrated steel plant may take some years, the Plan recommends the early establishment of two steel plants of an initial production of 350,000 tons of steel based on imported pig iron and scrap, which could be later integrated with the production of steel from imported or indigenous ore. The plant in East Pakistan will produce 100,000 tons, which will make that Province self-sufficient in steel during the Plan period. The plant in West Pakistan will meet part of the requirements of West Pakistan and Karachi. Domestic production of steel will accelerate the development of engineering industries.

Other Targets:

"Amongst other important physical targets are the following:

"An additional 550,000 cotton spindles will be installed. The production of cotton yarn is expected to increase from 380 million lbs. in 1959-60 to 520 million lbs. in 1964-65. Domestic consumption of cotton cloth should reach 14.5 yards per capita annually by the end of the Plan period. This means a 10 per cent increase in per capita consumption of cloth.

"The capacity of the jute industry is planned to reach a total of 12,000 looms in 1965 against 8,040 looms at the beginning of the Plan period, and production should increase from 250,000 tons to 380,000 tons a year.

"The production of sugar industry is planned to increase from 150,000 tons to 300,000 tons a year.

"The production of vegetable oils will increase from 150,000 tons to 250,000 tons, and of vegetable ghee from 22,000 tons to 50,000 tons a year.

"Tea production will rise from 57 million lbs. to 64 million lbs. a year by 1965.

"The production of cigarettes will increase from 9,000 million to 15,000 million a year during the Plan period.

"The production target for cement has been set at 3 million tons a year by 1965.

"The planned increase in the production of fertilizers is from 42,000 tons in 1960 to 550,000 tons in 1965.

"A net-work of small industries services will be set up all over the country supplemented by extension services including mobile extension units to give technical and management advice. Production facilities and supply and marketing services will be provided and credit services organized in co-operation with the banks.

"The cost of the programme during the Plan period will be about Rs. 50 crores, of which Rs. 16 crores will be in the form of a revolving fund for short-term credit for supply of raw materials, as well as for marketing and long-term loans for the hire purchase of equipment. Private investment in these industries is estimated at another Rs. 25 crores.

"The Plan objectives in respect of the development of mineral resources are to reduce the country's dependence on imported fuels, to exploit the known deposits of other minerals and to accelerate investigations to determine the nature and extent of minerals not presently proved to exist in adequate quantities.

"The Plan provides for an outlay of Rs. 85 crores on the development of fuel and mineral resources. Considerable public investment is proposed in the coal industry with the objective of increasing coal production from the present rate of 750,000 tons to 1,500,000 tons a year. It is expected that the annual use of natural gas will increase during the Plan period from 22,500 million to 100,500 million cubic feet. The search for oil will continue in East and West Pakistan, with Government participation. In East Pakistan, the possibilities of utilization of peat will be explored. Full exploration of mineral resources will be undertaken and the possibilities of their exploration will be pursued.

Railways:

"A provision of Rs. 96 crores has been made mainly for replacement and additional equipment for existing lines. The programme stresses the rehabilitation of track, remodelling of bridges, replacement of obsolete and worn-out rolling stock and improvement of terminal facilities and operating practices.

"The traffic on the railways is expected to increase by about 40 per cent in the case of goods and by about 25 per cent in the case of passengers. Some of the important schemes already in progress, like the Karachi Circular Railway, will be completed during the Second Plan period.

"An investment of Rs. 15 crores is proposed for completing the reconstruction and modernization of the ports of Karachi, Chittagong and Chalna. Rs. 10 crores has been allocated for shipping.

Inland Water Transport:

"Considerable importance is attached to the development of waterways in East Pakistan. The Plan proposes an investment of Rs. 8 crores in the public sector and Rs. 10 crores in the private sector for the development of inland water transport.

"By the end of the Plan period, the length of effective waterways will have increased from 2,800 to 4,000 miles.

"An allocation of Rs. 55 crores is made for the construction and improvement of roads and bridges. In East Pakistan, the programmes concentrates on arterial and connecting roads in the Province. The road mileage in the country in respect of high type roads will be increased by about 40 per cent.

Road Transport:

"An investment of Rs. 64 crores is contemplated in road transport. The bulk of this investment will be privately financed, Government investment being less than Rs. 3 crores. The number of buses and trucks will be increased from 25,000 in 1960 to 36,000 in 1965.

Posts And Telegraphs:

"An investment of Rs. 32 crores is proposed for Posts and Tele-communications. The programme provides for an increase of 60 per cent in the number of telephones, 13 per cent in the number of post offices and 30 per cent in the number of telegraph offices.

"The trunk net-work in and between the two Provinces will be strengthened and a limited number of additional tele-communication circuits will be provided.

"The development programme for broadcasting envisages that Rawalpindi, Dacca and Lahore stations will be equipped with 100 kw short and medium-wave transmitters, while Hyderabad, Quetta, Chittagong, Rajshahi, Multan, Bahawalpur, Sylhet and Rangpur will be provided with 10 kw transmitters.

Housing:

"The Plan provides for an expenditure of Rs. 284 crores for housing

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

and settlement, of which Rs. 170.5 crores will be in the public and semi-public sectors and Rs. 113.5 crores in the private sector.

"In case of rural areas, the Plan recommends the initiation of pilot projects for village planning and housing. The urban programme provides for the development of 300,000 residential plots with a limited number of nucleus houses. All shelterless displaced persons will be settled during the Plan period.

Education And Training:

"An allocation of Rs. 89 crores has been provided for education and training, compared with an actual expenditure of Rs. 24 crores in the First Plan.

"In addition, a sum of Rs. 51 crores will be spent as a recurring cost of the completed development schemes. The very substantial increase in the Plan allocation for education and training reflects the conviction that rapid acquisition of knowledge and skills is of fundamental importance to the future of the country. The allocation would have been still higher had the available resources so permitted, and if the supply of competent teachers were not so limited and the time required to train them not so limited and not so long.

"The programme for primary education seeks to improve the quality of education and to increase the primary school enrolment by about 2,540,000 children, which will raise the percentage of school-going children at primary level from about 42 in 1960 to nearly 60 in 1965. The increase in percentage will be from 48 to 63.0 in East Pakistan, and from 36.0 to 56 in West Pakistan.

"It is estimated that under the secondary education programme, about 430,000 additional pupils will be accommodated in the secondary schools, which will mean an increase of 40 per cent in the number of pupils as compared with 1959-60.

Man-power And Employment:

"An allocation of about Rs. 5 crores has been provided for the man-power and employment programme.

"The Plan provides for the establishment of a National Man-power Council, the reorganization of the existing employment exchanges and the opening of 12 new ones. A National Training Board will co-ordinate the various training programmes.

Health:

"The Plan provides for a total expenditure of Rs. 40 crores for Health, of which Rs. 35 crores will be in the public sector.

"Higher priority has in general been given to preventive as compared with curative services. Roughly, 60 per cent of the proposed allocation for health is for preventive services and the balance for curative services. Emphasis has been placed on combating malaria and tuberculosis, which are responsible for a quarter of a million deaths annually. Campaigns will be carried out also against small-pox, leprosy and trachoma. The greatest single barrier to an effective health programme is the shortage of qualified doctors and nurses; for this reason, additional training facilities have received priority attention. Family planning is indispensable to curb the high rate of increase in population and to off-set the effect of reduced mortality rate brought about by the enforcement of more efficient health measures in recent years.

Social Welfare:

"The objectives in this sector are: to encourage communities to take the initiative in mobilizing resources to meet social needs, and to provide help and guidance to individuals and families in making adjustments to their environment.

"The total cost of the programme is estimated at Rs. 8.5 crores.

"The Plan recognizes that the economic growth of certain areas in East Pakistan and West Pakistan has lagged behind the rest of the country. It, therefore, provides for an accelerated development of such areas. It attaches importance to extension of facilities and services for surveys, investigations, research and pilot projects and to the rapid creation of the economic and social overheads needed to lay the foundation for accelerated growth, such as power, transport and communications, and irrigation, and flood control in these areas.

"It would be unrealistic to expect that all the assumptions and targets of the Plan will be exactly fulfilled.

"Alterations may be induced by changing social and economic conditions, by unexpected expansion or contraction of resources, by emergence of ideas or facts calling for better programmes or improved techniques, or by success or failure in Plan implementation. Certain factors such as the weather, the terms of trade and the availability of foreign capital and assistance are clearly unpredictable. Also, a large part of the development programme lies in the private sector, which can be influenced to a considerable extent by public policy but which nevertheless functions on the basis of numerous unco-ordinated individual decisions. All these uncertainties emphasize the need for preserving some flexibility in the Plan."

Mr. G. Ahmad's Statement:

The Chairman of the Planning Commission, Mr. G. Ahmad, said in Murree on June 21 that the Second Five-Year Plan constituted "a bid, under severely limiting conditions, to liberate the people from the cursing burden of poverty."

It had been drawn up, he said, with the compelling consideration that the country's economy must grow at a rate faster than the increase in its population and that its future growth must be such as to lead with expedition towards a modernized and self-sustaining economy.

"No doctrinaire assumptions underlie the Second Plan and neither an exclusively capitalist nor an exclusively socialist economy could be postulated. The approach throughout is pragmatic."

Outlining its broader aspects, Mr. Ahmad listed three dominant strains which run through the Plan: (1) a vigorous attack on the stubborn problem of agricultural production, low productivity and inability of the country to feed itself; (2) an industrial push forward through encouragement to private enterprise in all practical ways and by freeing the economy from superfluous restraints; and (3) an effort to expand education at all levels as fast as the required institutions and personnel can be provided.

In a number of ways, however, he said, the Plan represented investment in the future with benefits maturing over a period of time. Nevertheless, he foresaw a fair increase in goods of mass consumption like more food, more crops and some increase in manufactured goods. Though housing difficulties could not ease very much, the citizens have more of what is more valuable—improved education and improved health.

F-M Ayub Khan's Broadcast:

In a broadcast on June 21, the President, Field-Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan, said:

"I present to you, the people of Pakistan, the Second Five-Year Plan which has been prepared by the Planning Commission under my direction and which your Government has approved today. We shall be launching the Plan on July 1, and it shall constitute the basis of our economic and social development for the next five years.

"The broad objectives of the Plan are well known to you. As I said when I spoke to you a year ago, in a country such as ours, the least that we must aim at is to ensure that everyone of us has two square meals a day, sufficient clothing to meet essential needs and reasonable shelter. The Plan seeks to promote the welfare of the people and to raise their standard of living.

"But there can be no improvement in standards of living unless there is an increase in production. The emphasis in the Plan, therefore, is on expeditious agricultural and industrial development.

"In agriculture, we are aiming at self-sufficiency in food. Before five years are over, we must see that we are able to produce enough food for our growing population and to do without food imports from abroad.

"Full development of our water and power resources is vital, if agricultural and industrial production is to make real headway. We have a number of major water and power projects in progress. These will be pushed forward, and others will be taken in hand. Several of these projects will be completed in the next five years, and the country will benefit from them considerably.

"In industry, we have already come a long way since Independence. Some important industries, notably cotton textiles, jute manufactures, paper, sugar, leather and cement have since been established on a sound footing. These will be further expanded and will give us larger quantities of goods we need for use within the country as well as for export.

"Two steel plants are to be established, one in each Province, to enable us to meet the greater part of our steel requirements. Heavy and light engineering will be developed, as also a variety of chemical and petro-chemical industries.

"Private enterprise in industrial development will be encouraged and will have the opportunity—and the responsibility—to make its full contribution to national prosperity.

"At present, a large number of our people are unemployed. The rise in population will bring about a further increase in the number of those seeking employment. As the Plan goes into effect, opportunities of employment for our growing labour force will be steadily and substantially increased.

"Technical education, in particular, will receive strong encouragement. Six new universities will be established; four of these will be technical.

"The health programme in the next five years will include a country-wide campaign for the eradication of malaria and tuberculosis. New hospitals, clinics and dispensaries will be established, and health services will be expanded generally.

"The economic gains of the First Plan were largely consumed by the increase in populations. We cannot afford a repetition of this experience.

"The Plan recommends a programme of family planning, which will assist in dealing with the problem of population growth; but the problem will never be solved unless each one of us realises his personal responsibility for its solution.

"The Second Plan is not an exercise conducted in isolation. It has grown out of the First Plan, and much of it will be reflected in future Plans. It is a workmanlike plan, an action programme, which the country needs. It reflects our national aspirations for economic and social betterment, and it sets out the strategy of our battle to realize those aspirations. We must win this battle.

"I am addressing you, the people of Pakistan, to seek your dedicated co-operation in the great task of building our country's future. The responsibility for the successful implementation of the Plan rests upon you."

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3147:PAK:A]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10 Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95|-; Foreign Rs. 115|- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

July 16—22, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 29

PAKISTAN

A. Mr. M. Qadir On Kashmir And Neutralism: Addressing the Pakistan Islamic Council for International Affairs in Karachi on June 14, the Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, said that Pakistan's membership of the Commonwealth was a hurdle in the way of referring the Kashmir dispute to the International Court of Justice for a decision in the face of India's refusal to agree to such a reference.

Pakistan, he said, had not been able to "draw out" India to refer the dispute to the International Court.

He added: "I am not going to give any details as to how we want to tackle the Kashmir question—and when, because whatever I say in public is always communicated to the other side through the Press."

He defended Pakistan's participation in regional defence pacts and mutual military alliance with USA and described the "neutralist" attitude of some countries as "unwise tactics which will not ultimately succeed." Some of the "neutralist countries" might well be sure of their protection because they were also shielded by defensive arrangements entered into by certain other countries in the region such as CENTO and S-EATO. They might not see the danger now, but it would manifest itself later. "There are neutrals who hold their own and remain so by their own strength. But, there are also neutrals who run to both. Some exploit their neutralism and run to one camp for help just because some hilly tracts of theirs had been occupied by another powerful nation." Some of the neutralists, even if they had to choose between one or the other camp ultimately, would, however, like to keep everybody guessing by sitting on the fence. This is not wise. Ultimately such a policy will not succeed."

(Dawn, Karachi and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3241:INI:A]

B. New Envoy To United Nations: It was announced in Rawalpindi on June 23 that the Chairman of the Pakistan Insurance Corporation, Mr. Said Hassan, had been appointed as Pakistan's Permanent Representative at United Nations, in succession to the late Prince Aly Khan.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3359:PAK:F]

C. Import Policy For July-December, 1960: On June 25, the Pakistan Government announced a comparatively liberal import policy for the July-December, 1960 shipping period, under which the major sector of the economy was freed from rigid import controls.

By it, 28 items were put on virtual open general licence, in addition to drugs and medicines, to increase the supply of essential consumer goods, stabilize the prices at a reasonable level and provide adequate raw materials to recognized effective industrial capacity.

The 28 items, which came under automatic licensing from July 10, included iron and steel, explosives, raw rubber, including synthetic rubber and lubricants.

The Chief Controller of Imports, Mr. Altaf Gauhar, said in a broadcast on June 25 that with the placing of "these industrial raw materials" on automatic licensing, some 130 industries, including major industries engaged in the manufacture of consumer goods, would be provided with essential raw materials adequate to feed 100 per cent single-shift effective capacity.

Other items placed under automatic licensing were tractors and their spares, books and tyres and tubes.

The new licensing list consisted of 188 items as against 200 items which were on the licensable list in the first shipping period of 1960. Eleven items, regarded as luxury items, were eliminated from the licensable list.

(Dawn, Karachi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3147:PAK:B]

D. Hindu Temple Discovered: According to a Karachi message dated June 24, a Hindu temple, in a very sound condition, belonging to the pre-Muslim period, had been discovered during archaeological excavations at Bhambore, about 40 miles from Karachi.

Although the exact date of the temple could not be determined, it was estimated that it belonged to the 6th century.

An attached lime-plastered pedestal, probably for a large deity and votive Siva Linga, and a stone pedestal recovered from the temple area strongly suggested the religious character of the shrine.

Bhambore was the scene of very interesting discoveries during the year 1959 of early Arab civilization in the Indus Valley and also of a flourishing sea-port which existed in the area in the early 6th century.

Evidence of Hindu and Buddhist culture, which existed in this region nearly 1,500 years ago, was also discovered by the archaeologists.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3068:PAK:I]

SINGAPORE

A. Mr. Ong Eng Guan Relieved Of Cabinet Post: The Yang de Pertuan Negara (Head of State), Inche Yusof Bin Ishak, on the advice of the Cabinet, relieved Mr. Ong Eng Guan from his post as Minister of National Development on June 22.

Earlier, he was expelled from the ruling People's Action Party (PAP).

The Chairman of the Party, Dr. Toh Chin Chye, who is also Deputy Prime Minister, said that Mr. Ong Eng Guan was being expelled "for attempting to destroy party solidarity."

The Party Executive offered to re-consider the expulsion if Mr. Ong Eng Guan admitted his mistakes and apologized, but he declined to do so.

[Mr. Ong Eng Guan shot into prominence when he was elected Mayor of Singapore City. Later, he secured the biggest majority in the first General Elections under the new Constitution and was given the largest number of portfolios in the PAP Ministry. Gradually, however, the rift between the moderates led by the Prime Minister, Mr. Lee Kuan Yew, and the extremists, mostly former detainees led by Mr. Ong Eng Guan, became apparent and eventually Mr. Ong Eng Guan was shorn of almost all his Ministerial powers. Recently, he was also dropped from the powerful Internal Security Council.]

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2739:SGP:A, 2824:SGP:B]

B. Shipment Of Animals And Birds Banned: The Government promulgated an Order on June 15 banning the export of wild animals and birds from Singapore by sea.

This followed a report from London of a case of hundreds of monkeys dying on board the ship between Singapore and Europe after they had been trapped and sold for vivisection or experiments in USA.

The ban was sought by the Singapore branch of the Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, which was fighting constantly against the neglect and misuse of animals in Asia.

In three successive shipments around October 24, 1959, 120 monkeys died out of 300 in one ship, 222 died out of 440 in another, and 50 out of 300 were reported to have died by the time a third ship reached Aden.

(The Times, London)

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Col. G. A. Nasser's Visit To Greece And Yugoslavia: The President of UAR, Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser, arrived in Piraeus on June 7 on a three-day visit to Greece.

He was welcomed by King Paul, Queen Frederika, members of the Greek Royal family, the Greek Prime Minister, Mr. Constantine Karamanlis, and others.

This was Col. Nasser's first visit to a Western country covered by the NATO Treaty.

He was accompanied by Madame Nasser and their four children. The UAR Foreign Minister, Dr. Mahmoud Fawzi, the Minister for Presidential Affairs, Wing-Commander Ali Sabri, and the President of the Syrian Region's Executive Council were also in the Presidential party.

His programme included visits to museums and shipyards, as well as to the Acropolis and Delphi, the ancient oracle.

The Greek Prime Minister, Mr. Constantine Karamanlis, and President Nasser discussed the international situation and matters concerning the two countries in Athens on June 7.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Speaking to newsmen after their meeting, Mr. Karamanlis said that the talks were held in a spirit of cordiality and were useful for both the countries.

This was the first of a series of meetings held between the two Heads of Governments during President Nasser's three-day visit to Greece.

The talks were continued the following day (June 8).

The second round of talks was devoted largely to the question of Greek residents in the Egyptian Region of the United Arab Republic.

An informed source told newsmen that the two leaders also discussed West Asian problems of interest to both countries, recent events in Turkey and the Cyprus issue.

With about 80,000 Greeks residing in Egypt —most of them traders and artisans—the Greek Government wished to avoid their mass departure to Greece, whose re-employment in Greece would then pose a problem. It was stated that President Nasser himself appeared to be willing to keep the Greek residents in Egypt.

Joint Communique:

In a joint communique issued in Athens on June 9, President Nasser and Mr. Karamanlis underlined the necessity of aiding under-developed countries in order to safeguard international peace and security.

It emphasized that the deep friendship between the two countries and their fruitful co-operation on all matters concerning Greece and the Arab world constituted an important factor for peace and stability in the area. The solid bonds that united Greece and the United Arab Republic were not weakened by their respective international positions.

President Nasser, the communique concluded, expressed his satisfaction with the unreserved loyalty of the Greek community in the United Arab Republic and with its contribution to the country's economic development.

Replying to questions at a news conference in Athens on June 9, President Nasser said he hoped that all African countries would be independent in five to 10 years.

Visit To Yugoslavia:

President Nasser arrived in Yugoslavia on June 13 from Greece. On his arrival in Pula, he was received by the Yugoslav President, Marshal Tito.

President Tito said in a statement that the Col. Nasser's visit had special significance, because it came at a time when all efforts were necessary to prevent the renewal of tensions and to support peaceful measures.

Speaking at a luncheon given in honour of Col. Nasser on Brioni Island on June 13, President Tito said that the 'Summit' Conference failure had shown that the Big Powers were unable to solve world problems.

He, therefore, urged greater activity by uncommitted nations. Uncommitted countries could no longer passively watch the trend of events. The 'Summit' Conference failure had disappointed and disturbed the entire world.

President Nasser and President Tito began formal talks on Brioni Island on June 14. They were continued for the next few days.

It was stated that among the subjects they discussed were the possibilities of strengthening the political and economic ties between Yugoslavia and the United Arab Republic.

On June 16, Col. Nasser and President Tito arrived at Plitvice Lakes, in western Yugoslavia, after a drive through the western Yugoslav State of Croatia.

The two leaders spent two days touring Croatia and Slovenia before returning to Brioni Island, where they prepared their joint communique.

Joint Communique:

In their joint communique released on Brioni Island on June 20, Yugoslavia and the United Arab Republic declared that all nations, not just Big Powers only, were responsible for maintaining world peace and security and that uncommitted nations as well as those not directly implicated in the 'cold war' could play an increasingly useful part in keeping the peace.

Both the statesmen endorsed the latest Soviet disarmament proposals which, they said, "opened the way to agreement."

They also welcomed the attainment of independence by African nations.

The communique called on United Nations to assume fully its prerogatives and its responsibilities.

It said that the 'Summit' Conference failure was received by the world with profound disappointment.

They expressed their joint conviction that an end to the Algerian war through negotiations based on the Algerians' right to self-determination would be a vital contribution to world peace.

They condemned the apartheid policy followed by the South African Government and hoped that it would be dropped without delay.

They agreed to set up a joint Ministerial Committee to organize increased co-operation between the two countries in the economic, technical and commercial fields.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo, The Statesman, Calcutta and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2565:UAR:B, 3368:UAR:B]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: 'Summit' Conference—State Of Alert For US Armed Forces—Conference Begins—Opening Speeches—Failure—Post-Conference Statements—Mr. H. Macmillan Reports To House Of Commons—Mr. N. Khruschev In East Berlin—Mr. D. Eisenhower Reports To The American Nation—Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld's Statement — China Supports Soviet Stand—NATO Support For Western Stand —Mr. Nehru's Comment; S-EATO Ministerial And WHO Assembly Meetings.

A. 'Summit' Conference In Paris: The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, arrived in Paris on May 14 for the 'Summit' Conference, which was to begin on May 16.

The last 'Summit' Conference was held in Geneva in 1955.

On landing at Orly airport, Mr. Khruschev declared: "Though all the peoples desire the strengthening of peace and a detente in international relations, it is common knowledge that, particularly of late, influential quarters who are seeking to revive the 'cold war' and hinder the invigoration of the international atmosphere, have noticeably intensified their activities in certain countries. Let us hope their efforts will yield no success."

He said he was expecting three results from the 'Summit' Conference: (1) General and complete disarmament; (2) Liquidation of the aftermath of World War II and the conclusion of a German Peace Treaty; and (3) Improved relations between East and West.

The Soviet Government, he said, would do all in its power to make the Conference a success and relieve tensions in the world.

He added that the 'Summit' meeting would be of extreme importance for peace. "We shall have to examine problems of an urgent nature for peace and we will examine them carefully and fully."

Mr. Khruschev led what was described as "a very strong" Soviet delegation to the Conference.

It was composed of the Defence Minister, Marshal Rodin Malinovsky, the Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, the First Deputy Foreign Minister, Mr. V. V. Kuznetsov, and the leader of the Soviet delegation to the Disarmament Conference in Geneva, Mr. Valerian Zorin (which was adjourned for the duration of the 'Summit' Conference).

The following day (May 15), the British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, and the American President, Mr. D. Eisenhower, flew into Paris.

Both of them made statements on landing at the airport.

Mr. Eisenhower's Statement:

The following is the text of the statement of President Eisenhower:

"Once again I am privileged to come to France, to beautiful France, to salute a great people and their leader. I have come here to join with the leaders of France, Great Britain and the Soviet Union in discussions of historic importance.

"The American Government's participation is undertaken not to seek any advantage at another's expense; rather it hopes to prove equally with any other its sincere dedication to peace with justice.

"Mankind knows that the effects of nuclear war would be not only horrible but universal. Mankind expects the participants in this 'Summit' meeting to work honestly and intelligently for measures towards genuine peace.

"The hopes of humanity call on the four of us to purge our minds of prejudice, and our hearts of rancour. Too much is at stake to indulge in profitless bickering.

"The issues that divide the 'free world' from the Soviet bloc are grave and not subject to easy solution.

"But, if goodwill exists on both sides, at least a beginning can be made. The West, I am sure, will meet Mr. Khruschev half-way in every honest effort in this direction.

"It will be a pleasure to meet again with my old friends, President de Gaulle and Prime Minister Macmillan. I hope to meet another friend, Chancellor Adenauer (of West Germany).

"I have talked with all these three leaders in recent weeks, and we have had opportunity to discuss the issues before us. Unity on great principles and purposes strengthens the Western Powers.

"As the eyes of the world turn towards Paris, I pray that the grace of God will be with us to direct our efforts so that progress towards a just peace may be achieved."

Mr. Macmillan's Statement:

The following is the text of Mr. Macmillan's statement:

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"I am always glad to visit Paris. It is here that some of the most eventful and stimulating pages of history have been written.

"Now we have the opportunity to write yet another.

"There are compelling reasons why we should not fail. Today, mankind cannot afford misunderstanding, suspicion, hostility.

"Errors of judgment based on ignorance, or anger, could lead with dreadful speed to the extinction of civilization. All that man has striven to achieve through the centuries could be obliterated almost overnight.

"That alone must compel us to do our work with care and thoroughness.

"Yet, at the same time, as science offers us self-destruction, it also offers opportunities for a life fuller and richer than we have known before.

"It would be madness, indeed, if we threw away a future so rich with promise.

"Of course, the problems are difficult, immensely difficult. We cannot expect to solve them in one meeting. What we have to do is to set in motion an orderly process of discussion and negotiation.

"If that is done and if we continue to meet and negotiate in full recognition of the magnitude of the responsibility resting on us, then I think that over a period of time we may well find that the difficulties are less innumerable than perhaps they now seem to be.

"The thing to do is to make a good start here in Paris. If we do that the meeting may well be acclaimed by history."

Mr. Khruschev called on Mr. Macmillan at the British Embassy on May 15 for a pre-'Summit' talk.

The Macmillan-Khruschev meeting came shortly after Mr. Macmillan had met President Eisenhower, General de Gaulle and Dr. Konrad Adenauer (West German Chancellor) for what were described as "strategy talks" at the Elysee Palace.

Mr. Khruschev also called on President Charles de Gaulle on May 15 for a private talk.

Test 'Alert' For US Armed Forces:

The US Defence Department announced that a state of alertness test, in which the United States armed Forces around the world took part on May 16 was ordered from Paris by the US Defence Secretary, Mr. Thomas Gates.

Mr. Gates was at the 'Summit' meeting as President Eisenhower's principal Military Adviser. News of his special 'alert' order from Paris aroused immediate speculation in Washington that the Exercise and the 'Summit' meeting were linked in some way.

Mr. Gates' order gave no details and US Defence Department officials declined to say why the 'alert' was ordered at that time.

They only said that Mr. Gates had ordered the 'alert' only in general terms, leaving it to the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington to decide the precise form it should take.

The 'alert' was set in motion by guarded messages from the Joint Chiefs to senior Commanders in the field, both at home and abroad. Efforts to keep it a secret broke down when some Commanders in USA asked television and radio stations and police wireless net-works to recall personnel from leave.

Once back at their bases, these personnel were placed in various degrees of readiness —some on five-minute stand-by duty.

Even the Defence Department's leading Information Officers were not informed at first of the 'alert' which was later officially described as a "world-wide communications readiness exercise."

Defence officials said that the Joint Chiefs, in their messages, also authorized local Commanders to use their discretion as to how far they should carry out the 'alert' practice.

In Washington, an Army spokesman said that no key personnel were actually recalled to their duty stations, but that they were called on the telephone to warn them that they should hold themselves available.

A Navy spokesman said that US shore stations were not involved in the Exercise but that appropriate fleet units participated by reviewing recall procedures and checking communications channels. The Strategic Air Command was reported to have ordered additional bomber crews to some bases.

'Summit' Conference Begins:

The 'Summit' Conference began on May 16 after a "surprise" postponement by one hour at Mr. Khruschev's request.

The meeting opened in an atmosphere of formality, with the full delegations of all the "Big Four" present, including the Foreign Ministers.

Shortly before the start, a Western Conference source said that Mr. Khruschev, in private talks with President de Gaulle and Mr. Macmillan on May 15, insisted on obtaining an undertaking from President Eisenhower that USA would send no more spy-planes over Russia.

According to French sources, Mr. Khruschev was demanding at least a semi-official apology from Mr. Eisenhower for the spy-plane incident.

[Official translations of Mr. Khruschev's various speeches in Paris and elsewhere used the expression "regret" and not "apology".]

Mr. N. Khruschev made the following statement at the preliminary meeting of the 'Summit' Conference on May 16:

"As is known, a provocative act has been committed recently with regard to the Soviet Union by the American Air Force. It consisted in the fact that on May 1 a US reconnaissance aircraft invaded the Soviet Union while executing a specific espionage mission to obtain information on military and industrial installations on the territory of USSR. After the aggressive purpose of its flight became known, the plane was shot down by units of the Soviet rocket troops. Unfortunately, this was not the only case of aggressive and espionage action by the US Air Force against the Soviet Union.

"Naturally, the Soviet Government was compelled to give appropriate qualification to these acts and show up their treacherous nature which is incompatible with the elementary requirements of the maintenance of normal relations between States in time of peace, not to speak of it being in gross contradiction with the task of lessening international tensions and creating the necessary conditions for the fruitful work of the 'Summit' Conference. This was done both in my speeches at the session of the Supreme Soviet of USSR and in a special Note of protest sent to the US Government.

"The US State Department at first gave the ridiculous version that the American plane had violated the frontier of USSR by chance and had no espionage and sabotage assignments of any kind. When irrefutable facts clearly proved the falsity of this version, the US State Department, on May 7 and later US Secretary of State on May 9, declared on behalf of the US Government that US aircraft intruded into Soviet territory on military espionage missions in comformity with a programme endorsed by the US Government and the President personally. Two days later, President Eisenhower himself confirmed that American flights over Soviet territory had been and remained the calculated policy of the United States.

"The same was declared by the US Government in its Note to the Soviet Government dated May 12. Thereby, the US Government is crudely flouting the generally accepted standards of international law and the lofty principles of the UN Charter, which has also been signed by USA.

"The Soviet Government and the entire Soviet people met with indignation these statements by leading statesmen of USA as did every honest person in the world who displays concern for peace.

"Now that the Heads of Governments of the four Powers have come to Paris for the Conference, the question arises as to how it is possible to fruitfully negotiate and examine the questions confronting the Conference, when the US Government and its President personally, far from deploring the provocative act—the incursion by an American military plane into Soviet territory—on the contrary, declared that such actions will continue to be the national policy of USA towards the Soviet Union. How can agreement be sought on the various issues which require a settlement with the object of reducing tensions and eliminating suspicion and distrust between the States, when the Government of one of the Great Powers bluntly declares that its policy is intrusion into the territory of another Great Power with espionage and sabotage purposes, and consequently, aggravation of tension in international relations? It is obvious that the proclamation of such policy, which can be carried through only when the countries are in a state of war, dooms the 'Summit' meeting to complete failure in advance.

"We, naturally, take note of the declaration of such a policy by the US Government and state that in case of repeated intrusion by American planes into the Soviet Union, we shall shoot such planes down.

"The Soviet Government reserves the right to take appropriate retaliatory measures in all such cases against those who violate the State sovereignty of USSR and engage in espionage and sabotage regarding the Soviet Union. The Government of USSR declares once more that appropriate measures will be taken also with regard to those States which, by permitting American military bases to be set up on their territory, become accomplices in aggressive actions against USSR, not excluding a blow against these bases.

"In this connexion, it is impossible to ignore President Eisenhower's statement that he could not take part in the 'Summit' meeting under the threat of the conclusion of a Peace Treaty with the German Democratic Republic, though what he called a threat was merely a statement by the Soviet Government of its firm determination to do away with the vestiges of the war in Europe and to conclude peace, thus, to bring the situation, especially in West Berlin, in line with the requirements of life and the interests of safeguarding peace and security of the European peoples. How then can the Soviet Government take part in discussions under conditions of an actual threat, made by the US Government which declared that it would continue to violate the frontiers of USSR and that American planes had flown and would fly over Soviet territory? The US Government has thereby expressed its intention to continue the unheard-of and unprecedented actions directed against the Soviet Union's sovereignty, which is a sacred and immutable principle in international relations.

"It follows from the above that to make the Conference a success, the Governments of all Powers represented at it should follow an open and honest policy and solemnly declare that they would not undertake any actions against one another which amounted to violation of the State sovereignty of the Powers. This means that if the US Government is indeed prepared to co-operate with the Governments of the other Powers in the interests of maintaining peace and consolidating confidence between the States, it must, first, denounce the impermissible provocative actions of the American Air Force with regard to the Soviet Union and, secondly, refrain from continuing such actions and such policy against USSR in future. It goes without saying that in this case the US Government cannot fail to call to strict account those directly responsible for the deliberate violation of the State frontiers of USSR by American planes.

"Until this is done by the US Government, the Soviet Government sees no possibility of fruitful negotiations with the United States Government at the 'Summit'. It cannot be among the participants in the talks where one of the parties bases its policy with regard to the Soviet Union on treachery.

"If, under the obtaining conditions, the Soviet Government were to participate in negotiations clearly doomed to failure, it would thereby become a party to the deception of the nations, which it has no intention of becoming.

"It stands to reason that if the US Government were to declare that in future USA

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

will not violate the State borders of USSR with its aircraft, that it deplores the provocative actions undertaken in the past, and will punish those directly guilty of such actions, which would assure the Soviet Union equal conditions with other Powers, I, as the Head of the Soviet Government, would be ready to participate in the Conference and exert all efforts to contribute to its success.

"As a result of provocative flights by American military planes and, mainly, as a result of these provocative flights being declared for the future as the national policy of USA against the socialist countries, new conditions took shape in international relations.

"It is but natural that under such conditions we cannot work at the Conference. We cannot work because we see the position from which they want to talk to us—under the threat of aggressive espionage flights. Espionage flights are known to be carried out for intelligence purposes in order to begin war. Therefore, we reject the conditions created for us by USA. We cannot participate in any talks and even in the solution of questions which are quite ripe; we cannot do so because we see that USA has no desire to come to agreement.

"The United States is regarded as the leader in the Western countries. Consequently, a Conference at present would be a waste of time and deception of public opinion in all countries. I repeat, under the obtaining conditions, we cannot take part in the talks.

"We want to participate in negotiations only on the footing of equality, with equal opportunities for both sides.

"We deem it necessary that the peoples of all countries of the world should understand us correctly. The Soviet Union does not abandon efforts to achieve agreement, and we are certain that reasonable agreements are possible, but apparently not now but at some other time.

"However, to make this possible it is necessary, first, for USA to declare that it deplores the provocative policy which it called a policy of 'free' flights over our country, to abandon this policy, to admit that aggression was committed and express regret.

"The Soviet Government profoundly believes that if not the present Government of the United States, then the next one, and if not the next one, then the one after that, will understand that there is no other alternative but peaceful co-existence between the capitalist and socialist systems—either peaceful co-existence or war which will bring disaster to those now carrying through an aggressive policy.

"Therefore, we believe that some time must be allowed to elapse for the new questions to crystallize and for those shaping the political line of the country to analyse the responsibility they have assumed by proclaiming an aggressive line in the relations with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries. Therefore, we would think that there is no better way out than to put off the Heads of Governments Conference for some six or eight months.

"The Soviet Union, for her part, will not relax her efforts to achieve agreement. I think that public opinion will understand our position correctly, will understand that we have been deprived of the possibility to take part in these talks.

"However, we firmly believe in the necessity of peaceful co-existence, because to lose faith in peaceful co-existence would mean that mankind is doomed to war, would mean to accept the inevitability of war, and in present conditions, it is well known what calamity war would bring to all peoples on earth.

"I should like to address the people of USA. I visited USA, met there with the representatives of various sections of the American people and I profoundly believe that all sections of the American people want no war. The only exception is a small fanatic group in the Pentagon and the militaristic circles backing it which line their pockets on the arms race, make tremendous profits and which ignore the interests of the American people, in general ignore the interests of the peoples of all countries and carry through an adventurist policy.

"We express gratitude to President de Gaulle for his hospitality and opportunity to meet in Paris. We also appreciate the effort of the Government of Great Britain and Prime Minister Macmillan personally.

"We regret that this meeting has been torpedoed by the reactionary quarters of USA as a result of the provocative flights of American military aircraft over the Soviet Union.

"We regret that this meeting failed to yield results awaited by the peoples of the world.

"Let disgrace and responsibility for this rest with those who have proclaimed the piratic policy vis-a-vis the Soviet Union.

"It will be recalled that President Eisenhower of USA and I agreed on an exchange of visits. In September, 1959, I paid such a visit to the United States. I was very gratified by that visit, by the meetings and conversations which took place in the United States, and I expressed my gratitude for this.

"The US President was to return the visit. We agreed that he would come to the Soviet Union on June 10 and we prepared a hearty welcome for this distinguished guest.

"Unfortunately, the provocative aggressive actions against USSR have now created such conditions which deprive us of the possibility to receive the US President with the proper cordiality which the Soviet people accord their welcome guests. Now, we cannot display such a cordiality towards the US President since the provocative flights of American military reconnaissance planes have created conditions obviously unfavourable for this visit. The Soviet people cannot and do not want to be hypocritical.

"That is why I believe that the visit to the Soviet Union by the US President should now be postponed and a date for this visit should be fixed when conditions are ripe for it. The Soviet people will then be able to display proper cordiality and hospitality with regard to the distinguished guest representing a Great Power with which we sincerely want to live in peace and friendship.

"I believe that Mr. Eisenhower and the American people will understand me rightly.

"The Soviet Government declares that, on its part, it will continue to do its utmost towards a relaxation of international tensions, the solution of problems which still divide us; in doing so, we will be guided by the interests of strengthening the great cause of peace on the basis of peaceful co-existence between States with different social systems."

After the preliminary meeting had lasted more than three hours, the Conference adjourned indefinitely.

The opening session began with President Eisenhower and Mr. Khruschev accusing each other of torpedoing the Conference.

But, Mr. Macmillan and President de Gaulle worked quietly to save the Conference from disaster.

Mr. Khruschev himself considered that the Conference had not even begun, but that the first meeting was a preliminary one to determine whether it would take place.

Mr. Macmillan noted that Mr. Khruschev had not proposed that the Conference should be abandoned and appealed to his colleagues to proceed with their work now.

After Mr. Eisenhower's speech, Mr. Macmillan and President de Gaulle expressed the hope that the US spy-plane incident would not prevent the Conference from going forward.

President de Gaulle, as host, suggested that all the four leaders take a day off to reflect and that he would be at their disposal to get matters started again.

The "Big Four" then separated without saying any good-byes and without setting a date or time for the next meeting, but without actually ending the 'Summit' Conference.

Mr. D. Eisenhower's Statement:

After the preliminary meeting of the 'Summit' Conference ended, Mr. Eisenhower issued the following statement:

"Having been informed yesterday (May 16) by General de Gaulle and Prime Minister Macmillan of the position which Mr. Khruschev has taken in regard to the 'Summit' Conference during his calls on them, I gave most careful thought as to how this matter should best be handled. Having in mind the great importance of this Conference and the hopes that the peoples all over the world have reposed in this meeting, I concluded that, in the circumstances, it was best to see if at today's (May 17) private meeting any possibility existed through the exercise of reason and restraint to dispose of this matter of the overflights, which would have permitted the Conference to go forward.

"I was under no illusion as to the probability of success of any such approach, but I felt that in view of the great responsibility resting on me as the President of the United States this effort should be made.

"In this I received the strongest support of my colleagues—President de Gaulle and Prime Minister Macmillan. Accordingly, at this morning's (May 17) private session, despite the violence and inaccuracy of Mr. Khruschev's statements, I replied to him on the following terms:

'I had previously been informed of the sense of the statement just read by Premier Khruschev. In my statement of May 11, and in the statement of Mr. C. A. Herter of May 9, the position of the United States was made clear with respect to the distasteful necessity of espionage activities in a world where nations distrust each other's intentions. We pointed out that these activities had no aggressive intent but rather were to assure the safety of USA and the free world against surprise attack by a Power which boasts of its ability to devastate the United States and other countries by missiles armed with atomic warheads. As is well known, not only USA but most other countries are constantly the targets of elaborate and persistent espionage of the Soviet Union.

'There is in the Soviet statement an evident misapprehension on one key-point. It alleges that USA has, through official statements, threatened continued overflights. The importance of this alleged threat was emphasized and repeated by Mr. Khruschev. The United States has made no such threat. Neither I, nor my Government, has intended any. The actual statements go no further than to say that USA will not shirk its responsibility to safeguard against surprise attack. In point of fact, these flights were suspended after the recent incident and are not to be resumed. Accordingly, this cannot be the issue.

'I have come to Paris to seek arrangements with the Soviet Union which would eliminate the necessity for all forms of espionage, including overflights. I see no reason to use this incident to disrupt the Conference.

'Should it prove impossible, because of the Soviet attitude, to come to grips here in Paris with this problem and the other vital issues threatening world peace, I am planning in the near future to submit to United Nations a proposal for the creation of a UN aerial surveillance to detect preparations for attack. This plan I had intended to place before this Conference. This surveillance system would operate in the territories of all nations prepared to accept such inspection. For its part, USA is prepared not only to accept UN aerial surveillance but also to do everything in its power to contribute to the rapid organization and successful operation of such international surveillance.

'We, of the United States, are here to consider in good faith the important problems before this Conference. We are prepared either to carry this point no further, or to undertake bilateral conversations between USA and USSR while the main Conference proceeds.'

"My words were seconded and supported by my Western colleagues who also urged Mr. Khruschev to pursue the path of reason and commonsense, and to forget propaganda. Such an attitude would have permitted the Conference to proceed. Mr. Khruschev was left in no doubt by me that his ultimatum would never be acceptable to the United States.

"Mr. Khruschev brushed aside all arguments of reason, and not only insisted upon

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

this ultimatum but also insisted that he was going to publish his statement in full at the time of his own choosing. It was thus made apparent that he was determined to wreck the Paris Conference.

"In fact, the only conclusion that can be drawn from his behaviour this morning (May 17) was that he came all the way from Moscow to Paris with the sole intention of sabotaging this meeting on which the hopes of the world have rested.

"In spite of this serious and adverse development, I have no intention whatsoever to diminish my continuing efforts to promote progress toward a peace with justice. This applies to the remainder of my stay in Paris as well as thereafter."

Despatches from Paris on May 17 said that it looked as if the East-West 'Summit' Conference was almost still-born—or dying a lingering death despite all efforts to save it.

A French communique issued on May 17 said that the three Western leaders had accepted an invitation for a meeting of the Conference, but Mr. Khruschev was absent.

The three Western leaders met at the Elysee Palace in accordance with President de Gaulle's invitation, but Mr. Khruschev did not attend.

A statement issued by the three Western leaders stated that in view of the absence of Mr. Khruschev, President de Gaulle noted that the proposed discussions could not take place.

Mr. N. Khruschev Refuses To Attend:

A Soviet statement said that on his return from a trip outside Paris, Mr. Khruschev had sent President de Gaulle a message stating that he agreed to attend the proposed meeting on condition that it had only a preliminary character.

In reply to this message, General de Gaulle said that the planned meeting aimed at examining questions on the agenda of the Conference and should have the character of a first session of the Conference.

The Soviet statement said that this reply from General de Gaulle "caused astonishment" and that since President Eisenhower had not publicly condemned the "provocative actions of the US Air Force, it was clear that there could be no question of opening the 'Summit' Conference.

On May 17, the Soviet delegation issued to the Press a statement under the heading "Clumsy manoeuvre of the leaders of the Western Powers in Paris".

It read as follows: "As agreed following the preliminary meeting of the Heads of the four Big Powers in Paris, the day of May 17 was, at the suggestion of the host President, President Charles de Gaulle, to have been a day of reflection on the statements made by the Heads of Governments.

"Taking advantage of the opportunity thus afforded them, the President of the Council of Ministers of USSR, Mr. Nikita Khruschev, and Marshal of the Soviet Union, R. Y. Malinovsky, paid a visit to the village of Pleurs Sur Marne, situated more than 120 kilometres (75 miles) from Paris.

"In this village, during the years of World War I was stationed a Russian military unit in which served soldier R. Y. Malinovsky, who had taken part side by side with the French in the battles for France, and who had shed his blood on French soil in the combat against the common enemy—German militarism.

"As Mr. N. S. Khruschev and Marshal R. Y. Malinovsky were in the village of Pleurs Sur Marne having friendly conversations with peasants who remembered the days of the common struggle, there came news from Paris, through the intermediary of the police and journalists, that a meeting had been fixed for 1500 hours at the Elysee Palace between the Heads of Governments of the four Powers.

"On his return to Paris, a letter from President de Gaulle was handed to Mr. N. S. Khruschev, confirming the intention to hold such a session. However, it was not clear from the letter whether what was intended was a new preliminary conference following on the day of reflection, or whether this was an attempt to convene, unilaterally, the 'Summit' Conference. Mr. Khruschev asked the French delegation to specify the type of conference proposed, and this request was sent immediately by telephone.

"There was no reply to this request. Meanwhile, the Heads of the three Western Powers arrived at the Elysee Palace. Having received no reply to his request, Mr. Khruschev sent President de Gaulle the following:

'Monsieur le President, with reference to your letter of May 17 addressed to Mr. Khruschev, the following doubt arose, which was not answered in your letter. It is not stated in your letter whether the intention is to assemble the Chiefs of States of France, USSR, Great Britain and the United States for a preliminary meeting with the object of ascertaining whether conditions exist which would enable the 'Summit' Conference to begin, or whether it is planned to start on the work of the 'Summit' Conference itself.

'I am ready to take part in the 'Summit' Conference if the Government of the United States eliminates the obstacle which prevents me taking part in it. This obstacle would be eliminated if the President of the United States announced that the US Government condemns the provocative actions which the American Air Force had carried out against the Soviet Union, expresses its steps to punish those responsible and gives an assurance that in the future such actions against the Soviet Union will not be tolerated.

'It goes without saying that I am ready, as the Director of your Cabinet has been informed, to take part in the meeting, if it is of a preliminary nature.'

"In reply to this letter, President de Gaulle, at the end of the unilateral conference of the three Heads of the Western Powers assembled at the Elysee Palace, sent his reply in which he said:

'In reply to the questions contained in your letter, I should like to make it clear that the object of this session was to begin an examination of the problems which we agreed to examine at the 'Summit' Conference and which, therefore, was to take on the character of a first session of this Conference.'

"This declaration can only give rise to astonishment, since, as everyone knows, the President of the Council of Ministers of USSR, Mr. Khruschev, in his statement at the preliminary meeting, indicated, with all possible precision, the conditions in which the Soviet Government is ready to take part in the 'Summit' Conference. Since President Eisenhower, after the preliminary meeting, has made no public declaration on the condemnation of the provocative acts of the American Air Force against the Soviet Union, on the punishment of the guilty persons and on the fact that such actions with regard to the Soviet Union will not be tolerated in future, it is perfectly clear that, in the circumstances, there could be no question of opening the 'Summit' Conference on May 17.

"The significance of all these unilateral acts by the Western Powers became clear as a result of the declaration made on the evening of May 17 during a news conference by the US President's Press Assistant, Mr. James Hagerty, according to which the 'Summit' Conference was to have begun its work today (May 17) but did not take place on account of the absence of the USSR representative and that the US President considers that the 'Summit' Conference is ended.

"However, whatever diplomatic effort the US Government may undertake to deceive public opinion, it cannot absolve itself from its responsibility for the failure of the 'Summit' Conference. Everyone knows that it is precisely the US Government which, through its aggressive actions against the Soviet Union on the eve of the 'Summit' Conference and through its obstinate refusal to assume responsibility for its acts, has torpedoed the present Conference, to which the peoples of the entire world were looking forward with so much hope.

"The Press Service of the USSR Premier's office is authorized to announce that the Soviet Government, confirming its unshakeable will for peace and its desire to settle outstanding international questions by means of negotiations, again announces that the Soviet Union, as in the past, is ready to take its place at the round table of the 'Summit' Conference, if the United States eliminates the obstacles which were created through its fault at the opening of the work of this Conference."

Communique On Collapse Of Conference:

The failure of the 'Summit' Conference was officially announced by the three Western Powers on the night of May 17.

The following is the text of the communique issued on May 17 after a meeting between President Eisenhower, President Charles de Gaulle and Mr. Macmillan:

"The President of the United States, the President of the French Republic and the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom take note of the fact that because of the attitude adopted by the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Soviet Union it has not been possible to begin, at the 'Summit' Conference, the examination of problems which it had been agreed would be discussed between the four Chiefs of States or Governments.

"They regret that these discussions, so important for world peace, could not take place. For their part, they remain unshaken in their conviction that all outstanding international questions should be settled not by the use or threat of force but by peaceful means through negotiations. They themselves remain ready to take part in such negotiations at any suitable time in future."

President Eisenhower, President de Gaulle and Mr. Macmillan met for the last time in Paris on May 18 and "drew their conclusions" from the resulting situation.

The meeting lasted 75 minutes.

An official French spokesman said after the meeting: "The three leaders have passed in review the entire situation arising from the events of the past few days. And they have drawn their conclusions."

Mr. N. Khruschev's Statement To Newsmen:

The Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, called newsmen to the Soviet Embassy in Paris on May 17 to tell them that he was ready to meet President de Gaulle at the Elysee Palace but repeated that he would not attend a 'Summit' meeting as such unless President Eisenhower expressed regret over the U-2 spy-flight.

The United States, he said, should condemn "the treacherous incursions of American military aircraft," punish those guilty and give an assurance that such incursions would not be repeated. Only under these conditions, he said, would he take part in a 'Summit' Conference.

The written declaration was handed to a small group of correspondents selected by the Soviet Press officials and invited inside the Embassy following Mr. Khruschev's return from his country tour.

Mr. N. Khruschev Takes Leave:

On the morning of May 18, Mr. Khruschev took leave of the British Prime Minister, Mr. Macmillan, and the French President, General Charles de Gaulle.

Mr. N. Khruschev's News Conference:

After his round of farewell calls, Mr. Khruschev addressed a news con-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ference on May 18 at which he declared that he had not issued any ultimatum and that he was prepared to take part in the 'Summit' Conference under certain conditions.

More than 2,000 correspondents were present.

Mr. Khruschev denounced what he called the aggressive actions of USA in sending a spy-plane over the Soviet Union on the eve of the 'Summit' Conference and said that the Americans had been caught "with their hands in the cookie jar."

The US Government had apologised to Cuba when one of the American planes had flown over Cuban territory and that, he said, was a precedent.

In his prepared statement, Mr. Khruschev denied having provoked the failure of the 'Summit' Conference and blamed USA for the failure.

If one listened to President Eisenhower, no disarmament agreement could be concluded because it would become invalid as soon as one individual left his post in office as President. Mr. Eisenhower appeared to claim that the flights over the Soviet Union depended only on him which was "presumptuous."

Because the Pentagon had now understood that the air-space over the Soviet Union was barred to American planes, USA had decided to send planes under the guise of the United Nations.

He added that UN was not a department of the US Government nor a branch of the Pentagon and would not accept this humiliating role. Mr. Eisenhower could order or ban such flights, but if they took place, Russia would know how to greet them and destroy them as well as to smash the bases from which they came.

A 'Summit' Conference could meet in six or eight months. The Four Powers could meet when the Western nations fulfilled the necessary conditions. That moment might come soon.

He re-iterated that the Soviet Union wanted peaceful co-existence, talks and agreements acceptable to everyone. The Soviet Union was going to work to that end and hoped that the other Powers would do the same.

Mr. Khruschev was greeted by shouts of a crowd gathered outside the Palais de Chaillot entrance, (where the news conference was held). The reception was mingled as some seemed to acclaim the Soviet Prime Minister while others booed.

Raising his voice, first provoking boos and then applause, Mr. Khruschev shouted: "Those who boo us, those Germans, Germans who cry out against us, we did not sufficiently wipe you out at Stalingrad, and if you continue, we will, if necessary."

He made the charge that West German Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, had sent hostile elements to the news conference, and he uttered the warning that if the Germans tried again "to invade the Ukraine and go to Stalingrad as they did, they would meet their fate."

He shouted vehemently as he heard the boos from a part of the audience.

Mr. Khruschev, interrupted by boos as he called the hecklers "riff-raff", said that his listeners must remember that he represented the great Soviet people and his attackers represented a small group and not the true German people who would regret these attacks.

He said that when he was booed by enemies of the working class, he knew he was on the right road.

He added: "I like coming to grips with the enemies of the working class. The Soviet Union would march forward until the victory of communism."

Mr. Khruschev compared those who were interrupting him to Hitlerites and said that they were 'bastards' and not representatives of the German people.

He warned them they could meet the same fate as those who had wanted to make a fuss in Stalingrad.

This statement was greeted with both boos and applause. "You represent a group of which the German people will be ashamed. Your noise gives me courage."

Replying to a question by a London newspaper correspondent about the talks on disarmament and on a nuclear test ban in Geneva, he said that if the Americans understood the situation, an agreement would be possible and he would continue to negotiate, but he did not see the possibility of an agreement. If Mr. Eisenhower resumed nuclear tests, the Russians might do the same. "We often have the impression that the West did not want disarmament but wanted control of armaments which meant collection of espionage information. The Soviet Union was for full disarmament with control measures. What was going on in Geneva was procrastination, and if it went on the Russians would ask the UN General Assembly to take up the issue."

An American correspondent asked whether even if Mr. Khruschev's allegations on the U-2 were true or even worse, did he not think that as a great leader of a great nation with truth on his side, the 'Summit' Conference should go forward now, and not in six months.

Mr. Khruschev, in an impassioned tone, said he was in Paris for a 'Summit' Conference, but USA had to recognize that it had committed an aggressive intrusion and pledge not to resume it. "How can we hold a conference with an aggressor who has not admitted his aggression?

"We all have mothers. We all do; otherwise you would not come into the world. When I was a poor boy it was rare when my mother could buy cream. But sometimes we had cream. Sometimes my mother would find the cat who would steal the cream. My moth r would shake the cat and rub its nose in the cream. That is the only way the cat would learn. Isn't it necessary to take the US imperialists by the scruff of the neck and teach them that they must not do it again?"

Asked by an American correspondent which President he would prefer in the coming US Presidential campaign, Mr. Khruschev replied that it was a difficult question, but he would try to reply.

In this connexion, he said, he remembered one "great American, Franklin D. Roosevelt." But Roosevelt was dead and "his policy died with him."

He avoided a direct answer on whom he preferred of living candidates, but said he knew from his trip that most of the Americans he met wanted peace sincerely and still did. Differences over socialism or capitalism were no reason for quarrels or war.

He did not want to mix in the political campaign in the United States. The people would choose "the candidate who most deserved election and one day, leaders would come to power with whom we can establish not only good but friendly relations."

"We have waited a long time and we can wait longer. If the next President doesn't understand, maybe, the next one will. We are in no hurry."

Mr. N. Khruschev In East Germany:

Mr. Khruschev arrived in Berlin (Eastern Sector) from Paris on May 19.

Welcoming him, the East German Communist Party leader, Mr. Walter Ulbricht, said he was convinced that Mr. Khruschev's visit would strengthen East Germany as a bastion of peace.

He added: "All people had hopefully watched preparations for the 'Summit' Conference, but USA had shown by their challenge that they thought they could do what they liked. You went to Paris to meet the American President to restore the basis for understanding. You have told the truth to the peoples about the malicious intentions of the aggressors.

"The German people are deeply alarmed that West Germany is being turned into the main base of American aggression in Europe. They try to misuse West Berlin as advance point for their intentions."

In reply, Mr. Khruschev, reading from a prepared script, said: "We are very glad to be back on socialist territory with our old friends to talk to them and to meet the farmers, workers and intelligentsia of our peace-loving country.

"The important negotiations in Paris did not take place because USA made this impossible.

"Obviously, those circles in USA have had the upper hand again who do not want an understanding. They should have known that such practices were impossible even in former times when the Soviet Union was the only socialist State.

"Obviously, there were people in the United States, who wanted to torpedo the 'Summit' for which the peoples had waited and on which they had put their hopes."

Addressing a mass rally at the Sports Stadium in East Berlin on May 20, Mr. Khruschev re-iterated that USA had wrecked the 'Summit' Conference.

He blamed President Eisenhower's immediate aides for putting pressure on him to abandon the "Camp David spirit".

He said that the US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, the US Under-Secretary of State, Mr. Douglas Dillon, and the US Vice-President, Mr. Richard Nixon, had applied pressure on Mr. Eisenhower. The American Pentagon (Defence Department) feared favourable results in 'Summit' negotiations and did its utmost to sabotage them. The Pentagon provoked the spy-plane incident.

Reviewing events leading up to the 'Summit' failure, he said that American imperialists did everything possible beforehand to torpedo the 'Summit'.

He accused the United States Government of breach of faith and repeated the term several times.

He said that he would not wait long for concluding a German Peace Treaty and settling the West Berlin issue.

"If we don't meet with understanding, we shall have to sign a German Peace Treaty with the socialist States.

"He who laughs last laughs best.

"Backed up to the wall, Mr. Eisenhower half-confessed in Paris. But, in such serious circumstances, half-measures are not enough."

Mr. Khruschev said that a Peace Treaty must be signed with both Germanies—East and West. "If the Western Powers refuse to sign a Peace Treaty with Germany, we and the other socialist States will find a way to sign one with the German Democratic Republic.

"We shall discuss the question with friendly Governments, but we will do nothing to worsen the international situation.

"The Soviet Government will continue its efforts towards a more wholesome international atmosphere.

"Disarmament remains the first of all international problems to be settled and the Soviet Government will spare no effort to reach an agreement in that field."

He announced he had "thorough discussions" with East German leaders on the conclusion of a Peace Treaty.

"If the Western Powers do not show willingness to sign a Treaty then we shall seek a solution with those most interested in keeping the peace and willing to conclude a Peace Treaty.

"But our patience must not be tried. Peaceful States will never let Berlin's occupation status run on indefinitely."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He insisted that it was abnormal for allied troops to be stationed in West Berlin—"right in the heart of the German Democratic Republic."

Mr. Macmillan Back In London:

On his arrival back in London on May 19, Mr. Macmillan said: "This is, naturally, a moment of disappointment and regret. In all parts of the world, people had begun to hope for a new and better relationship between the Soviet Union and the Western Powers.

"The developments of recent months, the many contacts made by leading statesmen of both sides, gave reasonable grounds for such a belief. We cannot yet see the pattern of the future. We must be, and will be, prepared for difficulties and dangers.

"The Western allies were right to seek the path of peace with justice. In spite of the disappointments of the last few days, President Eisenhower, President de Gaulle and I joined on May 17 in issuing a declaration which ended with these words: 'We remain unshaken in our conviction that all outstanding international questions should be settled not by the use, or threat, of force, but by peaceful means of negotiation'.

"We remain ready to take part in such negotiations at any suitable time in the future. It is our hope that the events of the last few days are an episode, an unhappy episode, and not the first step towards a serious deterioration in the situation. At the same time, in company with our allies, we must be ready to face any new difficulties firmly and bravely."

Mr. H. Macmillan Reports To House Of Commons:

Mr. Harold Macmillan reported to the House of Commons on the failure of the 'Summit' Conference on May 20.

He said that what had happened was a serious set-back, but added: "I do not think we want to deal with this matter as a great crisis. We have got to keep quite calm and take anything that is good if it comes our way, and be prepared for anything that is bad."

He pointed out that as early as May 15 at the meeting he and the British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, had with Mr. Khruschev and others of the Russian delegation, Mr. Khruschev read the terms of a strongly-worded document which he had handed a little earlier to President de Gaulle of France. This said that the Soviet Government was not prepared to negotiate under threat of further flights of US aircraft over Soviet territory...unless USA was first prepared to condemn the action that had been taken, to undertake not to repeat it, and to call those responsible to account.

At the first meeting of the four Heads of Governments on May 16, after Mr. Khruschev had re-iterated these terms, he added, President Eisenhower's statement in reply contained a categorical assurance that aircraft flights had already been suspended and were not to be pursued.

He emphasized that this assurance by Mr. Eisenhower "was the most categorical and definite which any President of the United States could constitutionally give".

He went on: "It is not easy to assess the exact significance of these events—still less to guess the course of the future.

"Mr. Khruschev and his colleagues, in the meetings which Mr. Selwyn Lloyd and I have had with them, have declared that it is still their policy to try to secure constructive solutions of the many difficult problems which face us, by means of real negotiations.

"Mr. Khruschev's statement envisaged resumption of the 'Summit' discussions after some months. The period he mentioned may or may not be realistic, but that, we are assured, was still their policy. If so, I find it hard to account for the Soviet attitude in Paris. President Eisenhower's assurance, made public, removed grounds for any suggestion that the 'Summit' negotiations would be held under a threat.

"I cannot help being disappointed by Mr. Khruschev's re-iteration, without any amendment, of further conditions which it was hardly possible for a Head of Government to accept. Despite Mr. Khruschev's attitude, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd and I continued to do our best, by maintaining the necessary contacts and by engaging in our separate discussions, to work for some satisfactory way of getting the 'Summit' negotiations to begin.

"In the end, all that we and our American and French allies could do was to pledge ourselves to be ready to take part in peaceful negotiations of all outstanding international questions at any suitable time in the future.

"I cannot conceal from the House that there may be grave implications in what has happened. During recent months, I had some reason to hope that there was a real desire, on both sides, to try to negotiate mutually satisfactory solutions to the problems which divided us. I had not expected, nor had any of us, that these solutions could be found quickly or easily.

"I have not given up this hope. It would be wrong to do that, and we will try, as opportunity develops, to seize it. The path to the 'Summit' has been, as I said a week ago, slow, painful and subject to many disappointments. There is no doubt that what has happened is a serious set-back. But, in our final declaration, we and our allies have made it clear that we are ready to continue our efforts. I am sure that is right.

"On the other hand, we must face the fact that the immediate future is bound to be difficult, and the period ahead may be one of retrogression instead of progress. We must be prepared for the international outlook to become more stern. We may have to meet new threats and new dangers.

"Is this rupture an isolated episode—or does it indicate a deliberate change in Russian policy? It is too early to say. In either case, we must be ready."

Mr. Eisenhower Leaves Paris:

President Eisenhower left Paris for Lisbon on May 19.

Just before leaving, he expressed his disappointment at the failure of the 'Summit' Conference.

But, he said, the allies were joined even closer than before in determined pursuit of peace with justice in the world.

The text of his departure statement was:

"Again I have the opportunity to say adieu to France. I share the disappointment of my colleagues that because of our inability to convene the 'Summit' Conference, we could make no progress for easing the tensions that so plague mankind.

"But I equally share their confidence that because of this set-back, we of the Western allies and particularly France, Britain and USA, both through their Governments and through their people, are joined even closer than before in our determined pursuit of peace with justice in the world."

Mr. Eisenhower's Broadcast To Nation:

In a broadcast to the people of America on May 25, President Eisenhower reviewed the failure of the 'Summit' Conference and discussed the future of America's international relations.

The following is the text of his broadcast in part:

"Our safety and that of the 'free world' demand, of course, effective systems for gathering information about the military capabilities of other powerful nations, especially those that make a fetish of secrecy. This involves many techniques and methods. In these times of vast military machines and nuclear-tipped missiles, the ferreting out of this information is indispensable to 'free world' security.

"This has long been one of my most serious pre-occupations. It is part of my grave responsibility, in the overall problem of protecting the American people, to guard ourselves and our allies against surprise attack.

"During the period leading up to World War II, we learned from bitter experience the imperative necessity of a continuous gathering of intelligence information, the maintenance of military communications and contact and alertness of command.

"Moreover, as President, charged by the Constitution with the conduct of America's foreign relations, and as Commander-in-Chief charged with the direction of the operations and activities of our armed forces and their supporting services, I take full responsibility for approving all the various programmes undertaken by our Government to secure and evaluate military intelligence.

"It was in the prosecution of one of these intelligence programmes that the widely publicized U-2 incident occurred.

"Aerial photography has been one of many methods we have used to keep ourselves and the 'free world' abreast of major Soviet military developments. The usefulness of this work had been well established through four years of effort. The Soviets were well aware of it. Mr. Khruschev has stated that he became aware of these flights several years ago. Only last week, in his Paris news conference, Mr. Khruschev confirmed that he knew of these flights when he visited USA in September, 1959.

"Incidentally, this raises the natural question—why all the furore then concerning one particular flight? He did not, when in America in September, 1959, charge that these flights were any threat to Soviet safety. He did not then see any reason to refuse to confer with American representatives.

"This he did only about the flight that unfortunately failed, on May 1, far inside Russia.

"Now, two questions have been raised about this particular flight; first, as to its timing, considering the imminence of the 'Summit' meeting; and second, our initial statements when we learned that the flight had failed.

"As to the timing, the question was really whether to halt the programme and thus forgo the gathering of important information that was essential and that was likely to be unavailable at a later date. The programme went forward.

"The plain truth is this: when a nation needs intelligence activity, there is no time when vigilance can be relaxed. Incidentally, from Pearl Harbour we learned that even negotiation itself can be used to conceal preparations for a surprise attack.

"Next, as to our Government's initial statement about this flight—this was issued to protect the pilot, his mission and our intelligence processes, at a time when the true facts were still undetermined.

"Our first information about the failure of this mission did not disclose whether the pilot was still alive, or was trying to escape, or was avoiding interrogation, or whether both the plane and the pilot had been destroyed.

"Protection of our intelligence system and the pilot, and concealment of the plane's mission, still seemed imperative. It must be remembered that over a long period, these flights had given us information of the greatest importance to the nation's security. Their success has been nothing short of remarkable.

"For these reasons, what is known in intelligence circles as a 'covering statement' was issued. It was issued on assumptions that were later proved incorrect. Consequently, when later the status of the pilot was definitely established and there was no further possibility of avoiding exposure of the project, the factual details were set forth.

"I then made two facts clear: (1) our programme of aerial reconnaissance had been undertaken with my approval; and (2) this Government is compelled to keep abreast, by one means or another, of military activities of the Soviets, just as their Government has for years engaged in espionage activities in our country and throughout the world. Our necessity to proceed with such activities was also asserted by our Secretary of State who, however, had been careful—as was I—not to say that these particular flights would be continued.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"In fact, before leaving Washington I had directed that these U-2 flights be stopped. Clearly, their usefulness was impaired. Moreover, continuing this particular activity in these new circumstances could not but complicate the relations of certain of our allies with the Soviets. Furthermore, new techniques, other than aircraft, are constantly being developed.

"I wanted no public announcement of this decision until I could personally disclose it at the 'Summit' meeting in conjunction with certain proposals I had prepared for the Conference.

"At my first Paris meeting with Mr. Khruschev, and before his tirade was made public, I informed him of this discontinuance and the character of the constructive proposals I planned to make. These contemplated the establishment of a system of aerial surveillance operated by United Nations.

"The day before the first scheduled meeting, Mr. Khruschev advised President de Gaulle and Prime Minister Macmillan that he would make certain demands upon the United States as a pre-condition for beginning the 'Summit' Conference.

"Although USA was the only Power against which he expressed his displeasure, he did not communicate this information to me. I was, of course, informed by our allies.

"At the four-Power meeting on May 16, he demanded of the United States four things: (1) condemnation of U-2 flights as a method of espionage; (2) assurance that they would not be continued; (3) a public apology on behalf of USA; and (4) punishment of all those who had any responsibility respecting this particular mission.

"I replied by advising the Soviet leader that I had, during the previous week, stopped these flights and that they would not be resumed. I offered also to discuss the matter with him in personal meetings, while the regular business of the 'Summit' might proceed.

"Obviously, I would not respond to his extreme demands. He knew, of course, that by holding to those demands, the Soviet Union was scuttling the 'Summit' Conference.

"In torpedoing the Conference, Mr. Khruschev claimed that he acted as the result of his own high moral indignation over alleged American acts of aggression. As I said earlier, he had known of these flights for a long time. It is apparent that the Soviets had decided even before the Soviet delegation left Moscow that my trip to the Soviet Union should be cancelled and that nothing constructive from their view-point would come out of the 'Summit' Conference.

"In evaluating the results, I think we must not write the record all in red ink. There are several things to be written in black. Perhaps this Soviet action has turned the clock back in some measure, but it should be noted that Mr. Khruschev did not go beyond invective—a time-worn Soviet device to achieve an immediate objective.

"And now, and most importantly, what about the future?

"All of us know that, whether started deliberately or accidentally, global war would leave civilization in shambles. This is as true of the Soviet system as of all others. In a nuclear war, there can be no victors—only losers. Even despots understand this. Mr Khruschev has also stated that he well realizes that general nuclear war would bring catastrophe for both sides. Recognition of this mutual destructive capability is the basic reality of our present relations. Most assuredly, however, this does not mean that we shall ever give up trying to build a more sane and hopeful reality—a better foundation for our common relations.

"To do this, here are the policies we must follow, and to these I am confident that the great majority of our people, regardless of party, give their support:

"(1) We must keep up our strength and hold it steady for the long pull—a strength not neglected in complacency nor overbuilt in hysteria. So doing, we can make it clear to everyone that there can be no gain in the use of pressure tactics or aggression against us and our allies.

"(2) We must continue businesslike dealings with the Soviet leaders on outstanding issues and improve the contacts between our own and the Soviet peoples, making clear that the path of reason and commonsense is still open if the Soviets will but use it.

"(3) To improve world conditions in which human freedom can flourish, we must continue to move ahead with positive programmes at home and abroad, in collaboration with 'free' nations everywhere. In doing so, we shall continue to give our strong support to the United Nations and the great principles for which it stands.

"As to the first of these purposes—our defences are sound. They are tailored to the situation confronting us.

"Concerning the second part of our policy —relations with the Soviets—we and all the world realize, despite our recent disappointment, that progress toward the goal of mutual understanding, easing the causes of tensions and reduction of armaments is as necessary as ever.

"We shall continue these peaceful efforts, including participation in the existing negotiations with the Soviet Union. In these negotiations, we have made some progress. We are prepared to preserve and build on it. The Allied Paris communique and my own statement on returning to USA should have made this abundantly clear to the Soviet Government.

"The zigs and zags of the Kremlin cannot be allowed to disturb our world-wide programmes and purposes. In the period ahead, these programmes could well be the decisive factor in our persistent search for peace in freedom.

"To the peoples in the newly-developing nations urgently needed help will surely come. If it does not come from us and our friends, these peoples will be driven to seek it from the enemies of freedom. Moreover, those joined with us in defence partnerships look to us for proof of our steadfastness. We must not relax our common security efforts."

President Eisenhower's Letters To 20 Heads Of States:

A letter written by Mr. Eisenhower to General Franco of Spain was made public in Madrid on May 21.

In that letter, Mr. Eisenhower said that a chain of events within the Soviet Union, which at the moment was not clear to him, led to the failure of the 'Summit' Conference. Those events led Mr. Khruschev to conclude before going to Paris that progress at the 'Summit' meeting would be either undesirable or impossible.

He added that Mr. Khruschev had embarked on a calculated campaign to ensure the failure of the 'Summit' Conference and to see that the onus of it fell on USA. Mr. Khruschev seized upon the shooting down of the U-2 spy-plane over Soviet territory as a device.

Government officials in Washington revealed on May 22 that President Eisenhower had written similar letters to more than 20 Heads of Governments accusing Mr. Khruschev of using the spy-plane dispute in a calculated campaign to wreck the 'Summit' Conference.

The American Administration decided not to make any of the letters public in Washington.

Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld's Statement:

At a news conference at UN Headquarters on May 19, the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld, referred to the failure of the 'Summit' Conference and said he regretted that efforts to negotiate certain issues at the level of Chiefs of States had failed.

A major problem which would have been considered in Paris, he said, was one for which UN carried a special responsibility—disarmament.

He said: "I hope and expect that the discussion of the 10-Nation Disarmament Conference in Geneva will be taken up again and pursued with all energy, unhampered by the failure at the 'Summit'."

He warned of the risk of war by accident and urged that the full potentialities of United Nations should be called upon to meet the current crisis. He believed that such a risk existed and added: "This is based on the assumption which you know very well, that nobody in the present world with open eyes goes to war. I know one thing and that is that an accident or an incident is infinitely more dangerous in a heated atmosphere than in a cool atmosphere and, for that reason, our efforts and my efforts have had to consist in getting the temperature down so that accidents and incidents, which are more or less unavoidable in our world, at least are likely to be contained in their effect on the public mind.

"We have to do what we can to avoid even an accident, the first initial spark, but I think that a more constructive work in the long run is one that aims at creating situations in which even occasional sparks do not lead to fire".

He referred to the "present war risk", but said he did not feel that the present degree of emotion and frustration was such that "we must be more on the alert against the spreading of accidental war than we were before".

Chinese Support To Russia:

The Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, said in Peking on May 19 that China fully supported the Soviet Union's stand at the 'Summit' Conference.

He said that encroachment of any Socialist country would be an encroachment on China and on the entire Socialist camp.

He strongly condemned American espionage flights over Russia.

Report To NATO Meeting On 'Summit' Failure:

The Permanent Council of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization met in Paris on May 19 to hear a report on the abortive 'Summit' Conference from the French Foreign Minister, M Couve de Murvile.

The session lasted 85 minutes.

After M Couve de Murville's report, most of the delegates expressed their solidarity with the Atlantic Alliance and the Western "Big Three".

The US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, told the Council that USA was determined to continue with the Geneva Conference on Disarmament and on a nuclear test ban, as planned before.

Mr. Nehru's Comment:

Mr. Nehru told newsmen in Cairo on May 18 that he was very unhappy at the failure of the 'Summit' Conference.

Advising calm in facing world problems, since an angry approach did no good, he said that the "Big Four" would have to try again in better circumstances.

Asked if he would suggest another 'Summit' Conference, he said: "Who am I to make this proposal at this moment?"

He said that he definitely did not expect the abrupt end of the 'Summit' Conference. Not to make another attempt, perhaps in better circumstances, would be an admission of mankind's ultimate failure. People the world over had keenly looked forward to the Conference.

He refused to comment on the US spy-plane incident, and added: "Even if we have an opinion, we refrain from expressing it, unless that is going to be helpful."

He also denied that unauthorized Soviet aircraft had ever flown over Indian territory.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

History Of 'Cold War':

The following are the broad events of what has come to be known as the 'cold war' since the end of World War II:

1945: At Potsdam (August 2) the 'Big Three' divided Germany into zones of occupation, established four-Power rule for Berlin. But, Soviet refusal to talk Balkan peace terms with France and China brought about the first clash.

1946: The atom bomb was the big issue. The Baruch Plan proposing international control was blocked by Soviet Russia.

1947: The lines of struggle began emerging with the Truman Doctrine for "containing" communist imperialism (March 5) and the Marshall Plan (June 5).

1948: The Czech coup (February 24) and the Berlin blockade (April 1) gave impetus to the Vandenberg resolution in the Senate, ending the US tradition of "no foreign entanglements," thus paving the way for the formation of NATO.

1949: Russia tested an atom bomb (September 22), ending the US atomic monopoly.

1950: The Korean War (June 25) brought the first joint UN defence of a free nation against aggression. It also brought NATO's decision (September 25) to re-arm West Germany.

1951: The fighting in Korea ended. Mr. Jacob Malik, Soviet representative at UN, issued the call for a cease-fire. Armistice talks (July 10) were to go on for two years.

1952: The communists decided to arm East Germany (May 21) and tipped the atomic balance by testing the first hydrogen weapon (November 16).

1953: With Mr. D. Eisenhower inaugurated (January 20) as US President, and Marshal Stalin's death (March 5), the way seemed open for new leaders to seek new solutions. Mr. Churchill proposed a "meeting at the summit" and Russia balanced the atomic scales by testing her first hydrogen bomb (August 12) again.

1954: The focus turned to the Far East—the communist victory in Indo-China, the US decision to defend Taiwan.

1955: The year was marked by Mr. Khruschev's emergence as the Soviet boss with Mr. Malenkov's down-fall (February 3), the Austrian Treaty (May 14), the Big Four 'Summit' meeting in Geneva, Mr. Eisenhower's aerial inspection proposal, West Germany in NATO (May 6) and the rejection of aerial inspection by Mr. Khruschev (December 29).

1956: Stalin was denounced by Mr. Khruschev at the Soviet Communist Party's 20th Congress (February 14-15). De-Stalinization followed in the Soviet satellite countries. Then came the Poznan riots in Poland (June 28), the Hungarian revolt (October 23-November 4), the attack on Egypt by Israel, France and Britain and the Soviet entry into the Middle East.

1957: Mr. Eisenhower's Middle East Doctrine (March 9) brought Soviet warnings of "dangerous consequences". Russia shocked the West with the first satellite (December 17). NATO moved (December 19) to stock nuclear weapons.

1958: Marshal Bulganin launched a campaign (January 9) for a 'summit' meeting, but tensions were heightened by crises—uprising in the Lebanon (May 10), revolt in Iraq (July 14) and the landing of US Marines in the Lebanon (July 15). Attacks on Quemoy and Matsu brought US decision to convoy the nationalist Chinese vessels to off-shore islands. Mr. Khruschev launched the Berlin crisis (November 27) by calling on the West to get out of West Berlin.

1959: Jockeying toward 'summit' talks was resumed by Russia (January 10) during Mr. A. Mikoyan's tour of USA. Negotiations led to a Foreign Ministers' meeting. The Foreign Ministers' talks ended without agreement (August 5) two days after Mr. Eisenhower announced an exchange of visits with Mr. Khruschev.

Chronology Of Events To 'Summit':

The following is a chronology of the major events in the approach to the 'summit' since November, 1958, when Mr. N. S. Khruschev challenged the Western position in Berlin:

1958:

November 10—Mr. Khruschev, in a Moscow news conference, said that the Western status in Berlin was out-dated.

November 27—Mr. Khruschev, in Notes to Western Powers, demanded that the West negotiate new status for West Berlin within six months.

December 14—Western Powers, at a NATO meeting in Paris, rejected Mr. Khruschev's implied ultimatum on Berlin.

1959:

January 4—Mr. A. Mikoyan visited USA in the first of a series of high-level exchange of visits.

February 16—West proposed that a Foreign Ministers' meeting be held on the issue of Germany and Berlin.

February 21—Mr. H. Macmillan went to Moscow to test the value of face-to-face talks with Mr. Khruschev on major issues.

February 24—Mr. Khruschev proposed a 'summit' meeting rather than a Foreign Ministers' Conference.

March 2—Mr. Khruschev agreed to a Foreign Ministers' meeting.

March 26—West accepted the idea of a 'summit' meeting provided progress was made by the Foreign Ministers.

May 11—A Foreign Ministers' Conference was held in Geneva.

June 19—The Foreign Ministers' Conference recessed without an agreement on Berlin but with Soviet time-limit eased.

June 28—Mr. F. R. Kozlov arrived in USA.

July 23—Mr. R. Nixon's visit to Russia gave impetus to the idea of direct East-West contacts.

August 3—Mr. Khruschev accepted the invitation to USA.

August 26—Mr. D. Eisenhower went to Europe to consult Western allies before meeting Mr. Khruschev.

September 18—Mr. Khruschev took the initiative on arms issue with "general and complete disarmament" plan at UN.

September 26—Mr. Khruschev, in Camp David talks in USA, dropped the Berlin time-limit to get Mr. Eisenhower's agreement to 'summit'.

December 21—Western Big Four, in Paris, agreed to a 'summit' meeting and re-affirmed their stand on Berlin.

December 30—Mr. Khruschev agreed to May 16 as the date for the 'summit' meeting in Paris.

1960:

January 18—Western working parties began to prepare 'summit' positions.

February 14—Mr. Khruschev put propaganda pressure on the West over disarmament with a promise to cut Soviet armed forces by one-third unilaterally.

February 29—Mr. Khruschev renewed his threat to turn control of Western access to Berlin over to East Germany if the West did not come to terms with Soviets on the future status of the city.

March 12—Dr. K. Adenauer arrived in USA seeking assurance of tough Western stand on West Berlin.

March 15—West and Russia offered arms plans at the opening of the Disarmament Conference in Geneva.

March 19—Soviet concessions at Geneva talks on nuclear test ban generated hope of agreement in the long-drawn-out negotiations.

April 8—Agreement to recess the Disarmament Conference made it clear that the arms would go to the 'summit' unresolved.

April 13—Western Foreign Ministers agreed on a plan for unified Berlin to be offered at the 'Summit' Conference.

May 1—U-2 plane incident, which broke the 'summit' meeting.

(The Times, London, The New York Times, The Hindu, Madras, The Statesman, Calcutta and Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3133:AOA:A]

B. S-EATO Council Of Ministers' Annual Conference: Opening the S-EATO annual Conference of Council of Ministers in Washington on May 31, the US Vice-President, Mr. Richard Nixon, gave a broad hint that America had practically ruled out another 'Summit' Conference in the near future.

He said: "While we do not rule out any meeting which might contribute to the cause of peace, certainly the world will now have greater confidence in the traditional methods of diplomacy and in discussions at United Nations rather than in summitry on which Mr. N. Khruschev has in the past insisted.

"The Western nations should be guided by one all-important principle in the years ahead if we are to keep our differences from resulting in war. That principle is firmness without belligerency.

"Mr. Khruschev must now be beginning to realize that he made a major propaganda blunder not only in shattering the world's hopes for peace by scuttling the 'Summit' Conference but in using the U-2 plane incident.

"Mr. Khruschev's conduct since the 'Summit' has been somewhat ambiguous. His words have been bellicose, intemperate and ill-mannered, but his deeds have been restrained.

"To respond in kind to Mr. Khruschev's insulting remarks would serve no useful purpose. Trading of insults would only result in a war of words which might raise the temperature of world conflicts to the igniting point which would set off nuclear destruction.

"This does not of course mean that retreat or appeasement should be our course. If one fact has become clear in international relations, it is that peace cannot be purchased by weakness and concessions on the part of free nations."

He re-iterated President Eisenhower's statement that, despite the disappointment of the 'Summit' meeting, they must continue to explore every possible avenue for negotiating outstanding differences with the communist nations.

The French Foreign Minister, M Maurice Couve de Murville, said: "The failure of the 'Summit' Conference will naturally have some bearing on our findings. We know from experience how inter-dependent are today the various parts of the world, how rapidly a crisis or an easing of tensions may become universal.

"Asia is not less concerned than America or Europe with disarmament and East-West relations."

The British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, said it could be claimed with confidence that S-EATO had exercised a strong influence in the cause of peace.

He added: "If our defensive organization did not exist and had not been in existence over the years, there is no doubt that the situation in South-East Asia would give much more cause for anxiety than it does today."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The US Secretary of State, Mr. C. A. Herter, said: "S-EATO is a tangible demonstration of the determination of its members to maintain their own independence through collective security".

He added: "The existence of S-EATO has given to the general geographical area south-west of mainland China—to S-EATO members and non-members alike—a greater sense of security behind which they, the Governments and peoples concerned, have been able to cope with their problems of internal progress and development in greater confidence.

"America is convinced that S-EATO has made sound contributions to the cause of peace and freedom and is determined to continue to carry out its responsibilities in concert with the other members."

The Prime Minister of New Zealand, Mr. Walter Nash, said he believed that S-EATO must be prepared to deal with the world-wide repercussions of the break-down of the 'Summit' Conference and this meeting of S-EATO was, therefore, timely and important.

Pakistan's Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, said that while there was reason for being satisfied with what S-EATO had achieved in the past, there was no room for complacency about the present or the future.

He added: "In September, 1959, a situation developed in Laos which might have taken a very different course had it not been for the timely intervention of United Nations and the firmness of S-EATO's stand.

"In March, 1960, gratuitous support was extended by a mighty world Power to a spurious territorial claim against Pakistan.

"Threats of attack and warning are being given to some of the member-States in order to put pressure upon them so as to break up the alliances of the 'free world.' Aid on a large scale is being offered to those who agree to remain outside the alliances in order to make 'neutralism' attractive."

[Mr. Qadir did not identify the world Power, but was taken to refer to the Soviet Union's backing of Afghanistan's claims over the disputed territory of Pakhtoonistan.]

Thailand's Foreign Minister, Mr. Thanat Khoman, urged full implementation of S-EATO's Charter, including its economic provisions, with whole-hearted co-operation from every member; otherwise S-EATO might "fall into decay."

The US Secretary of State, Mr. Christian A. Herter, addressed the Conference again on June 1 and called communist China an "outlaw" and as being responsible for the collapse of the 'Summit' Conference because she opposed any detente between East and West.

He said that America had no intention of recognizing the communist Chinese regime. She was still an "outlaw" and wanted to absorb the smaller nations along her perimeter.

According to American officials, Mr. Herter said, there was a likelihood for probing actions on the part of the Chinese communists in the Far East, even though there seemed to be no likelihood of Soviet action against Berlin.

A S-EATO spokesman announced after a three-hour closed session of the Council that the S-EATO Foreign Ministers had completed their review of developments in the Treaty area during the past year and had also approved a report by the Military Advisers.

He said: "They have noted with some degree of gratitude and satisfaction that there has been no case of armed aggression in the Treaty area since they last met in Wellington, New Zealand, in April, 1959.

"They believe that the existence of S-EATO and the firmness it has shown in the past year is one of the factors in keeping the stability in the Treaty area.

"But the S-EATO Ministers did not regard the situation in any way with an air of complacency.

"On the periphery of the Treaty area, the belligerence of the Chinese communists has been demonstrated a number of times in the past year.

"The continued truculence of the Chinese communist Press and propaganda media, in pushing and probing as far as they can go without bringing on armed conflict, is fair warning that without the Treaty countries standing firm we could expect trouble in the Treaty area.

"The general feeling is that there is no cause for complacency.

"The Council of Ministers welcomed the report of the Military Advisers, which reviewed and adopted plans for the defence of the Treaty area. The Ministers noted that the Combined Military Exercises which had been held during the year had been on a larger scale and had been more complex than previously.

"The amount of co-operation between our armed forces is still increasing.

"The Foreign Ministers also approved an increase in the staff of S-EATO's military planning office in Bangkok.

"They agreed to the appointment of Major-General John G. Wilton (Australia) as the new Head of the Military Planning Office in succession to Brigadier-General L. W. Thornton (New Zealand) who is to take up his appointment as Chief of Staff of the New Zealand Army in June, 1960."

According to diplomatic sources, the question of communist China's admission to United Nations caused a minor split in the South-East Asia Treaty Organization's Ministerial Conference.

Differences were reported to have cropped up between the United States and New Zealand on the issue during a discussion of the international outlook in the wake of the 'Summit' Conference failure.

Informants reported that the New Zealand Prime Minister, Mr. Walter Nash, who was leading his country's delegation, had suggested that agreeing to communist China's membership of United Nations might help to ease the tense post-'Summit' outlook.

The Communique:

In a communique at the end of the meeting on June 2, the S-EATO Council of Ministers declared that China was maintaining an "uncompromising attitude" following the 'Summit' Conference failure and they pledged to meet all forms of communist threat to the peace and security of the Treaty area.

The Prime Ministers of Australia and New Zealand and the Foreign Ministers of Britain, USA, France, Pakistan, Thailand and the Philippines took part in the secret Council meetings.

They joined, in the 1,700-word communique, in placing the blame for the collapse of the 'Summit' Conference on Mr. Khruschev.

They noted that the S-EATO Conference in Washington had been held at a time when the international policies of the communist countries and their future relations with the rest of the world were questions foremost in the minds of Governments and peoples.

It said: "The Council recognized that the communist challenge posed not only a potential military threat to the independence of countries in the Treaty area, but also an immediate and direct threat to their cultures and ways of life.

"Only a few days earlier, the 'Summit' Conference in Paris, which many had hoped would result in some limited agreement from which further reductions in world tensions might be developed, had been prevented from meeting by Mr. N. Khruschev.

"The Council, therefore, did not meet in that improved international climate which had been hoped for.

"Moreover, the Council noted that the communist Chinese, who had not concealed their hostility to the 'Summit' Conference, continued their uncompromising attitude.

"In these circumstances, the S-EATO meeting took on special significance and the Council members gave particular attention to the intensification during the past year of communist subversion, insurgency and terrorism in several countries in the Treaty area, as well as to the potential threat of armed aggression."

Speaking of the communist threat to the area, the communique said: "The Council availed itself of this timely opportunity to re-emphasize the firm unity of purpose of the member-countries of S-EATO and the determination to maintain and develop, both individually and collectively, their capacity to meet all forms of communist threat to the peace and security of the Treaty area.

"S-EATO's military planning and joint exercises gave a re-assurance that the alliance will be able successfully to resist aggression."

However, the communique said, the Foreign Ministers concluded that the preferred communist tactics at this time were subversion and insurgency.

On the economic side, it said, it had been agreed that the Organization's Permanent Economic Committee in Bangkok should be entirely free to discuss problems of the member-countries, bearing in mind the established functions of other international agencies.

The Council also approved of a US proposal to study the possibility of establishing an Institute of Tropical Agriculture, which would seek the means of preventing diseases in the staple crops of member-countries as well as developing greater agricultural diversification.

The S-EATO Council decided to hold its next meeting in Bangkok in March, 1961.

Conference Of Military Advisers:

A three-day Conference of Military Advisers to the South-East Asia Treaty Organization opened in Washington on May 25.

[This military Conference was the forerunner to the meeting of the Foreign Ministers of all the S-EATO member-countries which began in Washington on May 31.]

In his inaugural address to the Conference, the US Secretary of Defence, Mr. Thomas Gates, gave the warning that the communists might resort to force in the Asian and Pacific areas if they believed that they would be successful.

He assured the delegates that USA would honour its defence commitments.

He said: "Our military forces have never been more powerful. They are capable of decisive action in a general war, if this should be forced upon us. Together with our allies, we can meet lesser military actions anywhere in the world."

He said that the Soviet conduct at the Paris 'Summit' Conference and at UN during the month "demonstrated that a difficult road lies ahead as we seek solutions to the most complex problems of our times. In short, we still intend to seek a relaxation of tensions by all means, short of impairing our common security. We must always negotiate from strength."

Lord Bandon (Britain) said: "To put S-EATO in its proper perspective one has to look back and see what was happening before the Treaty was signed—Chinese aggression all along the line.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Since that time, there has been no overt aggression in the Treaty area (India and Tibet were not members)—a no mean achievement.

"For this reason, it is terribly important that we stick together. If any member of S-EATO falls or leaves this club, I believe S-EATO fails.

"If S-EATO fails, I believe the whole of South-East Asia becomes communist."

Air-Marshal A. Khan (Pakistan) said that conditions in South Asia and South-East Asia required vigilance on the part of all S-EATO members.

He said that his country was conscious of the great responsibility it shared.

General Cabal (Philippines) said that his country stood four-square on the proposition that the solution of the communist world expansionism was progressive Asia.

General Surajit Charusreni (Thailand) said that his country's attitude towards S-EATO would not waver unless and until "we are confronted by circumstances which we find unbearable."

[He did not say what "circumstances" he had in mind.]

Admiral Dowling (Australia) said: "We threaten no one, but we do welcome every opportunity to make it abundantly clear to any would-be aggressor that S-EATO is no paper tiger but a force to be reckoned with."

General Weir (New Zealand) said that in order that S-EATO might provide the defensive shield, it was necessary for members to constantly appraise the communist threat, which could stem from the possibility of overt aggression or the more insidious form of subversion and infiltration."

A communique issued by Military Advisers on May 28 stated that the representatives of the eight member-countries had reviewed the existing S-EATO defence plans in the context of the current situation and stressed that consideration should be given to the dangers arising from communist insurgency in the Treaty areas.

It added that the long-term schedule of S-EATO military exercises to take place in the next several years was also considered. These combined exercises were designed to cover all aspects of military training and to further improve co-ordination and standardization of techniques among the armed forces of member-nations.

Annual Report Of S-EATO:

In its annual report released in Washington on May 22, the South-East Asia Treaty Organization said that the "threat of communist Chinese expansion" was a constant danger while the Peking regime maintained its "bellicose and aggressive role".

It said: "Communist violence reached its peak in 1959 with China's ruthless suppression of the rebellion in Tibet; but this and other events had a profound effect in South-East Asia.

"Countries having dealings with China showed signs of adopting a more cautious attitude in their dealings with Communist regimes."

The suppression of the uprising in Tibet, it said, was followed by China's incursions into the border areas of the North-East Frontier Agency of India and Ladakh. Inside the S-EATO area, communist support of the insurgent activities in Laos created a dangerous situation which, but for the prompt action of the UN Security Council and the firm attitude adopted by S-EATO, might have grown into a crisis of grave dimensions.

The report (which was prepared before the failure of the Paris 'Summit' Conference) said that while the Soviet Union had adopted a posture of peace and friendship, communist China had assumed a "bellicose and aggressive" role even at the expense of its publicly-announced 'good-neighbour' policy towards the Asian States.

Peking's economic offensive in South-East Asia had faltered not only because of internal economic difficulties in China but also because of the cautious attitude of many countries in the area. "Nevertheless, the probability that Peking will continue its efforts to undermine the stability and independence of free countries through the use of economic weapons remains a very real danger."

Dealing with S-EATO's own activities, it said that the member-countries had helped each other "to counter communist subversion" by exchanging detailed information on communist methods and activities.

Strong measures continued to be taken to suppress "communist subversive activities" in Pakistan, Philippines and Thailand, where communist parties were banned by law.

"The S-EATO member-nations have individually and collectively continued to improve their defence techniques and co-ordination of their forces, with emphasis on the building up of highly trained and mobile defence forces."

On the economic side, Pakistan, Philippines and Thailand and the three States protected under a Protocol to the S-EATO Treaty, namely, South Viet-Nam, Laos and Cambodia, received more than $777,000,000 as aid under the various international programmes.

At the same time, S-EATO opened its Graduate School of Engineering in Bangkok, continued projects aimed at improving the supply of skilled labour in the Asian member-countries and increased efforts into cholera research.

Mr. Pote Sarasin's News Conference:

On May 23, the Secretary-General of S-EATO, Mr. Pote Sarasin, told newsmen in Washington that "free countries" must co-operate more closely than ever because of the 'Summit' collapse.

He said: "I don't want to predict what will happen after the failure of the 'Summit' Conference. But the apparent idea of co-existence is not as easy as people expected."

He blamed Russia for not having aired her complaints at the Conference and for having boycotted it instead. "All free countries should be on the alert."

Asked whether he thought the break-down of the 'Summit' Conference would have a direct effect on China's policies, he replied: "No one can predict what the Chinese will do now, but the situation is no better than it was in September, 1959 during the Laos crisis."

He blamed the Peking Government for having failed to co-exist in the spirit of Bandung and stressed that China constituted a 'direct threat to the free nations of Asia'.

China's trouble-making policy in the past months, he said, had not gained her any friends and Peking was beginning to realize that people who had been friendly towards China now felt differently.

He believed, however, that China's Far East policy was not necessarily linked with the collapse of the 'Summit' Conference and that any action which China might take need not be dependent upon the crisis in Europe.

In reply to a question, he declared that there was no "lessening of Pakistan's role in S-EATO following that country's complaint to USA as a result of the U-2 incident."

He declared that S-EATO was as strong as it could be and that the degree of co-operation between member-countries was progressing quite satisfactorily.

He was also satisfied that US forces available in the Far East were sufficient at present to meet S-EATO commitments.

He referred to China's border dispute with India and the suppression of the rebellion in Tibet and said it was clear that the Peking regime was a threat to the free countries in Asia.

Asked whether there was likelihood of new Chinese action on Indian border at this time, he said that Peking's past moves against other countries had come about independently of the crises in Europe.

"So the Chinese communists might take action with or without the results that we have seen in Paris."

At another point, he said that the Chinese appeared to have their own "agenda" but no one in the non-communist world knew what it was.

He could not predict what moves the Chinese might make in the S-EATO area as a result of the failure of the 'Summit' talks.

(Dawn, Karachi, The New York Times and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2657:AOA:B]

C. World Health Assembly: The 13th session of the World Health Assembly opened in Geneva on May 3 under the chairmanship of Sir John Charles (Britain).

Representatives of 87 member-countries and three associate-members of the World Health Organization attended.

Mr. George Palthey, Assistant Director of the European Office of United Nations, welcomed the delegates on behalf of the UN Secretary-General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjoeld.

Mr. H. P. Turbott, Director-General of Health in New Zealand, was elected President of the World Health Assembly to succeed Sir John Charles.

At the opening session, the Secretary-General of the UN Economic Commission for Africa, Mr. Meeki Abbas, stressed the importance of the Conference for the African continent.

He said that the world's conscience must be aroused to give more effective help to emerging nations in Africa.

The Assembly considered a planned $2,000,000 medical research programme by WHO in 1960 and a $3,000,000 programme in 1961. This would include research into the health problems of highly industrialized countries, cancer and cardiovascular diseases.

In the field of radiation hazards, it had before it a study on preventive measures prepared by WHO at the request of its Executive Board.

Mr. W. A. Karunaratne (Ceylon) told the Assembly on May 4 that the greatest danger facing the world at present was posed by ionizing radiations.

He said that WHO should make a bold approach to protect the health of the populations of the world and future generations.

India's Health Minister, Mr. D. P. Karmarkar, told the Assembly on May 6 that WHO should take up the question of family planning "with as little delay as possible."

He declared: "This is a problem which my delegation feels we can neglect only at great hazard. Demographers have expressed an apprehension that the increase in population is likely to out-strip the world food supply in the near future.

"The Government of India has adopted a national policy and programme regarding family planning with four important activities—service, training, education and research.

"An attempt is being made to evolve an oral contraceptive with good promise of success.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"I am happy to say that the programme has been accepted by our people. The problem has both medical and socio-economic aspects."

On May 12, the Assembly elected Argentina, Britain, Ghana, South Korea, Jordan and Thailand to the Organization's Executive Council for 1961.

The Council is composed of 18 members, one-third of whom are annually elected.

It also accepted India's invitation to hold the next session of the Assembly in New Delhi.

With the admission of two more members, the World Health Organization has now increased its membership to a total of 101. It admitted the Sheikhdom of Kuwait as a full member and the Federation of Mali as an associate-member.

Among the final actions taken by the Assembly was the adoption of a resolution defining the role of WHO in the task of protecting mankind from the dangers of atomic radiation.

For the operations of the Organization in 1961, the Assembly approved a budget of $18,975,354. The largest single item included was $410,000 for the eradication of communicable diseases. This was exclusive of WHO's Malaria Eradication Special Account, financed by voluntary contributions.

The Assembly also took the necessary legal action to authorize the construction of the new WHO Headquarters building near the Palais des Nations in Paris, where it has its present headquarters. The cost of the new building is not to exceed 40,000,000 Swiss francs.

The Assembly also decided upon the indefinite postponement of a World Health Year. It was considered that WHO could not afford to divert funds and personnel from urgently needed health campaigns.

The session ended on May 21.

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3322:AOA:R]

D. Progress Of Sputnik IV: The Soviet official news agency Tass reported on May 20 that Sputnik IV had completed its programme of observations and that it had gone into a new orbit as a result of a fault in the instruments. The speed of the space vehicle had increased slightly instead of being reduced as planned, and it "slipped into a new elliptical orbit."

It also revealed that the space-ship's pressurized cabin had been detached and a number of highly important scientific and technical problems had been solved.

The space-ship's conditioning and heat regulation system functioned normally throughout the flight and ensured conditions necessary for future manned flights.

It added that the flight had furnished much data for controlled human flight into space and showed the correctness of the basic ideas underlying the space-ship's design. "The findings of this effort enable experiments to be taken a stage further."

The Paris Observatory said on May 20 that three objects now appeared to have become detached from the Soviet space-ship. One of them was continuing to give out radio signals.

The Astronomer at the Observatory, Mr. Paul Muller, said that only two objects had been registered since May 16. A third appeared on May 19, and he thought this meant that one of them had split in two.

He said he was puzzled about the nature of the other object which had just split away. He hazarded the guess that it might be the space cabin which was inside the Sputnik. In this case, it might contain a radio-transmitter also to help direct its return towards the Earth.

But, he added, radio messages from such a transmitter would be almost impossible for Western ears to hear since the radio frequency of any such signals had not been announced by Soviet scientists.

Scientists of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory and New York observers said on May 17 that the Soviet space-ship seemed to be "revolving in space."

They observed its passage at 0617 hours GMT on May 17 above Washington and said that the satellite no longer appeared as a constantly shining star but as a light flashing on and off. This would seem to indicate that the space-ship was not continuing its normal flight but was "tumbling" even though staying in orbit.

Sputnik IV completed 134 orbits of the Earth (about 3,737,500 miles) by 1800 hours (Moscow Time) on May 23.

It was stated that the conditions in its cabin were still suitable for man's life.

Tass said that important data had been obtained on switching the satellite from one orbit to another, which confirmed the possibility of guiding satellites.

(Tass and The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3378:AOA:B]

E. UK Aircraft's Forward Flight From Vertical Take-off: Britain's "Short-SC-1" experimental jet plane, which is believed to be the first in the world to achieve forward flight from vertical take-off, was demonstrated to the Press on May 31 at the Royal Aircraft Establishment at Bedford.

The plane, a small delta-wing aircraft with no tail-plane, is 24 feet long. It was flown by the test pilot, Mr. Tom Brooke-Smith, of Short Brothers & Harland. He first used four Rolls-Royce engines centred in the belly of the plane which lifted it 40 feet straight off the ground, and then he brought the normal horizontal engine into power, and the aircraft swept forward to complete the circuit at about 180 knots. Coming to land, he reversed the procedure, hovering the plane and then manoeuvring backwards a few feet before setting it down. The whole operation lasted less than five minutes.

The plane first achieved its flying transition from vertical to forward flight on April 6, 1960. It has since flown almost daily.

Sir Matthew Slattery, Chairman of Short Brothers & Harland, said that his firm was ready to install a vertical-take-off-and-landing system in any aircraft a manufacturer cared to build.

He added: "It does away with the need for a conventional airfield and runway. The problem of noise from the battery of jets has, however, still to be tackled, but the noise irritation to big communities would be considerably reduced by this system because of the quick ascent."

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3382:AOA:H]

F. Republic Of Mali Comes Into Being: At midnight on June 19-20, the old French colonies of Senegal and French Sudan formally attained independence within the French Community as the Republic of Mali.

The fifth West African State to become independent—after Ghana, Guinea, the Cameroons and Togoland—Mali is the first independent State in the new Commonwealth-like French Community.

On the eve of independence day, the capital city of Dakar did not seem particularly excited.

Mr. Modiba Keita, President of the Federal Government, said that this was so because "our people have considered themselves independent since the law was passed."

President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia formally recognized the newly-independent Republic of Mali.

China also decided to give recognition to the Government of Mali.

(The Times, London and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3317:AOA:C, 3380:AOA:D]

SPORT

A. New 100 Metres Record: Armin Hary (West Germany) became the fastest man in the world on June 21 when he set a new 100 metres record in 10 seconds in a seven-nation international athletics meet in Zurich.

The 10-second 100 metres has been as elusive a goal for sprinters as the 4-minute mile once was for distance runners.

The 23-year-old Hary set the new mark after having been clocked in one heat at 9.9 seconds—but he was said to have made a false start and it was decided to re-run the heat.

The previous record for the distance—10.1 seconds—was held by five Americans—Willie Williams, Ira Murchison, Leamon King, Ray Norton and Charlie Tidwell.

Hary, who set his new world mark only two months before the Olympic Games, has been credited once before with a time of 10 seconds for the 100 metres, but the record was disallowed because of a slight slope of the track.

Hary went into the track meeting on June 21 as a last-minute substitute.

Mathematically, Hary's new time is equivalent to 9.1 seconds for 100 yards, for which the world record stands at 9.3 seconds and his performance must rank as the greatest sprinting feat of all time.

The sprinters who set successive stepping stones to the 10-second barrier were:

10.6 secs D. D. F. Lippincott (USA) July 6, 1912 at Stockholm.

10.4 secs C. W. Paddock (USA) April, 1921 at Redlands (California).

10.3 secs P. Williams (Canada) August 9, 1930 at Toronto.

10.2 secs J. C. Owens (USA) June 20, 1936 at Chicago.

10.1 secs W. J. Williams (USA) August 3, 1956 at Berlin.

10.0 secs A. Hary (West Germany) June 21, 1960 at Zurich.

It was announced later that Hary's record-breaking run was timed by two judges at 10 seconds and by one judge at 10.1, the time of 10 seconds thus being taken as the official time.

The seven nations taking part in the meet were: France, Poland, West Germany, Austria, India, Italy and Switzerland.

(The Times, London)

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10, Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95/-; Foreign Rs. 115/- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

July 23—29, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 30

INDONESIA

A. Agreement With USSR On Co-operation In Peaceful Uses Of Atomic Energy: The First Minister, Dr. Djuanda Kartawidjaja, who was then on a visit to the Soviet Union, and the First Vice-Chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, Mr. Anastas Mikoyan, signed in Moscow on July 2 an Agreement on Co-operation in the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy.

Under the Agreement, the Soviet Union will render technical assistance to the Republic of Indonesia in the construction of an atomic research reactor and a nuclear "sub-critical" assembly for training purposes.

The Soviet Union will also supply Indonesia with the necessary equipment, materials, instruments and radio-active stable isotopes and will assist in the training of Indonesian personnel to run the installations and apply radio-active isotopes in industry, medicine, biology and agriculture.

Agreement was also reached on the construction in Indonesia of a steel plant with an annual capacity of 100,000 tons instead of the two 50,000-ton plants envisaged by the Soviet-Indonesian Protocol of January 3, 1959.

They also exchanged the Instruments of Ratification of the General Agreement on Economic and Technical Co-operation between the two countries signed on February 28 at the same time.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3226:IND:A]

B. Contract With West German Firm To Set Up Electric Power Plant: It was officially announced in Djakarta on June 15 that the Indonesian State Electric Company and the West German firm, M.A.N.-Siemens, had entered into a contract for the construction of a 25,000-kw power plant at Tandjung Priok, near Djakarta.

M.A.N.-Siemens will deliver a generator and a steam turbine costing 36 million German marks to be acquired from West German credits to the Indonesian Government.

A Government spokesman said that the credit would be repaid in five years from the date of the operation of the plant.

The plant will initially generate 25,000 kw. but its capacity will be raised later to 75,000 kw.

(Information Service Indonesia)

[Prev. ref. 914:IND:A, 1687:IND:C]

C. Strikes Banned: The President, Dr. Sukarno, in his capacity as Supreme War Administrator, issued a regulation on July 1 banning strikes and lock-outs in vital enterprises and services.

An explanatory note said that the ban was issued in the interest of national vigilance in connexion with the defence of the State and to prevent a stagnation in the economic life of the people.

It called on the workers to channel their demands through the War Administrator of the area.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3146:IND:A]

IRAQ

A. British Firm To Plan Iraqi Irrigation Scheme: It was stated in London on June 21 that a British firm's — Sir M. Macdonald & Partners — scheme for modernizing an irrigation system near Baghdad had been approved by the Iraqi Economic Planning Board. It was estimated that the work would cost £17,000,000.

The Iraqi Ministry of Agriculture was instructed to sign a contract with the firm.

The scheme is intended to improve the existing system of irrigation in the Diyala area, which extends north-east of Baghdad, by using water stored behind the Derbendi Khan dam, now under construction.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3194:IRQ:A]

ISRAEL

A. Argentina And Mr. A. Eichmann's Arrest: An Israeli communique issued in Tel Aviv on May 26 said that Mr. Adolf Eichmann, former Nazi leader responsible for the killing of thousands of Jews in Germany during or before World War II, had said that he was ashamed to accept the good treatment meted out to him by the Israeli authorities.

The communique briefly reviewed Mr. Eichmann's life after he had escaped from an international camp in the American Zone at the end of the War.

It said that he did not communicate with his family in Austria, who believed him to be dead. He went to northern Germany and stayed with a brother of one of his former fellow-internees at the camp. The brother gave him letters of recommendation and he found work in the region under another name, as a peasant and woodcutter. After three years, he went to another country—which is not identified—and from there he sent a message to his wife in Austria. His wife continued to play her role as a widow, even showing a certificate of her husband's death in Czechoslovakia. The Israeli Government discovered Mr. Eichmann living modestly, under a false name, in the same unnamed country.

The Israeli Police Department's "Sixth Bureau" had been appointed to check up on Mr. Eichmann. The Bureau finally tracked him down and took him into custody.

Buenos Aires' evening paper, La Razon, reported on May 28 that Mr. Eichmann was kidnapped by Israeli agents on May 11 from one of the suburbs of Buenos Aires.

Israeli Admission:

A Buenos Aires message on June 7 said that in reply to an Argentine request for clarification of reports that Mr. Eichmann had been kidnapped in Buenos Aires by Israeli secret service men, the Israeli Government told Argentina in a Note that Mr. Eichmann was taken from Argentina by Israeli "volunteers" after he had expressed his willingness to appear before an Israeli court.

The Israeli Note said that the "volunteers" had traced Mr. Eichmann after a 15-year world-wide search and asked him if he was prepared to face trial in Israel.

He asked for 24 hours to think it over, and then gave a note (signed "Adolf Eichmann") declaring that he would go of his own free will to give the fullest possible report of happenings in Germany under Hitler for future generations.

Mr. Eichmann's note added that by doing so, he might be able "at last to find peace of mind."

Argentina Demands Mr. Eichmann's Return:

On June 8, Argentina rejected the Israeli Note of explanation and demanded the return of Mr. Eichmann within a week.

Unless Israel returned Mr. Eichmann, the Argentine Government said, it would bring the matter up before United Nations.

The Argentine Note demanded punishment of the Israeli agents who violated Argentina's basic laws but made no reference to Mr. Eichmann's record.

It emphasized Argentina's "stern repudiation of the mass crimes committed by Hitler's agents" and took exception to the Israeli claim that large numbers of Nazis were living in Argentina. Although Israel had never made clear whether the Israelis who organized Mr. Eichmann's return to Israel had been agents of the Israeli State, "responsibility emerges from its approval of such action". "The Israeli Government sided with and congratulated publicly the authors of this action and, in such a way, seems fully to endorse their move."

It questioned the Israeli claim that Mr. Eichmann left Argentina of his own accord and added that the Israeli Government must admit that this point "may be subject to different interpretations".

Top Israeli officials indicated on June 9 that the question of returning Mr. Eichmann, as demanded by the Argentine Government, was not being considered.

They said that the wording and contents of the Argentine Note came as a "great shock" to the Israeli Government.

Mr. D. Ben-Gurion's Appeal To Argentina:

In a communication to President Arturo Frondizi of Argentina on June 10, the Israeli Prime Minister, Mr. David Ben-Gurion, said that the Israeli "volunteers" had supreme moral justification for flying Mr. Adolf Eichmann out of Argentina.

He appealed to the Argentine President to consider "the deep scars left on the Jewish

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

soul by the mass murder of Jews under the Nazis" and said that hundreds of Jews had made it their life's aim to "submit the man who was responsible for these crimes unparalleled in history to the judgment of the Jewish people—a judgment which could only take place here in Israel".

He said he had not misunderstood the gravity of the formal violation of international law, but he was sure that few people would fail to understand the motives of the Israeli "volunteers."

He expressed Israel's "sincere regret" for any breach of Argentine sovereignty and expressed the hope that Argentina would accept it.

President A. Frondizi's Reply:

In a communication to Mr. David Ben-Gurion on June 17, President Frondizi (of Argentina) expressed the hope that differences between the two countries over the Eichmann incident would be solved.

He said that he fully understood the feelings of the Jewish people and the acts attributed to Mr. Eichmann, but Argentina was "forced to protest against the violation of its sovereignty".

Argentina's Letter To Security Council:

On June 15, the Argentine Government asked for an urgent meeting of the Security Council to consider "the violation of the rights of sovereignty of the Argentine Republic resulting from the illicit and clandestine transfer of Mr. Adolf Eichmann from Argentine territory to the territory of the State of Israel."

In a letter to the Security Council President, the Argentine chief delegate to UN, Dr. Mario Amadeo, said that this act was "in violation of the norms of international law and the purposes and principles of the UN Charter." It also created "a climate of insecurity and distrust incompatible with the preservation of international peace."

An explanatory memorandum accompanying the letter said that the break-down of diplomatic efforts to obtain satisfaction from the Israeli Government in defence of "fundamental Argentine rights" had led to the request that the question be dealt with by the Council under Article 34 and 35 of the UN Charter.

The memorandum referred to the background of Mr. Eichmann's apprehension in Argentina and removal to Israel to stand trial for the execution of 6,000,000 European Jews while he was head of the Nazi Gestapo's Jewish Department.

It noted that the Argentine time-limit for Mr. Eichmann's return to Argentina which had been imposed in a letter to the Council on June 10 had expired and the Argentine Government had received no reply from Israel to its Note.

In view of the statements which had been made by the Israeli Government representatives, it said, the Argentine Government had come to the conclusion that Mr. Eichmann was not going to be returned to Argentina.

Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld's View:

The UN Secretary-General, Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld, told a news conference in New York on June 16 that if Argentina believed that the removal of Mr. Eichmann from her territory constituted a threat to peace, she was justified in presenting her case to the Security Council, because the principal responsibility of the Security Council was to maintain peace.

He added: "If a country thinks that a rule of international law, which is essential to the maintenance of peace, has been violated and its violation endangers peace, it has the right to present its thesis to the Security Council."

Security Council Resolution:

The Security Council met on June 22 to consider Argentina's complaint that Israel had violated her sovereignty by abducting Mr. Adolf Eichmann from her territory.

After hearing the Argentine complaint that Israel had violated her sovereignty and an Israeli explanation that the Nazis had wiped out a third of the Jewish race, the Council adjourned.

The Argentinian resolution before the Council asked the Council to declare that acts like the abduction of Mr. Adolf Eichmann would, if repeated, endanger international peace and that Israel should give "adequate reparation".

The Israeli Foreign Minister, Mrs. Golda Meir, said that Israel had apologized for certain infringements her nationals had committed — an adequate reparation.

Mr. Eichmann, she said, was not merely an important cog in the "monster-machine of death and torture" which reduced the Jewish nation from 18 million in 1939 to 12 million in 1945, but was the man in charge of Hitler's attempt to solve the Jewish question by liquidation. Modern history had not seen a monster like him. This was not a case of revenge but a matter of justice.

On June 23, the Security Council adopted the Argentine resolution asking Israel for "adequate reparation" for the kidnapping of Mr. Adolf Eichmann.

The Council passed the resolution by eight votes to nil, with the Soviet Union and Poland abstaining.

The Argentine resolution, as amended by the United States, declared that the repetition of acts which harmed the sovereignty of a member-State could threaten international peace and security and asked the Israeli Government to assure adequate reparation to Argentina in conformity with the UN Charter and the standards of international law.

It included two American amendments which were accepted by Argentina. One stated that the UN Security Council was aware that the persecution of Jews under the Nazis was universally condemned and that the people of all countries were anxious to see Mr. Eichmann brought to trial for the crimes of which he was accused.

The other amendment expressed the hope that the traditionally friendly relations between Argentina and Israel would improve.

The Argentine President, Mr. A. Frondizi, told a news conference in Paris on June 24 said that he was quite satisfied with the vote of the Security Council.

He added: "I am happy that the United Nations has approved the principle of International Law".

(The New York Times and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3388:ISR:A]

JAPAN

A. Reply To Soviet Government On Treaty With USA: The Foreign Minister, Mr. Aiichiro Fujiyama, handed to the Soviet Ambassador, Dr. Nicolai Fedorenko, in Tokyo on July 1 the Japanese Government's reply to the Soviet memoranda of April 22, May 20 and June 25 in connexion with the US-Japan Mutual Security Treaty.

The reply stated that the Treaty was defensive in nature and not militaristic or aggressive as alleged by the Russians.

It added that Japan believed in US assurances that any US aircraft taking off from Japanese bases had been and would be employed only for lawful purposes and that the Soviet charge that the Japanese Government had committed or joined in aggressive acts in violation of the UN Charter was a "slanderous one which has no basis in fact." That the Japanese Government had "expressed its agreement in advance to military operations from Japan conducted by foreign armed forces for a purpose having no relation whatever to the defence of Japan" was a complete distortion of facts. "It goes without saying that the US-Japan Security Treaty does not by any means allow Japan to be used as a base for illegal activities against any third country."

According to the reply, "the area in which Japan and USA have a common interest for the international peace and security in the Far East agrees with the concept of the old Security Treaty."

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3430:JAP:A]

B. USA Withdraws U-2 Planes: The Foreign Minister, Mr. Aiichiro Fujiyama, told a news conference in Tokyo on July 11 that the US Ambassador, Mr. Douglas MacArthur II, had given him a formal Note from the US Government announcing the withdrawal of U-2 aircraft from Japan.

Mr. Fujiyama said that one U-2 aircraft had been withdrawn from Japan several weeks ago and that the remaining two were withdrawn recently following negotiations between Japan and USA.

A US Congressional report made public in Washington on July 10 said that the B-70 bomber now being developed in USA could be used more effectively for all types of surveillance without using foreign bases.

On July 10, about 10,000 people demonstrated against the U-2 planes at Atugi (US Naval station near Tokyo) apparently unaware that the controversial aircraft had been withdrawn.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3370:AOA:A]

C. Liberal Democratic Party's Victory In Election: The candidate of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party, Mr. Iwao Yamazaki, was returned to the office of Governor of Aomori Prefecture on July 3 in an election fought mainly on the issue of the Japan-US Mutual Security Treaty.

He polled 295,198 votes against the 186,263 votes obtained by his Socialist rival, Mr. Yuzo Awaya.

A Government spokesman claimed that Mr. Yamazaki's victory indicated a public vote of confidence in the Treaty.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3430:JAP:A]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

MALAYA

A. Security Bill Passed: The House of Representatives passed on June 22 a Government Bill providing for detention without trial.

The Bill was made possible by changes in the Federal Constitution approved by the two Houses of Parliament in April (see page 3343) and intended to come into force when the 12-year-old Emergency ends on July 31.

According to the Preamble of the Bill, any action prejudicial to the security of Malaya had been taken by a "substantial body of persons"—communists. The powers given by the Bill were meant to prevent subversion and to finish off as far as possible armed communists, of whom there were said to be about 583 along the Thai border. Of this, about 100 might be on the Malayan side of the border at any one time.

Meanwhile, parts of Peris, Kedah, northern Perak and Kelantan are to be declared as a border security area and a Border Security Council and War Executive Committee will be established. The Council will take the place of the Emergency Operations Council and will direct the overall policy under the chairmanship of the Prime Minister.

The death penalty can be imposed for illegal possession of arms in the security area, where, at least for the time being, both Commonwealth and Federation land and air forces will still operate.

All Malaya is covered by the anti-subversion powers and the Minister responsible may detain a person up to two years if the Head of State has been satisfied that this is necessary. A person detained may make representations to an advisory board which shall consider them within three months and then make recommendations to the Head of State. If the detention order still stands, the case must, thereafter, be reviewed by the advisory board not less than once in six months.

As the Head of State acts on the advice of the Government, the Cabinet is in effect the final authority on detention.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3343:MAL:A]

B. Tengku Abdul Rehman's Visit To West Germany: On the invitation of the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany, the Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, paid a visit to West Germany from May 16 to 26.

During the visit he went to Bonn, Hamburg, Berlin and the Ruhr district. He inspected educational and industrial centres and had talks with West German leaders and businessmen.

On May 26, he and the West German Chancellor, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, signed a joint communique which noted the close friendship existing between the two countries.

The communique said that in their talks the two leaders exchanged views on the general international situation with special reference to the developments in Europe and South-East Asia.

It said: "In order to foster an even closer co-operation between the two Governments, it was agreed that the Federation of Malaya will in the near future be represented in Bonn by an Ambassador.

"For the purpose of further strengthening trade and economic relations between the two countries, the two Governments agreed to consider the possibility of entering into an Agreement on Commerce and an Agreement for the Mutual Protection of Investments.

"Recognizing the importance of technical and educational co-operation between the two countries, it was agreed to have an exchange of students and to make available the services of experts in technical administration and other fields.

"The Government of the Federal Republic of Germany agreed to assist the Government of the Federation of Malaya in its efforts to fight disease, particularly in rural areas and, to this end, the Federal German Government is making a contribution of one million Deutsch Marks. The amount is to be spent on medical equipment as may be required by the Government of the Federation of Malaya.

"The Prime Minister of Malaya invited the Federal Chancellor, Dr. K. Adenauer, to pay an official visit to the Federation of Malaya and the Chancellor has indicated his willingness to consider the invitation."

(Malayan High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2528:PHI:C]

C. Bank Rate Raised: The Central Bank of Malaya announced on June 26 that the commercial banks in Malaya would raise their annual interest rates from five per cent to six per cent effective from July 1.

This increase, it said, was necessitated by the raising of the bank rate in Britain in the third week of June, 1960.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3186:AOA:N]

MONGOLIA (Outer)

A. Mr. D. Tumurochir Replaced: Tass announced from Ulan Bator on July 5 that the Secretary of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party Central Committee, Mr. D. Tumurochir, had been relieved of his duties and had been replaced by Mr. D. Balzhiniam, a member of the Political Bureau.

The change was made by a plenary session of the Central Committee, which also relieved Mr. Tumurochir of his duties as a member of the Political Bureau.

At the same time, Mr. M. N. Zhagvaral was elected a member of the Political Bureau, and Mr. D. Maidar and Mr. N. Luvsonravdan were elected alternate members of the Bureau.

This is the first shake-up in the hierarchy of the Mongolian People's Republic since March, 1959, when six out of 14 full and alternate members of the Party's Politburo were dismissed in a spectacular purge.

Officials then dismissed included Mr. Dord Damba, Second Secretary of the Central Committee, who was accused of lack of principles, insincerity, profound ideological and political backwardness, conservatism, inertia, arrogance and absence of a critical attitude towards himself.

(Tass)

NEPAL

A. Chinese Troops Attack Border Personnel At Mustang: Nepal sent a strong protest to Peking on June 29—second in 20 hours—against an armed violation of her territory by Chinese troops and the killing of some of her unarmed border personnel at Mustang on June 28.

The Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, confirmed the Mustang incident and the protest, but beyond that, he would not comment on the Chinese "attack and undermining of Nepal's sovereignty."

He added that he would await further details and perhaps the Chinese reply to his protest also before making any comment.

A Nepalese Foreign Office statement said that 17 of Nepal's civil personnel had been missing after the Chinese raid on Mustang which an official spokesman described as "unprovoked."

The statement charged the Chinese with crossing into Nepalese territory to attack Nepalese civilian personnel and looting.

Nepal came to know of the Chinese attack in the evening on June 28 when four of the Nepalese civilian border party, who fled the place of the incident, came back to Nepal's nearest post to report.

This report came when the Nepalese Government was busy assessing a Note from Peking that the Chinese Army was now within 20 kilometres of the Tibetan-Nepalese border to "suppress Tibetan rebels" and drafting a strong Note of protest against this violation of the Border De-militarization Agreement between the two countries.

Since the Mustang incident, more reports reached Khatmandu about Chinese army "concentrations" at at least six points very close to the Nepalese border. The most dangerous of them was said to be at Kodari, which is three days' march from Khatmandu.

[Kodari is opposite the 6,000-ft.-high Rasua Pass, through which the Chinese had invaded Nepal in 1897.]

On June 30, the Nepalese Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, had a series of talks with the leaders of political parties, including the communists.

Mr. Bharat Shamsher's Views:

The Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Bharat Shamsher, called the killing of a Nepalese official and the kidnapping of other Nepalese nationals by the Chinese troops on June 28 as a "calculated move."

He said: "I don't think it is an accident. I am not satisfied with a mere protest to Peking. The army should be sent to resist Chinese arrogance and aggression".

He said that he met Mr. B. P. Koirala on June 30 at the Prime Minister's request and verified each other's reports, which tallied on the details of the incident, but he added: "I completely differ with him on his mild interpretation of the affair."

However, he would not divulge what these differences were. He said: "The Prime Minister considers the incident as violation of Nepal's sovereignty. I say it is aggression."

He demanded that the Nepalese Government should immediately repudiate the Sino-Nepalese Border Agreement, declare a national emergency, build up the country's military strength by all means to defend its northern frontier and make a move to unite all countries of South-East Asia to fight Chinese expansionism.

He said that he had information of heavy Chinese troop concentrations opposite Wolangchungola in north-eastern Nepal, Rasugarhi

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

north of Khatmandu and in the Limi and Lipu areas in north-western Nepal. The Chinese had deployed their army at these strategic points within 20 kilometres of Nepal's border.

He thought that the Mustang incident would be the forerunner of such incidents at several points along the border.

Answering a question, he said that there was no necessity of inviting Indian or foreign armies to defend Nepal's borders. "Our army is strong enough to cope with such small incidents."

Mr. Chou En-lai's First Reply On Incident:

On July 1, Mr. Koirala received a preliminary communication from the Chinese Premier, Mr. Chou En-lai, in reply to his protest over the Mustang incident.

Mr. Koirala said: "The tone of the letter is helpful. Further communication is awaited".

In it, Mr. Chou En-lai told Mr. Koirala that the Chinese Government would express deep regret if the "unfortunate killing of a Nepali national (at Mustang) is true" and that if any Nepalese nationals had actually been detained, they would be "released expeditiously".

The letter, however, made no mention of Nepal's earlier protest against Chinese troops operating within the demilitarized zone of 20 kilometres on either side of the border laid down in the latest Nepal-China Boundary Agreement.

Mr. Chou En-lai's letter was received by Mr. Koirala just before noon on July 1 and he placed it before his Cabinet immediately.

The following is the text of Mr. Chou En-lai's reply:

"Your Excellency, respected and dear Prime Minister,

"Your Excellency's letter of June 29, 1960 reached me at 10 a.m. on June 30. Before I received Your Excellency's letter, we had already learnt from foreign despatches the news that there had occurred on Sino-Nepalese border the killing of a Nepalese national by Chinese troops.

"The Chinese Government is much concerned about this and has immediately contacted the local authorities for finding out the truth of this matter.

"The Government of Nepal will be immediately informed as soon as a report is received.

"If the unfortunate incident of the killing of a Nepalese national referred to in Your Excellency's letter is true, the Chinese Government will express its deep regret. If it has actually happened that any Nepalese nationals have been detained, they will of course be released expeditiously.

"With my highest regards, Chou En-lai".

Mr. S. P. Upadhyaya's Statement:

Also on July 1, the Home Minister, Mr. S. P. Upadhyaya, told the Senate that the Government had received a report that the Chief of Mustang had fled the territory after the Chinese attack on June 28 and that the people, in panic, were fleeing to the south.

[The Chief of Mustang, locally called "Raja", has been in charge of the administration in Mustang.]

He said that the Government had decided to strengthen the border defences as it felt that no friendship was greater than "our independence and for the sake of friendship we cannot sacrifice our independence". The firing on and killing of Nepalese and violation of Nepalese territory had been the Chinese reply to "our Friendship and Peace Treaty".

He added that Nepal had known about the Chinese military build-up on her border and near it. The Government had received reports about it from time to time and was all the time taking the necessary steps and had drawn China's attention to these reports. "Every time we did that, the Chinese assured us that the Chinese troops would never cross into Nepal and always stressed their friendship for Nepal. When the Prime Minister, Mr. B. P. Koirala, visited Peking earlier this year (1960), he had also talked about this build-up with Mr. Chou En-lai and the latter had given the same assurance. Then, Mr. Chou En-lai came to Khatmandu in April, 1960, and again this issue was discussed with him, and again the same assurance was given. And so, foreign bullets were fired upon unarmed Nepalese and killed one of them".

He refuted the propaganda that the reports of the Chinese attack had come from "Indian check-posts".

He made it "absolutely clear once more" that there were no Indian check-posts in Nepal; all the check-posts were Nepalese and reports of the incident came from Nepalese check-posts in Nepalese code. There might be Indian technicians working on the radio-communication system at the check-posts, just as there were foreign technicians and experts in other departments of the Government of Nepal.

He warned "certain elements in the country" against acts "that might be treason." There might be some elements in the country who would under-rate the incident but he would warn them that his Government would not tolerate such "treason".

He declared that Nepal demanded every satisfaction and reserved the right to claim compensation, the return of the body of the Nepalese official killed and those captured by Chinese.

He said that his report was that the 17 captured Nepalese and their horses had been taken to the Brahmaputra Headquarters of the Chinese Army. The body of the Subedar (officer) killed had been dragged to the Tibetan side of the border.

Mr. Chou En-lai's Two Other Letters—Incident Admitted:

In a second communication on the incident received by Mr. Koirala on July 3, Mr. Chou En-lai admitted the killing of one Nepalese and the taking of ten prisoners at Mustang on June 28.

He said: "A Chinese Army unit suppressing Tibetan rebel bandits within our territory near the Sino-Nepalese boundary discovered at about one kilometre (five-eighths of a mile) north of the Kore Pass a group of men with horses advancing towards it.

"Mistaking them for Tibetan rebel bandits, the Chinese troops opened fire, killing one man and capturing ten, one of whom was wounded.

"It was then found that they were not Tibetan rebel bandits but Nepalese. It could be seen from this factual account that it was an unfortunate incident resulting entirely from misunderstanding.

"The place of the incident was clearly within Chinese territory and Chinese troops had not entered Nepal.

"The Chinese Government expresses deep regret at this, apologizes to His Majesty's Government of Nepal and condoles on the unfortunate dead.

"The Government has ordered the local troops to look into the responsibility for the incident and to escort the ten detained Nepalese, with their horses and possessions, and the body to the Nepalese side on July 4."

Mr. Chou En-lai said that his Government was willing to accept the Nepalese demand for compensation.

He re-affirmed that China would continue to make "incessant efforts to maintain and develop the traditional friendly relations between the two countries."

It was noted in Khatmandu that Mr. Chou En-lai's letter, as reported by the New China News Agency, did not account for six or seven Nepalese citizens missing since the Mustang incident. The Nepalese Government had said that 17 Nepalese were missing, but Mr. Chou En-lai had said that only ten were captured.

[It was later ascertained from Nepalese sources that the seven others who were not accounted for had reported back to border outposts having fled from Mustang.]

Following it up in another letter on July 3, the Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, told Mr. Koirala that the Chinese troops engaged in suppressing Tibetan rebels along the Nepal-Tibet border "have all pulled out to beyond ten kilometres from the border line."

The Chinese letter—the third in six days—was received in Khatmandu on July 4.

Mr. B. P. Koirala's Reply:

In his reply to Mr. Chou En-lai for his three letters sent on July 6, Mr. Koirala strongly protested against Chinese violation of the Sino-Nepal Border Agreement concluded in March, 1960 and demanded that Chinese troops should immediately withdraw from the demilitarized zone.

The letter referred to Nepal Government's serious concern over the reported Chinese military build-up in the demilitarized zone in contravention of the Border Agreement, where it was clearly laid down that no armed forces would be deployed within 20 kilometers of the Nepal-Tibet frontier and that no military patrols would be undertaken.

While appreciating the tone of the letters from Mr. Chou En-lai offering apologies for the Mustang incident, the letter said that there was absolutely no justification for the Chinese entry into the demilitarized zone without prior consent.

It re-affirmed Nepal's strict adherence to the Border Agreement and asked China also to scrupulously comply with its terms.

It rejected once again China's contention that the incident of June 28 resulting in the death of one Nepali and capture of ten others, took place within Chinese territory. This, it said, happened well within Nepal territory.

On July 12, surprise was expressed in official circles in Khatmandu at reports published in some papers that the Nepalese Government had surrendered a part of Nepalese territory to the Chinese in the Mustang area.

A Government spokesman denied the reports that the Nepalese had given an incorrect map to the Chinese during the Chou En-lai-Koirala talks in Peking in March, 1960 and said that, according to the Nepalese maps of 1909 on which Nepal's stand was based, Kore Pass lies about four miles north of Nepal's boundary.

It was Peking's claim that the Mustang incident took place one kilometre north of Kore Pass and that Kore Pass is in Tibet. "As far as the location of Kore Pass is concerned, even Nepalese maps show it as lying in Tibet. Thus, the dispute is over the site of the incident. Nepal's contention is that the incident occurred within Nepalese territory. One mile south of the border is a place called Korelah, which, according to old as well as new maps, is within Nepal. The Mustang incident evidently occurred north of Korelah but 300 yards within Nepalese territory."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Mr. B. P. Koirala's Statement In Parliament: On July 4, Mr. B. P. Koirala told the Nepalese Parliament that he would keep on demanding Chinese compliance with the Demilitarization Agreement concluded with China.

He maintained that the Mustang incident took place in Nepal territory, 300 yards from the border.

He said that Mr. Chou En-lai's reply to the Nepali protest on the incident was "satisfactory" inasmuch as it accepted "all our demands" and had apologized for the incident. "We also did not expect more under the circumstances so far as satisfaction was concerned. It was a "friendly letter," full of concern for Sino-Nepalese friendship and after his "unqualified apology for the incident" and acceptance of all the demands which Nepal had made there was "no need to exaggerate the affair."

On July 12, Mr. B. P. Koirala told the Upper House of Parliament in a debate on a resolution moved by Mr. Shubh Shamsher of Gorkha Parishad that the Demilitarization Agreement between Nepal and China had been unilaterally violated by the Chinese.

Mr. Shubh Shamsher's resolution, while regretting the Mustang border incident of June 23 and the infringement of Nepal's sovereignty, called on the Government for greater preparations in defence of Nepal's northern frontier.

It said that it appeared that some irresponsible low-ranking Chinese army officer had misinformed the Chinese Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai, about the place of the incident. "The reality is that the incident took place on our soil and correspondence between the two Governments on this subject is continuing."

Mr. Koirala said that the Demilitarization Agreement could not be left to the Chinese sweet will and pleasure to keep or not to keep, to come whenever they liked to the border or within 10 kilometres of it.

He did not think that the Mustang incident was a fore-runner of any other Chinese action. "We believe it is a small border incident. Nepal has to be always vigilant not as a sequel to this incident but otherwise too. I do not accept that we have to be vigilant because of this incident, because I do not accept that it is indicative of any Chinese intentions against us."

While there was no large-scale influx of armed Tibetans into Nepal, he said, they would not be allowed to indulge in activities that go counter to the Government's policy towards China.

He said that China had not raised the question of Indian technicians employed on Nepal's check-posts. "These technicians are in our service and, whatever be the propaganda, we cannot surrender our right to employ any technicians we like."

He added that Chinese technicians were surveying areas near Nepal's border with India for the erection of factories. "On this logic, the Indian Government can also protest against their presence."

Communists' Attitude:

The Communist Party's General Secretary, Dr. Kesar Jung Raimajhi, told a news conference in Khatmandu on July 4 that he did not think the Chinese had any aggressive designs against Nepal and described Mr. Chou En-lai's letters to Mr. Koirala as "very friendly".

He said that like every Nepali he was sorry for the killing of a Nepali soldier, but he strongly condemned "the propaganda that China is expansionist", which, he said, had been launched by elements who wanted to drag Nepal into a particular Power bloc.

He asked: "Should we call China expansionist? Should we join the 'cold war' because a Nepali has been killed? The real traitors in Nepal are those in the Gorkha Parishad and the Nepali Congress who dubbed China as an aggressor."

He did not accept Nepal's version that the Mustang incident took place 300 yards within Nepal territory.

While admitting that Nepal's northern check-posts were exclusively Nepalese, he suggested that Indian technicians working there should be replaced by trained Nepalese. "We do not mind foreigners in other departments."

Since the Mustang incident, several communists went underground and some were detained for security reasons.

(The Statesman, The Times of India and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3265:CHI:A]

B. Budget For 1960-61: Presenting Nepal's Budget for 1960-61 to the House of Representatives in Khatmandu on July 6, the Finance Minister, Gen. Subarna Shamsher (who is also Deputy Prime Minister), estimated foreign aid contributions (a main feature of the Budget) to the 1960-61 Development Budget at 88 per cent of the total Budget.

Justifying this reliance on foreign aid for Nepal's development, he said that countries far more developed than Nepal were also receiving foreign assistance for rapid developmental progress.

He submitted a Rs. 1.75-crore deficit Budget with the total revenue, including development capital, at Rs. 35.97 crores.

The total expenditure, including development outlay, was estimated at Rs. 37.72 crores.

Of this total expenditure, Rs. 11,80,50,000 was under revenue head and Rs. 25,91,54,000 would account for the development capital for the new year. Out of the total development capital, foreign aid would be Rs. 22.75 crores.

[The conversion rate for the Nepali rupee is 160 Nepali rupees to 100 Indian rupees.]

He added that 1960-61 was the last year of Nepal's Rs. 33-crore First Five-Year Plan. Since only Rs. 12.50 crores was spent in the four years of the Plan, Rs. 20.50 crores was being provided for on that account under the head "Development" in the Budget.

State trading in certain commodities of daily use was proposed to be introduced to hold the price line. Nepalese currency was becoming stabilized and its area of circulation was expanding.

[At present both Indian and Nepalese currencies are in circulation in the country.]

(The Times of India and The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2843:NEP:A]

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: Russia's New Note On U-2 Incident; CENTO Seminar On Planning And Development; Two New Ministers.

A. Russia's New Note To Pakistan On U-2 Spy-plane Incident: Tass reported on June 23 that the Soviet Union had told Pakistan in a new Note that if any aircraft made further provocative flights into the Soviet Union from Pakistan territory, the Soviet Government would be forced to take counter-measures.

The Soviet Note, handed to the Pakistan Ambassador in Moscow, was the second to the Pakistan Government on the subject of Pakistan lending her territory to USA for "aggressive actions" against Russia.

It said that the Government of Pakistan, in its Note of May 13, instead of giving a clear answer that it would not allow the Pakistani territory to be used by the American Air Force for aggression against the Soviet Union, attempted to escape the responsibility by referring to some assurances of the American Government.

It added: "The Government of USSR could only reach the conclusion that the Government of Pakistan under-rates the seriousness of this question.

"This emerges from the assertion by the Government of Pakistan in its Note of May 24 in reply to the Soviet Government that it did not know anything about the proposed flight of the American aircraft from Peshawar aerodrome.

"The Government of Pakistan has admitted the fact of the American Lockheed U-2 type aircraft having been based on Pakistani territory and of its flight into the interior of Soviet territory.

"As regards the stated wish of the Government of Pakistan to have good relations with the Soviet Union, it is necessary to note that the leading public figures of Pakistan have made similar statements before. However, the present state of Soviet-Pakistani relations does not reveal any urge by the Pakistani leading public figures to translate words into practical deeds."

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3370:AOA:A]

B. CENTO Seminar On Planning And Development: The five-day CENTO Seminar, which concluded in Murree on June 17, recommended closer co-operation among the member-countries in planning and development and suggested that the industrially-advanced member-countries should help promote the free flow of capital to the developing countries.

The Seminar also recommended that regional representatives to CENTO Economic Council meetings should consult with their competent national authorities before making commitments concerning the proposed CENTO projects to avoid delays in implementing such projects after they had been finally approved.

Another recommendation of the Seminar was that maximum encouragement should be given to the development of the private sector, principally through normal operations of price and market mechanism.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3171:PAK:B, 3340:IRN:A]

C. Two New Ministers: On June 1, Mr. Akhtar Hussain was sworn-in as the 11th Minister of the Presidential Cabinet.

He gave charge of the West Pakistan Governorship on June 1 to Nawab Amir Mohammad Khan of Kalabagh, who was sworn-in at Lahore.

Mr. Akhtar Hussain was allocated the portfolios of National Reconstruction, Information and Kashmir Affairs.

The Nawab of Kalabagh has so far been Chairman of the Pakistan Industrial Development Corporation.

Mr. Zakir Hussain, who was so far Governor of East Pakistan, was sworn-in as Minister of the Interior in the Presidential Cabinet on June 14.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3309:PAK:A]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

D. Ordinance To Develop New Capital: The President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, promulgated a new Ordinance on June 23 notifying certain specified areas in and around Rawalpindi for the purpose of development of Pakistan's new capital site and for setting up a three-member Capital Development Authority.

The Authority, which will eventually replace the Capital Commission, is headed by the Chairman of the Capital Commission, Maj.-Gen. Yahya Khan.

Under the Ordinance, the Authority has power to prepare a Master Plan and a phased Master Programme for the development of the Capital site and the rest of the specified areas.

All such plans, however, would have to be submitted by the Authority to Government for approval.

The Authority also has powers to acquire any land in the specified areas and prohibit the construction of buildings or suggest alterations to structures and installations.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3391:PAK:D]

E. Prohibition Of Public Discussion Of Replies To Constitution Commission Questionnaire: On July 2, the Martial Law authorities in Rawalpindi gave a stern warning to the people indulging in "mischievous and devious methods" to revive political activity by using the questionnaire of the Constitution Commission as an excuse.

A Press Note issued from the Headquarters of the Chief Martial Law Administrator said: "Activities of this nature will not be tolerated and the full force of the Martial Law will be brought to bear against them.

"The Constitution Commission appointed by the Government had sent out a questionnaire to elicit opinion from the people of Pakistan on the future Constitution of the country. The Martial Law authorities have noticed that certain persons have been playing politics, using this questionnaire as an excuse for reviving political activity by holding meetings and also publicizing their views through the medium of the Press and printed matter.

"These persons have even sought to convert the members of the public to their point of view. In doing so, they have laid themselves open to action under the Martial Law regulations. However, in deference to the position of the Constitution Commission, the Martial Law authorities have so far desisted from taking action against these persons.

"Adoption of such mischievous and devious methods to misuse a legitimate opportunity for expressing views on the future Constitution can do nothing but harm to the country.

"The Martial Law authorities, therefore, warn all such people that objectionable activities of this nature will not be tolerated and the full force of the Martial Law will be brought to bear against them."

The warning was issued within 24 hours of a statement by the Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, that publicity aimed at eliciting support for certain views on the future Constitution was tantamount to forming political parties and was, therefore, not in keeping with the Martial Law regulations.

Mr. Qadir had added that June 30 was the last date for submission of replies to the questionnaire issued by the Constitution Commission, and the Government had refrained from taking action against those persons responsible for such activities because it was the concern of the Commission.

The warning, however, came after the Commission had extended the time-limit for submission of replies.

Both private individuals and Government leaders had been giving publicity to their views on the future Constitution of the country.

While Government leaders favoured the Presidential system of Government, others had been urging the restoration of Parliamentary democracy in the country.

Religious Leaders' Views:

A Karachi message on June 26 said that 19 prominent Ulemas (religious leaders) from all over Pakistan, who had met a few days earlier at Lahore to discuss the future pattern of the Constitution, had suggested that Pakistan should "transfer power to the people, as in India."

The 19 Ulemas, who released to the Press on June 26 their reply to the questionnaire issued by the Constitution Commission, rejected the idea of the Presidential form of Government as envisaged by F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan and demanded free and impartial elections as a prelude to the re-establishment of democracy in Pakistan.

(Dawn, Karachi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3310:PAK:I]

F. Austrian Team Climbs Disteghil Peak: According to information received on June 22 by the Pakistan Government from Gilgit, Disteghil peak in the Karakoram Range was climbed on June 9 by a five-member Austrian Expedition led by Mr. S. Wolfgang.

Two previous expeditions, including the one led by the Swiss mountaineer, Mr. R. Lambert, had failed to conquer the peak.

Mr. Gunther Starker and Mr. Dether Marcher (who is probably the youngest climber in the history of mountaineering) reached the summit.

The Expedition claimed that no peak of equal height had been conquered before in such a short time.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2836:PAK:G]

SINGAPORE

A. Formation Of Opposition Party: A new party in opposition to the ruling Left-Wing People's Action Party (PAP) called the Singapore Congress was formed on July 3.

Addressing a conference called for forming the new party in Singapore on that day (July 3), Mrs. Leon Soh, who was elected President of Singapore Congress, said in a policy speech that the Congress would "present the people of Singapore a democratic socialist platform built on a realistic pattern of life."

She said that the new party's political platform would be based on respect for Malaya's special position as the "natural parent" of Singapore, security for minority groups and development of the language, culture and religion of all races in the Island.

The party's Organizing Secretary, Mr. Mohamed Ibrahim, said that the fact that within two months of the party's registration it was able to establish 51 branches with a total membership of 2,000 proved its "vitality and potentiality for success."

The party will have the Malay words ote hidup ("Alive") as its slogan and its symbol will be a ladder with five rungs, presumably representing the five races inhabiting the Island.

(The Straits Times, Singapore)

[Prev. ref. 2739:SGP:A]

TURKEY

A. Provisional Constitution And Other Developments: A provisional Constitution for Turkey, prepared by a Commission of University Professors and published in Ankara on June 12, said that the Committee of National Union would exercise sovereignty in the name of the Turkish nation until a new Parliament was formed after the Elections.

It specified that the Elections should be held as soon as possible.

After a new Parliament was formed, it said, the Committee of National Union—created by the Army leaders who ousted the members of the Government by the coup on May 27—shall dissolve itself.

The Committee members should take an oath to serve the Turkish nation justly without expecting any recompense, and the Committee could expel Cabinet members.

The new Cabinet members could be appointed by the Committee Chairman as Head of State.

The Constitution was published in the form of a transition law providing for the abolition and modification of certain Articles of the 1924 Constitution.

It comprises four Headings and 27 Articles —the figures '27' having been selected to commemorate the revolutionary date of May 27.

The Constitution envisaged could not alter the essential characteristics of the Turkish State, which would be republican, nationalist, democratic, secular and revolutionary.

The Preamble constitutes a justification of the revolutionary action of the Turkish Army in view of the violation of the country's fundamental laws, violation of the rights of man and the dictatorship exercised by the former ruling party (Democratic Party) which had lost all legitimacy.

It also draws attention to Article 34 of the Army's internal regulations laying down that the Army had the task of protecting the Motherland and the Republic set up under the Constitution.

The provisional Constitution, which will cease to have legal validity when a definite Constitution and an electoral law have been promulgated, vests the legislative power in the Committee of National Union, which took upon itself the responsibility for organizing and carrying out the revolution.

The Committee consists of 38 members, listed alphabetically, without any indication of rank.

The executive power is vested in the Chief of State and the Council of Ministers. The Chief of State is simultaneously the President of the Committee of National Union and Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces.

The polyvalent character of the Head of the State is offset by provisions for the promulgation of laws. These provisions lay down that a law adopted by a majority of the Committee of National Union should be submitted to the Chief of State. He is then obliged within seven days either to promul-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

gate the law or send it back to the Committee for second examination. If the law is again adopted by a majority of four-fifths of the Committee of National Union, it must automatically be promulgated by the Chief of State within five days.

The Committee of National Union is, at the Government's request, to nominate members to two exceptional bodies—a High Court of Enquiry consisting of a President and 30 members and six auxiliary members and another Court of Justice. Members of both the courts will be chosen from the civilian or military magistrature, and from the Council of State. Their respective functions are to decide and pass judgment on the responsibilities of the former President of the Republic, Mr. Celal Bayar, the former Premier, Mr. Adnan Menderes, the members of the former Government, the members of the former parliamentary majority and their supporters.

One provision requires all members of the Committee of National Union, the Government and the High Courts of Enquiry and Justice to declare the value of their assets and property on taking up and laying down their office.

In the event of the Chief of State being prevented by death, travel abroad or other reason from carrying out his duties, the oldest member of the Committee of National Union will take over his functions immediately.

In the event of death of the Chief of State, the Committee of National Union, meeting in a quorum comprising six-sevenths of its membership, will appoint his successor by a two-thirds' majority.

The provisional Constitution declared that the Committee of National Union would cease to exist the day the Turkish people elected a Parliament by means of free elections—which are to be held in the shortest possible time.

Investigation Commission To Inquire Into Activities Of Deposed Leaders:

On June 18, the Government published a law providing for a 36-member Investigation Commission to enquire into the activities of the country's deposed leaders.

The Commission will have the power to hand over the accused to the High Court if it decided that a case can be made out against them. The accused will not be allowed counsel when appearing before the Investigating Commission, but before the High Court they would be allowed up to three counsel.

They will not be allowed to see documents submitted before the Commission as evidence and there will be no right of appeal against the Commission's decisions.

The members of the Commission will be selected from a list of 100 professors, judges and public prosecutors.

Mr. E. Alican's Broadcast:

In a radio address from Ankara on June 17, the Finance Minister, Mr. Ekrem Alican, said that Turkey owed $354,000,000 to other countries.

He estimated that the nation's Budget deficit for 1960 would be met by cutting expenses and not by new taxes. The Provisional Government would reduce both internal and external spending.

Recall Of Ambassadors:

On June 22, the Turkish Foreign Ministry announced the recall of five ambassadors appointed by the former regime, including Mr. Turgut Bayar, son of the former President, Mr. Celal Bayar, who was Ambassador to Mexico.

The others were Mr. Suat Hayri Urguplu in Spain. Mr. Fahrettin Kerim Gokay in Switzerland, Mr. Faiz Yorukoglu in Libya and Mr. Muammer Baykan, Permanent delegate to UN in South Korea.

The Turkish Navy's Commander-in-Chief, Admiral Fahri Koruturk, was named as Ambassador to Moscow, a post at present vacant.

Provisional Government:

The names of 18 members of General Cemal Gursel's Provisional Government were announced on May 29. They were as follows:

President of the Republic, Prime Minister and Minister of Defence—General Cemal Gursel hitherto Commander-in-Chief of the Turkish land forces;

Minister of State—Dr. Amil Artus, a member of the Court of Appeal;

Minister of State—Mr. Sefik Inam, formerly Director-General of Statistics;

Justice—Mr. Abdullah Gozubuyuk, former rapporteur of the Court of Appeal and author of a number of law books;

Interior—Major-General Muharrem Imsan Kizilogluu, Commander of the 61st Army Division;

Foreign Affairs—Mr. Selim Sarper, hitherto Secretary-General at the Foreign Ministry and previously Turkish Permanent Representative at United Nations and the North Atlantic Council;

Finance—Mr. Ekrem Alican, Inspector of Finances and one of the founders of the Democratic Party in 1946—a strong personality and according to some people the eminence grise of the new Government;

Education—Prof. Fehmi Yavuz, Dean of the Faculty of Political Science in Ankara University;

Public Works—Mr. Danis Keper, former Under-Secretary at the Ministry of Public Works;

Commerce—Mr. Cihad Iren, Secretary-General of the Union of Chambers of Commerce and Industry—recently resigned his post owing to differences with the Menderes Government;

Health and Social Assistance—Prof. Nusret Karasu, a well-known doctor;

Customs and Monopolies—Mr. Fethi Askin, previously Director-General of Customs;

Agriculture—Mr. Feridun Ustun;

Communications,—Brig. Sitki Ulay, Commandant of the Ankara War College, who was involved in the recent demonstrations of War College cadets;

Labour—Prof. Cahit Talas, a member of the Faculty of Political Science in Ankara University;

Industry—Mr. Muhtar Uluer, Director-General of Mining in the Ministry of Industry;

Press, Broadcasting, and Tourism—Mr. Zuhtu Tarhan;

Construction and Housing,—Mr. Orhan Kubat, former Chairman of the Agricultural Bank.

Mr. D. Eisenhower's Message To Gen. C. Gursel:

In a message to General Cemal Gursel on June 16, President D. Eisenhower expressed his good wishes for the success of the new Turkish Government in solving Turkey's problems.

He said that he had attentively followed General Gursel's statements to the Turkish people and had noted with satisfaction his intention to hold Elections and restore power to the elected representatives of the people.

He expressed the hope that Turkey's new Constitution and the Elections would open a new phase in the development of democracy in Turkey.

He said that the desire of the Turkish leaders to uphold Turkey's ties with NATO and CENTO had caused satisfaction in all free countries.

He pledged continued friendly relations between the United States and Turkey.

(Ankara Radio and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3416:TUR:A]

B. Full Anglo-Cypriot Agreement On Cyprus Issue: A joint Anglo-Cypriot communique issued in Nicosia on July 1 stated that agreement had been reached on all outstanding questions on Cyprus independence.

The following is the text of the joint communique:

"Agreement has been reached between the Greek-Cypriot and Turkish-Cypriot leaders and the United Kingdom delegation on all outstanding questions.

"These are: (1) the text of the Treaty for the establishment of the new Republic; (2) boundaries of the sovereign base areas; (3) future of the sovereign base areas; (4) system of administration of the sovereign zones; and (5) financial aid to the Republic from Her Majesty's Government.

"Financial assistance to be made to the Republic by Her Majesty's Government will amount to £12,000,000 in the first five-year period. Additionally, there will be payments and commitments made by Her Majesty's Government for particular purposes amounting to £2,340,000, making a total of £14,340,000.

"The preparation of drafts is being completed as quickly as possible and the documents will be published shortly in a White Paper. The Greek and Turkish Governments have been kept informed on the negotiations at every stage, and the documents are being drawn up in agreement with them."

The announcement thus cleared the way for the independence of Cyprus—which was twice postponed since February 19.

The negotiations leading to the Agreement were long and arduous. The Agreement was based on the foundation of the Zurich and London Agreements of February 19, 1959 and represented the culmination of over 16 months' work since that date in London and in Cyprus as well as in Athens and Ankara.

In broad outline, the Agreement was the best accommodation it was possible to reach between the essential requirements of the United Kingdom and the national aspirations of the Cypriot people and their leaders.

Specifically, it provided:

(a) The sovereign bases to be retained by Britain would comprise an area of some 99 square miles. The villages of Ormidhia and Xylotymbou and the Dhekelia power station would be enclaves of Cypriot territory within the base areas, and there would be special arrangements for access to them. Akrotiri would be the only village under British sovereignty, and an offer would be made of financial compensation for any inhabitants who wished to re-settle in the Republic.

(b) On the future of the bases if Britain should ever decide to relinquish them, it was understood by all parties that they would be transferred to the Republic.

(c) Administration of the British bases would be covered in detail by a British declaration to be signed as part of the final settlement. In general, Britain assured the Cypriots of her determination to create a continuous and lasting system of administration founded on close co-operation.

(d) On financial aid, Britain would provide, over the next five years, a total sum of £14,340,000. This sum would include specific amounts for the resettlement of villagers who wished to move from the base areas, a special grant of £1,000,000 for the Turkish-Cypriot community and £500,000 for the construction of a civil airfield at Nicosia. Provision was also made for the question of further aid, to be discussed after five years and at five-yearly intervals thereafter.

The future association of the new Republic with the Commonwealth now remained the only major question to be settled. It is an issue on which the people of the Island will have to make up their own minds, freely and without pressure from any side. If they decide in favour of asking for further association with the Commonwealth, the British Government has undertaken to bring the matter before the other members of the Commonwealth.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Independence Bill Passed:

The text of the Bill to grant Independence to the new Republic of Cyprus was formally laid before the British House of Commons on July 7, together with an explanatory White Paper containing all the documents formally agreed upon in Nicosia.

The White Paper comprised in draft form three Treaties, the Draft Constitution of the Republic and a declaration by Britain concerning the administration of the sovereign base areas she would retain on the Island as well as the various letters exchanged covering points which arose during the negotiations.

A parliamentary debate on the Bill—necessary before it could become law—began in the middle of July and the Bill was passed on July 21.

Elections to the Cyprus House of Representatives were held on July 31, and to the Greek and Turkish Communal Assemblies on August 7.

(UK High Commission and The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3420:TUR:A]

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Egyptian Region's Budget For 1960-61: The President, Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser, approved on July 3 the Egyptian Region's 1960-61 Budget.

It estimated revenue at £ (E) 370,800,000 and expenditure at £ (E) 301,000,000.

The main items of expenditure were: Internal security and defence £ (E) 103,000,000; Aswan High Dam £ (E) 16,286,310; and Aid for the Syrian Region £ (E) 2,500,000.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 2805:UAR:C]

VIET-NAM (DR)

A. ITSC Rejects North Viet-Nam's Complaint: It was reported in Saigon on June 10 that the International Truce Supervisory Commission (ITSC) had rejected a complaint by the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam (North) about the strengthening of the US Military Aid Advisory Group (MAAG) in the Republic of Viet-Nam (South).

In its reply to the North Viet-Nam Defence Minister, Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, ITSC affirmed that it was not aware of any plan for the import of arms or military personnel to replace the French Expeditionary Force in South Viet-Nam.

However, it said, it had been informed by the Government of the Republic of Viet-Nam that arrangements were being made with the US Government to increase the number of US military instructors in place of the French instructors who had left. But, the number of foreign military instructors would still be less than that recorded at the time of the cease-fire in 1954.

[Articles 16 and 17 of the Geneva Agreement which ended the Indo-China War in 1954 had authorized the replacement of military instructors but not re-inforcement of military equipment and man-power.]

Mr. Pham Van Dong's Complaint:

On June 24, the Prime Minister of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, Mr. Pham Van Dong, sent to the co-Chairmen of the Geneva Conference of 1954 (Britain and the Soviet Union) a complaint on the alleged MAAG build-up in South Viet-Nam.

He wrote: "The Government of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam regrets the lack of a resolute attitude and lack of measures by the International Truce Supervisory Commission to prevent in time such a situation. Recently, in spite of the Polish delegate's resolute opposition, the Commission approved the majority decision on the introduction of the US military personnel to strengthen MAAG.

"The Commission has thus gone beyond its rights and responsibilities. Its decisions have given more ground to USA to intensify its interference, prepare a new war and encourage South Viet-Nam to freely massacre the people."

He asked the co-Chairmen to re-consider their decision and abrogate their decision allowing the introduction of US military personnel into South Viet-Nam, to end US interference and to expel MAAG.

(The Times of Viet-Nam, Saigon and The Consulate-General of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, New Delhi)

[Prev ref. 3410:VND:B]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Security Council Resolution On U-2 Spy-plane Incident; Progress Of "Pioneer V"; International Tin Agreement; Communist Parties' Conference; UK Bank Rate Raised.

A. UN Security Council Resolution On U-2 Spy-plane Incident: On May 18, the Soviet Government called for an urgent meeting of the UN Security Council to consider what it called "the aggressive acts by the US Air Force."

The request was cabled from Paris by the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, to the Council President for the month of May, Sir Claude Corea (Ceylon).

Mr. Gromyko said that the US Air Force's aggressive acts 'created a threat to world peace.'

The following is the full text of the explanatory Note forwarded by Mr. A. Gromyko to the President of the Security Council:

"The Soviet Government raises before the United Nations Security Council the question 'On the aggressive actions of the United States Air Force against the Soviet Union, which create threat to world peace'.

"The Soviet Government raises this question before the Security Council as a body to which the main responsibility for maintaining international peace and security has been entrusted by 82 United Nations member-States. The Soviet Government already drew the attention of United Nations to the facts of gross and deliberate violation of the frontiers of the Soviet Union by US aircraft and warned of the dangerous nature of these actions. In the course of recent years repeated violations of Soviet frontiers by American planes took place. Hereby the Government of USSR officially informs the Security Council of new acts of provocative intrusions into the boundaries of the Soviet Union. These acts were committed by planes of the US Air Force on April 9 and May 1 of the current year, as was announced in the report of the Chairman of the Council of Ministers of USSR, Mr. N. S. Khruschev, at the session of the Supreme Soviet of USSR.

"The United States plane which violated the Soviet frontier on the morning of May 1 was uninterruptedly watched by units of the Soviet anti-aircraft defence and when the aggressive nature of its intentions became evident it was shot down on the territory of the Soviet Union in the area of the city of Sverdlovsk over 2,000 kilometres away from the Soviet-Afghan border. The investigation of the wreckage of the plane, its equipment, special spy instruments and other data, as well as the testimony of the pilot who escaped with a parachute, made it possible to establish with full accuracy that this American plane of the Lockheed U-2 type had been sent to the air-space of USSR for the military reconnaissance of Soviet territory and, particularly, for collecting information on Soviet industrial and military installations. The plane was provided with special equipment for these purposes and was taking photographs of different objectives on Soviet territory while flying over it.

"The US State Department, which at first tried to deny the fact of the deliberate intrusion of the American plane in the air-space of USSR and alleged that this plane was conducting meteorological observations at high altitudes in Turkey, not far from the Soviet border, was compelled to admit on May 7, under pressure of irrefutable evidence, that the plane had been sent to penetrate within the boundaries of the Soviet Union in order to collect military intelligence over Soviet territory. On May 9, the US Secretary of State, Mr. C. A. Herter, confirmed this and declared further that such espionage and subversive flights were carried out on the instructions of the US President and in accordance with the programme which envisages 'broad aerial surveillance' including 'penetration' into Soviet air-space.

"On May 11, the US President, Mr. D. D. Eisenhower, confirmed this statement by the Secretary of State.

"On May 12, the US Government in its Note to the Soviet Government again declared that aggressive spy flights constitute a calculated policy of the United States.

"Thereby, the US Government actually recognized that the objectives of the flight of the plane were hostile to the Soviet Union and incompatible with the principles and aims of the UN Charter which carries, among others, the signature of USA as well.

"It is not difficult to understand how dangerous for the cause of peace are such actions of USA in view of the present international situation and in view of the present level of the development of military technique. In conditions when US bombers are known to make constant flights with the load of atomic and hydrogen bombs, in particular in the direction of the boundaries of the Soviet Union—to which fact the Soviet Government in its time drew attention of the Security Council—there can be no guarantee that American planes which appear over the territory of USSR do not have on board this deadly load. Under such circumstances the Soviet Union can, naturally, be confronted with the necessity to take reprisal actions for safeguarding its security and repulsing aggression. In this case, responsibility for the consequences will fully rest with the Governments of States committing aggression against other countries.

"Noteworthy is the fact that in sending its planes to penetrate within the boundaries of USSR for aggressive purposes USA unceremoniously violates the territorial integrity and sovereign rights of small countries which have no such possibilities for protecting their territories against the intrusion of US planes as big States have. Thus, on April 9 and May 1, 1960, American plane crossed the southern frontier of USSR, having at first violated the air-space of Afghanistan. The United States is known to have acted in the same way in 1958 with regard to neutral Austria, when it transported its troops to the Middle East, the fact which at that time drew forth the lawful protest of the Austrian Government.

"Thus, irrefutable facts prove that the United States of America commits deliberate and thoroughly prepared actions which not only constitute a most glaring violation of the elementary rules of international law and provisions of the UN Charter but also seriously endanger the cause of world peace.

"It follows from the aforesaid statements by the Department of State and the US Government that provocative actions of the US

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Air Force with regard to the Soviet Union had not only been ordered by the US military command, but represent a calculated policy of the US Government. Consequently, the repeated intrusions by US military planes within the confines of USSR, of which the Soviet Government informed UN in the past, were of a deliberate nature even though the US Government did try to deny this before.

"The Soviet Government hoped that at the meeting of the Heads of Governments in Paris, USA would condemn the aggressive actions of her Air Force, renounce such a policy, punish those responsible for the provocation made by the U-2 plane, give an assurance that there would be no repetition of such actions in the future, make up publicly for the insult caused to our country and thus put an end to actions aggravating the international situation and posing a threat to peace.

"The Soviet Government notes with regret, however, that the US Government did not follow this line. Instead, it is trying to shirk the responsibility for the aggressive acts which have been committed against USSR and, what is more, virtually justifies the policy of intrusion within the confines of other States and violation of their sovereignty, the integrity of which is a universally recognized and immutable principle of international relations.

"It follows from President Eisenhower's statement in Paris that the US Government does not intend to renounce this policy, but has been compelled by the resolute worldwide condemnation of its action to announce merely a temporary suspension of provocative flights over Soviet territory.

"Thus, this is not a renunciation of the US policy which runs counter to the basic principles of the UN Charter but merely a tactical manoeuvre of the US Government which has for its aim to deceive public opinion. This is the only conclusion that can be drawn from the stubborn refusal of the US Government to condemn provocative acts of aggression against the Soviet Union and from President Eisenhower's statement that USA cannot undertake not to make reconnaissance flights over the territory of the Soviet Union after January, 1961.

"Thus, the threat of intrusion by American planes within the confines of other States is not eliminated, and the danger that such actions might lead to serious military clashes and the starting of a nuclear missile war with grave consequences for the whole of mankind remains.

"The Soviet Government considers that other States too and UN as a whole cannot and must not put up with the fact that USA, on the strength of groundless references to its security, openly threatens the security of other States and world peace.

"The Soviet Government regards as direct duty of the Security Council resolutely to denounce the actions of USA as dangerous for the cause of peace and to call for the discontinuation of intrusions of the US Air Force planes in the air-space of other States. United Nations would not be doing its duty to the peoples if an end were not put to the methods of arbitrariness and provocations in international relations. In this case passiveness of UN would not only greatly harm the prestige of this organization but would be taken as encouragement of the actions which undermine international co-operation and place peace in jeopardy.

"In view of all this the Soviet Government, concerned for the interests of preserving world peace, regards it as its duty to submit the question 'On the aggressive actions of the United States Air Force against the Soviet Union, which create threat to world peace' for urgent consideration by the Security Council and expresses the hope that the Security Council will, without delay, take measures for ending the US actions dangerous for the cause of peace."

Council Debate:

A session of the Security Council began in New York on April 23 to consider the Soviet charge.

The President of the Security Council for the month, Sir Claude Corea (Ceylon), in his opening remarks, urged an early resumption of Great Power negotiations in a renewed spirit of goodwill for easing world tensions.

He said: "It is my hope that our deliberations will also result in the formulation of a practical approach which will lead to the early fulfilment of the hopes of mankind.

"The Council has the opportunity to conduct its discussions in such a manner as will enable it to pave the way to an early resumption of international negotiations in the Council, within the United Nations, or outside, in a renewed spirit of goodwill."

Soviet Resolution:

The following resolution was introduced by the Soviet delegate, Mr. Andrei Gromyko, on May 23:

"The Security Council, having discussed the question of aggressive acts by the Air Force of the United States of America against the Soviet Union, creating a threat to universal peace;

"Noting that the violation of the sovereignty of other States is incompatible with the principles and aims of the United Nations Charter;

"Considering that such actions create a threat to universal peace;

"Condemns the incursion of US aircraft into other States and regards them as aggressive acts;

"Requests the Government of the United States of America to take steps forthwith to put an end to such action and to prevent their recurrence."

Speaking on the resolution, Mr. A. Gromyko said that the Council was convened to consider aggressive acts by the United States Air Force against the Soviet Union which created a threat to world peace.

He referred to the "provocative" acts of the United States Air Force which could bring about serious consequences if the necessary measures were not taken to halt them.

On May 1, he said, an American Air Force plane, on direct instructions of United States officials, had penetrated Soviet territory and had been brought down by a Soviet rocket. This had not been a routine incident resulting from carelessness or lack of discipline. The pilot had acted under distinct instructions and this was a proven fact, brought out from the testimony of the pilot, Francis Gary Powers, and official United States statements.

Thus, they were confronted not with a border incident but with aggressive actions deliberately prepared and carried out on the instructions of the US Government—actions which were only conceivable when countries were at war with each other.

This, he went on, was not the first such case. In recent years, American war-planes, using bases deployed along the Soviet Union and other socialist States, had been seeking to penetrate Soviet territory by every means. There have been a number of violations of Soviet borders. The Soviet Union had asked that such violations should cease and had cited chapter and verse of the incidents.

The Soviet Union had not only warned USA but had also displayed restraint in not having its fighters open fire on the US aircraft first. Only when the Americans opened fire did Soviet airmen retaliate.

The Soviet Union had thus allowed for the possibility that there had been irresponsibility by the Pentagon, while the US Government, or at any rate, the US President was not involved. The US Government, however, had had the opportunity of putting an end to the intrusions had it so desired. The policy of the US President and his Government were exposed when they were compelled publicly to disavow the lying version they had launched and were forced to confess to pursuing a pirate-like policy of systematic intrusion into the air-space of the Soviet Union. This had been confirmed in a US Note of May 12.

The United States, without so much as batting an eyelid, had admitted that espionage was an integral part of its foreign policy and that President Eisenhower's administration had been pursuing this policy from the advent of its term of office. The United States had taken up a stand "unprecedented in its cynicism" in saying that its policy was justified and was personally endorsed by President Eisenhower.

Nevertheless, he said, the Soviet Government had made careful preparations for the Paris 'Summit' Conference and had drawn up plans for the settlement of key issues. The Soviet Government had approached the Conference with a feeling of great responsibility and in a sincere desire to build a stable peace with its partners. But, the aggressive actions of USA on the eve of the Conference really demonstrated that she wanted to torpedo the Conference before it began.

In the situation, the Soviet Government had more than enough grounds not to go to the Conference, since one of the participants had adopted a hostile and perfidious position towards the Soviet Union. But the Soviet Union decided still to take part in a conference in which the world entertained great hopes. Mr. N. Khruschev had gone there in the hope that commonsense would prevail in Washington and USA would condemn the aggressive acts of its Air Force. Mr. Khruschev had "done everything to provide the United States President with an opportunity to find a way out of the deadlock created by the actions of the American Government and to make the holding of the Conference possible. But Mr. Eisenhower had "found nothing better to do than to advocate once again the espionage and sabotage activity which were allegedly necessary to USA, thereby violating the sovereignty of other States. USA had tried to set a new standard of international law or, to be more exact, international lawlessness. USA had hatched a plan for "open skies" as a move to collect information for the Pentagon.

Referring to Mr. Eisenhower's statement that any undertaking he might give could not be for a period beyond January, 1961 when he would leave office, he said that the Soviet Union dealt with States and not with a person who happened to occupy the White House for a certain period.

This was a case of US subterfuge, a tactical manoeuvre designed to evade responsibility and delude public opinion. The US Government had displayed perfidy to the Soviet Union and there were not many similar cases in history. One example came to his mind—the Japanese attitude towards USA prior to Pearl Harbour in 1941. He was not saying that USA had launched a war against the Soviet Union, but the parallel in perfidy was striking. Mr. Eisenhower had received Mr. Khruschev in the United States and talked of the need to strengthen mutual confidence even as the US Air Force was launching aggressive actions. He asked: "Is not that an example of perfidy?"

When the sponsors of espionage and sabotage were caught in the act, the whole world witnessed them start to twist and turn and fabricate stories before coming out with different statements, not being able to admit that they had committed an act of perfidy.

The question then arose as to how US policy could be trusted after this. One asked, how one could believe statements of the United States officials? It was not surprising that critical remarks were often expressed about this policy inside the United States itself. To those who argued that the Soviet Union over-emphasized the U-2 plane incident, he said: "Put yourself in our place." They should imagine that Soviet planes were violating United States air-space over Chicago or Detroit. What would the Americans say if the Soviet Union tried to justify this? Would the United States shrug this off as an insignificant incident? Hardly. One could imagine the outburst of indignation that would spread over the United States and this would indeed be legitimate indignation.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He gave the warning that the Soviet Union was a great and powerful State and nobody would be allowed to test its patience and, speculating on its peaceful disposition, continue provocations against Soviet territory.

He repeated Mr. Khruschev's earlier statement: "We shall shoot these planes down; we shall administer shattering blows at the bases from whence they come and at those who have set up these bases and actually use them."

Referring to the protests which had been lodged with USA by Norway and Pakistan in connexion with the use of their territories by USA for intelligence flights, he said: "If the Governments of these countries content themselves with just these protests and do not make any more serious and far-reaching conclusions, they may find themselves, even against their will, in a position when the territories of their States may become a springboard for aggression and consequently the object of a retaliatory blow."

The Soviet Government had submitted this question to the Security Council because, he said, this was the United Nations organ which should be the first to raise its voice and to take the necessary measures in all cases when peace was endangered, to say nothing of cases of committed aggression.

He added: "Facing the dangerous actions of one of its Permanent members the Security Council, if it is able to fulfil the tasks entrusted to it, should condemn the policy of aggression carried on by the US Government and say its weighty word for peace. The adventurist policy of a State, however big and influential, cannot be allowed to jeopardize universal peace.

"Least of all can this be allowed now when the rapid development of science and technology has overturned all previous concepts of time, space, speed and the destructive capacity of weapons."

Four-Power Resolution:

Before the Council adjourned for the day (May 23), a group of four countries—Argentina, Ceylon, Ecuador and Tunisia—tabled a resolution recommending that the Governments concerned should seek the solution of international problems by negotiation and other peaceful means under the UN Charter.

The following is the text of the resolution:

"The Security Council, mindful of its responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security;

"Noting with regret that the hopes of the world for a successful meeting of the Heads of Governments of France, United Kingdom, United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics have not been fulfilled;

"Considering also that the resulting situation may lead to an increase of international tensions likely to endanger peace and security;

"Being convinced of the necessity to make every effort to restore and strengthen international goodwill and confidence, based on the established principles of international law;

"Being especially aware of the mounting danger of the continuation of the armaments race;

"Recommends to the Governments concerned to seek solutions of existing international problems by negotiation or other peaceful means as provided in the Charter of UN;

"Appeals to all member-Governments to refrain from any action which might increase tensions;

"Requests the Governments concerned to continue their efforts towards disarmament and the prohibition of nuclear weapons tests under an international control system and their negotiations on the technical aspects of measures against the possibility of surprise attack, as recommended by the General Assembly in its resolution:

"Urges the Governments of France, United Kingdom, United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to resume discussions as soon as possible and to avail themselves of the assistance that the Security Council and other appropriate organs of UN may be able to render."

It was authoritatively stated on May 25 that this four-Power resolution did not represent the general Asian-African approach to the U-2 spy-plane incident, despite rumours to the contrary in UN lobbies. It was stated, however, that Ceylon and Tunisia, two of the four sponsors, were only acting in their individual capacity.

The general attitude of some of the leading Asian-African countries to the resolution which, according to lobby sources, was being strongly resented by Russia, was summed up as follows: "We have not taken any part in behind-the-scene efforts for the formulation of the resolution. We do not want to push ourselves in unless there is a desire on both sides to find common ground and seek the assistance of un-attached countries. At present such a desire is almost non-existent."

Mr. H. C. Lodge's Speech:

The US delegate, Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, said that the presence in Soviet air-space of a single-engined unarmed, one-man aeroplane was not aggression. Yet, just this one plane had caused all the fuss at the Paris 'Summit' Conference and now in United Nations.

As Mr. Lodge put it, the Soviet Union was applying a double standard in maintaining thousands of spies on the territory of other countries and protesting against "one harmless flight".

He said that USA could, had it wished, have cited examples of Soviet activity such as the presence off Long Island of a Soviet vessel which was "interfering" with US naval operations and the presence of numerous Soviet spies "on the ground space of the United States." Since the death of Marshal Stalin, some 350 Soviet spies had been arrested in various countries. Soviet violations of the UN Charter could not fail to make the "free world" concerned about its safety. In due time, USA would bring in proposals before UN which would get to the heart of the problem.

He recalled that Mr. Gromyko had said that flights over Soviet territory continued to be the policy of USA. This was directly and deliberately contrary to facts. Mr. Gromyko knew this very well because he was present when President Eisenhower had stated (in Paris) that the flights had ceased. The US President had said that not only USA but most other countries were constantly the targets of Soviet espionage. Mr. Eisenhower had also said that there was in the Soviet statement an evident misapprehension on one key point. It alleged that USA, in official statements, had threatened continuous over-flights. Mr. Eisenhower had said that USA had made no such threat. But, USA would not shirk its responsibility to guard against surprise attacks.

The flights of American planes over Russian territory, he said, had been suspended and were not to be resumed. The flights were halted before President Eisenhower left for the 'Summit' Conference in Paris. USA was prepared to negotiate an "Open-skies" Treaty with the Soviet Union and others, which would obviate for ever the need for such over-flights. While aggression had never been officially defined, commonsense showed that the presence of a single-engined unarmed one-man plane was not aggression.

He asked where Soviet concern for international law was when the communist forces invaded Korea, and Hungarian independence was "snuffed out" in 1956.

This, he said, was the heart of the matter and they would not get very far if they dwelt on the symptoms of the disease and neglected the disease itself. The disease was the danger of sudden death from surprise attack.

Other Speeches:

M Armand Berard (France) told the Council on May 24 that the threat of massive destruction, which nuclear weapons could cause, should be removed.

He said that there was a flagrant lack of proportion between the incident of May 1 and the consequences which the Soviet Union had drawn from this when, by causing the failure of the 'Summit' Conference, it had ruined the hopes held by all humanity of seeing a beginning of the detente.

France would wish that States abstained from intelligence activities, but in the present world situation, these activities were current practice. "Is the Soviet Union which today expresses indignation, is she sure of being more than any other, above reproach on this score."

Sir Pierson Dixon (UK) appealed to the Soviet Union to resume with the West the search for lasting solutions to world problems.

He felt that the reasons given for Russia's disrupting the 'Summit' Conference were not adequate. "However strong the feelings which the incident of the U-2 plane may have aroused, or have been whipped up in the Soviet Union, we cannot agree that the Soviet Union was justified in bringing to nothing a conference on which so much depended.

"It would be a great day for the peace of the world if the Soviet Union, which in many ways has made such great contributions to modern advances in science, could bring itself to show an imagination in the sphere of international relations equal to the inventiveness it has shown in the realm of science."

Dr. M. C. Chang (Formosa) urged the Council to reject the Soviet charges as unworthy of serious consideration.

The charges, if true, he said, were serious and entailed grave consequences. But the basis for them was a simple case of air reconnaissance or, if they liked, espionage. No country had previously tried to classify espionage as aggression. Ironically, the charge of aggression came from a country which had a long and "notorious record of aggression against sovereign independent States."

In this day and age, air sovereignty had become more or less a myth. That sovereignty has been violated right and left by man-made satellites. The Soviet Union had a number of them in orbit. No one had complained about them, nor had the Soviet Union complained about the American satellites.

On May 25, Mr. Jerzy Michalowski (Poland) said it was to be expected that further developments, particularly the attitude of the Council to the U-2 spy-plane case, would have serious political and military consequences.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

International law had never concerned itself with peace-time espionage. But the way USA had acted constituted a violation of that law.

He said that the principle of sovereignty over a State's air-space made over-flights a violation of that sovereignty, and it was a violation of the UN Charter.

Soviet Amendments To Four-Power Resolution:

On May 26, the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. A. Gromyko, proposed a three-point amendment to the four-Power resolution.

The amendments made the following points:

(1) Aerial military incursions above the territories of other countries constituted a threat to peace;

(2) UN countries should not send military aircraft over the territories of other countries; and

(3) Governments should be requested to pursue their efforts towards general and complete disarmament as well as cessation of nuclear tests under an appropriate international control system.

Mr. Gromyko noted that the four-Power resolution did not mention "dangerous US provocations" against the Soviet Union. This, he said, was its chief fault.

Mr. Mongli Slim (Tunisia) described the four-Power resolution as "a solemn appeal."

Mr. Jose Correa (Ecuador) observed that UN could not ignore the aggravation of the present situation, and it should offer its services to the Great Powers to find once more the road to conciliation in the name of world peace.

Sir Claude Corea (Ceylon) hoped that the resolution, if adopted, would help towards a resumption of negotiations between the Big Powers.

Mr. A. Gromyko said he was aware that there were some bad judges in the Council, whose ideas of legitimate rules of law were similar to those of the aggressor himself. If these judges did not hand down a proper sentence, they would only be condemning themselves.

Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge (USA) welcomed the initiative taken in the four-Power resolution and added that this resolution gave the Council the opportunity to restore the situation to its proper perspective.

Replying to Mr. Gromyko, he denied Soviet allegation of aggression and said that the Soviet Union had a vast net-work of spies throughout the world. USA had found in its embassies in many parts of the world well over 100 planted listening devices. He produced a wooden replica of the Great Seal of USA and announced that it had been a Soviet gift to the US Ambassador in Moscow and had hung on the wall of his office until it was found to contain a microphone. Thus, Soviet authorities had been able to listen in to the conversation in the US Ambassador's office as part of Soviet intelligence operations.

[In Washington, US State Department officials disclosed that it was removed from Moscow in 1952 and had been kept ever since as a reminder to US diplomats to be vigilant.]

Mr. Jerzy Michalowsky (Poland) said that he did not want to engage with Mr. Lodge in the "battle of the microphones" but could give the US delegate "some very interesting information about some of the microphones in our buildings in this country too."

Russian Resolution Rejected:

On May 26, the Security Council rejected Russia's charges of aggressive American spy flights.

Only Russia and Poland voted for the Soviet draft resolution. Tunisia and Ceylon abstained. The other members of the eleven-nation Council, including Britain and France, voted against it.

After the Council had adjourned for the day, Mr. A. Gromyko told correspondents that he would place the charge of US aggression before the UN General Assembly.

Four-Power Resolution Adopted:

The following day (May 27), the Security Council adopted the four-Power resolution, which urged the Big (four) Powers to resume as soon as possible their discussions on common problems, making use of United Nations.

The four-Power resolution, which was revised at the last minute, also appealed to all Governments to refrain from the use or threats of force in international relations.

Both Russia and Poland abstained on the final vote, while the other nine members voted in favour.

The Russian amendments seeking to re-introduce the question of spy flights were defeated by six votes to two. The positive votes were cast by Russia and Poland, while Ceylon, Ecuador and Tunisia abstained.

The adoption of the resolution wound up a week of debate.

Faced with a Soviet veto, Ceylon, Tunisia, Ecuador and Argentina, who had earlier tabled the resolution merely calling for the resumption of talks without taking any notice of the Russian complaint of aerial incursions, revised it to meet the Soviet Union part of the way.

The following is the text of the four-Power resolution as revised:

"The Security Council,

"Mindful of its responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security,

"Noting with regret that the hopes of the world for a successful meeting of the Heads of Governments of France, United Kingdom, United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics have not been fulfilled,

"Considering that these developments have caused great disappointment and concern in world public opinion,

"Considering also that the resulting situation may lead to an increase of international tensions likely to endanger peace and security,

"Being convinced of the necessity to make every effort to restore and strengthen international goodwill and confidence, based on the established principles of international law,

"Being especially aware of the mounting danger of the continuation of the armaments race,

"(1) Recommends to the Governments concerned to seek solutions of existing international problems by negotiation or other peaceful means as provided in the Charter of the United Nations;

"(2) Appeals to all member-Governments to refrain from the use or threats of force in their international relations, to respect each other's sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence and to refrain from any action which might increase tensions;

"(3) Requests the Governments concerned to continue their efforts to achieve a constructive solution of the question of general and complete disarmament under effective international control in accordance with resolution 1378 (XIV) of the General Assembly and the discontinuance of all nuclear weapons tests under an appropriate international control system as well as their negotiations on measures to prevent surprise attack, including technical measures, as recommended by the General Assembly;

"(4) Urges the Governments of France, United Kingdom, United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to resume discussions as soon as possible and to avail themselves of the assistance that the Security Council and other appropriate organs of United Nations may be able to render to this end."

(US Embassy, New Delhi, Tass, The New York Times and The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3370:AOA:A]

B. America Launches Two Satellites With One Rocket: America successfully launched from Cape Canaveral on June 22 two satellites from the same rocket. A Thor-Able-Star rocket carried the two satellites aloft, one riding piggy-back on the other.

Both the satellites went successfully into orbit. Springs ejected the two satellites simultaneously, but the satellites raced round the world separately, the smaller of the two just ahead of the other.

The larger satellite—the second Transit navigational satellite—would help navigation, while the piggy-back satellite would check solar radiation.

The Transit satellite was a 36-inch sphere weighing 223 lbs. It was an advanced version of the Transit satellite put into orbit on April 13.

The smaller sphere weighed 42 lbs. Both were intended to achieve a near circular orbit at an altitude of 500 miles.

The piggy-back satellite, 20 inches in diametre, was said to have been filled with instruments to measure solar radiation in the ionosphere.

The new Transit satellite was aimed to orbit at an inclination of 67.5 degrees from the Equator.

Most of Russia lies in this region.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3396:AOA:D]

C. Progress Of "Pioneer V": It was reported on June 21 that Britain's giant radio-telescope at Jordell Bank had communicated on that day across 20,000,000 miles with the US space satellite Pioneer V.

The satellite, launched in March, 1960, has been travelling round the Sun away from the Earth at 18,000 miles per hour.

A Jordell Bank spokesman said that the satellite showed no hesitation in responding to signals.

But, he added, the batteries of the satellite had deteriorated more rapidly than had been expected and they did not expect to track it for longer than another week, when it would be about 23,000,000 miles away.

The satellite's designers had estimated that radio signals from it could not be heard after it had gone 20,000,000 miles beyond the Earth.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3296:AOA:F]

D. US Tele-guided Missile Destroys Another Tele-guided Ballistic Missile: The US Army announced on June 10 that one of its tele-guided missiles had, for the first time, intercepted and destroyed another tele-guided ballistic missile in flight.

The intercepted missile was a Corporal rocket launched from a base in the White Sands Desert in New Mexico. An improved Mike Hercules missile, tele-guided and solid fuel-powered, intercepted and destroyed the Corporal. The Mike Hercules has a range of 120 kilometres and a ceiling of 45,720 metres.

The US Army also published a series of photos showing successively the launching of the Mike Hercules rocket, the Corporal flying

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

at high altitude, a shot showing the former chasing the latter and finally, the interception and explosion of the two rockets.

No indication was given of the date of the successful test.

However, according to informed sources, the test was held on June 3.

(The New York Times)

E. New International Tin Agreement: In New York, on June 24, a United Nations-sponsored Conference of tin-producing and consuming countries unanimously approved a new International Tin Agreement after month-long secret negotiations.

The new Agreement would be effective for five years from July 1, 1961, following ratification by that date of the countries adhering to it.

It left unchanged the current floor and ceiling prices of £730 and £880 a ton of tin.

But, while the size of the buffer-stock in the new Agreement was set at an equivalent of 25,000 tons, it stipulated that it should amount to the equivalent of 20,000 tons (initially 12,500 tons in tin metal and equivalent value of 7,500 tons in cash).

It also stipulated that the International Tin Council should not declare the need for a period of export control unless it found that at least 10,000 tons of tin was likely to be held in the buffer-stock at the beginning of that period.

If a control period was declared, permissible exports of the producing countries should be on the basis of these percentages: Belgian Congo and Ruanda-Urundi 9.25 per cent; Bolivia 18 per cent; Indonesia 19.50 per cent; Federation of Malaya 38 per cent; Federation of Nigeria 6.25 per cent; and Thailand 9 per cent.

These producing nations' percentages in the new Agreement were 9.05, 19.40, 18.90, 37.75, 6.10 and 8.80 respectively.

A minimum of 15 ratifications are required for the new Agreement to become effective, including at least nine consuming countries.

It will be held open for signature in London from September 1 to December 31, 1960.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3283:AOA:F]

F. British Bank Rate Raised: The Bank of England decided on June 22 to raise the Bank rate from 5 per cent to 6 per cent.

The Government ordered the banks to deposit 2 per cent of their assets by August 17 with the Bank of England. Until now, they had to deposit only 1 per cent.

This meant that a total of £140 million would be "frozen" and this would not be available for lending to the public and to business.

[This applies to English banks. For Scottish banks the rate of deposit was doubled from half per cent to 1 per cent.]

A Bank of England spokesman said: "It is felt desirable to maintain the restraint on bank lending.

"It is also felt desirable to introduce stronger restraining influences on the further growth of domestic demand through the more general effects of a rise in Bank rate."

The measures were said to be directed to the domestic situation, but were also related to the effect which the domestic situation had upon the external situation.

Business and financial experts had anticipated for weeks past that the Government might be planning to tighten the credit squeeze to curb too much spending and borrowing.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3186:AOA:N]

G. Communist Parties' Conference In Bucharest: Twelve communist parties of the Eastern bloc met in Bucharest in the last week of June and exchanged views on the international situation and drew their conclusions during the third Congress of the Rumanian Workers' Party.

Communist leaders from all the East European countries, including the Soviet Premier, Mr. N. Khruschev, and a representative of the People's Republic of China, Mr. Peng Chen, made speeches during the Congress.

The parties, including those of the Soviet Union and of the Chinese People's Republic, issued a joint communique declaring that international developments confirmed the Declaration they had signed in Moscow in November, 1957.

[The 1957 Declaration had affirmed the principle of peaceful co-existence, the possibility of avoiding new wars and the need for remaining vigilant against the danger of war.]

The parties were agreed that "this Declaration of 1957 was still entirely valid in the present international situation."

It said: "The communist parties consider the fight for peace as a task of primary importance. With all the forces dedicated to peace, they will do all that is within their power to avoid a new war."

It also discussed the transition from capitalism to socialism in different countries and listed the "enormous" successes of the socialist camp in the economic and cultural fields and in the strengthening of the communist regimes and Governments in the Eastern countries.

It added: "The socialist camp is at the peak of its strength. It is having an ever-increasing influence on the development of all humanity.

"The participants at the Congress (of the Rumanian Party) declare that the communist parties and workers will re-inforce in the future, as in the past, the cohesion of the countries of the world socialist system and that they will safeguard their unity as the apple of their eyes in the fight for peace and security for all people and for the triumph of the great work of Marxism-Leninism."

The communique was signed by Albania, Bulgaria, Hungary, North Viet-Nam, East Germany, the Chinese People's Republic, North Korea, Mongolia, Poland, Rumania, Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia.

It confirmed that a 'summit' conference of Communist States was held as a parallel to the Rumanian Communist Party Congress at which Mr. N. Khruschev succeeded in getting his Chinese ally to admit that that policy of peaceful co-existence had produced positive results.

In the joint communique, both USSR and China recognized that it was possible to avoid new wars in our time (a point not accepted until now by the Chinese) and admitted that it was possible for the working class to "have the socialist revolution triumph by peaceful means."

On this point, the Chinese delegate scored a point by having Moscow recognize henceforth that outside peaceful roads for the socialist revolution, other means remain available, contrary to the statements by Mr. Khruschev at Bucharest, holding that a revolution could take place by social action alone.

They also re-affirmed that they held to principles contained in the Declaration signed in Moscow in November, 1957, a document constituting a form of "Charter of the International Communist Movement".

(Tass and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 1762:CHI:A]

H. International Conference On Safety Of Life At Sea: Provisions on the use of radar, safety of nuclear-powered vessels and modern types of life-saving equipment were contained in a new Convention produced by the International Conference on Safety of Life at Sea which closed in London on June 17.

The Conference (which opened on May 17) was called to review and revise the existing Convention and collision regulations which date from 1948, the year of the last Conference.

The President of the Conference, Sir Gilmour Jenkins (who was also head of the United Kingdom delegation), said in his closing speech on June 17 that the Conference had produced agreements of which all could be proud. He hoped that they would be universally adopted and endure for many years.

The new Convention, he said, took full account of the lessons which experience had taught them and the scientific and technical advances which had been made in the last 12 years.

The collision regulations had been wisely left much as they were, but useful guidance about the use of radar had been added.

In addition to the Convention and collision regulation, the Conference adopted 56 other recommendations on subjects directly connected with maritime safety.

About half of these recommendations involved the Inter-governmental Maritime Consultative Organization (IMCO) which organized the Conference in co-operation with the United Kingdom.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3113:AOA:F]

I. Galaxies In Collision—Observations By US Scientist: An American astronomer, Dr. Rudolph Minkowski, told the Astronomical Society of the Pacific at Eugene (Oregon) on June 13 that, using the giant telescope at Palomar Mountain, he had observed the flight of an astronomical body at about 90,000 miles a second.

[It was stated that Dr. Minkowski's findings would allow scientists to test theories about the structure of the universe. The telescope enabled the reaching of 36,000 trillion (36,000,000,000,000,000,000,000) miles into space. This made the detection of two galaxies in collision possible.]

Dr. Minkowski estimated that the collision took place about 6,000,000,000 light years away. The galaxies were represented by a speck of light moving away from the Earth at about 90,000 miles a second.

This information, he added, might help in determining whether the Universe was born with a big bang and had been ageing ever since, or whether it was constantly renewing itself and had no beginning or end.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3285:AOA:R]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10 Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95|-; Foreign Rs. 115|- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

July 30—August 5, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 31

AFGHANISTAN

A. Barter Agreement With Iran: A Barter Agreement between Afghanistan and Iran was announced on June 26.

Under the Agreement, Iranian textiles, including velvets, would go to Afghanistan, and Iran would undertake to tranship and sell Afghan dried fruit overseas.

However, at present, it was said, there were no plans for a general Trade and Cultural Agreement between the two countries.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 3251:AFG:A]

B. Automobile Repair Works Set Up With Russian Aid: The official opening of the Jangalak Automobile Repair Works near Kabul took place on July 2.

The ceremony was attended by King Zahir Shah, the Minister of Automobile Transport and Highways of Soviet Russia, Mr. F. V. Kalabukhov, the Prime Minister of Afghanistan, Sardar Mohammed Daud Khan, and other Afghan dignitaries.

King Zahir Shah thanked the Soviet specialists who had helped to build the Works and said that the Works featured prominently in the Second Five-Year Plan of the country's development and would train Afghan specialists.

The Afghan Minister for Mining and Industry, Mr. Mohammed Yusuf, also thanked the Soviet Union for the help it had rendered in building the Works. He described the Works as an important industrial undertaking.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3139:AFG:A]

BURMA

A. First Session Of Joint Boundary Committee: The Chinese-Burmese Joint Boundary Committee, constituted in accordance with the Agreement between the Government of the People's Republic of China and the Government of the Union of Burma on the Question of Boundary between the two countries held its first session from June 27 to July 5 in Rangoon.

It was inaugurated by the Foreign Minister of Burma, Mr. Sao Hkun Hkio.

A friendly and cordial atmosphere was stated to have prevailed throughout the session and the consultations were conducted in a spirit of co-operation and mutual understanding.

As a result, it was said, the Committee reached unanimous agreement on the following aspects of its work: (1) Working procedure; (2) Specific tasks for the Committee in accordance with the Agreement; and (3) Organization and despatch of the joint survey teams and the joint investigation team.

It was agreed that these teams should begin their field operations in July, 1960.

The Committee agreed to hold its second session in Peking in the fourth week of July.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3151:CHI:A]

B. Dam In Kayah State: Work has begun on the construction of a reservoir to hold the waters of the Mese Chaung in Kayah State, close to the Thai border, and to utilize them for irrigation purposes.

The project, estimated to cost K600,000, will benefit 5,000 acres of land. It will be completed by the end of 1961.

Simultaneously, work is also in progress on the Ngwelaung Canal, about nine miles from the Kayah State capital of Loikaw. It will cost K16,00,000.

Shortage of water is the most serious problem in Kayah State where rainfall is scanty.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 1946:BUR:B]

CAMBODIA

A. "Observer" Interview With Prince Norodom Sihanouk: The Observer of London published on July 3 an interview with the Cambodian Head of State, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, in which Prince Norodom expressed the view that Cambodia might accept arms from China and the Soviet Union unless the United States revised its policy in South-East Asia.

It said that Prince Norodom reproached USA for failing to prevent Thailand and South Viet-Nam from putting pressure on Cambodia.

He said that USA was excessively arming those two countries and was failing to take steps against "certain American elements" who were "actively aiding the Cambodian rebels with the goal of overthrowing the present regime."

It quoted him as saying: "We wish to remain strictly neutral and we have no aggressive designs against anybody. But, if by the end of the year, the United States does not modify its attitude, we may once again be forced to compromise our neutrality—but this time by turning to the Socialist camp for our arms.

"Our pilots may be trained on MIGs in Russia and our artillery may come from China.

"The Chinese leaders have been offering to equip our armed forces since my visit to Peking in 1958 and I am also sure that the Soviet Union would respond quickly to any appeal from us.

"I have no illusions about the communist bloc, but politics and not sentiments must prevail. One must consult national interests first."

He noted that Mr. Chou En-lai, during his visit to Pnom Penh in May, 1960, had suggested that their two countries sign a Friendship Treaty.

In a telegram published by The Daily Mail (London) on July 18, Prince Norodom said that his Government would negotiate a "Military Aid Agreement with our Chinese and Soviet friends only when we have exhausted all possibilities with the Americans."

He added: "My country is threatened first and foremost by the intrigues of traitors calling themselves 'free Cambodians'. These traitors are few in number, but they enjoy continued support from our neighbours, Thailand and particularly South Viet-Nam, and operate from their territory."

Comparative Military Strength:

This was the first time that Prince Norodom had bluntly threatened one Power bloc in such a manner.

The reasons were explained in an editorial article in Neak Cheat Niyum, a newspaper virtually directed by Prince Norodom.

This paper disclosed that the Cambodian Government was alarmed by the disproportion between the country's armed forces and those of the neighbouring States of Thailand, South Viet-Nam and Laos.

Compared with Cambodia's National Army of 28,000 men, Thailand has 101,000, Viet-Nam (RVN) 158,000 and Laos 30,000.

It said: "He regards these armies as a potential threat to Cambodia, because the Governments of these countries have taken up a hostile attitude to Cambodia's policy of neutralism. He believes that Cambodia's small army, equipped with weapons virtually unusable for military operations worthy of the name would not be able to resist an attack.

"Under its current Military Aid Agreement with the United States, Cambodia is bound not to accept arms from any other Power, especially not from the communist bloc. However, the Cambodian Government now declares that if the United States refuses to give us military aid sufficient to form a barrier to the territorial ambitions of our neighbours...we shall inform the American Government of our intention to accept modern arms from other Great Powers".

(The Nation, Rangoon and The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3335:CHI:A]

B. Correction: On page 3335, under Cambodia, it was stated that a State banquet was given in honour of Mr. Chou En-lai by Prince Norodom Sihanouk on May 5. This was not correct. The banquet was given by the Council of Regency. The banquet at which Prince Norodom presided was held on May 6 and it was given by the Government. Besides, Prince Norodom's observations on a rapprochement among the Big Powers was not made at this banquet but in his welcome speech at the airport. The error is regretted. Editor—AR.

CHINA

A. Chinese-African People's Friendship Association: The establishment of an organization called the Chinese-African People's Friendship Association was announced in Peking on April 12.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Vice-President of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions, Mr. Liu Changsheng, is the President of the Association. Its Executive Council consists of over 130 members representing various circles in China.

The purpose of the Association, as laid down in its rules, "is to back the just struggle of the African people against imperialism and colonialism and foster friendly relations and economic and cultural exchanges between the Chinese and African peoples."

The Association was sponsored by 17 public bodies, including the All-China Federation of Trade Unions, the All-China Youth Federation, the National Women's Federation, the China Peace Committee, the Chinese Committee for Afro-Asian Solidarity, the Chinese People's Association for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries, the China Council for the Promotion of International Trade, the All-China Federation of Literary and Art Circles and the China Islamic Association.

In another move towards strengthening relations with the newly-independent African countries, it was announced in Peking on April 11 that the Chairman of the People's Republic, Mr. Liu Shao-chi, had invited the President of the Republic of Guinea, Mr. Sekou Toure, to visit China and that Mr. Toure had accepted the invitation.

China's first Ambassador to Guinea, Mr. Ko Hua, presented his credentials to President Sekou Toure in Conakry on April 11.

After the ceremony, Mr. Ko Hua declared that China and Guinea were linked in "profound friendship in their common struggle against imperialism and colonialism and that with the attainment of independence and liberation, friendly co-operation between them has grown greatly."

Mass Rally In Peking:

On July 3, a mass rally was held in Peking to celebrate the independence of the Cameroons, the Federation of Mali, Togo, Malagasy, the Congo and Somali and the founding of the Republic of Ghana.

In his opening speech, Mr. Liu Changsheng said: "The securing of independence by the African countries is a brilliant victory of the African people who have waged unremitting and prolonged struggles against imperialism and colonialism. It shows that the colonial system will certainly be smashed by the vigorous national independence movement."

He said: "All the schemes of imperialism to undermine the national independence movement in Africa are doomed to failure so long as the African people strengthen their unity and persist in their struggle. No force on earth can prevent the African people from marching forward to full liberation."

The Chairman of the Chinese Committee for Afro-Asian Solidarity, Mr. Liao Cheng-chih, condemned what he called "US imperialism for infiltrating into Africa under the cloak of sympathy for the African people's independence and sweet talk of friendship and mutual benefit" and said:

"US imperialism has set up military bases on many important strategic parts of Africa and is plundering the African peoples' strategical resources, attempting to take the place of the old British, French, Belgian and Portuguese colonialism. Recently, US imperialism has gone further in plotting to set up rocket bases in Zanzibar in the guise of a so-called tracking station for Project Mercury for the purpose of scientific research. It is also trying to turn east and middle Africa into bases for H-bombers.

"These facts show US imperialism as not only enemy No. 1 of the people of Asia and Latin America but also as the most vicious and dangerous enemy of the national independence movements in Africa. Therefore, to win national liberation, the African people have not only to continue their struggle against the old brand of colonialism to gain complete freedom from their control but also redouble their vigilance against the US imperialist intrigues and oppose and prevent USA from imposing a new colonial yoke on them."

The rally ended with performances by Chinese artists on anti-US imperialism theme.

Relations With Ghana:

It was officially announced in Peking and Accra on July 1 that China and Ghana had agreed to establish diplomatic relations and exchange ambassadors.

The President of the Republic of Ghana, Dr. Kwame Nkrumah, received on July 2 the Chinese Ambassador to Guinea, Mr. Ko Hua, who was attending the celebrations connected with the inauguration of the Republic in Accra.

Mr. Ko Hua handed to Dr. Nkrumah messages of congratulations from Mr. Liu Shao-chi, Mr. Chou En-lai and Madame Soong Ching-ling.

Peking newspapers greeted the establishment of diplomatic relations between Ghana and China as a sign "that a new epoch has dawned in the relations between China and Africa."

The Peking People's Daily said that China's establishment of friendly and co-operative relations with African countries reflected the decline of "Western colonial influence in Asia and Africa."

It added: "It is the common desire of the people of China and of African countries that relations of friendly co-operation should be strengthened between China and Ghana and other African countries."

Another daily, Ta Kung Pao, said that "with the establishment of formal relations, the friendly co-operation between China and Ghana will develop still further."

On July 6, it was announced in Accra that Dr. Nkrumah had accepted an invitation to visit China, but the date had not been fixed.

(Peking Review and China Today)

[Prev. ref. 2959:CHI:A]

B. Algerian Delegation's Visit: A delegation of the "Provisional Government of the Republic of Algeria" paid a visit to China from April 30 to May 3, from May 7 to 9 and from May 13 to 20 at the invitation of the Government of China.

The delegation was headed by the Vice-Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Krim Belkacem. It was received by the Chairman of the Chinese Communist Party, Mr. Mao Tse-tung, and the Chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, Marshal Chu Teh, and had talks with Chinese Government leaders headed by the Prime Minister, Mr. Chou En-lai.

A joint communique signed on May 19 by Mr. Belkacem and the Vice-Premier, Marshal Chen Yi, noted Chinese support to the Algerian struggle for freedom and the common hostility of both sides to imperialism.

The communique said: "During the talks, the two parties held sincere and friendly discussions on the current international situation in Asia and Africa, in particular, the struggle of Algeria and the question of further developing friendly co-operation between China and Algeria, and identical views were reached by them with satisfaction on the subjects discussed.

"The two parties noted with pleasure that the storm of national liberation struggles was violently sweeping over the broad expanse of Asia, Africa and Latin America. Since the Bandung Conference, the solidarity movement of the Asian and African peoples, in their struggles against imperialism and colonialism, has undergone an extremely rapid and great development. The Afro-Asian Solidarity Conference, held in Conakry in April, 1960, issued a loud and militant clarion call for the Asian and African peoples to thoroughly eradicate imperialism and colonialism, and propelled the Asian, African and Latin American peoples to form a broad anti-imperialist united front.

"The two parties were deeply convinced that with the peoples who love peace, justice and democratic freedoms becoming united and persisting in their struggle, the days of imperialism are surely numbered. They solemnly pledged that the Chinese and Algerian peoples would unfailingly stand by the peoples of Asia, Africa and Latin America engaged in just struggles to win and safeguard their national independence and democratic freedoms. They considered the new Security Treaty signed between Japan and the United States to be a military Treaty seriously menacing Asian peace, which should be opposed. They sternly condemned the policy and atrocities of racial discrimination carried out by the Government of the Union of South Africa and declared their support for the South African people's just struggle to safeguard their fundamental human rights.

"During the talks, the Government of the People's Republic of China expressed stern opposition to and condemnation of the colonial war and aggressive crimes perpetrated against the Algerian people by the French imperialists with the support of the US imperialists. The Chinese Government re-iterated its firm support for the Algerian people's just struggle to attain national independence. The Chinese Government is of the firm conviction that the heroic Algerian people, by persisting in their struggle with the support of the peace-loving people of the whole world, will surely be able to triumph over imperialism and colonialism and win final victory in their national liberation struggle."

The Algerian delegation interrupted its Chinese tour to visit North Korea and the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam (North) where they were accorded a very warm welcome.

Seeing the delegation off at Peking airport on May 20, the Chinese Vice-Premier, Mr. Ho Lung, said: "The future certainly belongs to the Algerian people."

Mr. Belkacem said: "Like the Chinese people, we shall bury for ever the monster of colonialism and realize happiness for our people."

(Peking Review)

[Prev. ref. 2440:CHI:C]

C. Trade And Payments Agreement With Iraq: A Sino-Iraqi Trade and Payments Agreement for 1960-61 was signed in Peking on May 25.

On the same day, the Iraqi Government delegation led by the Minister of Commerce, Mr. Abdul Latif Al-Shawaaf, which had come to negotiate the Agreement, was received by the Premier, Mr. Chou En-lai.

A joint communique issued afterwards said that according to the list of goods attached to the Trade Agreement, China would supply Iraq with cotton cloth, silk, rolled steel, machinery and various consumer goods and Iraq would send China dates, cotton, hides, crude oil, petroleum products and cement.

It declared that the signing of the Agreement signified the consolidation and development of Sino-Iraqi trade and the growth of friendship between the two Governments and peoples.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Earlier, the two countries signed in Peking the 1960 Executive Plan of the Sino-Iraqi Cultural Co-operation Agreement.

(Peking Review)

[Prev. ref. 2463:CHI:B]

D. Madame Soong Ching-ling On Co-existence: Peking newspapers carried an authoritative article written by the Vice-Chairman of the People's Republic and a widow of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, Madame Soong Ching-ling, on June 27 declaring China's willingness to co-exist peacefully with anyone, "even imperialism," and re-stating her policy of friendship with the Soviet Union.

The article did not refer directly to recent reports of Soviet-Chinese differences on whether a communist-capitalist war was inevitable, but dismissed as "simply a lie" the efforts of the "trained seals" of the imperialist Press to depict China as unwilling to co-exist peacefully.

It said: "China is willing to co-exist peacefully with anyone, even imperialism. In fact, we have to co-exist with it. Imperialism exists as an objective reality. Socialist States also exist as objective realities.

"But, while we want to co-exist peacefully with imperialism, this does not mean that we will be submissive to it. We will not allow US imperialism to rob us of our own territory.

"History and experience tell us that as long as imperialism has a breath in it, it will breathe that breath with the thought of exploiting others, of using force and violence to accomplish its end of dominating others.

"This means that if co-existence with imperialism is to be peaceful, it will come about only because the peoples maintain a high degree of vigilance against the machinations of the imperialists, maintain a high degree of militancy and struggle and demonstratively show them that we will not allow them to run amuck.

"We stand shoulder to shoulder with the Soviet Union and the other members of the socialist camp. Our friendship is eternal. This is our policy today; it will always be our policy.

"China threatens absolutely no one.

"It is astounding that the Chinese peoples' determination to liberate our territory of Taiwan (Formosa) and the other islands should cause surprise and uneasiness among some circles of the West.

"We must say to such people: friends, look not at China for the source of the tense situation in the Far East. We threaten absolutely no one. Look to United States imperialism which openly commits aggression against China and prepares even larger aggression.

"If you (USA) want to liquidate international tensions, if you (USA) want to uphold justice and protect the peace of the world, join in the peoples' struggle to liquidate imperialism."

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3352:CHI:C]

INDIA

SUMMARY: Dr. Rajendra Prasad's Visit To USSR; Mr. A. Z. Phizo In London; Canada-India Atomic Reactor Becomes "Critical"; Two Indians Captured And Released By Chinese On Ladakh Border; Two Central Loans; Export Earnings During 1959-60; Maharashtra Budget.

A. Dr. Rajendra Prasad's Visit To USSR: The President of India, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, left New Delhi on June 20 on a visit to the Soviet Union at the invitation of the Soviet Government.

The Railway Minister, Mr. Jagjivan Ram, accompanied him as Minister-in-Waiting.

In a speech at the Moscow airport, Dr. Rajendra Prasad underlined the need to preserve world peace and said that without world peace, the striking progress achieved by man everywhere would be lost, perhaps for ever.

Welcoming Dr. Rajendra Prasad, the Soviet President, Dr. L. Brezhnev, said that the visit would lead to further friendship between India and the Soviet Union.

Luncheon By Presidium:

At a luncheon given in his honour in Moscow by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of USSR on June 21, Dr. Rajendra Prasad said that a special responsibility rested on great countries like the Soviet Union to help in preserving the world from war and destruction.

He referred also to Indo-Soviet collaboration in the cultural and atomic fields, particularly in the task of maintenance of world peace, and called for efforts for removing the fear of war.

He said: "We have received the generous help of your Government as of many other friendly Governments. The modern steel plant at Bhilai, standing in the midst of a countryside which had not changed for centuries, the vast agricultural farm at Suratgarh, the huge machine-building factory which will shortly go up at Ranchi, the many oil-wells which are sprouting on the Western shores of India—these are a few of the projects in which we have had your ready assistance. I am happy to think that your experience and the skill of your experts will assist us in the building of the new India on which we have embarked.

"Finally, there is the growing collaboration between the leaders of your country and mine in the field of international affairs, in United Nations and elsewhere, and above all in the task of maintaining world peace."

Proposing the toast for fruitful Indo-Soviet friendship, the Soviet President, Dr. L. Brezhnev, cited Indo-Soviet friendship as a proof of the vitality of Lenin's principle of peaceful co-existence and expressed appreciation of India's support to the Soviet proposals for total disarmament.

Earlier in the day (June 21), Dr. Rajendra Prasad called on Dr. L. Brezhnev at the Kremlin and spent half-an-hour with him.

Also on June 21, Dr. Prasad laid a wreath on the Lenin-Stalin Mausoleum in Moscow's Red Square.

Later at night (June 21), he attended a performance of Tchaikovsky's ballet "Swan Lake" at the Bolshoi Theatre in Moscow.

The following day (June 22), Dr. Prasad visited the exhibition of economic achievements of USSR in Moscow.

"Bandung" Lunch:

Envoys of 19 countries which took part in the Bandung Conference in 1955 gave a luncheon in honour of Dr. Rajendra Prasad in Moscow on June 22.

Speaking on the occasion, Dr. Prasad said that the question before the independent countries of Asia and Africa was one of consolidating their freedom by giving it a broad economic base. "In this there is considerable room for mutual co-operation and assistance among the Asian-African countries themselves."

He added: "Many countries have been unstinted in their assistance. Standing before our Soviet guests this evening, I must express in particular our appreciation of the generous assistance that we in Asia and Africa have received from the Soviet Union. We are grateful for this to the Soviet Government and to the Soviet leaders.

"Let us hope that the friendship and goodwill generated at Bandung will grow stronger and stronger so that in our day-to-day working and actual dealings with one another and with other nations, particularly the Bandung countries, all of us shall act in a manner calculated to foster and strengthen that spirit."

[The Soviet news agency Tass reported that except for the Pakistan Ambassador, the lunch was attended by the envoys of the 19 other Bandung nations.]

Speaking after Dr. Rajendra Prasad, the Soviet President, Dr. L. Brezhnev, said: "The spirit of Bandung cannot be buried, just as the people's will for national freedom cannot be destroyed."

In Leningrad:

Dr. Rajendra Prasad and party arrived in Leningrad on June 23. He was warmly welcomed by large crowds lining the main road.

On June 24, the Leningrad Supreme Soviet gave a dinner in honour of Dr. Prasad.

Speaking at the dinner, the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Leningrad Supreme Soviet, Mr. Nikolai Smirnov, said that the friendship between the people of the Soviet Union and India was growing stronger every day.

Replying, Dr. Rajendra Prasad said, he was exceedingly happy to see that the Leningrad Councillors were busy building the new Russia.

Dr. Prasad spent June 23 sightseeing in Leningrad.

He visited the Smolny Palace from where Lenin organized the 1917 Revolution.

He also visited the Assembly Hall where Soviet power was proclaimed after the Revolution.

On the morning of June 24, Dr. Prasad visited the Oriental Institute in Leningrad, where research is being done in a number of eastern languages. These languages include Sanskrit, Hindi, Punjabi, Tamil, Telugu and Marathi.

Later, he drove to Patrodverets, the former residence of the Russian Tsars, where now thousands of people spend their summer vacation.

He also visited the Hermitage Museum where he saw ancient gold ornaments, paintings, sculptures and other objects of art housed in more than 300 rooms.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He presented the Leningrad Institute of Oriental Studies with an eight-volume biography of Mahatma Gandhi.

In Kiev:

From Leningrad, Dr. Prasad arrived in Kiev on June 25.

On June 26, he visited the Druzhba (friendship) Collective Farm, 55 kilometres from Kiev, where he inspected the animal breeding farm and the fields and talked with members of the collective farm.

At Sochi:

Thousands of people gave a tumultuous welcome to Dr. Rajendra Prasad on June 27 when he arrived at Sochi, on the Caucasian Black Sea coast, from Kiev.

People lining both sides of the 25-mile route from the Adler airport to Sochi showered bouquets and petals on Dr. Prasad and his party.

At the airport, Dr. Prasad said that the warm welcome he had received in Sochi was evidence of the friendship and kind sentiments of the people of the Soviet Union for India.

He added: "I shall carry home with me this love for my people. I should like to assure you that I am learning much about your country".

At a banquet given in his honour on June 26 by the Presidium of the Ukraine Supreme Soviet, Dr. Prasad supported the Soviet Union's latest disarmament proposals.

Dr. Rajendra Prasad rounded off his visit to Sochi on June 28 with the planting of a sapling of magnolia in the Valley of Friendship at the local Riviera.

He had a two-hour cruise on the Black Sea along the Caucasian coast in a naval cutter on the morning of June 28. Later, he visited the Matista Sulphur Springs Sanatorium and the Sanatorium for Metallurgical Workers.

He told newsmen: "I am much pleased with my acquaintance with Sochi. The city has greatly impressed me. This is a beautiful spot for rest."

Back In Moscow:

Dr. Rajendra Prasad arrived back in Moscow from Sochi on June 29.

On the same day (June 29), he called on the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, when Mr. Khruschev was understood to have personally explained to Dr. Prasad Russia's disarmament proposals announced on June 2.

Mr. Khruschev was understood to have expressed his appreciation of India's stand, particularly Mr. Nehru's latest statement in New Delhi in which he supported the Soviet disarmament proposals.

Speaking at a reception given by Dr. Rajendra Prasad in Moscow on June 29, the Soviet President, Dr. L. Brezhnev said: "The cordiality and sincerity which always attend our meetings are evidence of the sound foundations of the growing friendship and expanding all-round co-operation between our two countries."

Dr. Rajendra Prasad and Dr. Brezhnev toasted each other in lemonade and orange juice. [These were the only drinks provided.]

Honour By Moscow University:

On June 30, Moscow University conferred on Dr. Rajendra Prasad the honorary degree of Doctor of Historical Sciences.

At the function, Dr. Prasad was welcomed by Academician Ivan Petrotsky, Rector of the University, who said that Dr. Prasad's research into the history of the national liberation movement in India had won the respect of Soviet scholars.

Dr. Prasad thanked the Council of the University for the honour done him and said: "This is a great honour to me. It is well known that Moscow University has made a great contribution to culture and science. That is why I am particularly happy to be able to be here and to learn about its work and also make your personal acquaintance.

"I am taking advantage of this opportunity to express my recognition of the great contribution Soviet scientists have made to mastering the universe."

On Moscow Television:

Dr. Rajendra Prasad said on Moscow television on June 30 that he had been moved by the friendliness and courtesy of the Soviet people.

He said: "I shall convey your greetings to my people. I am confident that the people of India will be happy to learn what material progress you have made in the short period of just over 40 years. You are courageous in war and you are courageous now in the struggle for peace."

Banquet And Receptions:

Speaking at a banquet given in his honour in Moscow on June 30, Dr. Rajendra Prasad emphasized the growing collaboration between India and the Soviet Union in international affairs, in United Nations and elsewhere and, above all, in the task of maintaining world peace and spoke of the growing and close understanding between India and the Soviet Union as a result of exchange of visits by the leaders of the two countries.

He also acknowledged the generous help which India was receiving from the Soviet Union in the task of industrialization which India had embarked upon.

Dr. L. Brezhnev, who spoke before Dr. Prasad, said that the peoples of the Soviet Union and India were linked by traditional friendship which went back many centuries.

That friendship had particularly developed during the last few years as a result of Mr. Nehru's visit to the Soviet Union and Mr. Khruschev's visit to India. The Soviet Union would continue to help India economically because it was the policy of the Soviet Union to help countries made economically backward by the shackles of colonial rule.

Speaking at the reception in his honour at the Kremlin earlier on June 30, Dr. Prasad said: "I came as a stranger to your country. But you and your people have welcomed me as a real friend, and as I am about to leave, I feel sad, for parting with a friend is always sad."

He described his impressions about the visit to the Soviet Union as "overwhelming."

He said: "The Soviet Union and India have come very close to each other in recent years. We have received very substantial assistance from the Soviet Government during the past five years. This has enabled us to carry out and plan a number of industrial and agricultural projects."

He thanked the Soviet Government for the "generous, unconditional and selfless assistance" rendered to India.

He described the Head of the Soviet Government, Mr. N. Khruschev, as a firm believer in the policy of co-existence and said: "He does not believe that war is inevitable, nor do we. This sharing of common ideals provides a bond between our two countries which will increase in the years to come."

Earlier, in the evening (June 30), over 2,000 Muscovites, including leaders of the Soviet Government and the Communist Party, attended a reception held by the Soviet-Indian Society for Cultural Relations in the Kremlin in honour of Dr. Prasad.

Departure From Moscow:

Moscow gave a warm send-off to Dr. Rajendra Prasad on the morning of July 1, as he left for Stalinabad, capital of Soviet Tajikistan.

He was seen off by the Soviet President, Dr. L. Brezhnev, and other members of the Soviet Government.

In a farewell speech, Dr. Brezhnev said that the visit of Dr. Prasad and his meetings with Soviet people would, beyond doubt, contribute to still closer friendship between the two peace-loving nations and to rally their efforts for peace and peaceful co-existence.

Replying, Dr. Prasad thanked the Soviet people for the warm welcome he had been accorded during his tour of the Soviet Union.

He said: "I have seen your accomplishments with my own eyes. I was moved by the warm welcome I was given everywhere I went."

Dr. Rajendra Prasad arrived in Stalinabad on July 1.

From Stalinabad he went to Tashkent, capital of Uzbekistan.

A banquet was given in honour of Dr. Rajendra Prasad by the Presidium of Uzbekistan on July 4.

In a speech on the occasion, he said he had no doubt that the Soviet Government would extend its sympathy and help in ample measure to India in the execution of her Third Five-Year Plan.

Before leaving for India, Dr. Prasad met newsmen in Tashkent on July 5.

He told the newsmen: "The one major lesson that the people of India should learn from the Soviet people is to be disciplined and hard-working.

"The Indian people should learn whatever was good from the Soviet people and put it to practice within their own country—and the two things which I would commend to the Indian people in this connexion are the Soviet examples of discipline and hard work."

Farewell Speech At Tashkent:

Speaking at Tashkent airport before Dr. Prasad's departure for home, Madame Yadgar Nasriddinova, President of the Presidium of the Uzbek Supreme Soviet said that Dr. Prasad's visit to the Soviet Union had greatly impressed the Soviet people.

She described the visit as "a joyous and unforgettable event, a real friendship festival."

She added: "Friendship between our two countries rests on the Leninist principle of peaceful co-existence between States with different systems, and we are happy that these contacts are successfully developing and growing to the benefit of world peace."

In his farewell speech at the airport, Dr. Prasad said: "I am returning to India richer in experience and with a clearer idea of your achievements and the great tasks for whose fulfilment the Soviet people are working.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"During the past two weeks, I was moved by the repeated manifestations of your friendly sentiments towards my country and the warm welcome you gave me and my party.

"I have witnessed with surprise and admiration your efforts to unite in your society peoples with different social, historical and ethnic backgrounds. At the same time, you stint no effort to preserve everything good and distinctive in the arts and cultures of different nationalities. With great attention and interests, I listened to a report that tuition in the Central Asian Republics is conducted in several languages.

"I am sure that we can use to advantage your experience in the practical solution of the problem which confronts India as well."

He emphasized that Soviet-Indian relations were an eloquent proof of the possibility of co-operation between countries with differing social and ideological systems.

He returned to New Delhi on July 5.

In a special message to the Indian people on his impressions of Russia on July 7, Dr. Prasad said that India could learn many things from the Soviet Union, while maintaining its own political system and independent personality.

Dr. S. Radhakrishnan Discharged Functions Of President:

The Vice-President, Dr. S. Radhakrishnan, was sworn-in in New Delhi on June 20 to discharge the functions of the President of India during the fortnight Dr. Rajendra Prasad was away in the Soviet Union.

The appointment was understood to have been necessitated by what was described as "important State events during the next two weeks, requiring formal presidential assent."

It may be remarked that Dr. Rajendra Prasad has been abroad so far on five occasions since his swearing-in as President in 1950. But this was the first time that an acting appointment was made under Article 65 of the Constitution. [This Article provides among other things that the Vice-President will discharge the functions of the President during the latter's illness, absence or "any other cause."]

Article 65 also entitles the Vice-President, during such an appointment, to draw enhanced salary and allowances. But, Dr. Radhakrishnan who receives pay and allowances only as Chairman of the Rajya Sabha, did not accept any addition to his emoluments.

(Tass, PIB, New Delhi and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3175:INI:A]

B. Mr. A. Z. Phizo In London: The Naga rebel leader, Mr. A. Z. Phizo, arrived in London on June 11 from Switzerland. He travelled, according to Press despatches, on a forged passport, which he had purchased in the 'black market' in Manila. He had arrived in Switzerland by way of Pakistan.

It was stated that he was brought to London by the Rev. Michael Scott, a clergyman who has been championing the cause of Africans, particularly of South-West Africa.

In a statement circulated in London on June 19, Mr. Phizo said: "I have come to Britain to do what I can for my people in Nagaland. I hope it may be possible for a Fact-Finding Commission to be appointed to establish the truth about the condition of my people and their hopes for the future."

He said he did not want to prejudge the issue and was drawing up a statement to present to such a Commission.

The statement was signed "A. Z. Phizo, President, Naga National Council".

The Rev. Michael Scott's Part:

The Rev. Michael Scott's part in the affair was described in the following despatch to The Hindu, Madras, from London on June 21:

"The Rev. Michael Scott's part in the Phizo affair has again raised questions in London about the exact role of Christian missionaries in connexion with the Naga rebellion, and some observers are asking if it may not be time for a fact-finding inquiry into the subject.

"The Rev. Michael Scott's intervention took the form of sponsoring the letter which Mr. Phizo issued for publication in the London dailies. The address on the letter was 'Denison House, Vauxhall Bridge Road,'—the headquarters of the Africa Bureau run by the Rev. Michael Scott.

"He is also believed to have met Mr. Phizo on arrival at the London airport and spirited him away to a secret hide-out—which suggests that the two men had been in prior contact with each other.

"The Rev. Michael Scott is well known for his championship of racial equality in Africa, but his interest in the Naga rebellion is not clear. He made representations to Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit, the Indian High Commissioner, on June 17 urging some kind of a rapprochement between the Government of India and the Naga rebels. Whether he had any concrete proposals to put forward has not been disclosed, but a full account of the interview has been forwarded to the Government of India in New Delhi.

"The Phizo affair has also begun to arouse interest in British parliamentary circles, but there is evidently a good deal of ignorance about it, as implied in a remark by Mr. Marcus Lipton, a Labour MP, that Phizo is a 'British subject' and should not, therefore, be 'allowed to be gagged.'

"The identity of other Naga sympathizers is being revealed gradually. One of them, a Miss Ursula Bower, described as a writer, is reported to have travelled down from Scotland to meet Mr. Phizo. She is apparently not sure whether Mr. Phizo was an Allied or a Japanese agent during the War, but she professed to be 'horrified' by what Mr. Phizo had told her.

"In this way, a small agitation is building up in Britain in support of Mr. Phizo. One or two papers are already giving colourful accounts of his personality and making him out as a courageous fighter for national independence, a sort of hero who is in danger of instant execution if India is successful in obtaining his extradition."

Mr. Nehru's Views:

A reference to the Phizo affair was made by the Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, at a news conference in New Delhi on June 24 when he said that the Government of India had told the British Government that they did not propose, as at present advised, to ask for the repatriation of Mr. Phizo, but at the same time, the Government of India expected the British Government not to encourage anti-Indian activities by Mr. Phizo.

The British Government, he added, appreciated India's position in this matter. The Government of India had received a communication some days ago "more or less informing us of the fact (of Mr. Phizo's arrival in Britain) which we had known a little earlier."

When Mr. Nehru's attention was drawn to Mr. Phizo's demand for a Commission to investigate into conditions in the Naga Hills, he said: "I don't think anything about it. I ignore it completely. The whole idea is ridiculous."

Q: "Has Mr. Phizo any influence in the Naga Hills?"

Mr. Nehru: "I suppose he had some influence but, broadly speaking, it has been diminishing and considerable sections of the Nagas have been functioning under the Naga People's Convention. Probably, about 75 per cent of the Nagas are functioning under the Convention which is opposed to Mr. Phizo."

Q: "Is there any foreign Power behind the independence movement of Mr. Phizo?"

Mr. Nehru: "That I don't know. And if I knew, it would hardly be proper to say so."

Q: "Is the grant of asylum to Mr. Phizo in Britain a friendly act?"

Mr. Nehru: "The grant of asylum is the prerogative of any Government. But, here, it is not a question of granting asylum. A man has got in under false pretences. He has not asked for asylum. What attitude the British Government takes is another matter. The whole thing has been done in a hush-hush way—not by the British Government but by others."

Q: "In the representation made to Britain, has he (Mr. Phizo) not been described as a fugitive from Indian law?"

Mr. Nehru: "There have been warrants against him for very serious offences in the past. Subsequently, we proclaimed a general amnesty for offences committed previously. I don't know how that would apply to him, but anyhow, quite apart from strict legal interpretation, our broad policy in the Naga Hills has always been to treat the people with considerable leniency and to win them over. Naturally, where terroristic activities and sniping go on, armed forces come into use, but not with any idea to take revenge and all that. That broad policy applies to everybody, including Mr. Phizo, within certain limitations. We are not after reprisals. At the present moment, the position is this. Just before I went to Europe, the Naga People's Convention representatives wanted to come and see me about their proposals. I told them I was going to Europe. I suppose that towards the latter half of July, 1960, they may come and see me and I may discuss these matters with them. That has nothing to do with Mr. Phizo. I am talking about their proposals for the Naga area."

Q: "If Mr. Phizo comes to India, will his case be considered sympathetically by the Government of India?"

Mr. Nehru: "We always consider every case sympathetically. Sympathy does not mean looseness. We are not out to punish anybody, but every case has to be considered in relation to the circumstances."

The Rev. Michael Scott's Statement:

In a Press statement issued in London on July 5 the Rev. Michael Scott described the circumstances in which Mr. Phizo entered Britain and said that he had received a plea for help from Mr. Phizo's nephew, Dr. Vichazelhu Hiralu, a Public Health official in Chicago.

Dr. Hiralu wrote on May 7, he said, that his uncle, "with great difficulty, has now reached Zurich, Switzerland" and urged him (Rev. Scott) to visit Zurich to give advice and spiritual encouragement to the Naga leader.

The Rev. Scott's statement went on: "I eventually decided to go to Zurich to see him and find out if there was any way in which he could be helped to make his case known in a way which would help his people without being purely negative and destructive.

"Of the various possible alternatives, it seemed to me, the best was to invite him to come to England and to appeal here for political asylum and an opportunity to state his views and also to receive the medical attention which he appeared to need.

"Though there was said to be a substantial reward offered for his capture 'dead or

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

alive' I told him I thought he would do best to enter Britain in his own name and to tell the truth about his position when questioned by the British immigration authorities.

"I offered to accompany him myself and make a plea that he be allowed to land as a subject of the British Commonwealth. He agreed to do this and when he landed at London airport it was as Mr. A. Z. Phizo, President of the Naga National Council.

"After I had explained that he was seeking asylum, he handed over to the authorities a written statement to this effect."

At a news conference in London on July 9, the Rev. Michael Scott disclosed that Mr. Phizo was admitted into Britain on a more or less temporary basis.

The period, he added, was initially limited to two weeks, but the Home Office had agreed to extend it, apparently without fixing any definite time-limit, and in the meantime, efforts were being made to determine his exact citizenship status.

This question of personal status, according to Mr. Scott, was bound up with the larger question as to whether the Naga area is legally a part of the Indian Union, i.e. whether the transfer of that part of the former British Empire to the Indian Union was a valid act. Legal advice, he said, was being sought on this point.

A despatch from London said:

"Presumably, the object of these inquiries and consultations is to enable Mr. Phizo to contend that, if the Naga territory was not legally transferred to India, then he (Mr. Phizo) cannot be regarded as an Indian citizen. But, the Rev. Scott did not explain which court of law is competent to decide upon the constitutionality of the 1947 arrangements and who would refer the matter to that court.

"Nor is it easy to understand why the Rev. Scott refused to admit that Mr. Phizo is an Indian citizen. He kept insisting that he was a 'Commonwealth citizen', though it was pointed out to him that a Commonwealth citizen had to belong to some constituent part of the Commonwealth, and in Mr. Phizo's case it could not be any other than India. The only explanation seems to be a fear that if Mr. Phizo were to describe himself as an Indian citizen, it might be taken as an indirect admission that the Naga area was a part of the Indian Union.

"The attitude of the British Home Office also seems rather curious in the light of the Rev. Scott's statements who had said: 'Mr. Phizo did not enter Britain on a San Salvador passport or on an invalid or forged passport. He made a declaration on arrival that he was Mr. A. Z. Phizo, that he was President of the Naga National Council and that he was seeking political asylum in Britain for the time being.

"It would be surprising if the immigration authorities recognized any one as an undefined 'Commonwealth citizen', without reference to any particular country. It would be even more surprising if they had any doubts as to whether the Naga territory was a part of India. But, in neither case, as a Commonwealth citizen or as an Indian citizen, was there any need for Mr. Phizo to seek or be granted 'political asylum' in Britain; he would have been entitled to free entry and to stay as long as he wished. Why then did the British Home Office, first set a time-limit of two weeks and subsequently extend the period?

"If we assume, on the other hand, that the Immigration authorities did not recognize Mr. Phizo as being technically a Commonwealth or Indian citizen, other questions arise. The Rev. Scott denied that Mr. Phizo entered the country with a San Salvador passport or any other invalid or forged passport. But on his own admission he had a passport or some such document in his pocket. He did not look to see what it was but handed it over to Mr. Phizo on arrival. Moreover, Mr. Phizo, it appears, spent over two hours at the airport with the Immigration officials. The Rev. Scott was not with them and has no knowledge of the questions and answers which must have been exchanged. If, in fact, Mr. Phizo produced some invalid or forged travel documents, then, under British law, he might have been expected to be detained and tried in a court for illegal entry—but that has not happened either.

"The Rev. Scott convened the news conference on his own initiative, but he was unable or unwilling to throw any light on these and various other questions. Quite often he gave only evasive answers or referred the questioner to some body else.

"In his written statement, he declared that he had 'no regrets for inviting Mr. Phizo to come to Britain.' The statement also accused Mr. Nehru and Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon of either ignoring or being kept in ignorance of the situation which has been described in great detail in documents submitted to the Government of India some time ago.

"The main impression that the Rev. Scott left was that though he was not well-informed about the Naga problem—its background or its recent evolution—he was prepared to associate himself with Mr. Phizo's claims and allegations but regarded the Government of India's statements on the subject with deep scepticism.

"Although the Rev. Scott did not say so at the news conference, it is understood that Mr. Phizo left Pakistan because the Pakistan Government intimated to him that he had outstayed his welcome, and as far as is known, there has been no contact between him and the Pakistan High Commissioner in London. Nor has Mr. Phizo seen any British Ministers or MPs."

Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon's Views:

India's Defence Minister, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, said in London on June 27 that it was to be expected that the British Government, so far as its law permitted, would not allow British territory to be used for hostile propaganda against India any more than Britain would like Indian territory to be used against her.

Talking to Indian correspondents in London, Mr. Menon described as "absolutely false" Mr. Phizo's statement in which he had charged the Indian Government with sending punitive expeditions against "his people", the destruction of crops and criminal assault on Naga women by Indian troops.

Denying the atrocity stories, he said that the people who had suffered the most in the North-East Frontier Agency (N-EFA) were the Nagas themselves against whom a small group of hostiles had committed many acts of violence. The Indian Army had a proud record as a well-disciplined and well conducted force both in India and abroad.

He said that the Indian Government's policy in N-EFA, which was an integral part of India, would not be affected by what Mr. Phizo did or said in London. He emphasized that the Nagas were as much a part of India as any one else.

Again on July 5, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon said in London that Mr. Phizo had to flee India chiefly because he had been rejected by his own people.

He said that undue prominence had been given to Mr. Phizo and further publicity was neither deserved nor of service to India.

He expressed resentment at certain aspersions cast by Mr. Phizo on the Indian Army and said that Mr. Phizo's admission into Britain involved certain legal issues which called for clarification.

The explanations and statements so far issued by both the British authorities and Mr. Phizo's "patrons" in London had raised more questions than they had answered.

(The Hindu, Madras and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2226:INI:B]

C. Canada-India Atomic Reactor Goes Into Operation: The Canada-India Atomic Reactor, the largest in Asia, went into operation and reached 'criticality' for a beginning to be made in the study of nuclear techniques and research at the Atomic Energy Establishment at Trombay (near Bombay) at 5-36 a.m. on July 10.

The reactor has been built as a joint Indo-Canadian enterprise under the Colombo Plan at a cost of Rs. 10 crores.

About 2,750 gallons of heavy water was used to make the reactor go "critical" and maintain a sustaining chain reaction process.

Half the fuel element was made at Trombay from Indian uranium and the other half was contributed by Canada.

The responsibility for the start-up of the reactor was that of Canada.

The Manager, Reactor Commissioning of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., Mr. F. W. Gilbert, who was in over-all charge of the operation, and Mr. D. E. Tegart, who was immediately responsible for the start-up, told newsmen that the Canada-India Reactor was an extremely complicated one with a very large number of circuits, each with its control panel, instrumentation and safety devices.

Mr. Gilbert said that there were many ways of shutting down the Reactor and only one way for starting it. "Some people wondered how we would be able to start it at all. Now we have set it going". The maximum rated capacity of the Reactor was, however, 40,000 kw and that would be reached in three or four months after various circuits were tested and minor faults in instrumentation removed.

The three main functions of the Reactor were: (1) to develop fundamental research in physical, chemical, biological and metallurgical problems relating to atomic energy; (2) to train scientific personnel in nuclear techniques; and (3) to produce radio-active isotopes for medical therapy, agriculture and industry.

It would be one of the largest isotope producers in the world.

The Reactor is housed in a hermetically sealed dome-shaped steel shed fabricated from welded steel plates to prevent any escape of radio-activity.

Dr. H. J. Bhabha On Reactor:

The Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, Dr. H. J. Bhabha, said in Bombay on April 4 that the Canada-India Reactor at Trombay would be one of the most powerful radio-isotope producers in the world.

He added: "When this reactor, which has a maximum power of 40 megawatts, goes into operation we shall be in a position to export radio-isotopes after meeting our internal requirements."

Apsara, India's first reactor, was a much more valuable isotope-producer than one might have imagined. There were regions for isotope production of much higher neutron flux than were provided in the reactor BEPO at Harwell which had been the main source of radio-isotopes in Britain.

Apsara was operated for 15,000 kwh in 1956 (its first year), 157,000 kwh in the second year and 668,000 kwh in the third year. It produced a number of isotopes such as 0-32, 1-131, S-35, CR-51, AU-198 and CO-60. In order to meet the entire national requirements of some of the more widely used radio-isotopes, such as 0-32 and 1-131, round-the-clock operation of Apsara in three shifts had been introduced.

The Canada-India Reactor would produce approximately Rs. 45,00,000 worth of radio-cobalt a year, at a cost of Rs. 8 a curie for low activity cobalt and Rs. 28 a curie for high activity cobalt.

The Electronics Division of the Atomic Energy Establishment at Trombay was en-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

trusted with the distribution of radiation sources by the instrumentation programme. In 1959, the Division fabricated and distributed nearly 800 electronic instruments of 20 types valued at about Rs. 12,00,000. Foreign exchange worth Rs. 9,00,000 had been saved. The project had provided encouragement to the electronic industry and to country-wide application of atomic energy.

In order to ensure radiation safety on a country-wide basis, a Radiological Measurements Section had been set up.

He described the steps the Commission was taking to reduce the potential hazards arising from the use of radiation sources and said that there was a programme to keep records of radiation doses received by all radiation workers. A country-wide film badge service had been organized. The service covered all types of radiations, including fast and slow neutrons. Whenever doses were found to be excessive in any institution, the Commission conducted a radiological protection survey of the institution in order to investigate the causes leading to the over-exposure. Its advice, verbal as well as through reports, had invariably resulted in the improvement of working methods. This, in turn, had led to significant lowering of personnel exposure levels.

On a conservative estimate, the service would have to cater for about 10,000 persons in nearly 1,000 institutions. The number of persons availing of the radiation protection facilities had increased, although the facilities were offered only on the basis of voluntary requests.

(The Hindustan Times and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3077:INI:E]

D. Two Indians Captured And Released By Chinese On Ladakh Border: Peking Radio said on July 13 that two Indian frontier personnel, who were alleged to have crossed into what Peking claimed to be Chinese territory in the Ladakh region on July 2, had been released after confessions were "extorted" from them.

It added that this alleged frontier violation by Indians took place west of Spanggur "in the Pangong Lake area of western Tibet" while Mr. Nehru was "engaged in activities in areas near the Sino-Indian border."

However, it did not say when the captured Indian personnel and horses were released nor was the word "activities" in which Mr Nehru was supposed to have been engaged near the India-China frontier explained or qualified by any adjective.

It merely said that three Indian horses crossed into "Chinese territory" at 9 a.m. on July 2 and in the same evening at 7-30 Indian frontier personnel also "trespassed into Chinese territory" and they were released after they had "confessed" that "their surreptitious trespass was illegal and admitted their mistake in writing."

It said that the horses came from Chusul and that the Indian guards had also crossed into Chinese territory at the same point.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3117:INI:A]

E. Britain Offers £10,000,000 Loan: The British Minister of State for Commonwealth Relations, Mr. C. J. M. Alport, in a written reply in the House of Commons on June 30, said: "The United Kingdom has offered a loan of £10,000,000 to the Government of India, to be made under Section 3 of the Export Guarantees Act. The intention is that India should be able to draw on this loan to make payment for a broad range of her imports from the United Kingdom."

He added: "The loan is being offered in response to an approach by the Government of India to the United Kingdom for early assistance in meeting India's foreign exchange requirements for 1960-61—the final year of the Second Five-Year Plan.

"In addition, the United Kingdom will later join in consideration of India's need for assistance during the current year with the consortium (United States, Canada, Japan, and the Federal Republic of Germany, in addition to Britain) which met under the aegis of the International Bank to concert assistance to India in 1958 and 1959."

This new loan of £10,000,000 (Rs. 13.53 crores) was said to be in addition to previous measures since 1958 of general balance-of-payments help.

Like these previous loans, it was not tied to new projects. The earlier loans were £28,500,000 (Rs. 38 crores) in December, 1958 and £19,000,000 (Rs. 25.33 crores) in November, 1959, bringing the total of British aid of this kind to £57,500,000 (Rs. 76.67 crores) in two years.

In addition, the British Government lent £15,000,000 (Rs. 20 crores) specifically towards the cost of the Durgapur steel plant (1958) and £3,000,000 (Rs. 4 crores) towards the Assam Oil pipe-line (1959)—in each case supplementing private finance from the United Kingdom for these projects—making a grand total of £75,500,000 (Rs. 100.67 crores).

The most valuable aspect of the new loan was that it could be used quickly by India to pay for general imports from the United Kingdom.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2600:INI:A]

F. Indian Naval Air Squadron Commissioned In UK: The first Indian naval air squadron was commissioned at Brawdy (in Wales) in the presence of the Indian High Commissioner in the United Kingdom, Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit on July 7.

The squadron consists of eight of the latest Sea Hawk jet aircraft.

The commissioning warrant for the squadron (called 300 Squadron) was read by the Squadron Commander, Lieut.-Commander B. D. Law of the Indian Navy.

Mrs. Pandit said that the ceremony was an important landmark in India's naval aviation progress.

Officers and men of the Squadron would embark after training at Brawdy in India's first aircraft-carrier, now being fitted out in a Belfast (Northern Ireland) shipyard.

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3121:INI:J]

G. Diplomatic Appointments: It was announced in New Delhi on July 12 that Mr. R. S. Mani, Ambassador of India to Chile, had been appointed as Ambassador of India to Burma.

He would take up his new post in October, 1960.

It was announced on July 28 that Maharao Madan Sinhji of Kutch, at present Envoy in Norway, was appointed as Envoy to Chile.

It was announced on July 22 that Mr. Raghunath Sinha, till recently Consul-General of India in San Francisco, had been appointed as India's Ambassador to Cambodia.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3351:BUR:C]

H. Two Central Loans Fully Subscribed: On July 4, the Government of India announced the simultaneous issue of two new loans for a total sum of Rs. 175 crores.

The new loans were: (a) 3½ per cent bonds 1966—issue price Rs. 99.75 per cent and repayable at par on July 18, 1966; and (b) 4 per cent loan 1980—issue price Rs. 99.90 per cent and repayable at par on July 18, 1980.

Interest on the new loans would be payable half-yearly on January 18 and July 18, and would be liable to tax under the Indian Income-Tax Act, 1922.

Subscription lists for the loans opened on July 18 and were closed on July 20.

The new Central Government loans were subscribed to the extent to Rs. 180.30 crores. Conversions amounted to Rs. 74.25 crores. Subscriptions were Rs. 82.66 crores for 3½ per cent bonds 1966, and Rs. 97.64 crores for 4 per cent loan 1980.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 2787:INI:G, 2973:INI:H]

I. Export Earnings During 1959-60: It has been revealed that India's export earnings in the financial year 1959-60 were the highest on record except for 1951-52 which was a boom year for exports because of the Korean War.

The value of exports in 1959-60, which amounted to Rs. 641 crores, was higher by about Rs. 83 crores or 15 per cent over that in the previous year (1958-59).

Major traditional items like cotton mill fabrics, jute goods, minerals and metallic ores, leather and leather manufactures and spices accounted mostly for the increase.

There was a distinct improvement in the export of engineering goods—a new item which India has of late started exporting even to highly industrialized countries like USA and UK.

The export performance was satisfactory in respect of essential oils, woollen and coir manufactures, chemicals, medical and pharmaceutical products, handicrafts and plastic and sports goods. But there was a fall in the export of consumer goods like tea, coffee, sugar and silk fabrics and raw cotton because of greater demand in India or stiff competition from other countries.

Among the major traditional exports, cotton mill fabrics registered a smart rise from 560 million yards in 1958-59 to 841 million yards in 1959-60. There was also a modest rise in the export of handloom piecegoods. Export of cotton manufactures, as a whole, were higher by over Rs. 17 crores than in the previous year.

Earnings on account of jute goods exports were higher by about Rs. 10 crores. For the first time in recent years, India also exported raw jute worth over Rs. 3 crores. In the case of tea, there was a nominal decline as compared to the exports in the previous year. Exports amounted to 479 million lbs in 1958-59 and 477 million lb in 1959-60.

Exports of metallic ores and minerals were higher by Rs. 8 crores in 1959-60, mainly due to larger exports of iron-ore, mica and iron and steel scrap. Manganese-ore, however, declined by about Rs. 2 crores because of competition from Brazil, USA, USSR and releases from existing stocks in the consuming countries.

There was a distinct improvement in the export of engineering goods and in some cases, e.g. bicycles, exports were effected on a commercial scale for the first time. Machinery exports rose from Rs. 1.52 crores in 1958-59 to Rs. 2.37 crores in 1959-60. The increase was remarkable in the case of sewing machines (from Rs. 10,00,000 to Rs. 29,00,000), electric fans (from Rs. 34,00,000 to Rs. 59,00,000) and bicycles (from less than Rs. 1,00,000 to Rs. 11,00,000).

As in the previous years, UK and USA continued to be India's principal buyers.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

During 1959, exports to these countries amounted to Rs. 172.17 and Rs. 95.41 crores respectively. But exports to communist countries like the Soviet Union, which amounted to only a few crores four years ago, have gone up to Rs. 45 crores. Exports to a few countries in Asia, like Burma, Ceylon and Japan and African countries like Sudan, also registered an increase. Exports to Asian countries (including those in West Asia) alone accounted for Rs. 127.06 crores.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3191:INI:J]

J. Maharashtra Legislature — Governor's Address: Addressing the first session of the Maharashtra Legislature in Bombay on July 6, the Governor of the State, Mr. Sri Prakasa, asked the members to fulfil the expectations of the people that the birth of the new State would bring in its wake happiness and prosperity.

He added that, to this end, every citizen of the State must strive on a united front and the members of the Legislature would be called upon to make the maximum contribution to the completion of the colossal task and to play a pre-eminent part in formulating and implementing the programmes of the Third Five-Year Plan for the well-being of the masses and for raising their standard of living.

He referred to the recent Agreement between the Chief Ministers of Maharashtra and Mysore to appoint a four-man Committee to study the Maharashtra-Mysore border question and report their points of agreement and disagreement to the two Governments and said that it was indeed a step forward in the solution of the long-standing dispute, which had reached a stalemate. It meant that the Mysore Government had, for the first time, recognized the existence of a dispute regarding the border between the two States. "Our Government's case for submission to the Committee has already been prepared, while the Mysore Government has yet to do so. It is essential that a cordial atmosphere should be maintained while the Committee completes its deliberations and submits its report to the two Governments for further consideration of the matter by them."

He appealed to the people of Maharashtra (through the members of the House) to ensure that such a climate was created so that further negotiations might proceed in a spirit of goodwill and co-operation. After all, they must realize that it was by such means alone that internal border questions between any two States could be resolved.

The session began without a walk-out by the Opposition members or a morcha to the Council Hall—common features at the inauguration of Assembly sessions of the bilingual Bombay State. However, Opposition members kept up the tradition of shouting slogans praising Shivaji and Maharashtra State and demanding the merger of the Marathi-speaking areas of Mysore with Maharashtra as the Governor entered the House.

Praja-Socialists, a group of the Republican Party, a few Independents and four Jan Sangh members sat as a separate group, away from the Samyukta Maharashtra Samiti bloc. This group, led by Mr. S. M. Joshi claims to have the support of 40 members.

Communists, Lal Nishanas, Janata Anghadi and the Bhandare group of the Republican Party form the present Samiti group. This group claims the support of 68 members.

(The Times of India, Bombay and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3336:INI:A]

K. Maharashtra's Budget For 1960-61: The first Budget of Maharashtra State for 1960-61, presented to the State Legislature in Bombay on July 11, revealed a small uncovered deficit of Rs. 16,00,000 on revenue account.

Presenting the Budget, the State Finance Minister, Mr. S. K. Wankhade, estimated revenue receipts for the year at Rs. 100.97 crores and expenditure at Rs. 101.13 crores.

He revealed that there was a "heavy short-fall" in the expenditure on the Second Five-Year Plan and detailed the measures taken by the Government to speed up expenditure. He attributed the unsatisfactory progress of Plan expenditure to the loss of one year's time following the re-organization of States in 1956.

While progress in the implementation of irrigation schemes had been slow, he said, utilization of irrigation potential by agriculturists had been slower still.

As against a Plan provision of Rs. 37.31 crores for irrigation, an expenditure of only Rs. 11.03 crores was incurred in the first three years of the Plan.

He declared that the State Government would announce in a month's time its decision on the quantum of increase in the dearness allowance of State Government employees drawing salaries up to Rs. 300.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3337:INI:A]

L. UP Agriculture University Opens: The first Agriculture University in the country, set up on the pattern of the US Land Grant College, opened its inaugural academic session in Phoolbagh in Uttar Pradesh on July 7.

The University, called the UP Agricultural University, is located in a completely rural setting in the vast Terai farms and has a picturesque back-drop of the Kumaon hills.

Addressing the first batch of the students on the occasion, the Vice-Chancellor of the University, Mr. K. A. P. Stevenson, said that the opening of the University marked a new era in university education in India.

He said that besides introducing the Land Grant College pattern, endeavours had been made to introduce in the University some measures of educational reforms which had been recommended by the University Education Commission under the chairmanship of Dr. S. Radhakrishnan and the recommendations of the Conference of Vice-Chancellors held at Khadakvasla in June, 1960.

He spoke of some of the distinctive features of the University—Advisory System, Course System, Credit System and Frequent Examinations System—and explained each one of them.

Under the Advisory System, he said, each student would be assigned to an Adviser whose duty would be to help him in all matters—academic, spiritual and moral. The Adviser would also help the students before registration to choose the course most suited to their educational background.

The Course System broke up the curriculum into separate courses, all of which were taken separately and examined separately.

The Credit System was a method of measuring the educational content of courses. The whole curriculum was measured in terms of credits.

Under the Frequent Examinations System, each student would be given marks in examinations held from time to time and every grade he received would count towards his final graduation.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi and National Herald, Lucknow)

[Prev. ref. 3407:INI:R]

M. Rupkund Tragedy's Date Established: A final report on the Rupkund tragedy by the Anthropological Department of the Government of India available in Calcutta on June 28 stated that the investigations conducted by the Anthropological Department had established that the Rupkund tragedy occurred nearly 500 years ago and that this was borne out by the examination of some wooden "cultural" remains found there and brought to the Department's Calcutta headquarters with the remains of the victims of the tragedy.

One of these specimens was tested in the Royal Institution, London, and the other in the University College of Science, Calcutta. The two estimates have a common overlapping period between them, which extends from 510 to 590 years.

The remains collected by the Department consisted of no complete skeleton but 365 skeletal parts, some with attacked soft tissues. Estimates of the stature from long bone lengths revealed that 34 per cent of the men were tall and 36 per cent of medium height, while among the women 62 per cent were tall and 13 per cent of medium height. The rest were below medium height. On an average a man was 5 ft. 6½ in. tall and a woman 5 ft. 2 in.

The "cultural" remains collected included six chappals made exclusively of leather, about 24-25 cm in length and 9-10 cm in maximum width with one of a smaller size (21.5 cm x 8 cm): a few fragments of wooden objects, probably sticks, vessels, etc; a piece of T-shaped "resting stick" commonly used by porters in the Himalayan region to support the load while resting; several broken and worn-out bamboo pieces; deteriorated small fragments of cloth; a quantity of "bhojpatra" turned brittle and dark; a broken piece of polished stone bead; and a broken part of a green glass bangle. There was reason to believe that the victims were probably from some region in Uttar Pradesh, Rajasthan or Punjab, but no conclusion could reasonably be drawn about their association with any particular region or people by the examination of the "cultural" remains except the T-shaped resting stick.

The skeletal remains indicated that the victims were mostly over 21 years of age. There were a few who were below 18 years and probably still younger. The victims had a sex ratio of about 25 (35 per cent) women to 75 (65 per cent) men.

[In 1955, an expedition was sent by the Central Government to Rupkund Lake where some human skeletons were found. This discovery gave rise to a controversy and many theories were put forward to explain the skeletons. One theory stated that a Kashmir chieftain, Zorawar Khan, and his army perished there in an avalanche, but this theory was discounted as there were no weapons found at the site. Another theory said that Rupkund was a religious place used for the offering of human sacrifices, thereby accounting for the presence of human skeletons. But the most favoured theory was that a party of pilgrims had perished there in a severe hail-storm or an avalanche. This theory seemed to be supported by the presence of bamboo walking sticks, leather chappals and T-shaped resting sticks.]

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2746:INI:N]

INDONESIA

A. Troops Clash With Chinese Residents In Tjimahi: Two Chinese women were killed on July 1 in Tjimahi near Bandung in a clash between a group of alien Chinese traders and Indonesian troops.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

According to Indonesian officials, the deaths occurred when a crowd of Chinese tried to seize arms from Indonesians and caused a rifle to go off.

The Chinese dismissed the account as false. They said that one woman had seven bullets in her body.

The clash occurred when troops of the Bandung Command ordered a group of 60 overseas Chinese traders and their dependents to move to Bandung town in accordance with the ban on alien retail trade in rural areas. The Chinese housed in a school camp resented the demand and began beating up the soldiers in an effort to seize their arms.

A West Java Army spokesman was quoted as saying that the Chinese had been provoked to attack the soldiers by "agents" who shouted: "Attack and seize their arms, don't fear death."

He explained that the Chinese had remained on the premises for more than six months after they had been asked to leave. They had persistently refused to go to the Area Police Headquarters to get instructions.

Some police officers were also beaten up when they went to the Chinese a week earlier with a demand to move away.

In Djakarta, the Chief Information Officer of the Indonesian Army, Colonel Soenarjo, said that the incident in Tjimahi was only one of a series during the past few months and that this direct resistance had harmed Sino-Indonesian relations.

He also alleged that a special group of Chinese were openly inciting alien traders and their women dependents to oppose Government regulations.

According to Peking broadcasts, the incident had provoked several angry protest rallies in China.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3356:IND:A]

ISRAEL

A. First Atomic Research Reactor Goes Into Operation: An official announcement in Tel Aviv on July 4 said that Israel's first atomic research reactor at Nahal Sorek, south of Tel Aviv, went into operation on June 16.

The reactor, of the "swimming pool" type, was built with US aid under President D. Eisenhower's "Atoms-for-Peace" programme.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 1568:AOA:B]

JORDAN

A. US Aid For Development Projects: Under an Agreement signed on June 28, it is said, the US Operations Mission in Jordan has undertaken to spend $125,000 on detailed technical studies for the establishment of a chemical fertilizers plant, a paper mill, a sanitation equipment industry and a pipe and building materials industry.

The Mission will also contribute to the cost of the mineral survey to be conducted under the terms of the Jordan-West German Agreement of May, 1960.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2469:JOR:A]

KOREA (South)

A. Press Law: The Government proclaimed a new law on July 1 which introduced freedom of publication and political assembly.

The law had been passed by the National Assembly on June 24.

The Publishers and political parties now need only register, instead of having to obtain a licence as under the previous rules.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3412:KRS:A]

MONGOLIA (Outer)

A. Election Results: Elections to the Great National Hural (Parliament) were held on June 19. About 99.98 per cent of voters in 267 constituencies cast their votes for the candidates nominated by the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party.

The 267 Deputies (Members of Parliament) included herdsmen of the agricultural co-operatives (35 per cent), workers (23 per cent), and intelligentsia and government officials (42 per cent).

Women made 21 per cent of the total number of Deputies.

(Mongolia Today)

PAKISTAN

A. Central Budget For 1960-61: Pakistan's Central Budget for 1960-61, announced in Rawalpindi on June 30 by the Finance Minister, Mr. M. Shoaib, disclosed a surplus of Rs. 1.51 crores. [One crore is 10,000,000]

Revenue receipts for the year at the existing level of taxation were estimated at Rs. 171.37 crores and expenditure at Rs. 169.86 crores.

About Rs. 98.59 crores was earmarked for defence. This was 58 per cent of the total Budget.

Capital expenditure during the year was estimated at Rs. 179.19 crores and capital receipts at Rs. 165.25 crores. The gap in capital expenditure and receipts would be covered by additional taxation to the tune of Rs. 9.90 crores and cash balances of the previous year.

Mr. M. Shoaib announced tax concession to the extent of five to 10 per cent to public companies but increased the sales-tax by 2½ per cent (excepting on food and clothing) and reintroduced the estate duty and excise duty on silk and woollen fabrics, bringing in an additional revenue of Rs. 9.90 crores.

The following were some of the new taxation proposals:

(1) Agricultural property was again brought under the purview of Estate Duty.

(2) The standard rate of sales-tax was increased from 10 per cent to 12.5 per cent, but it would not be applicable to fresh fruits, washing soap, cotton yarn of 20 or less counts, raw hides and skins.

(3) Several articles got total exemption from sales-tax, like food preparations in hotels and restaurants, and products of bakeries and confectioneries, tailored articles, including ready-made garments, all edible oils, Pakistan crockery and pottery.

(4) The existing excise duties on art silk, woollen manufactures and high speed diesel oil were raised.

(5) The duty on betel nuts was revived.

(6) An excise duty of Rs. 50 per ton was imposed on M.S. bars and of Rs. 15 per ton on cement.

(7) Some direct taxes were reduced to benefit industrialists.

(8) There would be no change in personal taxation, but the investment allowance limit was raised.

(9) Estates of Rs. 5,00,000 or less were exempted from duty.

In his Budget statement, the Finance Minister said that the main task before the country was to increase production in the fields of industry and agriculture as rapidly as possible.

He said that the Government was determined to avoid inflationary financing, control ordinary expenditure and make maximum provision for development.

Though the principal aim was to expand production, he said, Government would intervene, if necessary, to control the prices of consumer goods, curb business malpractices and encourage competition.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2791:PAK:A]

B. British Loan Offer: It was stated in the British House of Commons on July 11 that Britain had offered an immediate loan of £5,000,000 to the Government of Pakistan.

Replying to a question, the Minister for Commonwealth Relations, Mr. C. J. M. Alport, said: "The United Kingdom Government has offered an immediate loan to the Government of Pakistan of £5,000,000 to be made under Section 3 of the Export Guarantees Act.

"The intention is that this loan will be used to pay for imports from the United Kingdom to be agreed to between the two Governments.

"Our offer is intended to assist the Pakistan Government to make an early start on industrial development projects incorporated in its Second Five-Year Plan."

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2558:PAK:D]

SINGAPORE

A. Government Loan: The Government announced on July 9 that its 30 million Malayan dollar loan floated only a month ago had been fully subscribed "reflecting confidence in the Government's economic policy."

This was the third loan floated in ten months and formed part of the Government's 968 million Malayan dollar Five-Year Investment Plan aimed at stimulating the Island's economic development.

The two previous loans for a total of 40 million Malayan dollars floated in September, 1959 were fully subscribed.

(The Times, London)

B. Plans For Industrial Town: The Government announced on July 3 plans to build an industrial town at Jorong in the south-west corner of Singapore Island.

This is part of the five-year plan of development.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Facilities for the industry have to be created, including berths and piers for ships, a bridge and roads, a branch railway linked to the main line going north into Malaya, a reservoir, a fast ferry service to the city, and a heliport for a helicopter service to the Singapore airport. Canada has been asked under the Colombo Plan to provide a team of about 12 engineers, architects and surveyors to prepare detailed plans and to supervise construction.

The Government hopes to spread over the Island nine smaller industrial estates. It will provide the land and leave it to private agencies to develop the sites and build factories for sale to entrepreneurs.

The Government's outlay for development at Jorong and elsewhere is put at about $50 million (Malayan) (£5,850,000) and it seems to be looking to private capital to finance most of the actual industry.

(The Times, London)

SUDAN

A. Budget For 1960-61: The Budget for 1960-61 was announced in Khartoum in the last week of June.

Under it, revenue was estimated at £S56,169,359 and expenditure at £S47,841,402. [£Sud. 0975=£1]

There was no increase in taxation, but a reduction in the rate of customs duties or machinery and building materials was announced.

A sum of £S24,352,722 was allocated to the Development Budget. Slightly over one-third of this sum was earmarked for various non-productive projects such as social services, communications, public utilities, administration, research etc., while the major part—£S15,875,000 or 65.15 per cent of the Development Budget—represented Government's contribution to major projects already in hand or due to be started in 1960-61.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2909:SUD:B]

TURKEY

A. American Aid: It was officially announced in Ankara on July 4 that the US Government had agreed to make available to Turkey about £T1,000,000,000 from funds likely to accrue from the sale of American surplus farm products in the course of the fiscal year 1960-61. [£1 Sterling is equal to 25.2 Turkish pounds.]

An Agreement signed on July 4 released £T500,000,000 for military expenditure, £T300,000,000 to support State economic enterprises and £T200,000,000 for various technical aid projects, soldiers' educational schemes and others.

It was pointed out the previous week that there was little left for such advances from the proceeds of past deliveries of American surplus products.

[The obvious implication of a pre-payment on such a scale was that very large supplies of American cereals and other farm products were being arranged.]

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 3148:TUR:B]

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. First National Union General Congress: The first National Union General Congress held its closing session in the Hall of Ceremonies of Cairo University on July 16. The President of UAR, Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser, presided.

Col. Nasser announced that the resolutions as drafted by the Co-ordinating Committee would be read.

All the resolutions and recommendations were then unanimously passed.

The resolution relating to Arab affairs said that the majority of the Arab peoples had faith and confidence in Arab nationalism and its determination to carry on with its struggle for the attainment of its goals.

On the question of Palestine, it declared that the Arab nationalist struggle against Israel would be continued until Palestine was restored to its own people. It condemned the supply of American, British and French arms to Israel and endorsed the Arab League's appeal to all Palestinians to preserve Palestinian nationality whatever the way might be.

On the Algerian issue, the Congress saluted the Algerian Liberation Army and the heroic people of Algeria and abhorred the war of extermination being waged by France in Algeria. It held the colonialist Powers responsible for the continuation of this war and pledged the Arab people's support to the Algerian people in their just struggle.

It further apealed to the youth of UAR, along with the youth of the whole Arab world, to volunteer for service in the Algerian Liberation Army.

It also appealed to progressive people all over the world, particularly those of Africa and Asia, to urge their Governments to recognize the "Provisional Government" of the Algerian Republic.

On foreign relations, it favoured the continuance of a foreign policy based on consolidating Arab unity and nationalism and strongly supported the policy of positive neutralism and non-alignment and condemned all military pacts.

It recommended that consultation should be maintained with all friendly countries with a view to taking the necessary measures for putting an end to the barbarous actions of the Government of the Union of South Africa against native citizens.

It recommended the amendment of the mandate of the Union of South Africa over South-West Africa.

It affirmed that collusion still existed between Israel and other imperialist Powers for aggression against the Arabs and emphasized that Israel was playing "a dangerous game."

It also considered that greater efforts should be made to expose the world Zionist movement and its danger to all nations.

It declared that the economic blocs set up by certain countries were only a pretext behind which imperialism concealed its aim of creating a new kind of collective imperialism and tighten its control over the small raw-material-producing countries of Africa and Asia.

It strongly deplored the persistence of some countries in holding atomic and nuclear tests and demanded a ban on atomic and nuclear weapons.

It supported the UAR Government's policy of adhering to the letter and spirit of the UN Charter.

It re-affirmed its support to the principles of the Bandung Conference and its other resolutions and recommendations.

It agreed to speed up the exchange of diplomatic representation between the United Arab Republic and the newly-independent countries of Africa and to strengthen economic and trade relations between them.

The Congress was hopeful that Arab countries and their armed forces would stand as one Arab stronghold aimed at combating the "imperialist conspirators" as well as the ambitions of Zionism.

Other resolutions and recommendations passed by the Congress related to planning, financial, commercial and industrial affairs, local administration, education and culture.

(UAR Embassy, New Delhi and Cairo Radio)

[Prev. ref. 3235:UAR: B]

B. US Loan: Under an Agreement signed with USA in Cairo on July 5, Egypt will receive a loan of £E8,000,000 in local currency (equivalent to about $22,250,000) to be used as part finance for a number of industrial projects.

These will include a paper mill in Alexandria, a lorry and bus assembly shop at Helwan, a new sugar refinery at Edfu, as well as a mineral survey.

The sum will be made available out of the proceeds of American sales of surplus farm products to Egypt.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 3312:UAR:F]

C. Syrian Region's Budget For 1960-61: The Syrian Region's Ordinary Budget (details of which were available on July 8) was balanced at £S512,200,000, an increase of about £S19,000,000 over 1959-60.

A gap of £S24,500,000 in revenue was made good through an Egyptian Treasury grant for the same amount.

Syria's Development Budget rose from £S185,500,000 to £S254,000,000, keeping the allocations for 1960-61 well below 20 per cent of her proposed investments of £S2,178,000,000 during the Five-Year Plan which was also due to be launched on July 1.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 2805:UAR:C]

VIET-NAM (DR)

A. National Assembly Session: The first session of the Second National Assembly met in Hanoi from July 7 to 15.

It approved the report of the Government and three laws on the organization of the Council of Ministers, the People's Supreme Court and the People's Supreme Organs of Control.

On July 15, it elected the following to the posts noted against their names:

Dr. Ho Chi-Minh—President of the Democratic Republic;

Mr. Ton Duc Thang—Vice-President of the Democratic Republic;

Mr. Truong Chinh—Chairman of the Standing Committee of the National Assembly;

Mr. Pham Van Bach—President of the People's Court; and

Mr. Hoang Quoc Viet—Chief Procurator of the People's Supreme Organ of Control of the Democratic Republic.

Dr. Ho Chi-Minh then proposed Mr. Pham Van Dong as Prime Minister.

The proposal was unanimously approved.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Mr. Pham Van Dong's Speech:

Earlier, on July 7, addressing the opening session of the Assembly, Mr. Pham Van Dong re-affirmed his Government's faith in co-existence and acknowledged Russia as the leader of the Socialist camp.

Hanoi Radio quoted him as "re-affirming the unswerving stand of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam for strengthening the solidarity and unity of the people in the Socialist camp headed by the Soviet Union."

He said that North Viet-Nam sought "the exchanging of friendly relations with all countries in the world on the basis of the Five Principles of co-existence" (Panch Shila).

He condemned "United States imperialism and other Western Powers" for the failure of the 'Summit' Conference and voiced his Government's support for Cambodia.

He thanked Thailand for her people's constant care of Viet-Namese residents there and criticised the activities of "American imperialists and their lackeys, the Ngo Dinh Diem clique" in South Viet-Nam.

He added that the re-unification of North and South Viet-Nam was a sacred task.

He supported the seating of the Asian Powers like China, India and Indonesia at the 'Summit' Conference.

Dr. Ho Chi-Minh conveyed the Assembly's greetings to the South Viet-Namese people who, he said, were "heroically struggling against the American imperialists and their stooges."

(The Nation, Rangoon and Consulate-General of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3237:VND:B]

B. Algerian Delegation's Visit: At the invitation of the Government of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, a delegation of the "Provisional Government of the Republic of Algeria" headed by the Vice-Premier, Mr. Krim Belkacem, visited North Viet-Nam from May 4 to 6.

The delegation was received by the President, Dr. Ho Chi-Minh, and the Prime Minister, Mr. Pham Van Dong.

The delegation had talks with Viet-Namese representatives headed by the Vice-Premier, Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap. The talks covered international problems and questions concerning the two countries.

A joint communique issued on May 6 noted that "Afro-Asian solidarity constituted at the present time a force playing an important role in the settlement of international problems."

It said: "The two Government delegations urge that an end be put to foreign interference in the internal affairs of Asian and African countries.

"The two delegations energetically condemn the atomic bomb tests held in Sahara by the French Government, heedless of repeated warnings of African and other Governments and of friends of peace throughout the world. These tests entail disastrous consequences for the African population and constitute a threat to the national liberation movements in Africa and to world peace.

"The two delegations condemn the acts of racial segregation and repression perpetrated in the Union of South Africa.

"The delegation of the Government of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam is happy to note that the heroic resistance of the Algerian people has, over the past six years, recorded great success. The Viet-Namese people protest against the atrocities perpetrated by the French colonialist troops in Algeria and fully sympathize with the sufferings of the Algerian people. They condemn the colonialist manoeuvres aimed at partitioning the Algerian territory and denounce the members of the NATO military bloc, in particular USA, for helping the aggressors drag on the colonial war against the Algerian people. The Government of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam and the Viet-Namese people will continue to support resolutely and whole-heartedly the heroic struggle of the Algerian people till final victory.

"The delegation of the 'Provisional Government of the Republic of Algeria' hails the great successes recorded by the Viet-Namese people in their national construction since the re-establishment of peace in Indo-China. It fully shares the Viet-Namese people's aspirations for national re-unification. It is of the same view that Viet-Nam's re-unification must be achieved, in conformity with the Geneva Agreements, on the basis of peace and democracy and without interference by imperialist Powers.

"The delegation of the Government of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam and the delegation of the Provisional Government of the Republic of Algeria note with joy that over these past years, the friendship between the two peoples has continuously developed. The two delegations decide to take all measures aimed at strengthening them still further in the interests of the two peoples and of solidarity among the Asian and African peoples now struggling against colonialism and for national independence and world peace."

(Consulate-General of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3460:CHI:B]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Ghana Becomes A Republic; Somaliland Becomes Independent.

A. Ghana Becomes A Republic: Ghana became a Republic (within the British Commonwealth) on July 1.

On June 30, Queen Elizabeth sent her best wishes to the Government and people of Ghana on becoming a Republic.

The Queen's message was read to the last sitting of Ghana's old Parliament by Ghana's last Governor-General, Lord Listowel, just before the old Parliament was prorogued.

It said: "I pray the blessing of Almighty God may guide the destiny of the new Republic and secure peace and happiness for its peoples. The bonds which bind the Commonwealth together cannot be expressed in a written constitution or by a set and unchanging formulae of relationship. I am proud to be the Head of a Commonwealth in which every nation may choose for herself the form of Government which best suits her. Now that Ghana has chosen for herself a republican form of Constitution, it will not affect the interest which I have always taken, and will continue to take, in the welfare of her people."

She said that she was "looking forward with the keenest pleasure" to the visit which she and the Duke of Edinburgh would pay to Ghana in 1961.

The Prime Minister, Dr. Kwame Nkrumah, told the House that the change in Ghana's Constitution would not "make any less warm and sincere the welcome we shall give to the Queen during her visit next year (Autumn 1961)."

The Leader of the Opposition, Mr. S. D. Dombo, said: "In a few hours' time our allegiance to the Queen will lapse, but she may be assured that our respect for her person will continue, and we hope our association with Great Britain will grow, bloom and bear fruit."

Dr. K. Nkrumah Installed As First President:

In Accra, on July 1, Dr. Kwame Nkrumah was installed as the first President of the Republic of Ghana.

The ceremony took place in the State House, which was the residence of the Governor-General and into which Dr. Nkrumah moved as President of Ghana Republic.

Dr. Nkrumah will have wide executive powers as President.

One of his first actions was to appoint a new Cabinet. It showed no major change from the old Cabinet in the key posts.

To mark the birth of the new Republic, Dr. Nkrumah ordered that every death sentence imposed should be remitted, and one year should be remitted in every prison sentence of three years or more.

Dr. K. Nkrumah's Broadcast:

In a broadcast to the nation on assuming office as Ghana's first President, Dr. K. Nkrumah re-affirmed that Ghana would follow a policy of non-alignment with Power blocs as he believed that this policy was the best for the country in the present circumstances.

He declared that Ghana wanted to be the friend of all and enemy of none.

Ghana would not relax her efforts to foster the concept of African unity and the creation of a real political union of African States. African salvation lay only in such a union, and Ghana would work to achieve it.

Messages:

India was represented at the birth of the new Republic by the Defence Minister, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon.

In a broadcast from New Delhi on July 1, India's Deputy Minister for External Affairs, Mrs. Lakshmi N. Menon, said that Ghana acted boldly and wisely in declaring herself a Republic within the Commonwealth.

She added that as a sister-nation, India rejoiced with Ghana and wished her continuous and undisturbed progress, peace and prosperity.

India's Defence Minister, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, told newsmen in Accra on June 30 that he was most happy to attend the celebrations.

He praised Ghana's smooth passage from a colony only a few years ago to self-governing dominion status three years ago and to an independent Republic now.

The President of India, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, and the Prime Minister, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, sent messages of greetings to the President of the Republic of Ghana, Dr. Nkrumah, on the occasion of the inauguration of the Republic and his assumption of office as President of Ghana.

Mr. Eisenhower said in a message to Dr. Nkrumah that he hoped that the strong bonds of friendship and mutual interest between Ghana and the United States would continue to grow stronger in the years to come.

Dr. K. Nkrumah's News Conference:

Addressing his first news conference as President of Ghana in Accra

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

on July 5, Dr. Nkrumah said that the Western countries, particularly USA, had not come out boldly enough with a plan to assist under-developed countries in Africa. If the West did not help, other countries might.

He said that the West had a lot to contribute towards the development of African countries, but such assistance must come to them as equals and friends.

He suggested the formation of "a pool of helper-countries," because help from individual States might be suspect.

He also suggested the setting up of an Economic Council representing all independent African States to work out the aid programme.

About his talks in Accra with the visiting President Sekou Toure of Guinea, he said that they had discussed the possibility of establishing a common currency for the two countries.

In a reference to the suggestion for a union of African States, he said he did not think the idea of such a union premature. "Now is the time for it."

(The Times, London, The Statesman, Calcutta and The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3422:AOA:D]

B. Somaliland Becomes Independent: Eighty years of British rule ended in Somaliland at midnight on June 25-26 as the sounds of bursting fireworks and singing crowds heralded its independence.

Celebrations in the capital (Hargeisa) were repeated in settlements and lonely outposts throughout the territory. The rejoicing continued on June 27, which was declared a public holiday.

The previous night, guests at a final Government House reception drank the last toast to "The Queen". The toast was proposed by Mr. Phillip Carrel, who was acting Governor until midnight struck.

Mr. Carrel said: "This is the last occasion on which we, British, can offer our best wishes for the future of the people of Somaliland and Somalia (the adjacent Italian Trust territory which is to merge with Somaliland as it also achieves independence). May they have a happy life and prosperity for the rest of their days."

The new Prime Minister of Somaliland, Mr. Mohammed Haji Ibrahim Egal, responded with a tribute to the British association for 80 years, saying: "We have not always seen eye to eye, but we share a common ideal in the simple things of life. This is not the end of British-Somali relations. These relations are simply taking another shape for the better. I am glad I have been able to work with many Britons who have been concerned with the Government of this country."

Queen Elizabeth sent a message of good wishes to the new State.

In a message of greetings to the Council of Ministers of Somaliland, Mr. Nehru said:

"On the happy occasion of the grant of independence to Somaliland, I, on behalf of the Government and the people of India, and on my own behalf, send you our heartiest congratulations and best wishes for the happiness and prosperity of the people of Somaliland."

Newly independent Somaliland united with Somalia on July 1, when Italy gave up her UN Trusteeship there.

The Italian Parliament had earlier passed a Bill ending Italian rule in Somalia.

The Somaliland Legislative Assembly which met in Hargeisa on June 27 had unanimously approved a Bill endorsing plans to unite the country with Somalia.

Proclamation Of Somalia Republic:

The new Somalia Republic was proclaimed a few seconds after midnight on June 30-July 1.

There were fireworks and rejoicings in the streets of Mogadiscio.

The proclamation of the Republic followed a colourful reception attended by delegates from 72 countries.

Addressing cheering crowds from the balcony of the Legislative Assembly building, the provisional Head of the State, Mr. Adan Abdullah, said:

"The world is listening to the new independent State at this joyous moment.

"We address our thoughts also to the millions of our African brethren who languish under the yoke of injustice and misunderstanding.

"Let us renew our appeal to the world for peace and justice for these brethren."

Independence celebrations in Mogadiscio and elsewhere in Somalia were marred by rioting in which one person was killed and at least 50 were injured.

The new Republic of Somalia signed a Treaty of Friendship and Commerce with Italy.

UN Trusteeship Council Resolution:

On June 7, the UN Trusteeship Council had unanimously adopted a resolution congratulating Italy on having fully and successfully discharged her obligations to the Italian-administered Somaliland.

The draft resolution, tabled by Belgium, India, Burma, New Zealand, Paraguay and the United States had noted that the administering authority was taking steps to ensure an orderly transfer of the functions of Government to an independent Somalia.

It also congratulated the people of Somalia on their successful endeavours in the preparation for independence and in setting up democratic institutions in their country.

The resolution expressed the Council's good wishes for the progress and prosperity of the new State.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3334:AOA:E, 3422:AOA:D]

C. Madagascar Becomes Republic: Madagascar was officially proclaimed an independent nation within the French Community on the morning of June 26 at a ceremony in Tananarive. She will now be known as Malagasy Republic.

The ceremony was performed by the French Secretary of State for the Community, M Jean Foyar, and Madagascar's First President, M Philibert Tsiranana, who read, in turn, a joint declaration announcing the independence of Madagascar.

The declaration said that faithfulness to the same ideals and the same principles would inspire the free co-operation of France and Madagascar within the Community and in the concert of nations.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3422:AOA:D]

D. US "Discoverer" XII Satellite Fails To Go Into Orbit: The US Air Force launched on June 29 a rocket from the Vandenberg Air Force base carrying its Discoverer XII satellite in another attempt to recover a space capsule.

The satellite, however, failed to go into orbit.

Air Force scientists said that the second stage had ignited successfully, but apparently the rocket did not obtain sufficient velocity for an orbit.

Preliminary data indicated that it had re-entered the atmosphere over the South Pacific and had burnt up.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3421:AOA:A]

E. Commonwealth Press Union Conference: Opening the 51st Conference of the Commonwealth Press Union in London on June 13, the Lord Privy Seal and Minister for Science, Lord Hailsham, said that never before had there been a greater need for informed understanding between the nations of the Commonwealth.

[The Commonwealth Press Union represents more than 500 newspapers and news agencies throughout the Commonwealth and the Colonies.]

It was attended by Editors, owners, publishers and correspondents of newspapers and news agencies from Colonial and Commonwealth countries.

On June 17, it approved Sir Lloyd Dumas' (Australia) resolution which said that the Commonwealth Press Union was "opposed to the suggested UN Convention on Freedom of Information which seeks to define and limit such freedom and to permit the Governments to interpret the basis upon which information shall be gathered and distributed."

It offered the fullest co-operation to all Commonwealth Governments "in any measures designed to improve communications between the member-countries."

It also discussed Press freedom, particularly the state of Press freedom in South Africa.

(The Times, London, The Statesman, Calcutta and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2781:AOA:T]

F. Lenin Peace Prize To Dr. William Dubois: The distinguished American scientist, writer and public figure, Dr. William Dubois, received the International Lenin Peace Prize at a ceremony in the Soviet Embassy in Washington on June 23.

He was awarded the Prize for his outstanding services in the cause of preserving and consolidating peace.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3381:AOA:F]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10, Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95/-; Foreign Rs. 115/- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

August 6—12, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 32

AFGHANISTAN

A. Progress Of First Five-Year Plan: The Prime Minister, Sardar Mohammed Daud Khan, said in Kabul on July 19 that 90 per cent of the targets of the First Five-Year Plan had been achieved during the first four years of the Plan.

He added that the Second Five-Year Plan was under examination. When it was implemented, it would make Afghanistan self-sufficient in many necessities of life.

(Kabul Radio)

[Prev. ref. 1237:AFG:A]

BURMA

A. State-hood For Arakan: The Prime Minister, U Nu, re-affirmed at a news conference on June 28 the Government's promise of State-hood for Arakan if the majority of the people desired it.

He said: "If the majority of the people in Arakan show their desire for State-hood, the Government will table the necessary Bill in Parliament. It will behove MPs of our party to support it, but our own MPs from Arakan will be entitled to vote either for or against it, according to their wishes."

He said that in order to show Government's impartiality in the matter, Rangoon Radio had refrained from reporting news either for or against an Arakan State. Similarly, it desisted from reporting on the State religion issue.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3335:BUR:A]

B. Trade Agreement With Soviet Union Extended: The Secretary of the Ministry of Trade Development, U Sein Kyi, and the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Andrei M. Ledovski, exchanged Notes on behalf of their respective Governments in Rangoon on June 28 providing for the extension for six months of the Trade Agreement between the two countries which expired on June 30, 1960.

Under the Agreement, Burma will export rice and rice products, food beans and pulses, oil-cakes, mineral products, timber, rubber and other goods. The imports from USSR will include rice mills, equipment for textile factories, agriculture machines and implements, machinery, photo and cinema equipment, coal and chemical goods.

The goods exported and imported under this Agreement will be paid in £ Sterling.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 757:BUR:B, 3199:BUR:A]

CEYLON

SUMMARY: SLFP Victory In General Elections—Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike Becomes Premier—Eleven-Member Cabinet Sworn-in.

A. SLFP Victory In General Elections: For the second time in four months, Ceylon went to the polls on July 20 which resulted in a victory for the Sri Lanka Freedom Party (SLFP) led by Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, widow of the late Prime Minister, Mr. S. W. R. D. Bandaranaike, who was assassinated in September, 1959.

The SLFP had entered into "no-contest" agreement with the Trotskyite Lanka Sama Samaj Party (LSSP) and the Communist Party.

A total of 356 candidates, put up by 14 political parties, and 37 Independents, contested the election as compared with 898 candidates and 23 parties represented in the March, 1960 elections.

Unlike in the March, 1960 election, when there was not a single straight contest and there was an average of six candidates for each seat, there were 57 straight contests and 20 triangular contests in the latest election.

The following is the list of major parties at the polls showing the number of seats which each won in March, 1960, the percentage of votes polled and the number of candidates put up for the latest election:

United National Party (UNP)—50, 29.4 per cent, 123; Sri Lanka Freedom Party—46, 22.1 per cent, 98; Trotskyist Lanka Samaj Party—10, 10.6 per cent, 21; Communist Party—3, 4.3 per cent, 7; Federal Party—15, 6.6 per cent, 21; Mahajana Eksath Peramuna—10, 10.4 per cent, 55; Lanka Prajathantrawadi Pakshya—4, 4.2 per cent, 6.

The party position in the new Parliament is as follows:

Sri Lanka Freedom Party	75
United National Party	30
Federal Party	16
Lanka Sama Samaj Party	12
Communist Party	4
Mahajana Eksath Peramuna	3
Lanka Prajathanthrawadi Pakshya	2
Jatika Vimukthi Peramuna	2
Tamil Congress	1
Independents	6
Nominated	6
Total	157

Mrs. S. Bandaranaike Forms Government:

On July 21, Mr. Dudley Senanayake, who headed the UNP 'caretaker' Government, resigned and the Governor-General, Sir Oliver Goonetilleke, invited Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike to form a new Government.

She was sworn-in the same day (July 21) to become the world's first woman Prime Minister.

She is not a member of the new Parliament, having decided not to contest the elections so as to keep herself free to campaign vigorously for her party.

Under the Constitution, she will lose the Premiership if she fails to get elected to Parliament within four months.

In a statement to the Press on July 21, she said that she was least surprised at the results of the Elections. She was always confident that the vast majority of the people would endorse her late husband's socialization programme and policies which reflected the aspirations of the people.

Thanking the voters, she gave a solemn assurance that she would carry out the pledges given to them during the Elections.

She added: "My Party intends to appoint a Commission of Inquiry into the political aspect of the assassination of the late Prime Minister. My party intends nationalizing life insurance."

On the question of nationalizing the estates, she said that the Indian question must be settled first before giving consideration to nationalizing the estates.

On foreign policy she said that her party would follow the neutralist policy pursued by her late husband. The entire educational system would be inquired into by a Commission before deciding on whether the State should take over the denominational schools or not.

Other subjects which she did not touch upon but were stressed in the election manifesto of her party were the establishment of a democratic Republic and the appointment of a Commission to inquire into the working of the Press.

The party is also pledged to implement the Ten-Year Plan of Development drawn up by the Planning Commission under the chairmanship of the late S. W. R. D. Bandaranaike and to review the system of taxes to bring relief to poor and middle classes.

Foreign investment is to be allowed in certain fields to be specified in order to promote rapid industrialization.

Cabinet Personnel:

On July 23, the other members of the Cabinet were sworn-in.

The following is the list of Ministers and their portfolios:

Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike—Prime Minister, Defence and External Affairs;

Mr. C. P. De Silva—Agriculture, Irrigation and Power;

Mr. F. R. Dias Bandaranaike—Finance;

Senator S. P. C. Fernando—Justice;

Mr. T. B. Illangaratne—Commerce, Trade, Food and Shipping;

Senator A. P. Jayasuria—Health;

Mr. P. G. B. Kalugalla—Transport, Posts and Works;

Mr. Badiruddin Mahmud—Education and Broadcasting;

Mr. Mahanama Samaraweera—Local Government and Housing;

Mr. Maithripala Senanayake—Industries, Home and Cultural Affairs; and Senator Chandrasada Wijesinghe—Labour and Nationalized Services.

(The Times of Ceylon, Colombo and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 3300:CEY:A]

CHINA

A. "Rebellion" In Tibet And Chinese Military Build-up: China Today,

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

the official publication of the Chinese Embassy in New Delhi, published an article in its issue of June 27, 1960 reviewing "Tibet's all-round achievements in the past year," and openly referring to "the rebellion of the upper strata reactionaries" in the Region.

Speaking of the Tibet land reforms effected through the "application of the Communist Party's class line and mass line" following the rapid quelling of "the rebellion," it said that the programme was completed in 52 out of 78 agricultural areas.

Considering the sweeping nature of the programme, which embraced not only the restoration of all rights in the land to the cultivator but also the scaling down of debts and interest rates and the abolition of other levies, and the speed with which it was carried out, it added, the fierce opposition it aroused became obvious.

It admitted that co-operation with the new regime came only from a strictly limited section of the people and that "patriotic and progressive persons of the upper and middle strata and lamas of the upper and middle strata of various sects and monasteries" were participating in the Central Government—the Tibet Committee, headed by the Panchen Lama—and the various local councils. These classes had been rewarded in the shape of "suitable work and a decent livelihood."

It, however, refrained from any mention of the build-up of Chinese armed strength in the region, speaking only of the beneficent activities of the "People's Liberation Army stationed in Tibet".

Air-Fields Built:

According to reports reaching Srinagar from Leh, the Chinese had built a string of air-fields in Western Tibet regions bordering Ladakh, some of which are handling jet military aircraft traffic. Eighteen of them with hangar facilities for about 1,000 planes, including short-range bombers, were said to have been built.

They said that China had moved rockets and armoured cars along the Nepal border and had brought heavy artillery pieces, including mountain batteries to Rudok and other military bases in Western Tibet.

Since October, 1959, the Chinese were reported to have been digging trenches and raising barricades of stone, and the net-work of roads linking 'occupied' north-eastern Ladakh regions with each other and with Western Tibet had been fairly well improved.

Mr. B. P. Koirala Confirms Fighting:

The Nepal Premier, Mr. B. P. Koirala, confirmed reports of fighting and military build-up in Tibet at a news conference in Khatmandu on June 26 and said that his Government had received reports from the border posts on the flare-up in Tibet.

Asked what Nepal had done in the face of the Chinese build-up, he said: "We are taking whatever steps we consider necessary for our security."

He, however, thought that reports of a general massacre of Tibetans and the death of many Nepalese in the fighting were exaggerated.

Border trade between Nepal and Tibet "has been dislocated, almost stopped."

The grain export to Tibet had been stopped and that had caused some hardship and distress in the northern Nepalese districts.

Nepali Foreign Office Version:

A Press Note issued by the Nepalese Foreign Office on June 28 said that it had received a communication from the Chinese Government unequivocally admitting the fact of a revolt in Tibet and its own military build-up to suppress the rebellion.

The Chinese communication said that because of the trouble created by Tibetan rebels, Chinese armed forces had been sent to quell the disturbances.

The Chinese Note, however, assured the Nepalese Government that under no circumstances would Chinese troops violate Nepalese territory in their pursuit of the rebels.

It also pointed out that as soon as the revolt had been put down, Chinese troops would be withdrawn beyond the 20-kilometre limit from the border in accordance with the Sino-Nepalese Border Agreement signed in Peking in March, 1960.

This clearly suggested that the Chinese Army units were then within the 20-kilometre limit in contravention of the Agreement which laid down that no armed forces would be deployed within 20 kilometres of the Nepal-Tibet frontier and no military patrols undertaken.

The Press Note, which apparently gave only the purport of the Chinese communication and not its text, however, did not identify the areas where the revolt had broken out in Tibet.

But, the first official Chinese admission came in the wake of reports that at Tobekar Dzong, Saka and Parkha, between 40 and 70 miles from the Nepalese northern frontiers, the Tibetan rebels were engaged in bitter pitched battles with the Chinese Army.

The indirect admission by the Chinese of the presence of their troops within 20 kilometres of Nepal's border implied that either the revolt had spread or that the Chinese were closing all escape routes to fleeing rebels.

Meanwhile, other reliable reports spoke of a large influx of Tibetan refugees into Nepal, some of whom were believed to be armed. In one of Nepal's districts which covers the Everest region, the number of refugees was estimated at about 3,000.

Mr. K. Shrista On Plight Of Traders:

The President of the All-Nepal National Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Keshavlal Shrista, said in Khatmandu on June 15 that Chinese cavalry units had penetrated into Nepal's northern border in pursuit of Tibetan guerrilla fighters seeking temporary refuge in Nepal.

He said that clashes had occurred between the Chinese soldiers and the people in the border areas of Nepal.

According to him, large numbers of Tibetan guerrillas had reached Nepal's border and had testified that fierce fighting was going on in Tibet, with both sides suffering heavy casualties.

He added that many "innocent" Nepalese traders were killed in the recent fighting between Tibetans and Chinese troops in the border areas. Recently, a detachment of Chinese troops waylaid some Nepalese traders near Kuti, on the border north-east of Khatmandu, and seized their loads of salt.

His statement also referred to the plight of Nepalese traders in Lhasa. "It is said that Tibetans have been prohibited from buying from Nepalese traders. If anyone is caught doing so, he is immediately arrested. Thus Nepali trade has come to a standstill. Nepalese traders wishing to leave Tibet are being harassed and their travel documents are being delayed."

Tibetan Refugees Enter Punjab And Himachal Pradesh:

A Chandigarh message on June 19 said that over 1,000 Tibetan refugees, probably fleeing before a fresh wave of clashes in Tibet, had crossed into the Punjab and Himachal Pradesh through new routes.

It said that they began entering the Punjab in the first week of May and Himachal Pradesh about three weeks later. About 420 had entered Punjab and over 600 Himachal Pradesh by June 19.

This was the first time that Tibetan refugees had directly crossed into either the Punjab or Himachal Pradesh.

They appeared to have entered Punjab through obscure passes in Spiti, a mountain wilderness in the extreme north-western region of Punjab.

The crossings amount to the opening of new routes for the exodus from Tibet to supplement the numerous routes already in use over the bleak mountain passes in northern and eastern Kashmir, northern Uttar Pradesh and the jungle-clad hills of Assam and N-EFA.

Nomad Army's March:

According to information reaching Siliguri (Assam) published in The Times of India on June 29, an estimated 2,00,000 Tibetan nomads under armed escort were fighting their way through Chinese lines in a vast migratory movement from eastern Tibet to western Tibet across hundreds of miles of perilous mountain trails and wind-swept table-land.

Heavy Chinese re-inforcements were being rushed from Sinkiang to annihilate the nomad army which was made up mainly of cavalry.

Although, it was said, the nomads planned to entrench themselves in western Tibet it was feared that they might be finally forced to cross the frontier into India under pressure from the Chinese Army. The nomad force, formidable by Tibetan standards, was armed at best with service rifles of American, Japanese and Chinese origin gathered from various sources over a long period. The Tibetans were, therefore, not expected to withstand the Chinese for long.

The nomads were believed to have grouped themselves in the Amdo Hor and Chang areas of north-east Tibet and set out on their long march from the vicinity of Jyekundo.

Forced to fight their way through, the nomads' march from one end of Tibet to the other had been slow. They were stated to have killed several hundred Chinese and captured large stores of arms and ammunition in an encounter with the communists north of Shigatse. Their immediate objective was the disruption of the Chinese supply lines from Sinkiang to western Tibet and the Chinese were rushing all available troops to intercept the rebel force.

Tshekar Dzong Resistance Ends:

According to reports reaching Khatmandu on July 10, Tibetan resistance in Tshekar Dzong ended in a frenzy of bullets and bloodshed.

Lying about 40 miles north-east of Nepal's Everest region, Tshekar Dzong and its immediate strife-torn environs were said to be under full Chinese control.

For four weeks when this important western Tibet road junction and out-post smouldered under Chinese counter-attacks, the Khampas who had first annihilated the original Chinese garrison held sway. But, Chinese reinforcements in a multi-pronged drive from Shigatse in the north, Mopcha in the east and Tingri and Khartashika in the south and south-west dislodged the Khampas.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Casualty figures were not available, but the battle was described as "fierce". The Chinese People's Liberation Army units, which had at the beginning of the fighting in the region sealed off an area 12 miles in radius from the town, were reported to have lifted their restrictions and the movement of travellers and traders had begun again.

According to reports, the fighting at Saka, further west and 50 miles north of Nepal's Mustang border, was continuing.

One report said that the Chinese casualties in the first days of the fighting were about 200. The Khampas, on the other hand, were believed to have suffered fewer casualties, because their "hit and run" guerrilla tactics cushioned them against heavier losses.

The lower Shigatse-Gartok highway which passes through Saka had been breached at some points by Khampa guerrillas who waylaid and plundered some Chinese convoys.

Mr. Hishi Londup's Statement:

A former Deputy Governor of Nyalam Dzong, Mr. Hishi Londup, who escaped into Nepal in the third week of July, said in Khatmandu on July 21 that the Tibetan Governor and another high official of Nyalam Dzong were in custody following the disappearance of 300 Chinese soldiers from Nyalam Dzong.

[Mr. Londup, a former Governor of Nyalam Dzong, was replaced by the pro-Chinese Sonam two years ago and was demoted to Deputy Governorship later.]

He said that during the first week of June, 1960, the Chinese soldiers arrested two Khampas after a battle near the Tibetan village of Dum across the river Shun Chu. The two arrested Khampas were tortured to give information on Khampa movements along the Tibet-Nepal frontier. They gave out that an attack on Nyalam was planned. Guided by the two Khampas, 300 Chinese soldiers left Nyalam to round up the Khampas, but they never returned. What happened to them and the two Khampas was a mystery. The Nyalam Governor and the Nyalam monk officer refused to accompany the Chinese and they were arrested for "collaboration."

While coming to Khatmandu, he said, he met about 700 Tibetan refugees in the Nepalese village of Chinigaon, opposite Nyalam. The refugees included the Chief Lama of Nyalam Gompha and his 30 disciples who had escaped from Chinese labour camps.

(The Times of India and The Statesman, New Delhi and China Today)

[Prev. ref. 3449:NEP:A]

B. Tibet's First Steel Plant: The New China News Agency said from Lhasa on June 4 that the construction of Tibet's first iron and steel plant had been taken in hand.

Leaders of the Communist Party and Government organization in Tibet, Mr. Chang Kuo-hua, Mr. Tan Kuan-san and the Panchen Lama dug the first spadefuls of earth for the project and laid the corner-stone on May 31. More than 2,000 Chinese and Tibetan workers, soldiers and officials contributed voluntary labour.

The Panchen Lama, acting Chairman of the Preparatory Committee for the Tibet Autonomous Region, said at the ceremony: "We should work well in building the iron and steel plant to add a blossoming golden flower to the Tibetan plateau."

The report did not indicate what would be the production capacity of the plant.

(Hsinhua News)

[Prev. ref. 2548:CHI:D]

INDIA

SUMMARY: Central Government Employees' Strike; Akali Agitation; US Aid To Barapani Project; Joint Indo-US Team's Report On Agricultural Education; Bhakra Dam Enquiry Report; LIC Business In 1959.

A. Central Government Employees' Strike: The Central Government employees went on a strike at midnight on July 11-12. It was called off five days later, on July 17.

The most important demands of the employees' unions were a minimum wage of Rs. 125 and the linking of dearness allowance with the cost of living index.

The Government's stand was summed up in a broadcast by the Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, on July 7 when he appealed to the employees to abandon the strike.

He said that if the employees' demand for a minimum wage of Rs. 125 was to be accepted, it would cost the country Rs. 80 crores in addition to Rs. 40 or 50 crores which the Second Pay Commission's recommendations would cost anyhow. Since the Central wage scale would affect the States, the additional expenditure would be Rs. 150 crores annually or Rs. 700 crores during the Third Five-Year Plan period.

"Is this feasible?" he asked. "Is this even just from the point of the view of the nation and the community? What would happen to all our planning and all our development if we agreed to this?"

A general strike by Government employees, according to him, was not an ordinary industrial dispute. It was different in "quality and intent". Indeed, he thought the idea of a general strike was "wholly out of date". The Government and its employees had no right to inconvenience or do harm to the "great public we are supposed to serve".

President's Ordinance And Government's Order:

On July 8, the President, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, issued an Ordinance under which "the Central Government, if it is satisfied that in the public interest it is necessary or expedient to do so, might, by a general or special Order, prohibit strikes in any essential services."

The Ordinance defined the various services which came under the term "Essential Services".

Later in the day (July 8), the Home Ministry issued the following Order: "In exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance, 1960 (1 of 1960), the Central Government hereby prohibits strikes in the following essential services, namely: (1) any Postal, Telegraph or Telephone service; (2) any Railway service or any other transport service, for the carriage of passengers or goods by land, water or air; (3) any service connected with the operation or maintenance of aerodromes or with the operation, repair or maintenance of aircraft; (4) any service connected with the loading, unloading, movement or storage of goods in any port; (5) any service connected with the clearance of goods or passengers through the Customs or with the prevention of smuggling; (6) any service in any mint or security Press; and (7) any service in any defence establishment of the Government of India".

The Government also warned the employees that they were liable to be summarily dismissed if they joined the strike, which was now illegal.

Efforts To Avert Strike:

There was hectic activity in New Delhi for a week preceding the strike. Union leaders, including Mr. Nath Pai MP, Mr. S. M. Joshi, (Bombay MLA), Mr. S. N. Bannerjee MP, Mr. S. Guruswamy and Mr. Peter Alvares, representing different employees' unions had a series of talks with several Central Ministers on the subject.

Last hopes for a settlement disappeared when the Standing Committee of the Joint Council of Action of the Central Government employees unions rejected on July 11 a three-point proposal, initiated by Mr. Feroze Gandhi MP after his talks with the Government, and issued the strike call.

The three points were: (1) Acceptance by Government of the recommendations of the 15th Indian Labour Conference for a minimum wage of Rs. 125 as a goal to be achieved gradually; (2) Review of the rate of dearness allowance as suggested by the Pay Commission (when the cost of living index goes beyond 115 by 10 points on an average in 12 months) with a guaranteed minimum of neutralization of the rising costs to the extent of 50 percent; in the event of the extent of Government's revision being unacceptable to employees, reference of the question to an arbitrator; and (3) Payment in specific monthly instalments to employees of the accumulated arrears of their dues on account of increase of emoluments during the first six months of the application of the Pay Commission's scales in 1959 which were credited to their Provident Fund.

Strike Call:

The following is the text of the Joint Council of Action Standing Committee's resolution on the strike call:

"The Standing Committee met on July 9 and 10 and took stock of the situation since its last meeting. The Committee heard the latest reports about the preparedness for the strike from the different centres and felt satisfied that in spite of the promulgation of the Ordinance, the morale and determination of the employees remained unaffected.

"The Committee takes a serious view of the fact that the Government, having rejected all proposals for negotiated settlement, has assumed powers which, though clothed in legality, are in violation of the spirit of the Constitution.

"The Committee expresses its grateful thanks to those friends who tried to bring about an amicable settlement and regrets that their efforts bore no fruit.

"The Committee feels that the Central Government employees will go on strike from the mid-night of July 11 as decided by the Joint Council of Action. The Committee urges on the employees the supreme importance of adhering to non-violence and remain peaceful in spite of every form of provocation.

"Once again the Standing Committee of the Joint Council of Action humbly begs of the people to extend their sympathy and forgive the inconvenience of the strike.

"The Committee, having taken into consideration the existing situation that has developed in Assam, directs the Central Government employees in Manipur, Tripura and Assam not to participate in the strike."

The Central Labour Minister, Mr. G. L. Nanda, made a last-minute appeal to the employees "to abstain

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

from joining the strike for the sake of the nation and in their own larger interests."

In regard to the dearness allowance issue, the outstanding issue according to the strike leaders, he pointed out that he had offered that when the cost of living went up by 10 points over a period of 12 months, it would be reviewed by the Government and at least 50 per cent neutralization would be given. If the workers were not satisfied, 'there could be an impartial settlement".

He added: "There could be no bigger gesture than this. Nothing was more reasonable, just and fair and it should have satisfied them fully."

Strike Launched:

The strike began, as announced, at midnight on July 11-12.

According to official sources, it had little effect on the normal life of the country as a majority of the employees did not join the strike.

Nevertheless, at least 15,000 persons, including the Union leaders, were arrested in connexion with the strike. Postal services were restricted in many towns. The strike's impact was greater in Bombay and Calcutta than elsewhere. In Bombay, attempts at sabotaging tele-communications with the rest of the country were reported.

A one-day general strike was called in several towns on July 14.

On the first day of the strike (July 12), seven persons were killed in a police firing on a crowd of striking railway workers at Dohad town in Gujerat State. There were also isolated incidents in other towns.

The Government maintained a firm stand against the strike. Disciplinary action was taken against the striking employees. Official spokesmen also refused to negotiate with the Union leaders until the strike was unconditionally called off.

As the strike entered the fourth day (July 15), some trade union leaders and the P-SP Chairman, Mr. Asoke Mehta, arrived in New Delhi with a view to exploring the possibilities of a settlement of the strike. [Incidentally, some of the top trade union leaders who led the strike belonged to P-SP.]

Mr. Mehta had a series of meetings with Mr. G. L. Nanda, Dr. P. Subbaroyan and Mr. Feroze Gandhi. Finally, he had a 35-minute interview with the Prime Minister Mr. Nehru. No assurances were given or asked for. But, Mr. Mehta made no secret of his anxiety that the situation should not be allowed to deteriorate and that there should be no reprisals by the Government or rancour among the employees.

Strike Called Off:

Mr. A. Mehta also had talks with those members of the Joint Council of Action "who were free and available" and other representatives of the Unions participating in the strike. Later, at midnight on July 17, the Joint Council members decided to call off the strike unconditionally.

The following is the text of the resolution of the Joint Council calling off the strike:

"The members of the Joint Council of Action of the Central Government employees who are free and available in Delhi, along with other representatives of the Unions taking part in the strike, met to take stock of the strike situation.

"This meeting pays its respectful homage to the martyrs who lost their lives in the course of the present struggle.

"This meeting warmly congratulates the Central Government employees in all departments who have responded to the call of the organizations and braved unprecedented hardships and risks.

"This Joint Council of Action explored every possible avenue for an honourable settlement to avert the strike, but the Government, instead of treating the struggle as a bona fide trade union dispute, replied by repression by the enactment of an Ordinance and arrest of more than 15,000 persons so far. The Government has used its coercive apparatus to suppress the strike instead of settling it by normal trade union methods. The entire propaganda machinery of the Government, including its radio and the Press amenable to its influence, have been pressed into service to suppress the truth about the strike, to demoralize the striking employees and to mislead the public. Notices of suspension and termination of services have been served on tens of thousands of employees to intimidate them into abject submission. Even attempts to contact the leaders in prison have been rendered impossible by the refusal of the requests of Mr. S. Guruswamy to interview some of the members in jail.

"After a careful appraisal of the situation throughout the country, this meeting resolves to withdraw the strike immediately and calls upon the participant organizations to act accordingly. It is hoped that the Government will reciprocate this gesture appropriately.

"This meeting urges upon the Government to ensure honourable resumption of duties by the strikers without any disability by giving necessary instructions including the withdrawal of pending cases, prosecutions, remission of sentences, release of those arrested in connexion with the strike, cancellation of discharge and suspension orders and any other disciplinary proceedings against strikers, including members of Territorial units.

"This meeting tenders its grateful thanks to the millions of workers, the general public and those sections of the Press throughout the country who have demonstrated their sympathy and support to the cause of the Central Government employees.

"It expresses in particular its appreciation of those workers who went on a sympathetic strike on July 14 in support of the demands of the Central Government employees on the advice of the central trade union organizations.

"This meeting hopes that the grave decision hereby taken without any sense of false prestige will lead to improved relations between the Central Government, its employees and their organizations and adequate consideration of their demands.

"This meeting appeals to Central Government employees to maintain and to promote fraternal soldiarity on which alone future success can be ensured."

Government's Decisions On Strikers:

After the strike was called off, Mr. Mehta continued his talks with Central Ministers with a view to impressing on them the need of "tempering justice with mercy".

Leaders of the employees' unions who had, in the meantime, been released also appealed to the Government not to be vindictive.

On July 23, the Central Cabinet Secretary, Mr. Vishnu Sahay, announced that the services of those convicted in a court of law would be terminated. Others would be allowed to return to duty except those whose conduct had been particularly objectionable, for example, those who indulged in sabotage, violence, intimidation or gross misconduct. Such persons would be suspended and subjected to disciplinary proceedings. There would be no pay for strikers for the period of their absence.

He also announced the Government's decision to withdraw recognition of unions which were parties to the strike.

The following is the list of the unions which gave the strike notice and their membership:

Railways: All-India Railwaymen's Federation (nine unions)—316,693 men. Southern Railway Labour Union (affiliated neither to A-IRF nor NFIR)—16,634 men.

Defence Installations: All-India Defence Employees Federation (out of 150 unions, 103 gave strike notice)—73,396 men.

Post and Telegraphs: National Federation of P & T (nine unions)—74,800 men.

Central Government Employees: Confederation of Central Government Employees—11 unions and membership, 76,215, as follows: All-India Central PWD Workers Union—7,615; All-India Income-Tax (Non-Gazetted) Staff Federation—12,000; All-India (Non-Gazetted) Audit & Accounts Association—36,000; All-India (Non-Gazetted) Customs Staff Federation—3,200; Central Government Clerks Union—7,000; All-India Civil Aviation Department Employees Union—4,500; Indian Meteorological Workshop Workers Union—150; Indian Meteorological Department (Non-Gazetted Staff) Union—150; All-India P & T Industrial Workers Union—5,500; Defence Accounts Association (membership not available) and Survey of India (Class III) Employees Union—400.

Total membership of all the above unions—557,738.

Congress Working Committee Resolution:

The Congress Working Committee which met in New Delhi adopted a resolution on July 28 recommending to the Central Government that while adequate action should be taken against those of its employees who were responsible for "acts of sabotage and misbehaviour" during the strike of the Central Government employees, large-scale punishment of employees who were "misled into participating in the strike should be avoided."

It also advised the Government to develop harmonious relations with its employees and to promote their well-being.

In an 800-word resolution, the Committee justified the promulgation of the Presidential Ordinance banning the strike, as a general strike of this kind "cannot be accepted as a proper method of settling any dispute." Even though the strike lasted only five days, it caused great loss to the public and to the employees who participated in it.

It maintained that the general strike was, in its very nature, not a normal industrial dispute but had a political aspect and inevitably caused great inconvenience to the public and heavy loss to the exchequer.

It noted that the general public disapproved of the strike, and that a number of employees' organizations, "as well as a considerable majority of Government employees," did not participate in it and continued to discharge their duties with loyalty and efficiency.

It expressed its appreciation of all such organizations and employees for their adherence to duty in spite of pressures exercised against them.

It also expressed its gratification at the large number of volunteers who had offered their services during the strike period and thus enabled the essential services to be carried on. Congressmen throughout the country deserved special credit for the way they served during the period of the strike.

A general strike which was meant to paralyse the life of a nation must necessarily be ruled out as a type of action even for the redress of grievances. Essential Government services, as well as other essential services necessary for the normal life of the community, had to be maintained and no interference with them could be permitted. "It should be clearly laid down that such stoppages of work in essential services are not permissible. At the same time, steps should be taken to evolve a machinery for the settlement of such disputes as may arise. The objective aimed at should be to create conditions which are conducive to the maintenance and improvement of discipline and efficiency and which provide adequate means for consultation, negotiation, redress of grievances and settlement of disputes. The Committee recommends this approach to the Government so that public work may be done with efficiency, the well-being of the employees properly attended to and harmonious relations established in all Government services."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3054:INI:H]

B. Akali Agitation: Since the middle of May, Akali Dal (organization of the Sikhs) had been engaged in an agitation for the establishment of Punjabi Suba or a Punjabi-speaking State within the Indian Union.

Several persons courted arrest by defying the ban on processions and other demonstrations. One of the earliest to be arrested (on May 24) was the President of the Akali Dal, Master Tara Singh.

The Akali Dal had won an overwhelming victory recently in the elections to the Shiromani Gurdwara Prabhandak Committee (SGPC)—the supreme religious body of the Sikhs. This, the Akali Dal claimed, had proved the organization's hold on the Sikhs and the popular backing for its demand for Punjabi Suba.

This was the second time since Independence that the Akalis had sponsored an agitation for a Punjabi-speaking State. In 1955, the first agitation for Punjabi Suba was launched and several hundred persons courted arrest. However, a Congress-Akali compromise was reached in 1956 on the eve of the second General Elections. By it, the Akalis agreed to give up the slogan of Punjabi Suba and, in return, the Congress evolved what came to be known as Regional Formula (see page 721). But, soon, the Akali circles became dissatisfied with the distribution of Congress tickets for the General Elections, and then over the working of the Regional Formula.

The split widened with the breaking away from the Akali Dal of the Punjab Revenue Minister and former lieutenant of Master Tara Singh, Giani Kartar Singh.

The Akalis renewed the demand for Punjabi Suba and advanced four arguments in support of it: (1) the development of the Punjabi language was possible only if Punjabi Suba was formed; (2) since the Regional Formula had "failed", only Punjabi Suba would satisfy the Akali masses; (3) without the formation of Punjabi Suba, the sanctity and independence of gurudwaras could not be maintained; and (4) the "injustices" being perpetrated on the Sikhs by the majority Hindu community could be resisted only by the creation of a State in which the Sikhs were in a majority.

The Punjabi Suba demand was opposed by the Congress Party. It was also denounced by Hindu communal organizations and the people of the Hindi-speaking area (Hariana) in the Punjab.

Support for the demand, however, came from the Praja-Socialist Party. The Communist Party wanted a Punjabi-speaking State, essentially linguistic, but criticised the Akali approach to it as "communal".

Opponents of the demand said that the Punjabi Suba slogan was a camouflage for the Akali objective of setting up a sovereign Sikh State. But this charge had been persistently denied by the Akalis.

The Congress argued that the Punjabi Suba concept was a challenge to secularism and that there could be no compromise on the issue.

During the agitation, several Akalis wanted by the police had sought shelter in gurudwaras as the shrines were in the control of the Akali-dominated SGPC. It was stated that the agitation was directed by proclaimed offenders from their hide-outs in the Golden Temple in Amritsar.

On July 19, the Punjab Government issued an Ordinance providing deterrent punishment to persons who afforded protection, encouragement and financial assistance to proclaimed offenders.

The Chief Minister, Sardar Pratap Singh Kairon, said that the Ordinance was primarily to check the abuse of holy places by political agitators.

[According to a memorandum submitted to the States Re-organization Commission 3½ years ago, the Akali Dal had proposed that Punjabi Suba should comprise the districts of Gurdaspur, Amritsar, Ferozepur, Ludhiana, Jullundur, Hoshiarpur, Ambala, Karnal (excepting Panipat), Sirsa, Bhatinda, Kapurthala, Fatehgarh Sahib, Sangrur (excepting Jind and Nirwana tehsils) and Ganganagar district of Rajasthan. Its total area would be 35,158 square miles, with a population of nearly 1.20 crores. Later, when the Regional Formula was introduced (see page 1812), the Akalis agreed that the Punjabi region consisted of the districts of Gurdaspur, Amritsar, Jullundur, Hoshiarpur, Ferozepur, Ludhiana, Kapurthala, Bhatinda, the Rupar and Chandigarh Assembly constituencies of Ambala district, Patiala district (excluding Kandaghat and Nalagarh tehsils) and Sangrur district (excluding Jind and Nirwana tehsils) with a population of 86,02,608.]

(The Hindustan Times and The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2522:INI:U]

C. Dr. H. J. Bhabha Receives London Doctorate Degree: In a ceremony at London's Royal Festival Hall on July 22, India's leading nuclear physicist, Prof. Homi Jehangir Bhabha, was admitted to the honorary degree of Doctor of Science of London University by the Chancellor, Dowager Queen Elizabeth.

The University was celebrating a double occasion—the centenary of the granting of science degrees and the tercentenary of the Royal Society, which had its origin in London.

In selecting the distinguished men to be honoured on the occasion the Senate of the University chose scientists who were also Fellows of Royal Society.

The University's Public Orator, Prof. J. R. Sutherland, presented Dr. Bhabha to the Queen-Mother with this citation:

"The emergence of India as a great modern nation may be seen in a variety of ways, but nowhere more convincingly than in her ability to produce the men who are now developing her natural resources. In Prof. H. J. Bhabha, Director and Professor of Theoretical Physics at the Tata Institute of Fundamental Research in Bombay, India has a nuclear physicist of world-wide reputation.

"In the 1930s, while still a young man, he made some major contributions to the theoretical explanation of cosmic-ray showers. Later, he gave his attention to some of the most abstract problems of fundamental physics relating to the general properties of space-time, and he has as also attacked the problem of finding an explanation of the fundamental particles.

"As Secretary of the Government of India's Department of Atomic Energy, which he has built up since the War, and as Chairman of his country's Atomic Energy Commission, he has proved himself a brilliant organizer and, to Mr. Nehru in particular, an invaluable adviser on all scientific problems."

(UK High Commission, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3077:INI:E]

D. USA To Finance Barapani Project In Assam: The US Development Loan Fund announced in New Delhi on July 15 that USA had agreed to finance the Barapani Hydro-Electric Power Project in Assam, which would facilitate the use of Assam's important natural resources and help develop the area.

The installation of the 27,000 kw power plant and the construction of the concrete dam would cost Rs. 7.4 crores and would be financed by two US loans.

The Development Loan Fund announced its approval of a $2.5-million (Rs. 1.2 crores) loan to cover the foreign exchange cost of the Project, while the local costs of Rs. 6.2 crores would be met by the sale proceeds of agricultural products supplied to India under PL 480. Both loans would be repayable in Indian currency.

The main structure of the Barapani Project would be a concrete dam—210 feet high and 580 feet long—on the Umiam river, about 300 miles north-east of Calcutta. Two earth dams would also be built to help close the resulting 92,999-acre-ft. reservoir.

The Project would include 72 miles of double-circuit and 33 miles of single-circuit 66 kw transmission lines, plus switch-yard with transformers and switch-gear.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3426:INI:C]

E. Agricultural Education — Joint Indo-US Team's Report: The second joint Indo-American Team, set up by the Government of India in September, 1959 to report on agricultural education in the country, submitted its report to the Government of India in the second week of July recommending that an agricultural education pattern with a well-defined objective should be developed to encompass agricultural teaching from the "manjri" type vocational school and the multi-purpose high school to the agricultural college and university.

At the college level, it said, there should be complete integration of research, teaching and extension.

To ensure the functioning of agricultural institutions and organizations with maximum efficiency, it suggested that these should be under the administrative control of men with scientific qualifications.

'Streamlining" of the organization of agriculture and Community Development from the Central Government down to village level was one of the team's main recommendations.

This "streamlining" would include the appointment at the Centre of a Minister of Agriculture, Community Development (Extension) and Food, who may be assisted by Ministers or Deputy Ministers.

At the State level, it recommended that the Minister in charge of Community Development should also be the Minister for Agriculture, Animal Husbandry, Panchayats and Co-operation. "Agriculture and animal husbandry should provide the techniques, panchayats the organization and co-operation the finance. It is necessary that all these three must be linked up effectively."

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3466:INI:L]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

F. Bhakra Dam Accident—Enquiry Committee's Report: The Bhakra Enquiry Committee which was set up to inquire into the accident in the hoist chamber of Bhakra Dam in August, 1959, in its report published on July 24, exonerated the Project authorities of responsibility for the mishap to the hoist chamber and attributed the accident to "vibration stresses" in Gobindsagar.

It held that the failure of the hoist chamber was a rare type of accident and felt that the provisions made by the Bhakra Project Administration were adequate to safeguard the structure under normal conditions.

It held that some damage had occurred three days before the accident when cracks were noticed in the hoist chamber for the first time. Thereafter, failure was inevitable, whether the emergency gates were closed or not.

The Committee, while indicating the lessons that could be learnt from the accident, suggested the following steps:

(1) In structures subjected to uplift, the upward force should, wherever possible, be counter-balanced by deadweight of concrete or steel of almost equivalent magnitude;

(2) In structures subjected to high uplift pressure the utmost care should be taken to see that the relevant concrete structure acted as a monolithic unit and the possibility of one layer separating from the other was completely eliminated.

(3) In cases where a break-through in one of the galleries could cause damage to the remaining galleries or works due to their inter-connexion, provision should be made for the installation of isolating gates which could be operated for closure by remote control.

The Punjab Government, acting on the advice of the Bhakra Control Board, accepted the findings of the Committee. It also endorsed the view that magnificent work was done by the Bhakra engineers in collaboration with the Army and Naval personnel for repairing the damage.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2862:INI:L]

G. Congress Working Committee—One-third To Be Elected: The Congress Working Committee, which met in New Delhi on July 28, re-opened the question of introducing an elective element in the Working Committee's composition and reversed, by an overwhelming majority, the Poona decision of the A-ICC rejecting a partially elected body.

The Working Committee decided that one-third of its 21 members be elected by the A-ICC and that a constitutional amendment to this effect be moved at the next session of the A-ICC scheduled to be held near Raipur in Madhya Pradesh on October 29 and 30.

The decision would be implemented after the amendment had been approved at the open session of the Congress to be held at Bhavnagar on January 7 and 8, 1961.

This decision followed a lively discussion in the Committee in which Mr. Nehru, who had voted for the proposal at the A-ICC session in Poona on June 4, was understood to have taken a leading part.

It was stated that a majority of the members of the Committee who spoke at the meeting favoured either a wholly elected or a wholly nominated Working Committee. They clearly expressed themselves against a partially elected body for a "variety of reasons."

Mr. Nehru was, however, keen to give effect to the proposal. "Let us accept this proposal as an experiment," he is reported to have pleaded.

Following nearly an hour's discussion, the members, as one of them put it, "succumbed to Mr. Nehru's influence." They all gave their consent to the proposal.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3404:INI:J]

H. Congress Panel For Enquiry Into Corruption Complaints: The Congress President, Mr. N. Sanjiva Reddy, nominated a five-man Panel to inquire into complaints about misuse of authority by responsible Congressmen on July 28.

All complaints received at the A-ICC Office would first be scrutinized by the President himself in consultation with the Chief Ministers concerned or the Prime Minister. If he is convinced that there is enough substance in a complaint he will refer it to the Panel for investigation.

The five members of the Panel announced were: Mr. B. Jagannath Das, a former Judge of the Supreme Court; Mr. V. K. Thiruvenkatachari, Advocate-General, Madras; Mr. P. N. Sapru, a former Judge of the Allahabad High Court; Mr. Hukam Singh, Deputy Speaker, Lok Sabha; and Mr. G. S. Pathak, MP.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3405:INI:K]

I. LIC Business In 1959: The Chairman of the Life Insurance Corporation, Mr. P. A. Gopalakrishnan, said in Bombay on July 25 that the Corporation's new business in 1959 amounted to Rs. 426 crores, recording an increase of 25 per cent over that in the previous year (1958).

He added that the business in 1958, amounting to Rs. 343 crores, was larger by 22 per cent than that in 1957.

The number of new policies issued had increased steadily to 1.15 million in 1959, recording an increase of 41 per cent over those issued in 1957.

The Corporation's experience in respect of lapsation of business was distinctly better than that of the companies operating before the nationalization of life insurance, the net lapses declining from 7.3 per cent of the mean business in force in 1954 and 7.6 per cent in 1955 to 6.4 per cent in 1957 and 5.1 per cent in 1958. The figures for 1959 were being collected for analysis.

The improvement in regard to foreign business continued in 1959 with the new business amounting to Rs. 9.47 crores against Rs. 5.62 crores in 1958 and Rs. 5.40 crores in 1957. He attributed the increase to various measures taken by the Corporation as a result of his visit to East Africa in 1958 and to Singapore in 1959.

Although the Janata Scheme was not working successfully in all the centres, he said, the number of Janata policies issued had been gradually increasing. In 1959, it stood at 28,705 against 21,208 in 1957 and 24,325 in 1958, the sums assured being Rs. 2.01 crores, Rs. 1.17 crores and Rs. 1.61 crores respectively.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3339:INI:F]

J. Uttar Pradesh Legislature—Governor's Address: Addressing a joint session of the Uttar Pradesh Legislature in Lucknow on July 25, the new Governor, Dr. B. Ramakrishna Rao, announced an increase in the dearness allowance (D.A.) of low-paid employees of the State Government and local bodies.

The increase, effective from April 1, 1960, he said, would be Rs. 5 for all employees drawing salaries up to Rs. 50 per month. Those drawing between Rs. 51 and Rs. 100 would get a total D.A. of Rs. 35, while those who had received no interim increase in their D.A. in 1957-59 would get Rs. 5.

He said that the State's Third Five-Year Plan would be "more ambitious" with emphasis on a rapid expansion of the agricultural sector, making up for the backwardness in the power sector and initiating industrial development.

A Plan of such a magnitude would require an all-out effort to tap all possible sources of revenue, and the people should be prepared to tighten their belts further.

About 5,000 new service co-operatives would be organized in the current financial year (1960-61). The 10,000 societies formed in 1959-60 had begun distribution of supplies, especially of fertilizers.

A Bill to implement the Government's new co-operative policy would be introduced in the current session of the Legislature.

The Government's "ceaseless efforts" for the industrialization of the State, he said, were now bearing fruit. An antibiotic factory was proposed to be set up at Rishikesh with Russian aid offered to the Government of India. Some major fertilizer units might also be established in the State in the Third Plan.

He concluded with an appeal to the legislators, and through them to the people of the State, to rise above "isms," such as casteism, provincialism, communalism and party bickerings in view of the "dangers that are looming around us."

(National Herald, Lucknow)

[Prev. ref. 2819:INI:N]

K. Separation Of Judiciary From Executive: It was officially stated in New Delhi on July 23 that the judiciary had been completely separated from the executive in Andhra, Gujerat, Kerala, Madras, Mysore and Maharashtra by the end of 1959.

In four other States—Bihar, Madhya Pradesh, Punjab and Uttar Pradesh—the separation had been effected in some areas.

In Bihar, the separation scheme was functioning in 12 out of 17 districts. The question of its extension to the remaining five districts was under consideration.

In Madhya Pradesh, there was complete non-statutory separation of the judiciary from the executive in its former Madhya Bharat, Vindhya Pradesh and Bhopal regions and partial separation in the Mahakoshal area. The State Government had decided to implement the scheme for the entire Mahakoshal region.

In the area comprised of the former PEPSU State, judicial and executive magistrates functioned separately. Since January 3, 1955, the scheme had been implemented in Gurgaon, Ambala, Simla, Jullundur and Hoshiarpur districts of the Punjab.

The separation had been effected in 34 of the 51 districts of Uttar Pradesh. The State Government was expected to introduce the scheme in all the districts within the next few years.

A scheme for the separation of the judiciary from the executive had been in opera-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

tion in all the districts of West Bengal since 1959. Necessary legislation to give it a statutory basis would be undertaken shortly.

The Assam Government had appointed a committee to go into the question. Orissa had decided to introduce the scheme in three districts, i.e. Cuttack, Puri and Balasore, as an experimental measure. Rajasthan was considering the report of the Committee set up for the purpose.

At the State Law Ministers' Conference held in June, 1960 in Srinagar, it was re-iterated that the State Governments' policy was to separate the judiciary completely from the executive.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3339:INI:H]

L. National Oceanic Research Committee Set Up: It was announced in New Delhi on July 23 that the Government of India had set up a seven-member National Committee for Oceanic Research, with Dr. D. N. Wadia, Geological Adviser in the Department of Atomic Energy, as chairman.

The decision, it was said, was taken on the recommendation of the Scientific Advisory Committee to the Cabinet.

Under its terms of reference, the Committee would draw up a co-ordinated plan for India's participation in the International Indian Ocean Expedition and co-ordinate the research programmes.

It would also give advice on the allocation of the programme between the various departments of Government, research organizations and university laboratories, consider and approve detailed plans for research in the several scientific disciplines relating to India's participation in the Programme and also advise the Government generally on all matters connected with India's participation in the Expedition.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3280:INI:L]

M. Bhoodan — Acharya Vinoba Bhave On Mission: Acharya Vinoba Bhave told newsmen at Pant Piplia, a village 10 miles from Ujjain, on July 21 that about 900,000 acres of land was received by him in bhoodan from the people during his nine years' walking tour of the country.

All the land received so far, he said, had been distributed among the landless in different parts of the country and was now being successfully cultivated.

He added that hardly 3,500 people were engaged in the bhoodan movement and the collection and distribution of 900,000 acres of land within nine years was "something remarkable". The bhoodan mission had been "successful"—beyond his expectation.

Replying to a question he said that he was not concerned as to who would continue his bhoodan mission after him.

In this connexion, he laid emphasis on service and not on leadership.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2084:INI:O]

INDONESIA

SUMMARY: New Regulations On Political Parties; Action Against Communists; Common Market Criticised; Dr. Djuanda's Visit To USSR; Trade Agreement With USSR.

A. New Regulations On Political Parties: The Government issued certain regulations on July 13 which would give it power to control all political parties.

That the Government would issue such regulations had been announced by President Sukarno as early as January, 1960.

Under the regulations, any party established after Indonesia's return to the 1945 Revolutionary Constitution will be banned.

No party of fewer than 150,000 members will be recognized, nor any branch with fewer than 50 members.

Recognized parties must report to the President before December 31, 1960 on their rules, membership, backing and general condition. Such reports must be repeated every six months.

No party may have aliens as its members.

All the parties must recognize as the foundation of the State the President's Political Manifesto, the 1945 Constitution, the President's theories of "Guided Democracy", "Guided Economy", "Indonesian Socialism", "Indonesian Identity" and the Panch Shila—belief in God, humanity, nationalism, democracy and social justice.

A party may become liable to dissolution if it is "against the State's principles" and its programme is "aimed at a change in the foundation of the State" and if it fosters rebellion.

If the President considers that any party is transgressing in these respects, he will submit the matter to the Supreme Court.

The Court, after investigation, will give its opinion to the President for action.

If the Court finds the party guilty it must dissolve in 30 days or be banned. Any of its members in the legislative bodies will be required to resign.

The parties must have branches in one-fourth of the provinces in Indonesia and the total branches must be one-fourth of the number of districts in the Republic.

In striving for their objects, the parties must "use peaceful and democratic means".

(Information Service Indonesia and The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3124:IND:A]

B. Action Against Communists: The Communist Party office in Djakarta said on July 18 that a member of the Party Presidium and Deputy Chairman of the National Planning Council, Dr. Sakirman, had been detained by the authorities for security reasons.

He was arrested on July 15 at his residence in Bandung.

Earlier, in the first week of July, Communist Party publications had published criticism of Government, singling out the Army for criticism.

Members of the Party Politburo were reported to have been interrogated by the Djakarta Military Command.

A Military Command spokesman, Lieut. Eddy Djadjang Djajaatmadja, explained that the Party Politburo statement, headed "Appraisal of Cabinet after one year indicates its composition does not guarantee realization of the Government's three-point programme and should, therefore, be re-organized", had created anxiety and confusion among the people and might directly harm and reduce the Government's authority.

It was considered necessary in the interests of preserving law and order to summon and interrogate the Politburo members for clarification of the statement.

It demanded that the names of Cabinet Ministers mentioned in the statement should be replaced. They included the First Minister, Mr. Djuanda Kartawidjaja, for alleged failures and shortcomings in general policies; the Foreign Minister, Dr. R. Subandrio, in foreign policies; and General A. H. Nasution, National Defence Minister, for slowness in dealing with the rebellion.

The Communist Party newspaper Harian Rakjat (People's Daily) has been banned since July 15 for printing the statement.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3168:IND:A]

C. Mr. C. Saleh Criticises External Tariff Of Common Market: The Reconstruction Minister, Mr. Chaerul Saleh, who had been on a visit to West Germany, in a prepared statement issued in Bonn on July 20, said that the external tariff of the six-nation European Common Market would affect some products whose undisturbed export was vital for under-developed countries.

He asked: "Is there not a blatant contradiction here between the principle of aid for the developing countries which is not only propagated but practised by the European countries and this protectionism which strongly affects this help?"

[The Common Market Tariff is to be reached by steps over several years. It will have the effect of raising, on average, West German and the Benelux countries' tariff, and reducing those of Italy and France. At the same time, internal tariffs and tariffs with associated territories in Africa which supply from raw materials will be abolished.]

He said that the effect of the proposed tariff would harm the market for Indonesian tobacco in West Germany. The proposed tariff for tobacco was 30 per cent on value, which would prevent Indonesia from sending so much high quality tobacco to West Germany.

He said: "We in Indonesia hope and expect that the countries of the European Common Market will do something to reduce somewhat the protectionist measures which will harm many developing countries."

In particular, he called on West Germany to use all the Treaty clauses possible to avert the danger to Indonesia's tobacco exports to this country.

He added that West Germany had agreed to the construction by West German firms of a blast furnace in South Sumatra for pig iron, two—15,000-ton—floating docks and a tin smelting plant of an annual capacity of 25,000 tons. In the past four years, West German export guarantees had been granted for orders worth a total of 100 million marks for Indonesian projects. He had the impression that future guarantees "would not be less".

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 2498:AOA:C]

D. Death Penalty For Pilot Who Strafed Presidential Palaces: A military court in Djakarta imposed death sentence on July 16 on Second-Lieut. Daniel Maukar (29) who had machine-gunned from a plane the Presidential palaces at Djakarta and Bogor with a view to killing President Sukarno on March 9, 1960.

He was charged with "plotting to kidnap President Sukarno, supporting the enemy, a military rebellion, desertion, conducting of unauthorized operations, landing at an unauthorized place, joining a subversive movement and intentionally wounding certain persons."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He told the court that he was a member of a secret organization known as Manguni (meaning owl, in the language of the North Celebes).

Manguni planned to take Djakarta in a coup and persuade Dr. Sukarno to make peace with the rebel movement in the Republic.

He was to use his MIG-17, one of seven fighters, to strafe the President's palace in Djakarta and his summer residence at nearby Bogor, and installations at Djakarta as a signal for the start of an uprising.

Dr. Sukarno was absent from his palace when the attack took place. Fifteen persons were wounded in the strafing.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3246:IND:A]

E. Visit Of Mr. Djuanda Kartawidjaja To USSR: The First Minister of the Government of Indonesia, Dr. Raden Haji Djuanda Kartawidjaja, arrived in Tashkent on June 30 by a special TU-104 airliner on a friendly visit to the Soviet Union at the invitation of the Chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers, Mr. Nikita Khruschev.

His party included Indonesia's Minister of Construction and Development, Mr. Chaerul Saleh, and others.

Dr. Djuanda arrived in Moscow by air on July 1.

He was met at the airport by leading Government and public officials.

Dr. Djuanda visited a number of cities in the Soviet Union, including Baku, the Black Sea region, Leningrad and Stalingrad.

He was the guest of honour at a reception in Moscow held by the Soviet Government on July 9.

Speaking on the occasion, the Soviet Prime Minister, Mr. N. Khruschev, said that the arrival of Dr. Djuanda to the Soviet Union would turn a new chapter in the development of friendly relations between Indonesia and the Soviet Union.

He stressed that the Soviet, Indonesian and all the other freedom-loving peoples were coming out as associates and allies in the struggle against colonialism. "The Soviet Union fully understands and shares the position of the Government of Indonesia and many other countries of the world who resolutely oppose participation in aggressive military alignments. The Soviet people highly appreciate the contribution of the Indonesian people to the cause of consolidating peace and establishing the necessary confidence in the relations between States." It was beyond the power of the 'cold war' advocates to change the course of indomitable historical development directed towards the strengthening of the peace forces.

Joint Communique:

At the conclusion of the visit of Dr. Djuanda, the following joint communique was issued on July 11:

"During his stay in USSR, Dr. Djuanda had an opportunity of establishing contacts and holding official talks with the leaders of the Soviet Union. The talks dealt with Soviet-Indonesian relations and the current international situation and led to complete mutual understanding between both sides on the problems confronting the world.

"During the exchange of opinions between them, Dr. Djuanda and Mr. Khruschev reached a still closer understanding with respect to the positions of USSR and the Republic of Indonesia in the world today.

"The Soviet Union maintains its attitude of respect for Indonesia as a nation pursuing an independent policy. Both sides, Indonesia and the Soviet Union, are of the opinion that all disputed international issues can be gradually settled through generally accepted and fair means.

"Indonesia values the great efforts the Soviet Union is making to explore new avenues towards solving the basic international problems.

"The Soviet Government's new proposals for general and complete disarmament provide a good basis for solving the disarmament problem. In this respect, both sides are of the opinion that the issue of war and peace under the present conditions is the cardinal question in whose settlement all mankind is interested.

"Both sides share the view that colonialism, in whatever form or disguise it may still exist, constitutes an obstacle to the strengthening of peace and international co-operation."

The communique gave information about the talks that had taken place on questions of mutual economic and commercial co-operation and said that an Agreement was reached on the construction of a steel plant in Indonesia with an annual output capacity of 100,000 tons of steel instead of two plants with annual capacities of 50,000 tons.

It added: "Both sides exchanged the Ratification Instruments of the second General Agreement on Economic and Technological Co-operation between USSR and Indonesia, signed on February 28, 1960.

"The Agreement provides for co-operation in building industrial, agricultural and other establishments in Indonesia as well as for the Government of USSR to grant Indonesia a long-term loan on easy terms to the value of 250,000,000 American dollars.

"There was an exchange of letters on detailing a group of Soviet specialists to Indonesia in 1960 to co-operate with Indonesian specialists in drafting recommendations for the construction of a number of industrial installations.

"Both sides have signed an Agreement on co-operation in using atomic energy for peaceful purposes.

"To promote mutually advantageous trade relations, a long-term Trade Agreement for 1961-63 (see below) has been signed."

Dr. Djuanda and his party left Moscow by air on July 11 for Warsaw after a fortnight's visit to the Soviet Union.

He was seen off at the airport, among others, by Mr. Khruschev and the First Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. Anastas Mikoyan.

(Tass)

[Prev. ref. 3230:IND:B, 3256:AOA:A]

F. Soviet-Indonesian Trade Agreement: A long-term Trade Agreement between Indonesia and the Soviet Union was signed in Moscow on July 9.

Dr. Djuanda was in Moscow at the time on a visit to the Soviet Union as the guest of the Russian Government.

The Agreement, which marked yet another important stage in the development of Soviet-Indonesian economic relations, listed the goods for reciprocal delivery in 1961, 1962 and 1963.

It was concluded in compliance with the Soviet-Indonesian Joint Statement of February 28, 1960, signed by Mr. Nikita Khruschev, Chairman of the Council of Ministers of USSR, and Dr. Sukarno, President of the Republic of Indonesia.

By it, Indonesia would purchase in the Soviet Union road-building machinery, excavators, tractors, farming machinery, machine-tools and other equipment, rolled ferrous metal, building materials, newsprint, medicines and chemical and oil products. The Soviet Union would increase its purchases in Indonesia of rubber, hides, vegetable oil, spices, coffee, resin and other traditional Indonesian export goods.

It was expected that the exchange of goods between USSR and Indonesia would annually increase and, in 1963, would treble the 1959 figure.

[Prev. ref. 3203:IND:B] (Tass)

IRAN

A. Recognition Of Israel: The Shah of Iran announced at a news conference in Tehran on July 23 that Iran had decided to recognize Israel.

The Shah said that Iran had extended de facto recognition to Israel many years ago and that there had never been any question of withdrawing it.

Iranian Embassy sources, however, explained that the Shah's announcement merely implied the re-appointment of an Iranian Ambassador to Israel after the lapse of nearly eight years.

The last Iranian envoy in Tel Aviv was recalled at the height of pro-Mossadeq riots in Tehran during 1952 due to "financial reasons." The need for re-opening the Iranian Embassy in Israel was highlighted by the presence of about 80,000 Iranian Jews in Israel, who still retain their Iranian nationality.

[Turkey is the only other Muslim country which has recognized Israel so far.]

The decision of the Iranian Government caused some concern in the capitals of West Asian countries, including Cairo.

An Arab League spokesman said in Cairo on July 24 that though Iran was not a member of the Arab League this recognition of Israel by her was "an unfriendly step" by a Muslim country against the other Muslim countries of West Asia.

He added that the issue would be discussed by the Foreign Ministers of ten Arab League countries at a conference in Beirut on August 22, 1960.

UAR Breaks Off Diplomatic Relations:

In Cairo, Col. G. A. Nasser announced on July 26 the closing of the United Arab Republic Embassy in Tehran following "the recognition of Israel by the Shah of Iran".

The UAR Ambassador to Tehran, Mr. Moharram Ahmad, was recalled to Cairo for consultations on July 25.

The UAR Foreign Ministry informed all foreign diplomatic representatives in Cairo and the Arab League on July 27 of its decision to break off diplomatic relations with Iran.

The decision was simultaneously made known to all UAR envoys abroad, including the Permanent UAR Representative at United Nations.

Iran ordered the UAR Ambassador in Tehran on July 27 to leave the country within 24 hours.

The order was made by the Foreign Minister, Mr. Abbas Aram, who summoned the Ambassador, Mr. Moharram Ahmed, after a meeting with the Shah.

The Shah had earlier refused to see the Ambassador.

Mr. Abbas Aram told newsmen in Tehran that the decision to order the UAR Ambassador to leave Tehran

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

was taken after President Nasser's speech in Alexandria attacking the Shah of Iran.

This attack was made on the pretext of Iran's recognition of Israel. But, Iran had not fully recognized Israel—it was only a de facto recognition given 10 years ago and there had been no change since.

He described President Nasser as a "light-headed Pharaoh who is ruling by bloodshed."

In Lahore, the Pakistan Foreign Minister, Mr. Manzoor Qadir, said on July 26 that Iran's decision would "have no influence" on Pakistan.

He added: "Pakistan's position has been made abundantly clear and there will be no change."

UAR National Assembly Resolution:

The UAR National Assembly adopted a resolution on July 28 appealing to all Arab countries to break off diplomatic relations with Iran.

The resolution, which was carried unanimously, denounced the recognition of Israel by the Shah of Iran and said that this move was "an aggressive act against the Arab nations."

It approved "the strong measures taken by President Nasser in breaking off diplomatic relations with Iran" and appealed to parliaments, political organizations and trade unions in all Arab countries to follow the example set by UAR.

After urging unified action against the Shah of Iran's Government, it expressed the Assembly's "consideration" for the Iranian people.

It was announced in Amman on July 29 that King Hussein of Jordan had sent a special message to the Shah of Iran asking him to suspend dealings with Israel.

Arab League Measures:

It was stated in Cairo on July 29 that the Secretary-General of the Arab League, Mr. Abdel Khalik, had instructed the League's offices to apply economic boycott on Iran because of its recognition of Israel.

The application of the boycott would mean the banning of all dealings with Iranian companies which do business with Israel and barring Iranian ships from entering Arab ports.

So far, there were only two Iranian companies in the boycott black-list of 301 companies from 27 countries. They were identified as "Ats Essag and Houfhang" and the "Irish Trading Company."

The Arab League announced in Cairo on July 28 that Iran would be barred from participating in the Arab Oil Conference due to open in Beirut on October 12 because of her recognition of Israel.

A Note published by the League said that Iran had been the principal supplier of oil to Israel for a number of years.

(Tehran Radio, Cairo Radio and The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3235:UAR:B]

B. Azna Steel Foundry Agreement: It was revealed in London on July 15 that after several years of negotiations, the draft Agreement on the Azna steel works had been finalized with a consortium of German firms, headed by Demag-Krupp, and including a British firm—the Metallurgical Equipment Export Company.

The consortium is to build the 300,000-ton steel works. The works will be located at Chamzaman, near Azna.

The main Agreement has been approved by the Iranian Council of Ministers.

The West German Government has undertaken to help with the credits necessary for the steel works.

The Swedish consulting engineers—Skandi-Consul—are also concerned in the project.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 3232:IRN:A]

ISRAEL

A. US Farm Surplus Agreement: Under an Agreement signed in Washington early in July, Israel will receive 120,000 tons of fodder grain worth $7,400,000 from the US Government to help cover drought losses.

This Agreement, under PL 480, was included in accounts for the American fiscal year 1959-60, bringing the total value of US surplus of farm supplies to Israel in that year to $37,600,000.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 3204:ISR:B]

B. Mr. A. Eichmann's Arrest—Argentine Note: The Argentine Government has sent a Note to Israel that it retained the right to take any action it considered "adequate" in the case of the arrest of Mr. Adolf Eichmann by the Israeli authorities in Argentina.

Details of the Note were released in Buenos Aires on July 21.

The Note said that the Argentine Government had received "neither adequate reparations nor even a full report on how the illegitimate action in the Eichmann case was carried out".

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3447:ISR:A]

JAPAN

SUMMARY: Mr. H. Ikeda Becomes Premier; Knife-Attack On Mr. N. Kishi; New Cabinet Sworn-in; Exports and Imports; Survey Of Radio-Activity; Treatment Against Radiation.

A. Mr. Hayato Ikeda Elected Premier: A Convention of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party held in Tokyo on July 14 elected the Minister of Trade and Industry, Mr. Hayato Ikeda, as the Party President and Premier-designate.

Mr. Ikeda had a substantial majority over his rival, Mr. Mitsujiro Ishi, a senior party leader. A third candidate, Mr. Bamboku Ohno, dropped out before the voting to consolidate the anti-Ikeda forces behind Mr. Ishi.

The Convention proceedings opened with a brief address by the Prime Minister and out-going President of the Party, Mr. Nobusuke Kishi, announcing his resignation and apologizing for his failure to maintain the Party unity.

Speaking later to newsmen, Mr. Ikeda referred to the criticism that he represented the "bureaucratic" element in the Party and said that as Party President he would not make any differentiation and would regard all Party members equally. "We must raise our international prestige and restore the international trust damaged by the recent crisis. We must pursue a policy that commands the respect of the communist countries. We must not be made fools of."

He proclaimed support for the Security Treaty with the United States and a determination to eradicate violence by strict enforcement of the law.

Mr. N. Kishi Stabbed:

In the afternoon (on July 14), at a reception at Mr. Kishi's official residence for Mr. Ikeda, Mr. Kishi was wounded by an ultra-nationalist, who entered the house wearing a Liberal Democratic Party badge. As Mr. Kishi was conversing with a few guests in the main reception room, he was stabbed six times in the thigh with a short knife.

Mr. Kishi was taken in his car to hospital while the police detained the assailant, Taisuke Aramaki, a 65-year-old chemist. It was later reported that Mr. Kishi's injuries were not serious and he would recover within 10 days.

This was the second instance within a month of a leading politician being attacked by an ultra-nationalist. On June 17, Mr. Jotaro Kawakami, a Socialist, was stabbed in the shoulder during a demonstration.

Mr. H. Ikeda Elected Premier By Diet:

At an extra-ordinary session of the Houses of the Diet on July 18, Mr. Ikeda was elected Premier by a large majority.

The issue was never in doubt in view of the dominant position of the Liberal Democratic Party in the Diet.

Mr. Ikeda got 275 votes in the Lower House, where 438 members of all parties attended.

Mr. Ikeda's opponents, Mr. Inejiro Asanuma of the Socialist Party, got 121 votes and Mr. Suehiro Nishio, of the Democratic Socialists, got 38.

The total strength of the House of Representatives was theoretically 467 and Mr. Ikeda's vote was a high percentage of the maximum number of votes he could have received along party divisions.

New Cabinet Personnel:

Later at night (July 18), Mr. H. Ikeda announced the members of his new Cabinet, which included Japan's first woman Minister, Mrs. Masa Nakayama.

The list of Ministers and their portfolios were as follows:

Mr. Hayato Ikeda—Prime Minister;
Mr. Zentaro Kosaka—Foreign Affairs;
Mr. Tetsuzo Kojima—Justice;
Mr. Tukuo Nanjo—Agriculture;
Mr. Tomisaburo Hashimoto—Construction;
Mr. Hirohide Ishida—Labour;
Mrs. Masa Nakayama—Welfare;
Mr. Mitsujiro Ishi—International Trade and Industry;
Mr. Masuo Araki—Education;
Mr. Yoshio Minami—Transport;
Mr. Zenko Suzuki—Postal Affairs;
Mr. Mikio Mizuta—Finance; and
Mr. Iwao Yamasaki—Local Autonomy.

(The New York Times and The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3448:JAP:C]

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

B. Exports And Imports: The Ministry of Finance announced on July 9 that the exports of Japan during the first six months of 1960 amounted to $1,842 million—an increase of 19.6 per cent over the first half of last year.

The figures were based upon f.o.b. prices recorded in declarations to the Customs.

Imports during the period totalled $2,243 million—a rise of 29.1 per cent over the corresponding period of 1959.

The import figure was based on c.i.f. prices reported to the Customs.

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3100:JAP:A]

C. Radio-Activity Survey: According to surveys carried out until October, 1959 by the Atomic Energy Commission, the following findings were made in respect of radio-activity in Japan.

First, there was a tendency for radio-active dust to concentrate chiefly in the region just below the stratosphere. This phenomenon was attributed to fact that the dust engendered by nuclear experiments drifted down slowly from the stratosphere, but once it got into the trophosphere it was washed down by rains. However, observations after 1959 revealed a gradual diminishing of the radio-active dust in the region below the stratosphere which was presumed to be the result of less frequent nuclear experiments.

Secondly, the contamination of unpolished rice was on the increase. Observations during 1952 showed that the rice had an average contamination of 140-Strontium unit, while surveys in 1958 indicated an average of 225-Strontium unit.

Thirdly, radio-active contamination of bones of livestock was noticed after atomic and hydrogen bombs tests were carried out. The contamination in horse bones in 1957 averaged approximately seven Strontium units. It increased to about 13 Strontium units in 1958 and 19 in 1959.

Radio-active contamination in marine products as compared to land animals was small.

[It may be recalled that the Japanese were the only people directly afflicted by nuclear explosions as witnessed in Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945. Later, on March 1, 1954, the Japanese fishing vessel, Fukuryu Maru, was showered with radio-active 'fall-out' as a result of American nuclear test explosions in the Pacific. There had also been instances in which fish hauled from the Pacific were contaminated by radio-activity. Radio-active rain had also been witnessed in various parts of the country.]

(Embassy of Japan, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2193:JAP:A]

D. Treatment Against Strontium-90 Radiation: The Director of the Radio-Isotope Laboratory of Gumma University in Central Japan, Dr. Eihi Ogawa, announced in Tokyo on July 24 that a new method of treatment against Strontium-90 radiation poisoning superior to any used to-date had been developed at the University.

He said that his team had succeeded in driving Strontium-90 out of the bodies of animals by combining the use of acromycin, an antibiotic, with that of thiosulphuric acid, an antidote.

He said that he gave subcutaneous' injections to mice of 1 microcurie of Strontium-90 and then treated the mice with 0.2 cc. of 1/4 per cent solution of acromycin once a day and an 8 per cent solution of thiosulphuric acid. This was sufficient to eliminate from the body 80 per cent of the Strontium that had gone in.

Till now sodium-calcium nitrate and magnesium chloride had been used to drive out Strontium-90, but the large quantities required have made them highly toxic. The new treatment dispenses with large quantities, making for low toxicity.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2193:JAP:A]

LEBANON

A. General Elections: Voters in the Mount Lebanon area went to the polls on June 12 in the first phase of the General Elections held in the Lebanon. The Elections ended on July 3.

The Elections took place in four stages in four different parts of the country on successive Sundays, but the main interest was centred on Mount Lebanon where the former President, Mr. Camille Chamoun, leading the National Liberal Party, was among the candidates.

His entry into the field about 10 days previously had caused a split between him and his former allies—the Falange Party—which had supported him during the 1958 revolution.

The Falange Party accused him of stabbing them in the back because he was fighting the Election directly with their own candidate.

The Government called out nearly 6,000 troops and police to ensure peaceful polling in Mount Lebanon.

The following were the results showing the distribution of members of Parliament among the various communities:

Maronites (Catholics)	30
Moslems (Sinnites)	20
Moslems (Chiites)	19
Greek Orthodox	11
Greek Catholics	6
Druzes	6
Armenian Orthodox	4
Armenian Catholics	1
Protestants	1
Minorities	1
Total	99

The distribution of members of Parliament in the various constituencies was as follows:

Beirut	16
Mount Lebanon	30
Southern Lebanon	18
Northern Lebanon	20
Bekaa	15
Total	99

President Fuad Chehab Withdraws Resignation:

On July 20, President Fuad Chehab revoked his decision to resign which was announced earlier in the day.

The news that President Chehab had decided to remain in office was greeted with jubilation by the Lebanese.

The withdrawal of his resignation came after a delegation of members of Parliament went to the Presidential Palace petitioning him not to resign.

In his letter of resignation, President Chehab—who was elected President when the Lebanon was torn by internal strife in 1958—said that "the clouds of crisis had cleared, the traces of catastrophe had been erased, the Lebanon was back to normal and the people had elected a new Parliament."

A communique issued on July 21 announced that the Prime Minister, Mr. Ahmed Daoud, was relinquishing the post of Defence Minister, which was to be taken over by the Army Commander-in-Chief, General Abel Chehab, cousin of President Chehab.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 3329:LEB:A, 3343:LEB:A]

NEPAL

A. Further Chinese Incursions Reported: According to reports reaching Khatmandu on July 22, Chinese troops had intruded into Nepalese territory in at least a dozen places in the last two months.

Some of these violations had taken place subsequent to the Mustang incident on June 28.

Aralanga and Riu in north-west Nepal were described as the points at which the most serious incursions had taken place.

While at the former (Aralanga), Chinese troops were reported to be still in occupation of the strategic pass which controls the important trade routes, at Riu Chinese troops had uprooted the boundary stone north of the village and had placed it to its south.

The strength of Chinese troops in the area was put at between 20 and 50.

A former Deputy Governor of Nyalam Dzong, Mr. Hishi Londup, who escaped into Nepal in the third week of July, said in Khatmandu on July 21 that the Chinese had concentrated nearly 2,00,000 of her soldiers along the 500-mile-long Sino-Nepalese border, massed at about 30 places within five to 50 miles of the border.

Besides, he said, the Chinese had a big air force at Tingri, within 50 air-miles of Khatmandu.

There was, however, no official confirmation of these reports from the Nepal Government as such.

Mr. Chou En-lai On Demilitarized Zone:

It was stated on July 21 that Mr. Chou En-lai had accepted in a letter to Mr. B. P. Koirala a sort of a "shortcoming" on his part with regard to the sending of troops to the demilitarized zone on the Sino-Nepalese border.

He did not, however, admit that it could constitute any violation of the Demilitarization Agreement.

Mr. Chou En-lai said that China did inform Nepal of its Army's presence near the border with the purpose of putting down the Tibetan rebellion.

He also urged Nepal to regard both the Mustang incident and the question of Chinese violation of the demilitarized zone as "closed," suggesting that Nepal should not proceed with these matters any further.

He also told Mr. Koirala that he was "grateful" that the Nepalese Premier was not provoked by any other interested parties and also that Mr. Koirala had not allowed the Sino-Nepalese friendship to be harmed despite these incidents which were better forgotten.

Speaking in the Lower House of Parliament on July 25, Mr. B. P. Koirala charged China with violating its Agreement with Nepal on the demili-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

tarized zone by sending her troops there without prior consultation with Nepal.

He said that in his letter to Mr. Chou En-lai on July 24, he had rejected China's contention that the Mustang incident took place within Tibet and not in Nepalese territory.

He demanded that China should not in future unilaterally send troops within the demilitarized zone.

Mustang Incident "Closed":

Both Mr. Koirala and Mr. Chou En-lai, however, agreed that the question of the location where the Mustang incident occurred on June 28—whether in Nepal territory or Chinese territory—may now be closed.

Referring to the Mustang incident in his letter of July 12 to Mr. Koirala, Mr. Chou En-lai wrote: "I would like to re-iterate that the Chinese Government has confirmed through repeated investigations, including on-the-spot investigations, that the Chinese troops engaged in suppressing rebel bandits operated in Chinese territory, north of the Sino-Nepalese boundary, and that this unfortunate incident in fact occurred at a place about one kilometre north of the Kore Pass within Chinese territory.

"Since the matter has been concluded and the Chinese Government has borne due responsibility for the incident, I believe Your Excellency will surely agree that it would be meaningless and unprofitable for the two sides to continue to argue over the place of the incident".

In his reply dated July 24, Mr. Koirala said: "As regards the place of the incident, it appears that the views of our two sides are at variance. But when I consider that the Chinese Government has stated that the incident has taken place on account of the carelessness of low-ranking personnel of the Chinese Army and that the Chinese Government has borne the responsibility, I agree with your view that it would not serve any gainful purpose to continue arguing over the incident.

"I want to place on record, however, that nothing has given His Majesty's Government reasons to change its view that the incident took place in Nepalese territory".

China Agrees To Pay Compensation:

The New China News Agency announced on July 20 that China had agreed to the Nepalese demand for Rs. 50,000 as compensation for the killing of a Nepalese officer in the border incident at Mustang on June 28.

(The Times of India and The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3449:NEP:A]

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: Budgets Of West And East Pakistan; Mr. M. Shoaib On Unified Budget For Country; National Prize Bonds Scheme; Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy Disqualified.

A. West Pakistan Budget For 1960-61: The West Pakistan Governor, Mr. Amir Mohammed Khan, announced the West Pakistan Budget for 1960-61 in Lahore on June 29.

It revealed a surplus of Rs. 8,88,18,000.

Revenue receipts were estimated at Rs. 79,82,83,000 and expenditure at Rs. 70,94,65,000.

According to the revised estimates, a surplus of Rs. 16,51,00,000 was declared for the year 1959-60 as against the estimated surplus of Rs. 4,91,00,000.

No new taxes were imposed.

The estimated income of the West Pakistan Provincial Government in the Revenue and Capital accounts would come to Rs. 137.2 crores during the next financial year as compared to Rs. 139.9 crores for the current year.

The proposed expenditure during the next financial year (1960-61) was calculated at Rs. 135.31 crores as against the revised estimates of the expenditure of Rs. 117.11 crores for the current financial year.

A special feature of the Budget was that the net development outlay of the Province would exceed the investment target fixed by the Planning Commission.

The development programme of the Province would come to Rs. 76 crores (exclusive of establishment charges) as against the average provision of Rs. 71 crores in a year made in the Second Five-Year Plan.

The total revenue grants on beneficent departments was raised from Rs. 27,13,63,000 (revised estimate for 1959-60) to Rs. 37,46,20,000. The major share went to Education, Health and Agriculture.

Next year's programme (1960-61) would provide educational facilities for 1,12,000 children at the primary level which would be five times the average additional facilities provided during the last few years.

A College for Architecture and Town Planning would also be set up.

The net development programme of Rs. 76 crores would be financed by loans and grants from the Central Government to the extent of Rs. 43 crores.

The major share in the development programme would go to the development of water and power resources which was estimated to cost Rs. 45 crores. This, however, would not include expenditures on the replacement works to be constructed under the Indus Basin Treaty.

Agriculture and Village-AID would consume Rs. 15 crores, Industries Rs. 1.3 crores, Transport Rs. 4.8 crores. Housing and Settlement Rs. 3.2 crores, Education and Training Rs. 4.4 crores, Health Rs. 2.2 crores and Social Services Rs. 10,00,000.

Speaking on the Provincial Budget over Radio Pakistan, the Governor, Mr. Amir Mohammed Khan, said that the annual programme of the Government's activities embodied in the Budget was "in line with the long-range objectives of the Second Five-Year Plan."

He said that the main objective of the Budget was to provide funds for the implementation of that programme by keeping expenditure on non-essential activities in check and by mobilizing the revenue resources of the Province to the fullest extent.

He emphasized that the success or failure of the development programme would largely depend on the extent to which the people co-operated with the Government.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2792:PAK:B]

B. East Pakistan Budget For 1960-61: The East Pakistan Budget for 1960-61 was made public at a news conference in Dacca on June 30 held by the Provincial Governor, Lieut.-General Mohammed Azam Khan.

It showed a surplus of Rs. 2,07,00,000.

Revenue receipts were estimated at Rs. 51,26,00,000 and expenditure at Rs. 49,10,00,000.

The surplus would be utilized for development schemes in the capital account.

There were some modest taxation proposals.

The taxation on motor vehicles was raised to the levels recommended by the Taxation Enquiry Committee.

A toll on inland water transport was levied. The present exemption of toll on freight below Rs. 3 would be removed.

The Court fees which were enhanced by 50 per cent in 1950 but were subsequently reduced, was restored.

The rate of additional stamp duty on transactions above Rs. 10,000 was reduced to two per cent of the value of transaction. In 1958, an additional stamp duty on rates varying between 10 to 25 per cent was levied on transactions above Rs. 10,000.

The net yield from all these measures was estimated at Rs. 60,00,000 per annum.

A sum of Rs. 2,00,000 was allocated for the establishment of an experimental and demonstration station at Dacca for research on construction of houses, especially low-cost houses.

Under the head Agriculture, the Government allocated large sums of money for the implementation of various schemes. A provision of Rs. 1,11,00,000 was made for the programme.

Provision was also made for preliminary work for the establishment of an Agricultural University in pursuance of the recommendations of the Education Reforms Commission.

A provision of Rs. 6,07,00,000 was made for the Karnafuli Hydro-Electric Project. The dam was closed in December, 1959 and power is expected to be available by 1962.

It also provided Rs. 3,30,00,000 for the Ganges-Kabodak (Kushtia Unit) Project which is in an advanced stage.

In his Budget statement, the Governor, Lt-Gen. M. Azam Khan, said that the financial position of the Province was sound.

He added, however, that the Government would continue to follow "the policy of strict financial discipline in expenditure while at the same time increasing our own resources to finance the expanding development programme."

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2792:PAK:C]

C. Mr. M. Shoaib Supports Idea Of A Unified Budget For Country: The Finance Minister, Mr. Mohammed Shoaib, said in Chittagong on July 26 that he supported the idea of a unified Budget for the whole of Pakistan.

He said that he agreed with the suggestion made by the Interior Minister, Mr. Zakir Hussain, two days earlier on a unified Budget, because he thought it would be in conformity with a uniform fiscal policy as well as a unitary form of Government which was good for Pakistan.

He added that a unified Budget would also bring uniformity in taxation and eliminate conflict in financial policies of the units and the Centre. The adoption of one Budget for the whole country would, however, depend on the recommendations of the Constitution Commission.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3207:PAK:A]

D. Prize Bonds Scheme To Be Introduced: A Rawalpindi message on June 30 said that in order to boost small savings, the Government had decided to start a new National Prize Bonds Scheme which was prevalent in several countries.

The prizes would be free of tax and drawn every three months.

The prize money would be calculated on the basis of four per cent interest on the total amount of each series of bonds.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Both individuals and companies would be eligible to buy the bonds which would remain current for an indefinite period and could be cashed by the bearer at any time.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 1855:PAK:A]

E. Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy Disqualified From Public Life: Pakistan's former Prime Minister, Mr. H. S. Suhrawardy, was disqualified from public life for six years by the Pakistan Government on July 15.

A Press Note issued by the Central Government said that, as a result of police investigations into the conduct of Mr. Suhrawardy, it was found that he had been guilty of misconduct of the nature of favouritism, abuse of power and position and wilful misapplication or diversion of public moneys.

These charges, it added, were considered by the Central Public Offices Inquiry Committee and referred to the Central Elective Bodies Disqualification Tribunal. Mr. Suhrawardy contested seven charges brought against him, but the Tribunal found him guilty of four charges and disqualified him from public life for six years.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 1697:PAK:A, 2171:PAK:F]

F. Masherbrum Peak (K-1) Conquered: It was stated in Rawalpindi on July 20 that the Pakistan-American Expedition to the Karakoram Range had conquered the hitherto unscaled Masherbrum Peak (25,605 ft.), also known as K-1, and that the members of the Expedition had returned to Skardu.

The Masherbrum Expedition, jointly sponsored by the US Alpine Club and the Pakistan Army, was led by Dr. G. I. Bell, of the US Expedition to K-2 in 1953 and the International Expedition to Lhotse in 1955. It included a Pakistani, Capt. Jawad Akhtar.

Masherbrum is about 500 miles north-east of Skardu in the Baltoro group and had so far defied three attempts on it—two by British teams and one by a New Zealand party.

This is the first time that a Pakistani had been included in an attempt on one of the highest peaks in the world.

The scaling of Masherbrum is the second successful assault on a Karakorum peak this season. The 25,866-ft Disteghil was conquered by an Austrian Expedition on June 9.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 293:PAK:J, 3452:PAK:F]

SUDAN

A. Mr. Ibrahim Abboud's Visit To Yugoslavia: The President of Sudan Mr. Ibrahim Abboud, visited Yugoslavia at the invitation of Marshal Tito from July 9 to 20.

A joint communique, issued at the end of the visit on July 20, said that President Abboud and President Josip Tito had agreed that non-aligned countries and those not directly involved in the 'cold war' "should exert their utmost to oppose actively the policy of force, pressure, interference and propaganda rivalry".

It urged more energetic efforts to achieve disarmament and said that it was absolutely necessary that an end should be found to the Algerian war.

It added that both the Presidents particularly condemned the apartheid policies of South Africa.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2545:SUD:A]

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

SUMMARY: National Assembly Opened; First Jet Plane Produced; Details Of Production Budgets.

A. Col. G. A. Nasser Inaugurates First Session Of National Assembly: The President, Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser, officially inaugurated the first session of the National Assembly of the United Arab Republic—the first to sit since the Egyptian-Syrian Union of February, 1958—in Cairo on July 21.

The 600 Deputies of the Assembly included 400 from the Egyptian Region and 200 from the Syrian Region. All the Deputies had either been nominated or chosen by election within the single National Union Party.

Col. Nasser told the Assembly that the birth of UAR was like a nuclear explosion to liberate the great energies of the Arab peoples.

Describing conditions in West Asia before the Egyptian-Syrian Union, he said that with "Nuri es Said in Baghdad, Adana Menderes in Ankara and the US Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, we were threatened from all sides." The British were collaborating with the Arab reactionaries, and Israel was able to undertake all kinds of manoeuvres in peace.

He added: "But after the creation of the United Arab Republic, Nuri es Said disappeared, and with him the Hashemite Throne. The Baghdad Pact was undermined, and the Eisenhower Doctrine faded like a desert mirage.

"These effects are continuing to make themselves felt in West Asia. Mr. Adnan Menderes has been ousted and Israel must now fight on two fronts. The vestiges of the Baghdad Pact, imperialism, Zionism and reaction will be wiped out.

"The formidable energy which has been released is also capable of being applied to peace and in the building up of UAR's economy."

Col. Nasser then reviewed the achievements of Egypt and Syria since their Union and outlined the plan for doubling the national revenue in 10 years.

A new coin of 25 piastres was minted to commemorate the inauguration of the National Assembly.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 3468:UAR:A]

B. UAR Produces Her First Jet Plane: Addressing the General Congress of the National Union in Cairo on July 9, the President, Col. G. A. Nasser, disclosed that UAR had produced her first training jet plane and had immediately offered it to any other Arab country.

He said that the new jet plane was tested 10 days previously and it gave an outstanding performance.

He added: "Our production of this type of aircraft is sufficient to meet our requirements as well as those of any other Arab country that may like to test it."

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

C. Details Of Production Budgets: Details of the Production Budgets of the two Regions of UAR were available in New Delhi on July 15.

The total estimate of the Production (Development) Budget for 1960-61 was £E285,800,000.

Expenditure on the Aswan High Dam would be £E16,300,000 and on the Suez Canal £E19,000,000. This included £E4,000,000 for instalments due to the shareholders of the Suez Canal Company.

A total of £E84,000,000 was allocated to industrial development, £E34,700,000 to agricultural projects and £E19,100,000 to irrigation schemes. Power projects were allocated £E9,100,000, transport and storage £E46,900,000, housing £E27,800,000, public utilities £E15,300,000 and public services £E27,800,000.

Syria's Production Budget of £S254,000,000 included £S71,500,000 for irrigation, hydro-electric power and land reclamation, £S12,000,000 for electricity schemes, £S108,900,000 for transport and communications, £S30,000,000 for agricultural projects and £S10,000,000 for housing.

(Middle East Economic Digest, London)

[Prev. ref. 3454:UAR:A]

D. Move To Nationalize Pharmaceutical Industry: The President, Col. G. A. Nasser, ordered on July 17 the seizure of all firms importing pharmaceutical products in a move to nationalize the industry in the Egyptian Region.

This was announced at a news conference by the Egyptian Minister of Supply, Mr. Kamal Ramzi Stino.

[All offices and trading agents in the pharmaceutical import business were previously "Egyptianized" in accordance with the Egyptianization Law of January, 1958. Egypt imported pharmaceutical products worth $25,500,000 in 1958. The following year it dropped to $18,600,000.]

The number of firms subject to the new Nationalization Law and their total capital investment were not immediately available.

The latest trading guides, however, list about 130 firms as pharmaceutical agents and import offices in Egypt.

Mr. K. R. Stino also announced the establishment of a new organization—"the General Authority for Pharmaceutical Products"—which would import pharmaceutical and chemical products and medical equipment. A "General Organization for Trading and Distributing of Pharmaceutical Products" was also being set up.

The decree authorized the Minister of Supply, Mr. K. R. Stino, to seize immediately all pharmaceutical, chemical and medical supplies now in the shops of importers and agents of foreign firms, or those still in Customs under the name of the firm or agent.

The owners of the confiscated goods and offices would be duly compensated.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 3198:UAR:A]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10 Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95|-; Foreign Rs. 115|- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

August 13—19, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 33

CHINA

A. Trade, Scientific And Cultural Agreement With Cuba: The representatives of China and Cuba signed in Havana on July 24 three Agreements, all valid for five years, one on trade and payments, another on scientific and technical co-operation and the third on cultural co-operation.

Under the Trade Agreement, China would purchase in each year commencing from the date of validity of the Agreement 500,000 metric tons of sugar from Cuba for a period of five years. Twenty per cent of the value of sugar purchased in the first year of Agreement would be paid in transferable £ sterling and the remaining 80 per cent as well as the value of goods other than sugar which may be purchased by China would be paid in goods. For the remaining four years, China would purchase sugar and other exports from Cuba, while Cuba would purchase from China goods in equivalent value.

The Agreement stipulated that China would, within its possibility, supply Cuba with equipment or complete sets of equipment required by Cuba on long-term credit.

The specific items of such equipment and the total amount of credit would be subsequently negotiated and agreed upon between the delegation sent by the Cuban Government to China and the Chinese Government.

According to the Agreement, goods exported by China to Cuba would include machine-tools, various types of machines, scientific research instruments, steel and chemical products, rice, flour, edible oil, clothes and other daily necessities. Cuban goods exported to China would include mineral ores, raw and refined sugar, salted cattle hides, henequen fibre, tobacco, coffee and fruits.

The Agreement stipulated that both parties would grant each other unconditional treatment of the most-favoured-nation concerning tariff, consular fees and any other duties or taxes of any nature as may be applicable by reason of the importation and exportation of goods as to the manner of their collection as well as the rules and formalities in connexion with the clearing of such goods at the Customs.

To supervise the fulfilment of the Agreement and to supplement and modify the schedules of goods supplied by both countries, a Mixed Commission would be set up by the representatives of both parties. The Commission would meet every year either in Havana or in Peking.

The Agreement on Scientific and Technical Co-operation provided that both the parties would take the necessary measures to initiate the development of scientific and technical co-operation in industry, architecture and construction, geology, mining, agriculture and communications.

Under the Agreement, both the parties would strive to strengthen co-operation through exchanging technical data, experts, the granting of scholarships for universities and colleges and organizing scientific and technical lectures.

The Agreement on Cultural Co-operation provided that both the contracting parties develop mutual co-operation in the field of education, scientific and cultural activities as well as publicity.

It stipulated that both the parties exchange information and work regarding developments in the cultural fields, individuals' scientific, technical, literary and artistic works, publications, films and others, Special courses for the study of language, culture and literature of the contracting parties will be created at universities or other cultural organizations.

Signing the Trade and Scientific and Technical Co-operation Agreements for the Cuban and Chinese Governments were the President of the Cuban National Bank, Dr. Ernesto Guevara, and the Vice-Minister of Foreign Trade of the Chinese People's Republic, Mr. Lu Hsu-chang.

Signing the Cultural Agreement were Cuban Foreign Minister ad interim, Mr. Carlos Olivares, and the Secretary-General of the Commission for Cultural Relations with Foreign Countries of the People's Republic of China, Mr. Chen Chung-ching.

(China Today)

[Prev. ref. 3352:CHI:B]

B. Sir Edmund Hillary On Chinese Conquest Of Everest: Sir Edmund Hillary, co-conqueror with Tenzing Norkay of Mount Everest in 1953, expressed scepticism in Auckland (New Zealand) on July 30 of Chinese claims to have scaled the mountain from the difficult northern side.

He said: "Perhaps they did, but quite frankly I am a bit sceptical. There is so much propaganda that you don't know where they begin and where they end."

He added that he had always supported the idea of climbing Everest from the northern side. Up to 28,000 feet, the slopes were easier than the southern side, but the last 1,000 feet were "pretty steep." "If the Chinese did it without oxygen, they did pretty well, but nobody has really heard anything and people would like to know a whole lot more."

[The Chinese claim to have scaled the mountain has been questioned in mountaineering circles in many countries.]

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3397:CHI:A]

INDIA

SUMMARY: Naga State To Be Created; Assam Disturbances; Central Government Accepts Pay Commission's Recommendations; Leh-Kargil Road Opened; Swatantra Party General Council Session.

A. State Of Nagaland To Be Created: The Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, announced in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 1, 1960 that the Government of India had decided to constitute a new State of Nagaland within the Indian Union.

He said that the Governor of Assam and of Nagaland would be one and the same person. The new State would comprise the existing territory of Naga Hills and the Tuensang area. There would be a transitional period during which an interim body would be constituted with representatives from every Naga tribe to assist and advise the Governor in the administration. The Governor would have a special responsibility for law and order during this period and for as long as the situation remained disturbed on account of hostile activity.

There would be a Legislative Assembly to which the Council of Ministers of the new State would be responsible.

Safeguards would be provided for the religious and social practices of the Nagas, their customary laws and land.

The jurisdiction of the Assam High Court would continue.

In view of limited resources, large grants from the Central Government might be necessary for the new State and the Governor would have a special responsibility so that these funds were expended on the purposes earmarked.

The new arrangements, which would involve amendment of the Constitution, would be completed without delay.

Text Of Statement:

The following is the text of Mr. Nehru's statement:

"I have on many previous occasions referred in this House to the problem of the Nagas. As the members are aware, we have always regarded the territory inhabited by the Nagas, as by other tribal peoples all over India, as part of Independent India as defined in our Constitution. We looked upon all these tribal people as citizens of independent India having all the privileges and obligations of such citizenship.

"The Nagas are a hard working and disciplined people, and there is much in their way of life from which others can learn with profit. We have had for many years Nagas in the Indian Army, and they have proved to be excellent soldiers. Our policy has always been to give the fullest autonomy and opportunity of self-development to the Naga people, without interfering in any way in their internal affairs or way of life.

"Unfortunately, the process of devolution of local autonomy could not be implemented in full because troubles arose in the area as a result of the hostile activities of a section of the Nagas. The ostensible object of this hostile section was to carve out an independent Naga territory entirely separate from India. This was a demand which no Government in India could ever agree to. These hostile elements among the Naga people thereafter took to violent methods, and we had to take steps to meet these illegal activities. The hostile Nagas indulged in arson, loot and extortion of money from their own fellow-Nagas. They also committed a number of gruesome murders. It became our duty to give protection to the large number of other Naga residents of these areas and to meet the menace of this continued violence. The help of our Army and the Assam Rifles was taken in this conflict, and various steps were taken to give the necessary protection and to maintain law and order. This conflict inevitably caused much suffering to the people of those areas, most of whom were anxious to live a peaceful life and carry on their avocations. The story of the last five or six years has been a sad and depressing one. Gradually, there was an improvement in the situation and, over large areas in the Naga districts, peaceful conditions were established. One bright feature was the extension of our development work and the establishment of schools, hospitals and communications. But, in spite of this considerable improvement, a hard core of hostile elements continued their violent activities, even though they were driven back into the remoter parts of the hills.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"The leaders of all the tribes of the Naga Hills representing their people, who had suffered so much from this conflict and the depredations of the hostiles, decided to make an effort to put an end to the conflict. They called a representative Convention of the Naga people, drawn from every tribe and area of the territories then forming part of the Naga Hills district of Assam and the Tuensang Frontier Division of the North-East Frontier Agency. This Convention met from August 22 to 25, 1957 at Kohima in search, as the Convention put it, of a solution to end their infinite sufferings and bloodshed. This Convention passed a number of resolutions. The principal resolution requested the Government of India to constitute a single administrative unit consisting of the Naga Hills district of Assam and the Tuensang Frontier Division of the N-EFA, under the External Affairs Ministry of the Government of India. This unit was to be administered by the Governor of Assam as the Agent of the President of India, under the Ministry of External Affairs.

"I received a delegation of the leaders chosen by the Convention on September 25 and 26, 1957. We considered the Naga request for a separate administrative unit as a reasonable one. In order to give effect to this proposal, the matter was brought before Parliament, and the Naga Hills-Tuensang Area Act, 1957 was passed. This area thus became an administrative unit and the necessary regulation was promulgated by the President, making detailed provisions for the administration of the new unit. It has since been administered by the Governor of Assam as the agent of the President, under the Ministry of External Affairs.

"The Naga people hoped that the formation of the new unit would give them an opportunity of developing their area in the way they considered suited to their needs. Some progress was no doubt made, but the activities of the hostile elements stood in the way of normal development.

"Another Convention was, therefore, held at a placed called Ungma in the Mokokchung district of the Naga Hills-Tuensang Area in May, 1958. This Convention appointed a Liaison Committee to contact the underground elements and win them over to support the Convention's policy of securing the maximum autonomy of their area and finally settling the future of the Nagas. Though some among the hostile elements appreciated this approach, broadly speaking, the response was not encouraging.

"The leaders of the Naga People's Convention, therefore, decided to draft their own proposals and place them before the Government of India. A third Naga People's Convention met at Mokokchung in October, 1959 and prepared a 16-point memorandum for consideration by the Government. The main demand formulated by the Nagas at this Convention was for the constitution of a separate State within the Indian Union to be known as Nagaland, under the Ministry of External Affairs, with a Governor and administrative secretariat, a Council of Ministers and a Legislative Assembly. Provision was also made for the constitution of the Village Council, the Range Council and the Tribal Council to deal with matters concerning different tribes and areas. These bodies were also to deal with disputes and cases involving breaches of customary law and usages.

"A delegation of Naga leaders presented the 16-point memorandum, on behalf of the Naga People's Convention, to the Governor of Assam in April, 1960. The delegation expressed a wish to meet the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister informed them that he would gladly meet them but, as he was leaving for England soon for the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference, the meeting desired by the Naga leaders would have to be held after his return from abroad.

"On July 26, the Prime Minister received a delegation of 15 Naga leaders led by Dr. Imkongliba Ao, President of the Naga People's Convention. The delegation placed before him the 16-point memorandum to which I have already referred. The proposals contained in the memorandum were fully examined. The Prime Minister re-affirmed the Government's policy to give the maximum autonomy to the Nagas in their internal affairs. He accepted their request for the constitution of the Naga Hills-Tuensang Area as a separate State within the Indian Union but pointed out to the Naga leaders that the extent of this territory, its population and its financial resources were such that it would not be able to bear the weight of a heavy superstructure in the administration. The details were discussed with the Naga leaders and a broad agreement was reached on the following lines.

"A new State to be called 'Nagaland' will be established within the Indian Union comprising the territory of the existing Naga Hills and the Tuensang Area. The same person will be appointed as the Governor of Assam and the Governor of Nagaland and the existing jurisdiction of the Assam High Court over the area comprising the new State would continue. There will be a transitional period during which an interim body will be constituted with representatives from every Naga tribe to assist and advise the Governor in the administration of Nagaland. The Governor will have special responsibility for law and order during this transitional period and for so long as the law and order situation continues to remain disturbed on account of hostile activities. Since the financial resources of the new State will be extremely limited and large grants from the Central Government may be necessary not only for the development schemes but also to maintain the efficiency of the administration, the Governor will have general responsibility for ensuring that the funds made available by the Government of India are expended for the purposes for which they are approved by the Central Government.

"There will be a Legislative Assembly to which the Council of Ministers of the new State will be responsible. Certain safeguards, as in the existing Sixth Schedule of the Constitution, will be provided for the religious and social practices of the Nagas, Naga customary laws and procedure and the ownership and transfer of land. Otherwise, the existing laws relating to the administration of the civil and criminal justice will continue to remain in force. The jurisdiction of the High Court of Assam will also continue. Special provision will be made for the administration of the Tuensang district in accordance with the wishes of the people inhabiting that district. There are some other matters of relatively lesser importance on which also full understanding has been reached between the Government of India and the Naga leaders. It is hoped, therefore, that there will be no room for any misunderstanding in future about the Government of India's intention and what it proposes to do to implement the understanding reached during the recent discussions.

"It is now the intention of the Government of India to give effect to the arrangements reached with the Naga leaders without delay. This will involve amendment of the Constitution and a Bill will be placed before Parliament for approval in due course.

"I take this opportunity to express our satisfaction at the agreement reached with the Naga leaders. We have always regarded the Nagas as full Indian citizens. I have said to the Naga people several times in the past that there could be no question of independence for the Nagas. India achieved her independence 13 years ago and the Nagas are as independent as other Indian citizens. We have not the slightest desire to interfere in the tribal customs and usages of the Nagas or in their distinctive way of life. The Nagas have been anxious to have a separate State within the Indian Union. The agreement now reached with them should enable them to find the fullest opportunity of self-expression and we sincerely hope that the new arrangement will result in the rapid restoration of normal conditions in the area. I must, however, make it clear that no Government can permit hostile activities on its soil, and while we are ready to give our fullest support to those who will co-operate in giving effect to the agreement just reached, we shall continue to deal firmly with the hostile elements. This is an unpleasant but necessary task and I trust that the Naga leaders will co-operate fully in putting an end to the disloyal activities of a minority of their people."

[The Naga Hills—Tuensang Area, which will now be re-named as Nagaland, has an area of about 6,000 square miles and a population of 355,000 approximately. The present Naga Hills—Tuensang Area came into being on December 1, 1957 as a result of the amalgamation of the Naga Hills district of Assam and the Tuensang Frontier Division of the North-East Frontier Agency, following acceptance by the Government of India of a resolution passed by the first session of the Naga People's Convention. The creation of the Naga Hills—Tuensang Area had been suggested by the Convention as a step preliminary to solving the deadlock in the area.]

Reactions:

It was stated in New Delhi later that the Naga settlement substantially conceded the aspirations of the Naga people as set out in the 16-point proposal formulated by the Naga People's Convention in October, 1959.

The main demand for a separate State of Nagaland within the Indian Union has been conceded. The agreement negotiated with the Naga leaders also fully safeguards the distinctive customary and cultural features of the Naga people.

These rights were already safeguarded by the Sixth Schedule of the Constitution which applies to the autonomous hill districts of Assam. But the Nagas have consistently stood out for separate Statehood and have totally boycotted the Sixth Schedule and the other elective provisions of the Constitution.

Only a few of the 16 points proposed by the Naga People's Convention have been found unacceptable by the Government of India. But these are said to be of minor consequence.

They are:

(A) That there shall be a separate Governor of Nagaland. It has now been agreed that there shall be a common Governor for Assam and Nagaland.

(B) That appellate jurisdiction shall lie directly from Naga district courts to the Supreme Court. It is now agreed that the existing jurisdiction of the Assam High Court over the area comprising the new State will continue.

(C) That the Nagas shall be represented by two members in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) and by one member in the Rajya Sabha (Council of States). It is now agreed that there will be only one Naga member in each of the two Houses.

(D) That the contiguous Naga areas (in Manipur, etc.) should be allowed to join Nagaland if they so desire and that certain forests and territories earlier transferred out of the Naga areas should be returned to Nagaland. It has now been agreed that Nagaland shall comprise only those areas that constitute the present Naga Hills-Tuensang Area.

(E) That the possibility of raising a separate Naga Regiment should be considered. It was explained that the question of raising an additional Regiment was related to the overall strength and defence requirements of the Indian Army. Similar demands from certain other regions have had to be turned down for the identical reason. There are, however, a number of Naga companies already in existence.

Special Features:

A few special features of the Naga settlement merit attention. The first is that the Governor will be responsible for the administration of the Tuensang district of Nagaland for a period of ten years "until such time as the tribes in this area are capable of shouldering the responsibilities of the advanced system of administration." This provision has been insert-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ed by the representatives of the more advanced Naga Hills district in order to win over the people of the less developed Tuensang region.

The Governor will also exercise a special responsibility for law and order during the transitional period and until such time as the situation remains disturbed on account of hostile action.

It has been agreed that the new State is too small to be burdened with an elaborate and expensive administrative paraphernalia.

Since Nagaland will not be financially viable for at least some time, it will be dependent on subventions from the Government of India. The Governor will, however, be vested with certain powers of financial control in order to supervise the disbursement of these funds for purposes stipulated in the original grant.

The new State will be "under" the Ministry of External Affairs in continuation of the present status of the Naga Hills—Tuensang area and in deference to the wishes of the Naga people.

Official circles see nothing sinister or unusual in this as the "jurisdiction" of the External Affairs Ministry will in effect amount to little more than providing a channel of communication between Nagaland and the Centre. In point of fact, it will be quite open to the new State to deal directly with the relevant Central ministries in respect of such matters as irrigation, industries, agriculture, communications and so on.

The Indian Frontier Administrative Service officers who are serving in the Naga areas come under the External Affairs Ministry. Otherwise too, historically, the eastern border regions have been under the External Affairs Ministry both before and after independence.

Commenting on Mr. Nehru's announcement, the rebel Naga leader, Mr. A. Z. Phizo, said in London on July 31: "No agreement can be recognized regarding the future of Nagaland except with the people who are truly representative of the Naga nation."

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3121:INI:H]

B. Disturbances In Assam On Official Language Issue: A movement for making Assamese the official language of Assam took a violent turn about the middle of June with the State witnessing its worst rioting in recent history.

According to official figures, 20 persons had been killed. But reports suggested that the fatalities must have been much more. Several hundred Bengali families, some of whom had lived in the State for generations, were displaced from their homes.

In Gauhati, Sibsagar and Jorhat districts and other areas in Upper Assam, the situation remained tense for a long time. The police had to open fire on mobs on several occasions. It took at least a month for the situation to return to normal. But many of the displaced families were still in refugee camps. Troops had been alerted for an emergency.

In an incident in Gauhati on July 4, the police opened fire on a violent crowd killing a student.

For long there had been a demand from the people of the Brahmaputra Valley of Assam to make Assamese the official language of the State.

On April 22, the Assam Congress Committee passed a resolution stating that Assamese should be the official language. It did not lose sight of the opposition of the tribals and Bengalis and placated them by stating that the Assamese language would not be imposed on the people living in the districts of Cachar (Bengali-speaking), the Khasi and Jaintia Hills, the Garo Hills, the Mizo Hills and the north Cachar Hills.

This move did not please either side. The tribals and Bengalis suspected that after it had been made the official language, Assamese would sooner or later be imposed on them too.

Besides, if they did not study the language they would not be able to compete with the Assamese-speaking people in securing jobs. They were afraid that they might be discriminated against if they maintained their identity as linguistic minorities in a State with an official language.

These fears made them raise a hue and cry even before the language question had been finally decided.

The extremist section among the Assamese who had been resenting Bengali dominance for years in various fields then launched a violent campaign.

The Assam disturbances had repercussions in West Bengal on July 9 when a mob attacked the railway station at Siliguri where the leader of the Opposition in the Assam Assembly, Mr. Hareshwar Goswami, was sheltering with his wife under police protection. The mob set fire to part of the station and killed a passenger. The police fired on the mob killing two persons.

To protest against the Assam incidents, a general strike was called by the Leftist parties in Calcutta on July 16.

Though, on the eve of the strike, there was much panic among the non-Bengali residents of the city, the day passed off peacefully.

Mr. Nehru's Visit:

The Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, flew to Assam on July 17 on a three-day visit when he had talks with the representatives of all sections of the people.

Mr. Nehru, who did not make a secret of his distress over the incidents, charged State Congressmen with failing to do their duty by not controlling the language agitation. He asked Congress workers to go to every nook and corner of the State and help restore peace.

In public meetings at Jorhat, Gauhati and Shillong, he appealed to the people to create a "civilized atmosphere of security."

The immediate task, he said, was the rehabilitation of refugees rendered homeless during the disturbances.

Asked about the situation in Assam on his return to New Delhi on July 20, he said: "It is not absolutely normal but it is absolutely secure and there is no question of disorder or riotous behaviour. There is now full assurance of security."

To questions about suggestions from certain quarters for President's rule in Assam, he said: "I have heard about it."

He said that all the refugees could now go back to their homes.

Asked about his own impressions, he said that at present things were quiet. The disturbances had started suddenly and in a number of places they had been serious. But, in many cases, reports that had been published were considerably exaggerated.

Speaking about refugees, he said that there were people who had actually crossed the Assam border into West Bengal, but most of the refugees had remained in Assam and were now in camps.

Congress Working Committee Resolution:

In a resolution adopted on July 29, the Congress Working Committee suggested measures for tackling, with speed and efficiency, the task of rehabilitation of those who had left their homes in Assam during the disturbances.

The following is the text of the resolution:

"The Working Committee has noted with sorrow and distress the recent occurrences in Assam which led to a number of deaths, large-scale arson and looting, and the exodus of tens of thousands of persons from their homes. That such tragic developments could take place at any time for any reason is deplorable; it is even more reprehensible that this kind of widespread breach of the public peace should take place over a question of language, which normally should be settled by peaceful and co-operative processes. In some districts, the administration could not deal with this situation when it arose with speed and efficiency and give immediate protection to those who were attacked.

"The Committee recognizes that after the first few days of mob violence, the Administration took more effective steps and checked any further depredations and apprehended many of those who had been guilty. A situation involving so much violence must be dealt with firmness. If the normal apparatus of administration is not adequate for the purpose, special measures may have to be taken by the Government to prevent the possibility of any recrudescence of this violence and to give full protection to all.

"The Committee is informed, and has reason to believe, that conditions have improved in Assam and that, on the whole, law and order prevails there now. This must be maintained. It is essential that not only should law and order prevail, but that there should be a sense of security for all residents of Assam, and that the fundamental right of staying or moving about freely in every part of the Indian Union without molestation and danger should prevail. Action should be taken against such persons who took part in the disturbances. Wherever it is considered necessary, special guards should be organized or permitted to help in creating this sense of security.

"The Committee trusts that no demonstration would take place which creates tension or endangers this feeling of security, and the Press in Assam and Bengal and outside would help to bring about an atmosphere of friendliness and goodwill.

"The first and urgent step now is to rehabilitate those who were driven away from their homes and to help in this process. This is the first responsibility of the Government of Assam, but in this work of rehabilitation, the Government of West Bengal as well as the Government of India should give every co-operation and assistance. Congressmen in Assam have a special responsibility in this task, and the Working Committee will gladly assist by sending its representatives to Assam or, by any other methods that are feasible.

"This work of rehabilitation should be undertaken as a short-term measure and special officers for that purpose should be appointed. Where huts or houses have been destroyed, steps should be taken immediately to provide temporary shelters so that the people dispossessed may return to their fields and look after their crops and other business. Further rehabilitation should follow this.

"It is most unfortunate that a question of language should be connected with such disturbances which can only do harm to the cause of the language. Language is the embodiment of the culture of a people, and culture cannot flourish in an atmosphere of violence or coercion, nor can language grow in such conditions.

"The Assamese language is one of the national languages of India laid down in the Constitution. This language, like other national languages, has to be encouraged in every way and progressively used by the people whose mother-tongue it is. In promoting its use in various public activities, it should be remembered that its use should not be enforced in areas where other languages prevail."

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

P-SP Executive Resolution:

The National Executive of the Praja-Socialist Party passed a resolution in New Delhi on August 11 making out three points on the Assam language disturbances.

First, it said, the Assam Cabinet was without leadership and had failed to maintain its collective responsibility and that the present position could not be allowed to continue any further, (Mr. Chaliha, Chief Minister, had been ill for some time).

Secondly, the representatives of Central Government should be posted to the State to assist in the process of rehabilitation.

Thirdly, a thorough probe by a high-powered Commission would help to allay misunderstanding and expose the abuses that needed to be corrected.

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3121:INI:H]

C. Central Government Accepts Second Pay Commission's Recommendations: The Government of India accepted on August 2 all the major recommendations of the Second Pay Commission with a financial bearing. This embraced the general pay structure and a minimum wage of Rs. 80.

A statement laid on the table of the Lok Sabha (House of the People) by the Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, on August 2 explained that the fitment of some 20,00,000 Central Government employees into the new pattern was a long and tedious process.

As suggested by the Commission, about 140 pay-scales had been evolved to replace more than 500 now extant. Pay-scales covering roughly 75 per cent of the staff had been finalized, including those concerning almost all the Class IV and workshop personnel. Those wishing to retain the existing pay-scales would be allowed to do so.

Notifications enforcing the new decisions, including those in respect of the Railway employees, were also issued on August 2.

The earlier decision to give effect to the new scales from November 1, 1959 was rescinded and the date proposed by the Commission, namely, July 1, 1959, was adopted. Further, the arrears for the entire period would be paid in cash.

The Commission's recommendations regarding the liberalization of retirement benefits, casual leave and holiday and leave travel concessions were accepted, as also the suggestions about converting temporary posts into permanent posts.

The Central Government employees would also be brought in line with Railway personnel in the matter of educational facilities for children of the staff who get less than Rs. 300 a month; these children would be eligible for education at boarding schools of their choice in the absence of suitable facilities at the stations of posting.

The maximum house rent recoverable from employees getting less than Rs. 150 would be 7½ per cent of the pay. A compulsory provident fund scheme would be introduced to which employees would be required to contribute 6 per cent of their pay. Class IV employees would have the option of a slightly lower contribution range.

Text Of Mr. Morarji Desai's Statement:

The following is the text of Mr. Morarji Desai's statement:

"The recommendations of the Pay Commission fall into two broad groups: (a) pay and allowances; and (b) other conditions of service. On November 30, 1959, a brief statement was made in the House about these recommendations and the decisions then taken by the Government on some of them were announced. It was further mentioned that the remaining recommendations were being examined and decisions would be taken thereon as early as possible. The Government has since accepted all the major recommendations of the Pay Commission which have a financial bearing, after reviewing some of their earlier decisions in the light of representations received subsequently.

"The new pay structure and the various recommendations of the Commission in this regard have been accepted. In particular, the Government has accepted the recommendation of the Commission regarding the minimum wage to be given to a Central Government employee. It was not possible for the Commission to make specific recommendations in respect of all categories of employees or offices of the Government of India, and they had suggested that these could be fitted by the Government into the general pattern of the new pay structure recommended by them after taking all the relevant factors into consideration. The fitting of thousands of posts, with various designations and nomenclature, involving nearly two million employees at present serving in over 500 existing rates or scales of pay, into about 140 scales of pay recommended by the Commission was a task of considerable magnitude. Even so, the Government has already finalized pay scales which cover about 75 per cent of the employees and almost all Class IV and workshop personnel. The remaining pay scales will also be finalized and issued very shortly.

"Rules have been framed for giving effect to the revised pay scales, for fixation of initial pay in the new pay structure, the date of increment and other related matters on the lines recommended by the Commission. As a measure of rationalization, the Commission had recommended considerably fewer scales to replace the existing large number of scales. An inevitable corollary of this is that though most employees will receive the benefit of improved scales of pay, a few might find the existing scales better than the revised scales. As recommended by the Commission, the rules will enable such employees to have the option to retain their existing scales together with dearness allowance at the existing rates. This will ensure that even in the few cases where an employee does not benefit by the revised scales, he suffers no loss of emoluments as a result of the introduction of the revised pay scales. A copy of the notification on this subject relating to pay fixation and pay schedules is being issued. A similar notification is being issued separately for railway employees. With the issue of these schedules, the recommendations of the Commission can be implemented forthwith for a vast majority of the employees on their exercising their option for the Pay Commission's scales.

"The Government has also accepted in principle the general recommendation of the Commission that in respect of promotions up to Class I level, it should be ensured that an employee gets at least one increment in pay as a result of promotion.

"On further consideration and in modification of their earlier decision, the Government has accepted the recommendation of the Pay Commission that the revised scales of pay and dearness allowance should be given effect to from July 1, 1959, and arrears due for the entire period will be paid in cash. The recommendations of the Pay Commission in regard to house rent and compensatory allowances will also take effect from July 1, 1959. Deductions on account of the compulsory provident fund scheme will not be made prior to April 1, 1960 since that scheme is being introduced only from the commencement of the current financial year.

"The Government has accepted the recommendation of the Commission that if during a period of 12 months the consumer price index remains on an average 10 points above 115, the Government should review the position and consider whether an increase in the allowance should be allowed; and, if so, at what rate.

"Orders have already been issued implementing the decisions on the recommendations relating to pension which were announced on November 30, 1959. On further consideration, the Government has agreed to liberalize those orders by accepting the Commission's recommendation that special pay should also count for pension in full if the post to which it was attached was held in a substantive capacity and to the extent of half in all other cases. In the interests of simplification of the pension rules and expediting sanctions for the pension, Government has not found it possible for administrative reasons to accept the recommendation of the Commission for counting officiating special and personal pay in full in certain special cases where it was so counted in the past but will not so count in future under the revised rules. They have, however, decided to consider sympathetically individual cases of hardship arising out of this decision.

"The Government has accepted and already announced its decisions on the Commission's recommendations regarding the grant of gratuity to temporary and quasi-permanent employees on their retirement, discharge from service, or death, and improvement of death gratuity in the case of permanent employees who die before completing five years of qualifying services as also in respect of employees who are governed by the Contributory Provident Fund Scheme.

"The recommendations of the Commission for improvement or liberalization of retirement benefits in the case of scientists and technologists have also been accepted and orders issued.

"The Government has accepted the recommendation of the Commission in regard to casual leave and public holidays and that public holidays and weekly off-days falling within a period of casual leave should not be counted as part of the casual leave.

"The Government has accepted fully all the recommendations of the Pay Commission regarding the liberalization of the present leave travel concession. It has been liberalized as follows.

"The concession has been extended to such of the industrial and workshop personnel as are entitled to regular leave; employees whose home place is not connected by rail will get the concession also for journeys between the home town and the nearest railway station; employees who leave their families in their home towns will have the concession for themselves only every year instead of once in a block of two years; for employees who are unable to avail themselves of the concession in a block of two years, the next block will count from the end of the first year; and the concession will also be admissible in respect of travel by air in specified circumstances.

"The recommendations that work-charged staff whose services are likely to be required on a permanent or semi-permanent basis should be made permanent or given quasi-permanent status, that they should be classified as industrial or non-industrial, depending on the nature of the duties, and should have the same conditions of service as those of the corresponding regular staff have been accepted.

"The Government has accepted the recommendations of the Commission that the permanent requirements of all categories of staff should be speedily determined and that the margin of temporary posts should be the same for all classes of employees. Orders have been issued for converting existing temporary posts into permanent ones within the limit permissible and to confirm all eligible temporary persons as early as possible. The position will be reviewed periodically.

"The Government has accepted in principle the recommendations of the Commission for introducing schemes similar to those in operation on the Railways to enable other Central Government employees whose salary does not exceed Rs. 300 to send their children to boarding schools of their choice when suitable schooling facilities are not available at the station where they are posted. Orders on the analogy of the Railway Board's orders on the subject will be issued shortly.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"The Government has also accepted in principle that hostels may be set up in a few centres with concessional lodging and boarding charges at graduated rates for children of employees in the same pay range. The details of this scheme and the exact form in which this recommendation can be implemented, however, need careful examination and this examination is being conducted now.

"As regards the recommendation for encouraging the growth of schools with common syllabus and medium of instruction at moderate fees, this is part of a general scheme which is already receiving the consideration of the Government, and the recommendation refers not only to Central Government employees but also to the general public.

"The Commission's recommendation that the maximum rent recoverable from employees whose pay is below Rs. 150 per month should be limited to 7½ per cent of pay has been accepted. This will ensure that the rent of those whose revised pay is below this amount does not go up due to the merger of dearness allowance. As the majority of Government servants are low paid staff, a very substantial number of them living in Government residences will be able to take advantage of this lower limit. Those who are not in occupation of Government residences will be entitled to get house rent allowance at higher rates, where such allowances are admissible.

"The Pay Commission has observed that it would be perfectly reasonable to require all Central Government employees to subscribe at least 6¼ per cent of their pay to a General Provident Fund, unless they are already required to subscribe at the rate of 8-1|3 per cent. The recommendation has been accepted by the Government except that the rate has been reduced to 6 np per rupee. However, on administrative considerations and also having regard to the fact that subscription at the minimum rate of 6 per cent. of pay may cause hardship to employees in the lower categories, it has been decided that Class IV employees drawing a basic salary of less than Rs. 75 a month may subscribe only Rs. 4 a month, and other Class IV employees at Rs. 5. There will be no restriction if anyone voluntarily wishes to subscribe at a higher rate. The date of introduction of the Compulsory Provident Fund Scheme is April 1, 1960.

"The following other recommendations have also been accepted.

"A retiring Government servant or one invalided from service may, under certain conditions, be allowed travelling allowance for a journey to his home town: work-charged staffs in all establishments should be entitled to travelling allowance under the normal rules.

"The Government has also accepted the recommendations of the Commission that in certain cases where the residence of an employee and his place of work are at considerable distance (in no case less than five miles) the grant of concession in some form or other might be considered, subject to certain conditions.

"The Government has taken note of the suggestion of the Commission that medical facilities for Central Government employees should be placed on a contributory basis, and the pattern of medical care and treatment, wherever there is a concentration of employees, be broadly similar to that available under the Contributory Health Service Scheme in Delhi. Pending a detailed examination of the feasibility or practicability of extending the scheme to other places outside Delhi in the immediate future, the Government has liberalized the existing medical facilities in Calcutta with a view to bringing them in line with the facilities available to employees at other centres which are not covered by the Contributory Health Service Scheme.

"The Government has accepted the Commission's recommendations regarding the basis for calculating the leave salary, payment of leave salary in advance and the grant of hospital leave to industrial and work-charged staffs, and to all low paid employees, as also to those Class III employees whose duties involve the handling of dangerous machinery, explosive material, poisonous drugs etc.

"The above decisions cover practically all the major specific recommendations of the Pay Commission involving financial benefits to the employees. The only important recommendations of the Commission on which decisions have not yet been taken relate to the scale at which regular leave will be given and overtime allowances. These two items are under examination and so far as the former is concerned, the Pay Commission has not recommended any liberalization of existing scales except for a few categories of employees. Even in regard to these two recommendations, the Government's orders are expected to be issued shortly".

Prescribed And Revised Pay-scales:

The following are the prescribed and revised pay-scales (denoted as A and B respectively) of some categories of posts common to all or many departments of the Government of India. The scales were recommended by the Pay Commission and accepted by the Government.

Class I Posts:

(Posts common to Secretariat offices).

1. Secretary.
   A. Rs. 3,000.
   B. Rs. 3,000.
2. Joint Secretary.
   A. Rs. 2,250.
   B. Rs. 2,250.
3. Deputy Secretary.
   A. Rs. 1,100—50—1,300—60—1,600—100—1,800.
   B. Rs. 1,100—50—1,300—60—1,600—100—1,800.
4. Under-Secretary.
   A. Rs. 800—50—1,150.
   B. Rs. 900—50—1,200.
5. Section Officer when held by a member of Grade II of the Central Secretariat Service:
   A. Rs. 530—30—800.
   B. Rs. 350—25—500—30—590—EB—30—800—EB—30—830—35—900.

Class II Posts:

All posts on the standard Class II scale (other than those of Economists and Statisticians):

A. Rs. 275—25—500—EB—30—650—EB—30—800.

B. Rs. 350—25—500—30—590—EB—30—800—EB—30—830—35—900.

Class III Posts:

1. Stenographers in non-Secretariat offices:
   A. Rs. 80—5—120—EB—8—200—10|2—220.
   B. Rs. 130—5—160—8—200—EB—8—256—EB—8—280—10—300.
2. Upper Division clerks in Secretariat and "included" offices:
   A. Rs. 80—5—120—EB—8—200—10|2—220.
   B. Rs. 130—5—160—8—200—EB—8—256—EB—8—280.
3. Upper Division clerks in non-Secretariat offices:
   A. Rs. 80—5—120—EB—8—200—10|2—220.
   B. Rs. 130—5—160—8—200—EB—8—256—EB—8—280—10—300.
4. Lower Division clerks in Secretariat offices:
   A. Rs. 60—3—81—EB—4—125—5—130.
   B. Rs. 110—3—131—4—155—EB—4—175—5—180.
5. Lower Division clerks in non-Secretariat offices:
   A. Rs. 60—3—81—EB—4—125—5—130.
   B. (i) Rs. 110—3—131—4—155—EB—4—175—5—180 (ordinary grade): (ii) Rs. 150—5—175—6—205—EB—7—240 (selection grade).

(The Statesman and PIB, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3407:INI:Q]

D. Hsinhua News Delhi Correspondent's Visa Not Renewed: The Government of India decided on July 30 not to renew the visa of the Hsinhua News (New China News Agency) Correspondent in Delhi, Mr. Kao Liang, which expired on July 31, 1960.

It was stated that Mr. Kao Liang had sent "tendentious" reports to Peking from Delhi which were not "true to facts" concerning the Chinese incursions into India, the recent Central Government employees' strike. American cut in sugar import quota from Cuba etc. His reports were regarded as "persistently one-sided and malicious, likely to embitter Sino-Indian relations."

Mr. Kao Liang's colleague in Hsinhua News, Mr. Phu Teng-li, had left India some time ago.

As a result, Hsinhua News suspended its operation from Delhi as from August 1, 1960.

On August 2, the Chinese Government sent a Note to India describing the denial of visa to Mr. Kao Liang as an "unreasonable move".

The Hsinhua News agency said: "Long before the Indian Government disclosed its decision on wanting the Hsinhua News (New China News Agency) correspondent to leave Delhi, an undercurrent shandering of the Hsinhua News agency, the Chinese Press and radio had been whipped up by elements in and outside the Indian Government...

"The Chinese Embassy in New Delhi has sent a Note to the Indian Ministry of External Affairs. The Note points out that the unreasonable move taken by the Indian Government against Hsinhua News agency is harmful to Sino-Indian friendship and to defend the friendly relations between China and India... It demanded that the Indian Government restore the proper right of the Hsinhua News correspondent in Delhi to continue to stay there and rescind its decision on the 'withdrawal' of the New Delhi branch of Hsinhua News agency."

Mr. Kao Liang left Delhi for China on August 2.

(The Statesman and The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3142:INI:B]

E. Credit Agreement With Switzerland: Switzerland and India signed a 10-year Agreement in Berne on July 1 for a group of Swiss banks to offer long-term credits totalling 100 million Swiss francs (Rs. 10.9 crores) to Indian importers.

The Agreement would enable Indian importers to purchase Swiss capital investment goods to assist India in her Second Five-Year Plan.

Of the total of 100 million francs, 60 million was freed immediately under the Agreement and the remaining 40 million would be freed under a subsequent Agreement.

An official statement by the Swiss Government called the Agreement "a new step forward in the relations between India and Switzerland which will greatly help India to realize its industrial plans as well as enabling the Swiss industry to keep its position on the Indian market."

India has been Switzerland's biggest Asian market. Swiss exports to India grew from 92 million francs in 1953 to 148 million in

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

1957. They dropped to 83 million in 1959, due to India's currency difficulties, and one of the aims of the new Agreement is to remedy this position.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2123:INI:B]

F. Leh-Kargil Road Opened: The 153-mile-long Leh-Kargil road, linking the trans-Himalayan region with the Kashmir Valley was opened to traffic at Kargil on August 1, 1960.

The opening ceremony was performed by the Development Minister of Kashmir, Mr. Chunilal Kotwal, who cut a tape drawn across the road and thereafter led a convoy of jeeps to Leh.

The convoy reached Leh on August 2.

The road passes over three of the highest passes of the Ladakh region —Kapi La (11,000 ft.), Namika (12,000 ft.) and Fote La (13,432 ft.)—and through the Lamayuru gorge, sharply descending 2,000 ft.

The project which, when completed, will have cost Rs. 1.06 crores, is not only of great importance to defence, brought to the fore by the Chinese aggression in Ladakh but also for the economic development of the region.

The work, begun in 1950, was put in charge of a Superintending Engineer of the State, Mr. S. Narbu, in 1958 after some engineers had been suspended. Since then it went on night and day, to be completed before the target date. Army engineers supplied essential materials for the construction of three bridges.

Kargil is already linked with Srinagar by a 127-mile-long motorable road, passing over the 11,500-ft.-high Zoji La, which was built by Indian Army engineers in November, 1948, when the Army, under the present Chief of Staff, General K. S. Thimayya's command, launched its offensive against Pakistani raiders in Ladakh and took tanks across Zoji La.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3276:INI:B]

G. Further World Bank Loan For Indian Railways: The World Bank made an allocation of $70 million to India on July 29 for the improvement and expansion of the Indian Railways.

The loan would cover the greater part of the foreign exchange required for the final year of the Railway programme under the Second Five-Year Plan, ending on March 31, 1961.

The Bank's loan is for 20 years and bears interest at 5-3|4 per cent per annum, including the one per cent commission allowed to the Bank's special reserve.

Six private commercial banks are participating in the loan without the World Bank's guarantee to the extent of $2.5 million, representing the first maturity and part of the second which falls due between January, 1964 and July, 1964.

After having been approved by the Bank's Executive Directors, the loan documents were signed by India's Ambassador in Washington, Mr. M. C. Chagla, on behalf of India.

The Bank has now lent $328 million for the Indian Railways, the largest amount ever lent by it for a single project. A loan of $33 million was made in 1949 for the Railways, rehabilitation, and since then seven loans, totalling $295 million, have been made to assist the financing of the Indian Railways' expansion programme in the Second Plan.

The total investment in the Railway programme in the first four years of the Second Plan is estimated at Rs. 8.7 billion ($1,827 million) and Rs. 2.3 billion ($483 million) is expected to be expended during the current year of the Plan.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3291:INI:E]

H. Cut In Crude Oil Prices: Both Burmah-Shell and Standard Vacuum announced, in New Delhi on July 28, further cuts in the prices of crude oil supplied to their refineries. This would be in addition to the reductions effected earlier.

The present series of cuts were made possible, it was explained, by the market pressures building up in the Persian Gulf, which enabled them to buy their supplies of crude oil at cheaper rates.

The Burmah-Shell reduction, which took effect from July 22, would result in a saving of roughly Rs. 1 crore a year. Together with the Rs. 1.5 crores saved under the first reduction, this would give a total annual cut of Rs. 2.5 crores or roughly 12.5 per cent.

There was no news yet of the attitude of Caltex, the third major oil company operating in the country, in this regard.

The present series of cuts naturally raised the question of the final price of crude oil. This would be taken up by the Committee appointed by the Government of India to evolve a formula for the pricing of petroleum products under the chairmanship of Mr. K. R. Damle.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3004(corrected):INI:R]

I. Swatantra Party General Council Session: The General Council of the Swatantra Party met in Bombay on July 31 and passed resolutions on the next General Elections, the Central Government employees' strike, Tibetans' reported resistance to Chinese authority and the disturbances in Assam over language.

The Council unanimously resolved to send a four-member Committee headed by Mr. K. M. Munshi to make an "impartial" appraisal of the situation in the Punjab in respect of the Akali demand for a Punjabi Suba, with particular reference to the "repressive" measures taken by the State Government.

Mr. C. Rajagopalachari, in his speech, referred to this resolution and said that neither he nor the Swatantra Party stood for a Punjabi Suba, but he hastened to add that the ambition of the Sikhs was not an improper ambition.

The draft resolution on the next General Elections expressed confidence that the Party would secure a gratifying response if it chose men of ability, quality and character as its candidates and asked the State units to prepare tentative panels of prospective candidates and to forward the same to the central office of the Party by the end of February 11, 1961.

The resolution on the Central Government employees' strike expressed satisfaction that a large number of employees had dissociated from the strike and deplored the action of those in the administrative and essential services who struck work and held the community to ransom.

It was, however, unhappy at the indiscriminate use, in a number of cases, of the extraordinary powers under the Ordinance and the Preventive Detention Act.

It outlined what it regarded as a sound four-point policy for dealing with Government employees:

(1) The drawing of a distinction between civil servants, those employed in essential services and those employed in industrial or other establishments managed by the Government, with appropriate procedures applicable in each case.

(2) The establishment of appropriate machinery for negotiation and conciliation to facilitate collective bargaining, including the establishment of suitable joint councils.

(3) The acceptance of the principle that whenever civil servants and those employed in essential services were denied the right to strike, there should be an opportunity for referring the dispute to arbitration.

(4) The recognition of unions and associations of Government employees being made conditional on their office-bearers and executives being drawn from the ranks of the employees and not from those of outsiders.

The resolution on China and Tibet took note of the continued resistance of the "valiant people of Tibet" to the Chinese occupation of their country and expressed deep concern and regret at the lack of a firm and effective policy on the part of the Government of India to meet the continued aggression of the communist Government of China on the Himalayan frontiers.

The resolution on Assam viewed "with pain" the recent happenings in that State and condemned "the grievous failure of the Congress Government in Assam to maintain law and order and protect the lives of peoples of Bengali origin in that State."

It said that the Government should take steps to combat this tendency to violence and injustice arising from linguistic and communal fanaticism flowing from its own policies and take effective steps to prevent similar outbreaks in any part of the country.

The Council appointed a five-man panel to study the draft of the Third Five-Year Plan and to report within two months.

Those named on the panel were Mr. B. R. Shenoy, Mr. Lal Singh, Mr. M. A. Sreenivasan, Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy and Mr. Lobo Prabhu.

In his speech, Mr. C. Rajagopalachari threw two "challenges" to Mr. Nehru. First, he wanted Mr. Nehru to step down from office six months before the General Election and hand over the administration to a 'caretaker' Government. Secondly, he wanted the Government to enact legislation to prevent joint stock companies from making contributions to the funds of political parties.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3267:INI:A]

J. Part-use Of English To Continue In Bihar: It was officially stated in Patna on August 1 that the Bihar Government departments which had switched over to Hindi from English from June 1 had now been directed to transact their business in certain subjects through the medium of English.

A circular issued by the State Government in this connexion left it to the departmental heads to decide and select which of the items of business under their control should be transacted through the medium of English.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

This was, however, officially stated to be a stop-gap arrangement in view of certain practical difficulties.

The Bihar Official Language (Amendment) Act 1957 will come into force from November 29, 1960 from which date Hindi will become the official language of the State.

As a preliminary step, the State Government introduced Hindi as the official language of the State from June 1, 1960 to provide for "a brief and earnest preparatory stage before the statutory beginning."

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3387:INI:Q]

K. F-M Pibul Songgram Ordained As A Monk: Field-Marshal Pibul Songgram, a former Prime Minister of Thailand, was ordained as a monk before the life-size gold-covered image of Lord Buddha at Bodh Gaya, nine miles from Gaya, on August 3.

Dharmadhiraj Mahamuni, the head monk of the Thai monastery there, administered the oath of celibacy.

Born on July 14, 1897, F-M Pibul Songgram was educated in France after leaving the military school at Bangkok. He ruled Thailand as Prime Minister for 16 years and left the country in September, 1958, when there was a military coup d'etat. He visited Cambodia and USA and finally settled down in Tokyo in 1959, though his relatives, including his son, Col. Anand Songgram, are still in Bangkok.

F-M Songgram arrived in India in June, 1960 and had been at Bodh Gaya with his wife for a month. His daughter, Mrs. Chirawac Panyarachun, arrived from Bangkok on August 2.

Asked about his future programme, F-M Songgram said that he would leave for Tokyo in a fortnight.

He added that he loved his Motherland and might visit it again, but he would not say when.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 2340:THI:A]

JAPAN

A. Supreme Court Ruling On Demonstrations: The Supreme Court in Tokyo ruled on July 20 that Public Security Ordinances issued by local authorities with a view to restricting political demonstrations were constitutional.

The ruling was made in connexion with three cases referred to it, involving 15 people in all, including a former Chairman of the extremist Zengakuren (students' federation) who were charged with violating the Ordinances by taking part in unauthorized demonstrations. The local Ordinances at issue were those made by the Tokyo Metropolitan Authority, the Hiroshima Municipal Authority, and the Shizuoka Prefectural Authority.

[Local public security ordinances differ in detail in different parts of Japan, but their common basic feature is that they require police authorization to be obtained before a demonstration or public rally is held.]

The Court based much of its argument on the recent disorders in Tokyo. The basic issue was the apparent conflict in the need for effective legal means of maintaining public law and order and Article 21 of the Constitution guaranteeing "freedom of assembly and association as well as of speech, Press and all other forms of expression."

Two of the 14 Supreme Court judges hearing the case dissented.

The dissenting judges said: "In our impatience to emphasize the need for controls, we must not neglect the basic freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution."

The ruling caused dissatisfaction among Left-wing elements.

The General Council of Trade Unions, (Sohyo) said that the Court had "misinterpreted the Constitution."

The Socialist Party issued a statement describing the ruling as "regrettable for the sake of justice and the authority of the courts."

The moderate Democratic Socialist Party, however, dissociated itself from these views and said that some forms of restrictions were necessary for the maintenance of public order.

(The Times, London and The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3407:JAP:A]

B. Compensation To Be Paid To UK: A Foreign Ministry spokesman said in Tokyo on July 29 that Japan had agreed to pay Britain 500 million yen as compensation for damages caused to British subjects in China more than 20 years ago.

[The claims arose from a clash between Chinese and Japanese troops at Lukouchiao, near Peking, followed by Japanese bombardment in 1937.]

He said that Japan would like to regard the payment as the final settlement of the whole problem after which no new claims could be considered.

The British point of view was that if new claims arose, British subjects could not be prevented from exercising their right to seek compensation guaranteed under the Constitution.

(The Hindu, Madras)

JORDAN

B. Biblical Town Discovered: It was announced in Amman on July 23 that an American team of archaeologists had discovered the 4,000-year-old remains of the Biblical town of Gibeon in the village of Eljib, five miles north-west of Jerusalem.

The Biblical pool of Gibeon was discovered in 1959 by another expedition.

The latest expedition uncovered a stone wall, three feet thick, surrounding the town, a stone-paved road and a cave with five entrances.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3389:JOR:B]

B. Discovery Of Roman Antiquities: The Department of Antiquities announced on July 14 that on that day (July 14) a number of Roman tombs, earthenware and glass antiquities were discovered, which date back to the 2nd century AD.

The discovery was made in the Jebel Jofeh area of Amman when labourers were digging in the basement of a house.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3389:JOR:B]

KOREA (South)

A. Gun-Boat Sunk By North Korean Patrol-Boat: Seoul reports said on July 30 that 14 North Korean Navy men were killed on that day (July 30) when a South Korean gunboat sank a North Korean patrol-boat in a brief but fierce gun battle, four miles off the South Korean port of Kojin, on the east coast.

Three of the crew of the 50-ton North Korean vessel were picked up and taken prisoner. Four South Korean sailors were wounded by the North Korean gun-fire.

The encounter occurred south of the cease-fire boundary line.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

MALAYA

A. Tengku Abdul Rehman On Co-operation Among S-E Asian Countries: The Prime Minister, Tengku Abdul Rehman, announced in Kuala Lumpur on July 28 that attempts to conclude a South-East Asia Friendship and Economic Treaty were being abandoned and that, instead, an association of South-East Asian States would be set up.

He said that Malaya, Thailand and the Philippines had agreed to set up such an association and would form a secretariat to handle the preparatory work. The three countries had been working on the proposal for some months and would, as their first task, draw up a list of projects to benefit the region and then have an order of priority.

The proposal envisaged no signing of any Treaty. The aim was co-operation on an informal basis between the Governments of the South-East Asia region, to whom working papers on such co-operation would be sent. Some of the matters to be examined would be aviation, shipping, marketing and the prices of primary products. Cultural subjects would also be discussed.

Regional co-operation in education, professional and administrative training and research facilities is envisaged at a later stage.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2528:PHI:C]

NEPAL

A. Nepal Becomes ICAO Member: Nepal became the 79th member of the International Civil Aviation Organization on July 29.

Nepal submitted 30 days earlier documents declaring her adherence to the International Civil Aviation Convention.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 1340:AOA:K]

PAKISTAN

SUMMARY: F-M Ayub Khan In East Wing; Governors' Conference; US Technical And Economic Aid; Technical Aid Pact With Japan.

A. F-M Ayub Khan's Visit To East Pakistan—Speeches On National

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Reconstruction, Basic Democracies And Kashmir: The President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, went to Dacca on a one-week visit to East Pakistan on July 22 and returned to Rawalpindi on July 29.

While in East Pakistan, he addressed several meetings and spoke on national reconstruction, basic democracies and Kashmir and presided over a Governors' Conference.

Addressing officers in Dacca on July 24, he said that the parliamentary system of government could work only in countries where political parties were few and, by commanding an overwhelming majority, could give a stable government.

But, in Pakistan, he said, the case was otherwise. As soon as the politician got a chance, he wanted provincial assemblies and parliamentary system, which would result in having a weak Centre.

Speaking of relations with India, he regretted that his dream of friendship with India had not been realized.

Warning Against Communism:

At two different meetings of the citizens of Chittagong and members of the District and Divisional Councils on July 25, F-M Ayub Khan warned the people of East Pakistan against communist designs on their territory and asked them to be on guard against their surreptitious activities.

He said that East Pakistan served as a vulnerable target for the communists who had entrenched themselves in the surrounding areas and wanted to carve out a State with East Pakistan as a part of it.

Communism based in Calcutta, he said, wanted to create a kingdom in West Bengal, East Pakistan and Assam and, with that goal in view, they were casting covetous eyes on East Pakistan. Their agents had infiltrated into East Pakistan to start a whispering campaign so that they could create public opinion, but they had not come out openly. Currently, the communists were trying to support a campaign in East Pakistan for federal government in the country, a parliamentary system, direct elections and dissolution of "One Unit." They were trying to tell the people in East Pakistan that their salvation lay only in having a weak Centre.

The present Government was making efforts to increase the absorption capacity of East Pakistan to utilize the resources put at its disposal by diverse means.

Heads of District and Divisional administrations were given wide powers to speed up the development work in their respective areas. Besides, a Water and Power Development Authority had been created which had considerably increased the absorption power in the Province.

But, he added, people with money did not want to invest. He appealed to people to invest in industrial undertakings. This would bring them more money and increase national wealth. If they wanted to invest in running concerns, they should buy over the Pakistan Industrial Development Corporation's ventures.

It was true, he said, that West Pakistan was more industrialized, but there were reasons for that. First, there were physical factors which favoured industrialization in that part of the country; and secondly, migrants from India who had the 'know-how' and the means were allowed to set up industries there. In East Pakistan, such people were discouraged in the past to undertake such enterprises.

Survey Of East Pakistan Land Problems:

F-M Ayub Khan discussed East Pakistan's land administration problems and land reforms at a high-level conference in Dacca on July 26.

The conference, during its 3½-hour deliberations, made a detailed survey of the Province's entire land tenure and revenue system, including land ceilings, revision of records of rights, payment of compensation to ex-rent receivers, waqf and debottar estates and settlement of lands for the development of tea and other plantations etc.

It also emphasized the need for providing checks against land fragmentation and evolving a method for encouraging the formation of economic holdings.

Basic Democracies And Second Five-Year Plan:

Addressing a meeting of Divisional and District Council members of Dacca Division in Dacca on July 28, F-M Ayub Khan said that he could forsee a tremendous upsurge of creative ideas in the next five to 10 years when the institution of basic democracies had awakened the masses to their responsibilities of reconstructing the nation.

He said that years of servitude under foreign rulers had limited the mental horizon of the people, who could think only in selfish terms and were indifferent to their obligations to society. Basic democracies had to remind the people constantly of their responsibilities and associate them with the development and administration of the country.

Referring to the Second Five-Year Plan, he said, it was 'an attempt to take a big jump forward'.

All available resources had to be harnessed and every ounce of energy had to be spent in the next five years towards bringing prosperity to the nation. It was imperative, therefore, that everybody involved should put in his best.

(Dawn, Karachi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3147:PAK:A, 3171:PAK:A]

B. Governors' Conference: Field-Marshal Mohammed Ayub Khan presided over a two-day Governors' Conference in Dacca on July 27.

It was attended, among others, by the two Provincial Governors, members of the Presidential Cabinet, the Chief Secretaries of the two Provinces, Martial Law Administrators and the Director of the Bureau of National Reconstruction.

On the opening day (July 27), the Conference remained in session for more than seven hours and surveyed political, economic and social problems of the country.

It considered the need for promoting social services and the recommendation of the Commission on National Education that no student should get a degree unless he or she had done specified social work.

It also approved a scheme for the eradication of malaria within 10 to 15 years.

Next day (July 28), it decided to place certain proposals for giving judicial powers to basic democracies before a Committee of the Presidential Cabinet for framing an integrated scheme.

Among other topics, it studied the Pakistan Industrial Development Corporation's plans for industrial development in East Pakistan on the basis of a report presented to it by the Corporation.

(Dawn, Karachi and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3309:PAK:H]

C. American Technical And Economic Aid: The Chief of the United States ICA (International Co-operation Administration), Mr. James Killen, told a news conference in Karachi on July 28 that US technical and economic aid to Pakistan during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1960 amounted to Rs. 1,350,000,000 (Rs. 135 crores).

The total American economic aid to Pakistan during the past nine years, he said, amounted to Rs. 6,140,000,000 (Rs. 614 crores).

He added that USA would make a substantial contribution towards the implementation of Pakistan's Second Five-Year Plan. He did not, however, specify the extent of such aid.

He described Pakistan's Second Five-Year Plan as a "thoughtfully and carefully prepared document."

He also promised substantial aid to Pakistan to implement its educational reforms.

The ICA, he said, had finalized arrangements for constructing 800 godowns in East Pakistan at a cost of Rs. 10,000,000 for storing fertilizers and insecticides.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 3271:PAK:A]

D. Technical Aid Agreement With Japan: Pakistan and Japan signed an Agreement in Karachi on July 30 under which Japan would assist Pakistan in setting up an Agricultural Training Centre in East Pakistan.

According to the terms of the Agreement, Japan would provide technical assistance to Pakistan under the Colombo Plan for setting up the Centre at Tejgaon in East Pakistan for imparting practical and theoretical training to agricultural officers.

It also proposed to carry out research and experiments at the Centre for improved agricultural techniques applicable to Pakistan.

The Government of Japan agreed to provide teaching and technical staff and equipment for the Centre. Pakistan would, among other things, provide technical and administrative staff, requisite buildings, farms and replacement equipment.

The Agreement would be effective for three years in the first instance. It came into force on July 30, 1960.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2949:PAK:B]

E. Action Against West Pakistan Officials—Efficiency And Discipline Rules Framed: The West Pakistan Government notified on July 27 the West Pakistan Government Servants (Efficiency and Discipline) Rules laying down procedure for action to be taken against inefficient and corrupt officials under the authority of the Provincial Government.

According to these Rules, four grounds are specified on which penalty, laid down in the Rules, can be imposed on any Government servant.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Action under the Rules can be taken if, in the opinion of the authority, a Government servant (a) is inefficient or has ceased to be active whether by reason of infirmity of mind or body or otherwise and not likely to recover his efficiency; or (b) is guilty of misconduct; or (c) is corrupt or is reasonably considered to be corrupt; or (d) is engaged, or is reasonably suspected of being engaged, in subversive activities and whose retention in service is considered prejudicial to national security.

Seven penalties have been specified in the Rules for the purpose. They are: (a) censure; (b) withholding of increments, including stoppage at an efficiency bar for a specified period not exceeding three years; (c) recovery from pay of the whole or part of any pecuniary loss caused to Government by negligence or breach of orders; (d) reduction to a lower post or a lower stage in the time scales; (e) compulsory retirement; (f) removal from service; and (g) dismissal from service.

According to the Rules, misconduct means violation of the Government Servants Conduct Rules, breach of Service discipline or instructions issued by the Government and committal of offences involving moral turpitude.

A Government servant may be reasonably considered corrupt if: (i) he or any of his dependents or any other person, on his behalf, is in possession of property disproportionate to his income for which he cannot reasonably account for; or (ii) he has assumed a style of living beyond his ostensible means.

For misconduct, any penalty may be imposed but the penalties to be imposed for inefficiency will be those mentioned against (b), (c), (d) or (e). For corruption or subversion, a Government servant could either be compulsorily retired or removed from service or dismissed.

When a Government servant is to be proceeded against on the charge of engaging himself in subversive activities, the authority may ask him to proceed on leave or inform him of the action proposed to be taken and the grounds for such action and will give him reasonable opportunity of showing cause against that action before an Inquiry Committee.

No opportunity will be given of 'showing cause' where the Governor is satisfied that in the interest of the security of Pakistan it is not expedient to give such an opportunity.

The Inquiry Committee is to be constituted by the Governor and will consist of three Secretaries to Government. The Committee will inquire into the charges and submit its findings to the Governor who will not be required to consult the Service Commission before passing orders on the findings of the Committee.

In respect of inefficiency, misconduct and corruption, the authority may appoint an officer of the department to which the Government servant concerned belongs to examine and report on the allegations against him to enable the authority to decide whether a formal inquiry should be held.

If the authority decides that a formal inquiry should be held it will decide whether the allegations, if established, would call for a minor or a major penalty. In respect of a minor penalty, the authority will frame a charge, communicate it to the Government servant concerned and call upon him to answer it within at least seven days. An opportunity will be given to the Government servant to enable him to be heard in person and to lead evidence in defence. The authority or the officer concerned may, for reasons to be recorded, refuse to call a particular witness or admit particular evidence.

In cases calling for a major penalty the same procedure would be followed, but if the Government servant concerned so desires, an oral enquiry will be made by an Inquiry Officer to be appointed by the authority at which oral evidence will be heard as to such allegations as are not admitted and the Government servant concerned will be allowed to cross-examine a witness against him.

A Government servant on whom a penalty is imposed will have the right of appeal in accordance with the service rules applicable to him. Where the penalty is imposed by the order of the Governor, there will be no appeal, but the Government servant may apply for a review of the order.

The West Pakistan Government Servants (Efficiency and Discipline) Rules, which came into force at once, superseded all the existing rules and instructions in regard to matters dealt within these Rules.

(Dawn, Karachi)

[Prev. ref. 2470:PAK:D, 2643:PAK:H, 2793:PAK:D, 3296:PAK:E]

F. F-M Ayub Khan Lays Foundation-Stone Of Mr. M. A. Jinnah's Tomb: At a ceremony in Karachi on July 31, the President, F-M Mohammed Ayub Khan, laid the foundation-stone of the late Mr. M. A. Jinnah's mausoleum. [Mr. Jinnah was the founder of Pakistan. Pakistanis call him Quaid-e-Azam, meaning "great leader".]

Speaking at the ceremony, F-M Ayub Khan said: "This edifice will be a befitting memorial to the great leader and will give us and the coming generations a lesson in unity, discipline, courage, honesty, sincerity and truth.

He said: "Besides the State of Pakistan, the noblest legacy which the Quaid-e-Azam has left us include his integrity, political acumen and statesmanship. There have been few leaders in history who could weld so utterly disjointed and oppressed a people into a full-blooded nation in so short a time and make them masters of a great State.

"The atmosphere of freedom in which we are breathing today and the new avenues of progress that are unfolding before us in an ever-increasing measure are entirely the fruits of the endeavours and struggles of that great fighter in the cause of human liberty."

He said that during the last eight to ten years many designs were prepared for the mausoleum of Quaid-e-Azam which were all rejected for one reason or another.

Now, after considerable effort and hard work, the design prepared by Mr. Yahya Merchant had been accepted. [Mr. Merchant is Professor of Architecture and Designs, J. J. School of Art, Bombay.] One of the reasons why Mr. Merchant's design was accepted was that he had worked for Mr. Jinnah in Bombay and his work was liked by Mr. Jinnah.

The mausoleum is expected to cost Rs. 7,500,000.

The sister of the late Mr. Jinnah, Miss Fatima Jinnah, did not attend the function.

She was reported to have been sent an invitation and was present in Karachi on the day.

(Dawn, Karachi)

SAUDI ARABIA

A. Cabinet Re-shuffle: Details of a re-shuffle of the Cabinet were announced by Mecca Radio on July 3.

Emir Musaiid ben Abdul Rahman became Minister of the Interior in the re-shuffle.

Other Ministerial appointments involved were:

Mr. Ahmed Salah Jamjoum—Minister of Trade; and

Mr. Ahmed Zaki Yamani—Minister of State and member of the Ministerial Council.

The re-shuffle was proposed by the Prime Minister, Emir Feisal Ibn Abdul Aziz.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 374:SUA:A, 2072:SUA:A]

SINGAPORE

A. Head Of State's Address To Legislative Assembly: The second session of the first fully-elected Legislative Assembly opened in Singapore on July 20 with an address by the Yang di Pertuan Negara (Head of State), Inche Yusof Bin Ishak.

In it, in an obvious reply to Leftist critics of the Government, he said that the Government had "no intention of recklessly abandoning the aims and policies it had formulated after long and patient deliberation."

The Government, he declared, was not prepared before the election in 1959 to deceive the people with promises "to deliver the sun, moon and the stars" and it had even less reason now to hold out such false hopes.

He said that in the past year Singapore had enjoyed greater political and economic stability than it had known during the past 15 years. Yet, the Government did not wish to give the impression that there had not been mistakes and shortcomings. Some of its measures should have been more carefully planned and executed.

The past year was taken up largely with clearing the ground and setting the course for the year of construction ahead. A substantial volume of private investment was now seeking permission to operate in Singapore; but the most important single economic objective was to increase the rate of gross capital formation. In the past, gross investment hardly exceeded 11 per cent of the national income; this would have to be increased to about one-fifth.

It would be necessary to plough back about (Malayan) $400 million (£46,650,000) annually in investment. About half of this sum would be in the public sector for expansion of services and communications and for industrial sites. Housing, schooling and medical demands would also have to be met.

An assessment had to be made of what overseas finance was available, and a draft of the Island's Five-Year Development Plan was the basis of the present financial discussions with the British Government. Most of the public investment, however, had to come from Singapore, and the aim was to provide as large a surplus as possible in annual budgets for development. Trade would still be the principal support of the economy for many years and the Government would avoid any action that would damage trade.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 2740:SGP:A]

B. Mr. Ong Eng Guan Expelled From PAP: The Central Executive Committee of the ruling People's Action Party (PAP) decided on July 28 to expel the former Minister for National Development, Mr. Ong Eng Guan, and two members of the Legislative Assembly from the Party. [The two legislators had sided with Mr. Guan in his dispute with the Party.]

In June, 1960, Mr. Ong Eng Guan was suspended from his Cabinet post after his constituency had presented resolutions criticising the Party's policies and methods. A meeting of the Party then recommended dis-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ciplinary action against him. The two members of the Legislative Assembly then declared themselves in his favour. All the three were requested to be present at an Executive Committee meeting on July 28 to answer charges against them, but they did not attend.

According to a statement issued by the Party later, the three men sent letters to individual members of the Executive Committee to say that they were "in mortal fear of attending what they described as painful secret trials."

The statement said that the three men did not attend because they knew that the 22 members of the Party would be there to confront Mr. Ong Eng Guan "with damning and unanswerable evidence." Specific charges had been sent to him accusing him of having tried "to break the unity of the Party by clandestine intrigues and smears against his colleagues."

The other two men were charged with aiding him.

(The Times, London)

[Prev. ref. 3435:SGP:A]

THAILAND

A. Border Agreement With Burma: A Foreign Ministry spokesman said in Bangkok on July 23 that Thailand and Burma had reached an Agreement to facilitate the crossing of the border by Thai and Burmese nationals living near the border.

Under the Agreement, people residing within 16 kilometres of the border for the last two years would be entitled to border passes, instead of regular passports, to travel across the border within an area of 16 kilometres.

The Foreign Minister, Mr. Thanan Khoman, had made the proposal about the crossing of the border in December, 1959, and the Burmese Government had approved of it in June, 1960.

(The Nation, Rangoon)

[Prev. ref. 3363:THI:A]

TURKEY

A. Turkish And Russian Frontier Guards Exchange Fire: The Turkish Defence Ministry said in Ankara on July 28 that shots were exchanged between Turkish and Russian border guards on July 24 in what was understood to have been a mistake. There were no casualties.

A Turkish border guard, it said, fired first when he saw a figure moving in the dark inside Turkish territory. Soldiers of his border patrol also began firing, and the Russian border guards returned the fire.

Earlier, unofficial reports had said that shots were exchanged for about two hours near Savsat, in eastern Turkey.

These reports said that the Turks opened fire after five people approached from Russian territory and failed to give the pass-word when challenged.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 1641:TUR:A]

B. Cyprus Election Results: The results of the General Election in Cyprus were announced on August 1. The Election took place on July 31.

The results showed that Archbishop Makarios' Patriotic Front won 30 of the 35 Greek seats in the 50-member House of Representatives.

Five of the seats went to Akel (Communist Party) representatives, with whom the Patriotic Front had an election agreement under which the Front would vote only for their own candidates and Akel only for their's.

All the 15 Turkish seats went to the National Coalition candidates sponsored by the three leading organizations in the Turkish-Cypriot community and backed by the Vice-President-elect, Dr. Fadhil Kutchuk.

Independents, who provided the only opposition, were wiped out. In the Greek constituencies, where they included candidates of the newly-created (former EOKA) Fighters' Organization, only one Independent saved his deposit by polling the required one-fifth of the total vote.

In three Turkish constituencies contested, two Independents lost their deposits.

The anti-Makarios Democratic Union Party, led by Mr. John M. Clerides, boycotted the Election for the House of Representatives because, it said, the "cast-iron electoral system pre-determined the results."

Votes were cast by 64 per cent of the electorate—by 132,761 people out of a total of 215,575.

In the House of Representatives, both Archbishop Makarios and the Turkish leader, Dr. Fadhil Kutchuk, thus have their own supporters in the proportion of 35 Greeks to 15 Turks.

(The Times, London and The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3453:TUR:B]

C. Arrest Of Counter-Revolutionary Students: An Istanbul message said on July 31 that the Turkish police had arrested 71 students in connexion with a counter-revolutionary movement which had been discovered in the University of Istanbul.

Authorities said that the "reactionary student movement" was based on hostility to the new Government's practice of keeping Turkey's political life free from religious influence.

The students were arrested on July 30 in Istanbul when they staged a street demonstration in favour of Prof. Ali Fuad Pasgil, who recently wrote a series of articles criticising the concept of a Secular State. The demonstration was held in front of Prof. Pasgil's house.

The police said that there might be a link between the student movement and the Nurcu Sect which had been used for religious propaganda by the fallen regime of Mr. Adnan Menderes. Six Nurcu disciples were arrested in Izmir on July 30 and three at Denizli. The officials said that they were carrying subversive tracts.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 3452:TUR:A]

D. Additional Powers For Police: The Turkish Provisional Government has decided to give new powers to the police in a proposal submitted on June 28 for ratification by the Committee of National Union (the supreme legislative body).

The text of the proposal reads: "Those endangering the order, security or safety of the State or of local discipline, or those of whose intention to do so there is sufficient evidence, may be taken into custody by the police with the approval of the highest local civilian authority, provided that it is done within a period of 30 days."

A second provision stipulated that these special powers should remain in force only during the transitional period leading up to General Elections for a new National Assembly, after which they should be withdrawn.

The proposals were accepted by the National Union Committee.

(Ankara Radio)

[Prev. ref. 3452:TUR:A]

UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC

A. Mr. Ibrahim Abboud's Visit: After a week's official visit to the United Arab Republic, President Ibrahim Abboud of Sudan left Cairo for home on July 28.

While in Cairo, Mr. Abboud had a series of talks with President G. A. Nasser.

At the end of the talks, a communique was issued emphasizing the two Governments' agreement on major international problems.

By it, the two Presidents expressed satisfaction at the agreement reached between them over the Nile waters and their common belief that international tensions must be diminished and peace safeguarded.

The communique declared the attachment of both the countries to neutralism and condemned military blocs.

It called for re-doubled efforts to end the 'cold war' and for total, effectively controlled disarmament.

It re-affirmed the two countries' faith in the principles enunciated at the Bandung Conference, their belief that colonialism would vanish from Africa and their support for the struggle of the Congo people.

They also declared their readiness to help the Palestinian people recover all their rights in Israel and condemned France for the "war of extermination" she was carrying on in Algeria.

(The Egyptian Gazette, Cairo)

[Prev. ref. 3028:UAR:A]

VIET-NAM (DR)

A. Mr. Pham Van Dong's Letter To Mr. Nehru: The Prime Minister, Mr. Pham Van Dong, in a letter to the Indian Premier, Mr. Nehru, (published in the July bulletin of the Consulate-General of Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam in New Delhi) urged India (as Chairman of the International Truce Supervisory Commission in Viet-Nam) "to take positive measures to prevent any violation of the Geneva Agreement" that ended the Indo-China war and set up the Commission in 1954.

The following is the text of the letter:

"After six years, the situation in South Viet-Nam has become more serious. The US imperialists openly interfere in South Viet-Nam and turn it into a military base for their plot to prepare to re-kindle the war in Indo-China and South-East Asia. The South Viet-Nam Administration—US stooges—are carrying out a policy of repression and terrorism and repeated and large-scale raids aiming at suppressing the patriotic movement in the southern part of our country.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"Our country, which should have been re-unified four years ago as provided by the Geneva Agreements, is still divided and peace in Indo-China and in South-East Asia is being threatened.

"The Government of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, in a spirit of constant observance and correct implementation of the Geneva Agreements, has the honour to request the Government of India, as Chairman of the International Commission for Supervision and Control in Viet-Nam, in the interests of peace in Indo-China and in South-East Asia, to take positive measures to prevent the schemes aiming at violating the Geneva Agreements and sabotaging peace in Viet-Nam."

(Consulate-General of the Democratic Republic of Viet-Nam, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3454:VND:A]

VIET-NAM (RVN)

A. Danhim Power Project: President Ngo Dinh Diem has formally approved a power project to be undertaken on the Danhim river.

Work on the project (to be undertaken under the Japanese Reparations Agreement) will start in October, 1960. The hydro-electric plant is to be located 250 kilometres north-east of Saigon where a dam is to be constructed across the Danhim river. The plant will have a generating capacity of 160,000 kw.

The proposed plant will provide power to an industrial centre planned on the coast of Cam Ranh Bay.

(The Times of Viet-Nam, Saigon)

[Prev. ref. 3169:JAP:A]

YEMEN

A. Imam Cancels American Road-Building Programme: It was reported on July 29 that "USA has taken a hard knock in Yemen with the cancellation by the Imam of its road-building programme in the country".

The West Asia Correspondent of The Statesman, Calcutta, filed the following despatch to his paper on the subject:

"In reply to the Chinese project of a road from Hodeida port to Sana'a, which is nearing completion, USA offered Point-4 aid of the value of $20,000,000 to build a highway running down the length of the country from Sana'a to Taez and then on to the port of Mokka. The Imam recently asked Point-4 to stop this work for three reasons.

"He mentioned procrastination in getting the work started, a not unusual phenomenon in Point-4 programmes. He also disliked US attempts to import their construction equipment through Aden, with which Yemen has a territorial dispute rather than through his own port of Hodeida. And, finally, the Americans wanted to start the road at a point, which was, for the Imam, suspiciously near the disputed Aden frontier.

"In an effort to recover lost ground, the US administrators showed increased activity with Yemeni Government officials and this roused the Imam's suspicions to such an extent that for 24 hours the US Charge d'Affaires was on the point of being ordered out of the country.

"Since Yemen is the scene of a close tussle between USA on the one side and Russia and China on the other, the former's loss will probably be the latter's gain. But the advantage will possibly go more to Russia than to China, for the Chinese have recently blotted their copy-book by spreading atheistic ideas through the medical unit attached to their road project. When he heard of this, the Imam sent them a stern warning and a threat of expulsion for future offenders."

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3088:YEM:A, 3173:YEM:A]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

A. Demand For Information To UN From Portugal About Goa And Other Portuguese Colonies: The Soviet Union, the East European countries, Yugoslavia and a number of countries belonging to the Afro-Asian Group, in communications to UN on July 26, demanded that Portugal should be asked to submit information to UN about Goa and other Portuguese colonies as per the obligations under the UN Charter.

The subject had come up for discussion at the last session of UN, but Portugal took the stand that these colonies were not non-self-governing territories, about which UN had to be supplied information, and insisted that they were parts of Metropolitan Portugal.

Another country in the same position as Portugal is Spain, and France has also made similar claims in regard to Algeria.

The communications from the Soviet Union and other countries were in reply to a UN Assembly resolution inviting member-nations to submit their opinions on the principles involved.

These views would be taken into account by a Committee of six countries consisting of UK, USA and the Netherlands (members transmitting information) and Mexico, Morocco and India (non-administering members).

The Committee would meet in September, 1960 to formulate its recommendations.

Latin America is divided on the issue and the United Kingdom, in its reply, has taken an intermediate position.

Portugal, in its reply, contended that if the Afro-Asian position was accepted, the way would be open for "intervention by UN in the domestic affairs of member-States".

Ghana, in its reply, however, referred to the flight to Ghana of increasing numbers of political refugees from Angola, and warned the international community that the continued suppression of these movements (in the colonial territories) for independence would lead to explosions such as have occurred elsewhere and might even lead to conflict.

From among the Latin American countries, Brazil, the only Portuguese-speaking State, said that it was "within the exclusive competence of a member-State to determine whether a territory is or is not non-self-governing".

The Dominican Republic, under dictatorial rule, thought that the information to be supplied under the UN Charter was confined to "matters of a technical nature relating to economic, social and educational conditions" and not political, as demanded by the Afro-Asian Group.

On the other hand, Mexico, in the course of a lengthy reply, declared that the colonial system was incompatible with a true international society. She suggested that the question whether the claim of a State to be inter-continental was legitimate or not should be determined on the basis of two essential principles—self-determination and full equality.

The French position was the same as that of Brazil. France said: "The French Government considers that the manner in which Article E of the Charter is applied falls within the competence solely of the State responsible for the administration of the territories concerned."

But the United Kingdom took an intermediate position. The phrase "non-self-governing territory", she said, defied precise analysis. "The need for a commonsense approach becomes apparent not only because of the impossibility of precise definition but also because there are so many different concepts of self-government. The United Kingdom, therefore, suggests that the Committee might accept the principle that where an area is distinct geographically and ethnically, it should, for practical purposes, be regarded as self-governing and, therefore, excluded from the scope of Chapter XI of the UN Charter if it fulfils one of the two conditions set out below:

"(a) The first case is that in which the people of an outlying area have generally the same political rights as people of the member-State itself. The United Kingdom suggests as a general rule that if it can be said that the people of an outlying area possess generally the same political rights as the people of the member-State, the areas should be recognized as outside the scope of Chapter XI.

"(b) The United Kingdom suggests that where the people of an outlying area do not enjoy the same political rights as the people of the member-State itself, it should still be possible to recognize it as outside the scope of Chapter XI provided both the following conditions are met: (i) the area should have its own local institutions of Government with substantial self-government in internal affairs; and (ii) the people of the area, acting directly or through their chosen representatives, should freely accept this status."

The Soviet Union said that the prime duty of United Nations was to "contribute to the speediest attainment of independence by the colonial territories and thus secure the implementation of the principles and purposes set forth in the UN Charter."

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2985:AOA:A]

B. Conference On Oceanographic Research: An International Conference on Oceanographic Research opened in Copenhagen on July 11 under the auspices of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). It ended on July 18.

The purpose of the 33-nation meeting was to open ways of co-operating to achieve a systematic exploration of the resources of the sea through surveys and other methods.

As one of their early actions, the delegates agreed in principle to recommend the creation of an Inter-Governmental Oceanographic Commission.

The Commission, which would be set up within the UNESCO framework, would promote concerted action and would aid in the preparation of surveys, exchange of charts, etc.

The recommendation for its establishment is expected to be submitted to UNESCO's General Conference in Paris in November, 1960.

Addressing the conference, as it opened, the UNESCO Director-General, Dr. Vittorino Veronese, observed that at a time when the exploration of outer space was being successfully pursued, it might seem strange that "our knowledge of the oceans should still be so incomplete".

He went on to express the hope that the work of the Conference would contribute "to improving the well-being of all mankind, thanks to the manifold and physically inexhaustible resources of the oceans".

The agenda for the Conference included the possible institution of an international re-

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

search ship, designed to serve as a visible symbol of co-operation, and to assist the participation of small countries which cannot afford their own research vessels.

The agenda was drafted by the UNESCO's International Advisory Committee on Marine Sciences, following the major International Congress on Oceanography which took place at UN headquarters in New York in September, 1959.

As President, the Conference unanimously elected Vice-Admiral A. H. Vedel (Denmark). Seven Vice-Presidents were also elected: Captain R. H. Bagnati (Argentina), Prof. H. Lacombe (France), Dr. D. N. Wadia (India), Mr. A. Matsui (Japan), Prof. A. K. Feodoroy (USSR), Mr. R. N. Quirk (United Kingdom), and Mr. James H. Wakelin Jr. (United States).

Thirty-three countries were represented at the Conference. Representatives of UN, IAEA, FAO, the World Meteorological Organization and the Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization (IMCO) were also present.

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3280:INI:L]

C. British Cabinet Re-shuffle: The British Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Macmillan, named the Earl of Home as Britain's new Foreign Secretary on July 27.

In a Cabinet re-shuffle announced on that day (July 27), Mr. Macmillan appointed Mr. Selwyn Lloyd as Chancellor of the Exchequer in place of Mr. Derick Heathcoat-Amory.

Mr. Edward Heath, former Minister of Labour, was appointed Lord Privy Seal, a non-departmental portfolio, with responsibility for answering Foreign Office questions in the House of Commons.

Mr. Duncan Sandys, the former Aviation Minister, was appointed as the new Commonwealth Relations Secretary in place of the Earl of Home.

Mr. Christopher Soames, previously War Minister, was named Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. Peter Thorneycroft was appointed Minister of Aviation in succession to Mr. D. Sandys.

[Mr. Thorneycroft had resigned from the Chancellorship of the Exchequer two years ago after policy differences with the Government on how the country's economic difficulties should be handled.]

Mr. John Hare replaced Mr. Edward Heath as Minister of Labour.

Mr. John Profumo, former Minister of State at the Foreign Office, was made War Minister in place of Mr. Christopher Soames.

Mr. Enoch Powell, who, as a junior Minister had walked out of the Government with Mr. Thorneycroft two years ago, was made Minister of Health in place of Mr. Derek Walker-Smith, who had resigned a few days earlier to return to his career at the Bar.

Viscount Hailsham remained as Minister for Science and became Lord President of the Council, a post occupied by the Earl of Home.

The Opposition Labour Party submitted a motion of censure against the appointment of a Peer (the Earl of Home) as Foreign Secretary.

The Earl of Home, as a Peer of the Realm, cannot report on his foreign policy to the House of Commons but only to the House of Lords.

A similar censure motion debate was held in 1938 after the then Prime Minister, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, had appointed Lord Halifax as Foreign Secretary.

On July 28, the House of Commons gave Mr. Macmillan a vote of confidence over the controversial appointment of the Earl of Home as Foreign Secretary.

The voting was 332 to 220, a Government majority of 112.

The Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Hugh Gaitskell, objected to the appointment on constitutional grounds—the Earl of Home sits in the unelected House of Lords— and because the new Foreign Secretary had been closely associated with the "Munich" Agreement in 1937. (The expression "Munich" stands for appeasement of Hitler).

The Foreign Secretary, he said, should be in the House of Commons where he could be exposed to questioning by the nation's elected members.

Mr. Macmillan defended the appointment and said: "I do not think that mere accident of birth or the fact that he sits in the Lords should debar me from the right to choose the man I want at my side."

He added that he had admired Lord Home's work at the Commonwealth Relations Office and thought him to be "the best man for the job".

Mr. Gaitskell said Lord Home was chiefly known in the period 1931-39 as Parliamentary Private Secretary to the then Prime Minister, Mr. Neville Chamberlain. He went to Munich with Mr. Chamberlain.

It was possible, he said, that since Munich, Lord Home had changed his mind. "But we cannot ignore this altogether. To put in as Foreign Secretary some one so closely identified with that Agreement (the Munich Agreement) at a time when we are still hoping to negotiate an agreement with the Soviet Union seems a trifle unwise."

(The Times, London and The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2970:AOA:F]

D. New Permanent Headquarters Of World Meteorological Organization Opened In Geneva: The new permanent headquarters of the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) were formally opened in Geneva on July 12 at a ceremony which also marked WMO's tenth anniversary year.

The headquarters are situated in a building specially constructed by the Canton of Geneva in the Avenue Giuseppe Motta, near the Palais des Nations. Since 1951, when the WMO Secretariat moved from Lausanne to Geneva, it had been housed in a building offered by the Canton for temporary use.

WMO's 18-member Executive Committee, composed of the Directors of national meteorological services, held a session in the new headquarters during which it considered a number of meteorological questions, including the study of the atmosphere by means of artificial satellites and meteorological problems arising from the introduction of commercial jet aircraft.

(UN Information Centre, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 816:AOA:D, 948:AOA:F]

E. American Synchrotron Accelerates Atomic Particles To Velocity Approaching Speed Of Light: It was announced in Washington on July 31 that the world's most powerful atomic accelerator — at the Brookhaven National Laboratory of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, Long Island — had succeeded in accelerating atomic particles to a velocity approaching the speed of light (186,000 miles per second).

The US Atomic Energy Commission said that on July 29 the new synchrotron at the Brookhaven Laboratory was turned on full power, and for a few minutes, a beam of particles with energy slightly more than 30,000 million electron volts was produced. The particles, the cores of hydrogen atoms, attained a velocity estimated at more than 99.9 per cent that of light.

[An electron volt measures the excitation of an atom and refers to the charge of a single electron.]

The new accelerator, officially known as an Alternating Gradient Synchrotron, had been under construction for five years. It cost about $30,000,000.

It would be used to smash protons, which constitute the core of hydrogen atoms and aid scientists in their search for an answer to the riddle of the composition of the universe.

In a statement issued on August 1, the US Atomic Energy Commission emphasized, however, that it had not yet produced a "usable" beam of protons but had merely demonstrated an ability to reach 30,000 million electron volts.

Until July 29, the world's most powerful accelerator was that of the European Committee for Nuclear Research at Neyrin, near Geneva. It had reached 28,000,000 electron volts.

(The Statesman, Calcutta)

[Prev. ref. 3174:AOA:E]

F. US Attempt To Fire A One-Ton Space Capsule Fails: American officials at Cape Canaveral said on July 29 that an attempt earlier in the day (July 29) to fire a one-ton space capsule through the Earth's atmosphere and bring it back ended in "something catastrophic" — possibly an explosion.

The Director of the Project Mercury (under which the capsule was fired), Mr. Robert Gilruth, said that there was practically no chance of finding the capsule afloat in the ocean.

The capsule was designed to carry a future US astronaut into orbit, and this was the first time that a production version had been sent up by an Atlas, America's longest-range missile.

There was no live creature in the cone-shaped capsule, which should have landed 1,500 miles along the Atlantic missile range north-west of Antigua, 20 minutes after launching. It vanished into rain clouds and, after 65 seconds, radio contact was lost.

Mr. Gilruth said: "If a man had been riding in the capsule, it would have carried a 16-foot escape tower that could have rocketed him away from the exploding missile."

(The New York Times)

[Prev. ref. 3457:AOA:C]

Printed and published by Mrs. D. B. Samuel at National Printing Works (The Times of India Press), 10, Daryaganj, Delhi. Office Address: 6, Queen Victoria Road, Post Box No. 595, New Delhi (India). Annual Subscription: Inland Rs. 95/-; Foreign Rs. 115/- (both inclusive of annual binder).

Editor: M. Henry Samuel.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

ASIAN RECORDER

August 20—26, 1960

Regd. No. D-727
Vol. VI. No. 34

AFGHANISTAN

A. Grant From Czechoslovakia: It was made known in Kabul on August 4 that the Ministry of Planning had signed an Agreement with the Czechoslovak Government for a grant of £100,000.

The grant is for technical and educational assistance.

(Kabul Radio)

[Prev. ref. 3175:AFG:A]

INDIA

SUMMARY: Lok Sabha Approves Action On Central Government Employees' Strike; Mr. Nehru On Mr. A. Z. Phizo's Activities; First Nuclear Power Station To Be Set Up At Tarapore; Crude Oil Prices Reduced; Retail Cloth Prices Cut; Press Registrar's Report For 1959; Linguistic Minorities' Commissioner's Report; Palai Bank Liquidation.

A. Lok Sabha Debate On Central Government Employees' Strike: The Lok Sabha (House of the People) discussed the President's Ordinance on the Essential Services Maintenance and the Central Government employees' strike of July 12-17 on August 8 and 9 and approved the Government's action thereon.

In the debate, the Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, announced the Government's intention to give its employees a better deal on the question of dearness allowance than the one recommended by the Second Pay Commission and recently accepted by it.

Any increase in the cost of living index by an average of 10 points over a period of 12 months, he said, would be automatically neutralized up to 50 per cent. If necessary, reference might be made for the remaining 50 per cent to "an impartial authority."

He also confirmed the Government's decision to ban strikes in public services, exclude outsiders from civil services, railway and postal employees unions and establish machinery for the settlement of disputes through negotiation, conciliation and, wherever necessary, arbitration.

He devoted a considerable part of his speech to answer an attack by Mr. Naushir Bharucha (Independent) on the President's Ordinance banning the strike. [Mr. Bharucha was moving a resolution jointly tabled by eight members seeking to disapprove the Ordinance.]

The Ordinance, said Pandit Pant, merely embodied the provisions of the Bill which the Lok Sabha had passed in 1957 when the country was faced by only a threat of strike by Posts and Telegraph workers. "If the measure was valid, permissible and necessary in 1957, it was much more so today."

He said that the strike had cost the Exchequer more than Rs. 4 crores. The Government was keen to do its best for the employees. However, the overall situation had to be taken into account and it was, therefore, not right to "take away from Peter even his loin cloth so that Paul may have a tie."

Mr. Nehru's Speech:

Intervening in the debate on August 9, Mr. Nehru castigated the leaders of the strike for showing "astounding and utter irresponsibility."

He described the strike leaders as 'lacking in maturity' and of 'being unaware of the consequences of a strike of this nature'. They were "trying to ride a tiger when they cannot ride a donkey."

He argued that a general strike, by its very nature, could not be anything other than a political strike and that it was only the naivette of the Joint Council of Action of the Central Government Employees' Unions that prevented them from seeing this. If the strike had gone on, it was doubtful if the Government or institutions like Parliament would have survived. The least that the strike leaders could do now was to perform prayaschith (penance) for their action.

Justifying the promulgation of the Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance, he said that if actions leading towards war were taken, then war would follow. It was incumbent on the Government to take every possible action to defeat the strike because, otherwise, the Government 'might as well pack up.'

He also referred to the situation on India's borders and said that many members seemed to be taking a lighthearted view of the country's defence problems. There were outposts where every bit of food and other equipment had to be transported. All this had been imperilled by the strike.

The Central Labour Minister, Mr. G. L. Nanda, strongly refuted suggestions that he had held a different and more sympathetic opinion from the rest of the Cabinet on the demands made on behalf of the employees and explained that far from doing so, he had explained to the strike leaders the limitations of Government and of the evil consequences that would follow a general strike.

Mr. Nath Pai (one of the strike leaders) pointed out that Mr. Nehru, who had said he would go anywhere to negotiate and had indeed gone as far as to invite Mr. Chou En-lai for negotiations, had set his face against negotiations only when it concerned his own employees.

He asked the Treasury benches why, if they held the recommendations of the Pay Commission in great respect as they claimed, the Government had pigeonholed the recommendations of the Law Commission.

He adduced as a reason for the strike the contemptuous attitude of big officials towards lower staff who responded with lack of respect for their seniors.

Replying to the debate, the Central Home Minister, Pandit G. B. Pant, ridiculed statements by members of the Opposition that the strike had been a success and that it had popular support.

Referring to Mr. A. K. Gopalan's (Communist) claim that 1,000,000 workers had taken part in the strike, he said sarcastically that Mr. Gopalan had probably got this information from the Chinese Press.

The motion tabled by Mr. Naushir Bharucha (Ind.) disapproving the promulgation of the Essential Services Maintenance Ordinance was defeated by 258 votes to 38.

Arrests During Strike:

It was stated in New Delhi on August 4 that a large number of Government employees who participated in the general strike from July 12-17 would be governed by the principle of dies non (the day that does not count or cannot be used)—they would not be paid for the days they remained away from work, but there would be no break in service.

Their increments would be postponed and the pension date deferred by the number of days they absented from duty.

Bihar recorded the highest number of arrests—2,608. The next State was Gujerat with 2,067, West Bengal 1,613, Madras 1,572, Maharashtra 1,550, Kerala 1,338, Rajasthan 1,270, Andhra 1,156 and Uttar Pradesh 1,705.

The total number of arrests until July 23, 1960 was 16,339, out of which 12,404 were Government employees. Most of them would lose their pay for the strike period. Four hundred employees were dismissed from service. Although notices for termination of service had been served on 10,318 employees, their cases were being re-considered by the heads of departments.

A large number of volunteers came forward with offers to help run essential services during the strike.

Their numbers were: Punjab 42,287; Kerala 25,000; Delhi 13,000; Bihar 10,000; Andhra 7,006; Rajasthan 3,298; Madras 2,978; Gujerat 2,583; and Mysore 1,034.

Defence Personnel Salaries Raised:

The Defence Minister, Mr. V. K. Krishna Menon, announced in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 4 that the Government of India had taken several decisions on the recommendations made by the Defence Pay Committee which was appointed in November, 1959 to consider the application of the Pay Commission's recommendations to combatants and enrolled non-combatants of the Defence Services.

In the revised pay scales, combatants below the officer rank would receive an increase of Rs. 13.50 a month. The date of effect for the revised pay, dearness allowance and city compensatory allowance would be the same as for civilian Government servants—July 1, 1959.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

He added that the new pay scales would cost the Government between Rs. 8 crores and Rs. 9 crores a year.

The following are the Government's decisions.

Combatants Below Officer Rank: The combatant trained infantry soldier (with three years' service) is at present in receipt of a pay of Rs. 30 per month, plus half the present civilian dearness allowance (i.e. Rs. 22½), making a total of Rs. 52½ per month. The base figure of the revised emoluments of the combatant trained infantry soldier (with three years' service) would be Rs. 66 per month, comprising the existing pay of Rs. 30, two-thirds of the previous civilian dearness allowance of Rs. 45 (i.e. Rs. 30) and a new dearness allowance of Rs. 6. He would thus receive an increase of Rs. 13½ per month. The revised rates of pay of other combatants below officer rank would be worked out on their existing basic pay plus two-thirds of the previous civilian dearness allowance appropriate to it. If the resulting figure contained a fraction, it would be rounded off to the next higher integer if the fraction was 50 nP or more, and to the next lower integer if the fraction was less than 50 nP. These combatants also would be given, in addition, the new dearness allowance at the rate of Rs. 6 per month in the case of those whose pay was less than Rs. 150 per month and at the rate of Rs. 13 per month in the case of those drawing Rs. 150 or above but below Rs. 300 per month (with marginal adjustments for those drawing Rs. 300 or above but up to Rs. 313).

Non-combatants (Enrolled): The existing pay scale of the non-combatants (enrolled) was Rs. 20-1|2-25 (i.e. an increment of Re. 1 after every two years) with further increments of Rs. 2.50 per month after 15 and 20 years of service, plus half civilian dearness allowance (i.e. Rs. 22.50). Non-combatants (enrolled) would now be on a revised pay scale of Rs. 47-1-62 plus a dearness allowance of Rs. 6 per month. The Pay Commission's point-to-point formula for fixation of pay would apply to non-combatants (enrolled). In applying this formula, an ad hoc addition of Rs. 4 would be made to the ceilings on immediate increase in emoluments, to cover the difference between half and two-thirds of the previous civilian dearness allowance.

City Compensatory Allowance and Bad Climate Allowance for Personnel Below Officer Rank: Combatants below officer rank and non-combatants (enrolled) would receive city compensatory allowance and bad climate allowance at two-thirds of the rates admissible to civilians instead of at half the rates as at present.

Provident Fund: Defence Services personnel, like civilian Government servants, would also be required to subscribe to the provident fund. The existing deferred pay scheme for personnel below JCO rank would be discontinued from the date from which the compulsory provident fund scheme takes effect.

Working Hours: There would be no change in the present working hours of members of the Defence Services.

Public Holidays: The reduction of the number of public holidays to 16 in a year, which had been made in the case of civilian Government servants, would equally apply to the Defence Services personnel.

Leave: No change would be made in the quantum of casual leave and leave entitlement in general applicable to Defence Services personnel.

Pensions: While the present procedure on the Defence side in regard to withdrawal of pension would continue, the circumstances in which this might be done would be the same as those recommended by the Pay Commission in respect of Civilian pensioners. When the total period of qualifying service exceeded completed years by six months or more, an additional benefit of half a year's pension would be allowed for the purpose of determining the quantum of pension.

Railway Personnel Pay Scales Revised:

The Railway Board announced on August 5 that nearly 12,00,000 Railway employees would hereafter receive approximately Rs. 10 crores per annum more as emoluments, according to the revised pay scales.

These higher emoluments, it said, were in addition to Rs. 6 crores already granted to them as interim relief in 1957 on the recommendations of the Pay Commission.

The new pay scales would take effect from July 1, 1959 instead of November 1, 1959 and the arrears amounting to nearly Rs. 11 crores would be paid "wholly in cash." The earlier decision that the arrears for July-November, 1959 would be credited to the provident fund had been cancelled.

As a general rule, no employee drawing Rs. 1,100 or over would receive any monetary benefit as a result of the revised pay scales. Small re-adjustments were made in the case of the other gazetted officers whose present starting salaries range from Rs. 275 to Rs. 600.

On the other hand, the revised pay scales would give higher minimum and maximum salaries, higher rates of increment and substantial increased retirement benefits to all the 7,00,000 Class IV and 5,00,000 Class III railwaymen.

The bulk of the existing dearness allowance in the case of those whose revised salaries were below Rs. 300 and the whole of it in the case of all others had been merged into pay in the new scales. In future, separate dearness allowance would continue to be paid only to employees whose revised pay was below Rs. 300. Those drawing revised salaries below Rs. 150 would receive a dearness allowance of Rs. 10 per month, while those drawing salaries of Rs. 150 and above but below Rs. 300 in revised terms would receive a dearness allowance of Rs. 20 per month with marginal adjustments being made up to employees drawing Rs. 320.

Since retirement benefits were calculated on basic pay, the merger of dearness allowance into pay would increase the retirement benefits of all railwaymen drawing salaries up to the gazetted senior scale level. In the case of 500,000 Class IV employees in the lowest pay scales, their retirement benefits would go up by as much as 50 per cent. These will go up in varying percentage in the case of other employees, the benefit being the largest at the lowest level. The cost of the additional benefit in the shape of Government contribution to the employees' provident fund would be Rs. 3 crores per year.

The Railway Board's orders also covered revised scales of city compensatory and house rent allowance and these allowances would be higher for staff in the lower pay scales.

For instance, a Class IV employee drawing a basic pay of Rs. 30 at present would get a city compensatory allowance of Rs. 5 instead of Rs. 3 as at present in a 'B' class city and an employee drawing Rs. 60 at present would get house rent allowance of Rs. 15 instead of Rs. 10 as at present in a 'B' class city ('B' class cities are those with a population of over 500,000).

Increases in these two allowances would involve an expenditure of about Rs. 1 crore per year.

No change was made in holidays, hours of work or casual leave of running staff.

On the contrary, some Pay Commission recommendations might benefit them. Decision regarding three Saturdays being declared full working days does not affect 90 per cent of railwaymen.

The ultimate increase in the emoluments of each employee would be more than the immediate increase shown above. The ultimate increase in the case of the lowest grade Class IV employees numbering 500,000 would on an average be about Rs. 11 as against the immediate increase of Rs. 5.5.

In the senior scale of gazetted officers, the existing pay scale of Rs. 600-1,150 was changed to the new authorized pay scale of Rs. 700-1,250, benefiting about 1,200 officers who can now go on to a higher maximum salary, unless they had, in the meantime, been promoted to the junior administrative grade.

About 15,000 officers in the junior scale Class I grade of Rs. 350-850 at present were placed in the authorized pay scale of Rs. 400-950. Another 1,100 Class II gazetted officers in the existing pay scale of Rs. 275-800 were placed at Rs. 350-900.

The Railway Board decided on July 8 to give bigger pay packets to about 40,000 of its employees following a new decision to accept another recommendation of the Pay Commission.

This would result in the up-grading of several categories of posts. Among those who would benefit would be drivers, "shunters", train examiners, head clerks, assistant yard masters and laboratory and hospital staff.

The new financial benefits would be in addition to the increase in salary as a result of the general recommendations of the Pay Commission accepted by the Railway Board recently.

About 12,000 drivers would now receive Rs. 15 more every month; 8,000 "shunters" Rs. 5 more; 1,000 "section controllers" Rs. 21 more; and sanitary inspectors Rs. 19 more every month.

Storekeepers and Class IV employees who would also benefit by the upgrading included unskilled workshop labour and laboratory attendants.

The Pay Commission had recommended the up-grading of these categories of posts in view of the qualifications required for the jobs and the special responsibility attaching to them.

Joint Council Of Action Resolution:

In a resolution adopted in New Delhi on July 30, the Joint Council of Action of the Central Government Employees deplored "the proposed ban on strikes by Government employees" and the withdrawal of recognition of unions which participated in the recent strike.

It also expressed concern at the Government's attitude towards its employees and the conviction and dismissal of a large "number of those" who participated in the strike.

It expressed the view that persistence by the Government in these measures, including the proposed ban on strikes, would inevitably lead to the creation of an atmosphere of antagonism and bitterness and will affect the efficiency of the services."

It, therefore, urged the Government to restore normalcy in the services by taking back all employees, including those convicted in connexion with the strike. [According to the Council, 50,000 employees are under suspension.]

The Council also ratified the decision taken on July 16 by Mr. S. Guruswamy and other representatives of the employees' unions "who were free and available at Delhi" to call off the strike. The decision, it added, was "taken according to the best judgment, and independently without any pressure from any source."

(The Times of India and The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3473:INI:A]

B. Mr. Nehru On Mr. A. Z. Phizo's Activities In Britain: The Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, told the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

August 4 that the Government of India had finally decided not to demand the extradition of Mr. A. Z. Phizo, the rebel Naga leader, from Britain and to allow him "to live there in peace if he wants to."

He said that it was "legally doubtful" whether Mr. Phizo could be extradited. Moreover, such extradition was "neither desirable nor necessary."

When some Opposition members demanded that the "fugitive from law be brought back," Mr. Nehru explained that any extradition would "involve a petty trial in UK." It was all "very complicated."

He added that practically no one in Britain was interested in Mr. Phizo and in what he had to say on the Naga question. His recent news conference in London had proved "almost a total failure". It was not for India to revive interest in Mr. Phizo.

Answering a question by Prof. Hiren Mukherjee (Communist), he said that it was not quite correct to say that Britain was "encouraging Mr. Phizo in any sense." It could not, however, prevent him "forcibly from holding a news conference." India had no fear of any disclosure by Mr. Phizo as it had nothing to hide. Mr. Phizo's list of so-called atrocities by Indian security forces in Nagaland, distributed at his London news conference, contained "baseless charges."

He confirmed that about two weeks earlier he had received a cable from Mr. Phizo asking for "safe conduct" for him to visit New Delhi for talks on what he had described as a 'cease-fire' in Nagaland. He had proposed an Indian-Naga Public Commission to inquire into allegations of atrocities and wanted to discuss the constitutional future of Nagaland without prejudice to the existing basic positions of either side.

He added that he had informed Mr. Phizo that he (Mr. Nehru) could not see him because of the conditions stipulated by him and the "reckless allegations" made by him against the Indian Government and the Army.

(The Times of India, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3463:INI:B]

C. Nuclear Power Station To Be Set Up At Tarapore: The Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, announced in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 10 that India's first nuclear power station would be located at Tarapore, on the west coast in the Thana district of Maharashtra.

It was further proposed, he added, to include two more nuclear power stations in the Third Five-Year Plan of the same capacity—150 megawatts, capable of being doubled later.

Another important announcement he made referred to the Government's proposal to set up in the Third Plan period two inter-university atomic centres—one in the North and the other in the South—to provide facilities for atomic research for scientists in the universities of the two regions. Each centre would have its own reactors.

The Tarapore nuclear power station would be completed in four years. Though located in Maharashtra, it would supply power to Gujerat in equal measure. It was proposed to set up a committee of representatives of Gujerat, Maharashtra and the Atomic Energy Department for this purpose.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3464:INI:C]

D. Consumer Price Index: According to the International Labour Office statistics, the rise in consumer price index in India has been markedly less during the last seven years as compared to many other countries.

A study of the consumer price indices (all groups) of 68 countries with 1953 as the base year revealed that in 38 countries, the indices had risen higher than in India where the index stood at 115 in January, 1960.

The indices were prepared on the basis of prices in certain localities or towns, mainly capitals of these countries.

A study of the indices of the industrially advanced countries of the world indicated that India's index stood a little higher than in Japan, USA and Canada, while it stood at a lower level than in France, UK and Yugoslavia.

In 10 Asian countries, the indices were higher than in India. They went up to 362 in South Korea and 358 in Indonesia. In other countries, the indices stood at: Laos (204—March, 1959), Iran (163—September, 1959) Israel (142), South Viet-Nam (132) and Cambodia (147).

The indices were at a lower level in Japan at 112 and Burma at 107.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3304:INI:F]

E. Crude Oil Prices Reduced—No Supplies Of Russian Crude Oil: The Minister for Mines and Fuel, Mr. K. D. Malaviya, told the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 8 that the Government of India had dropped negotiations with the Soviet Union for the import of crude oil for the time being.

He said that the Caltex Oil Company had informed the Government on August 6 that it too had decided to reduce the price of crude oil, falling in line with the other two oil companies in India—Burmah-Shell and Stanvac. The actual reduction announced by these companies would amount to more than 11 per cent of the previous price of crude oil imported by them for refining.

Asked how far the reduction in crude oil prices, announced by the three oil companies, would be reflected in the consumer prices of petroleum products, he said that all the three companies had declared an equal reduction in the prices of crude oil. It was, however, not yet clear how the reduction would be reflected in the prices of refined products. No clear picture was also available so far about the overall reduction in the cost of crude oil imported by the refining firms and the foreign exchange savings.

About the Russian crude oil, he said that the Soviet Union had offered to supply crude oil to India for refining. The Government of India negotiated with the Soviet Union on the quality and quantity of the oil to be supplied and the prices. At one stage, there was a possibility of purchasing the oil. Subsequently, however, on inquiry, the Government found that it was not necessary at this stage to purchase crude oil from the Soviet Union because, first, there was no refinery to refine it, and, secondly, the installed capacity of refineries was such that for a few more years refining of additional quantity could not be undertaken. "Therefore, after considering all these facts we decided not to purchase any crude oil from USSR".

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3426:INI:B]

F. Cloth Retail Prices Cut By 10 Per Cent: The Chairman of the Indian Cotton Mills Federation, Mr. Kishnaraj M. D. Thackersey, announced at a news conference in Bombay on August 7 that there would immediately be a 10 per cent cut in the retail prices of the varieties of cloth which have been in short supply.

The effect of the reduction, he said, would be felt by the fourth week of August, 1960. The reduction would be brought about by an increase in the direct sale of cloth to retailers who undertook to sell the cloth at listed prices and to display prominently the revised price lists. Prices would also be reduced in retail shops directly controlled by the mills.

The total production of cloth of all varieties, he added, had not fallen this year but had remained steady. It was 2,445 million yards in the first six months of 1959 and 2,451 million yards during the corresponding period of the current year. There was, however, a steep fall in the production of coarse and lower medium varieties. This had occasioned a 40 per cent rise in the prices of wearable varieties of coarse and medium cloth, and a 50 per cent rise in the prices of non-wearable varieties, such as canvas and dasuties, consumed in industries.

The only way to curb this rise was to distribute a higher proportion of cloth in short supply among retailers who would agree to sell cloth at prices to be stipulated by the mills. The new prices would be 10 per cent lower than the current ones.

Since October, 1959, when cotton prices began to rise, he said, there had been nearly a 24 per cent rise in the cost of manufacture of coarse cloth, 2½ per cent of which was accounted for by the higher cotton prices and over two per cent by higher wages. In the lower medium varieties, the total increase in the cost of manufacture was 21 per cent and in higher medium 18 per cent. The price reduction now being effected would leave a margin enough to meet the higher production costs.

However, in the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 8, the Central Commerce and Industry Minister, Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri, expressed dissatisfaction with the proposed reduction of 10 per cent in the textile prices announced by the Indian Millowners' Federation.

Indian Cotton Mills' Federation Decision:

The Committee of the Indian Cotton Mills' Federation, which considered the cloth price situation in Bombay on August 11, prescribed a ceiling for wholesale prices of various types of cloth and urged the cotton mills to step up the production of varieties now in short supply.

It called upon the industry not to charge more than 27½ per cent over the October, 1959 contract prices for coarse cloth, 24 per cent for low medium cloth, 20 per cent for higher medium variety, 12½ per cent for fine cloth and 10 per cent for superfine cloth.

It directed that deliveries to be made henceforward against all outstanding contracts should also be made at prices not higher than those prescribed regardless of the contract prices.

(The Times of India, New Delhi and Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 2711:INI:O]

G. Press Registrar's Report For 1959: The Press Registrar's Annual Report for 1959 was presented to the Lok Sabha (House of the People) by the Central Minister for Information and Broadcasting, Dr. B. V. Keskar, on August 11.

On December 31, 1959, it said, there were 7,651 newspapers (including periodicals) in the country as compared to 6,918 in 1958 and 5,932 in 1957. An overall increase in circulation of 11.2 per cent was recorded in 1959 as compared to 8.8 per cent in 1958 and .99 per cent in 1957. Daily newspapers recorded an increase in circulation of 13.7 per cent.

Newspapers in English had the largest circulation of 39,90,000, while Hindi came next with 35,53,000. Tamil papers had a circulation of 12,25,000, Gujerati 11,59,000, Marathi 10,54,000, Urdu 10,47,000, Bengali 9,23,000, Malayalam 8,01,000, and Telugu 6,63,000.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

The Press Registrar's list of leading newspapers showed that there were, in 1959, 42 newspapers with a circulation above 50,000. Of these, three were English dailies and one Tamil daily; and one Sunday edition of an English daily had a circulation of over 1,00,000.

The number of newspapers controlled by chains, groups and multiple units had substantially increased. A significant development was the break-up of some chains into small units. The subsidiary units, however, continued to be under the effective control of the original owners.

In 1959, there were 15 chains, 162 groups and 30 multiple units, 12 of which simultaneously formed part of chains. The number of papers controlled by these chains, groups and multiple units was 102, 423 and 80 respectively. The circulation commanded by them was 23,23,000 for chains, 33,35,000 for groups and 13,49,000 for multiple units.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2864:INI:R]

H. Linguistic Minorities — Commissioner's Second Report: The Commissioner for Linguistic Minorities, in his second report to the President for 1958-59 presented to the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 8, recommended a liberal policy by the State Governments towards linguistic minorities and rejected the linguistic minorities' demand that the minority language should be a language subject at all stages of education and that the regional language should not be made compulsory.

This demand, which was commonly made, he said, was not in the interests of young students who were going to be permanent residents of the State and had to earn their living there.

In the border areas, he said, if the States followed a liberal policy towards other language groups "so that they do not feel that only a change of boundary line can help them in securing the advantages which were being denied them, it will help in promoting peace and contentment."

A somewhat liberal policy in the beginning would not affect the importance or the growth of the regional language, as, in the course of time, the people in the border areas would, in their own interest, acquire proficiency in the regional language. Then there would be less cause for heart-burning.

Dealing with complaints against compulsory tests in regional languages for admission to science classes, technical and medical institutions where the medium of instruction is English, he said that there was no valid reason why a proficiency test in the regional language should be held as a pre-condition for admission in such institutions.

(The Hindustan Times, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 2688:INI:M]

I. Regional Language Enforced Up To District Level In The Punjab: The Punjab Government announced in Chandigarh on August 10 that it had decided to introduce the regional language (Punjabi or Hindi as the case may be) as the official language up to the district level all over the State with effect from October, 1960.

Disclosing this at a news conference, the State Education Minister, Mr. Amarnath Vidyalankar, said that all officials who were able to do so should use the regional language for official work instead of Urdu. Those officials who were unable to use the regional language might, however, continue to use Urdu for a period of two years. All officials would be required to use the regional language only for official work at and below the district level from October, 1962.

He added that courts under the jurisdiction of the High Court would continue to follow its directives in regard to the official language, but the State Government proposed to take up the question of uniformity with the High Court.

All correspondence within a district and between the district offices and the State headquarters would be in the regional language from October, 1960. Two separate departments for Hindi and Punjabi would be set up. They would begin functioning by October, 1960. There would be separate Directors for Hindi and Punjabi, and a co-ordinating machinery. The head of the Language Department as a whole would watch the progress of the two directorates. He would also ensure that assistance was given to other languages, such as Urdu.

The Directors in charge of Hindi and Punjabi would be under a co-ordinating officer, who might be designated as Director-General.

Replying to a question, he said that English would disappear from courts up to the district level.

(The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3387:INI:Q]

J. Palai Central Bank — Provisional Liquidation Ordered: The High Court of Kerala passed orders in Trivandrum on August 8 on the application of the Reserve Bank of India appointing a provisional liquidator for the Palai Central Bank.

During the previous few days, it was said, there had been a run on the bank and substantial sums had been withdrawn. The affairs of the Bank were such that the Reserve Bank felt that the grant of mere temporary accommodation would not enable the Palai Central Bank to put its house in order.

The application to the High Court, it was stated, was accordingly made in order to protect the interests of the depositors.

The Reserve Bank did not consider that there was any need for a banking scare in Kerala.

The Chief Minister of Kerala, Mr. Pattom Thanu Pillai, issued a statement appealing to the people of the State not to get panicky over the winding up of the Bank.

Mr. Morarji Desai's Statement In Parliament:

The Central Finance Minister, Mr. Morarji Desai, told the Lok Sabha (House of the People) on August 9 that Palai Bank's liabilities of Rs. 8 crores, its "liquid assets"—cash and immediate borrowing capacity—were no more than Rs. 1.5 crores. Thirty-eight per cent of the Bank's advances were "irrecoverable" and another 20 per cent "sticky".

According to Mr. Desai, the Bank's affairs, especially its advances portfolio, had been in bad shape since 1951. Periodic instructions were given to the Bank by the Reserve Bank which were disregarded and conditions worsened. In 1957, the Bank was given further instructions, which also were not obeyed. The Government could then have withdrawn the Bank's licence, but that would have adversely affected the entire banking structure in Kerala. Kerala had the largest number of banks in the country and most of them were greatly dependent on each other for support.

In deciding to ask for the compulsory liquidation of the Palai Central Bank now, he added, the Reserve Bank had taken steps to ensure that other Kerala banks were not affected adversely.

In answer to a question, he said that if there was any evidence against them, the Government would prosecute the Managing Director and other Directors of the Bank.

(The Hindu, Madras and The Statesman, New Delhi)

[Prev. ref. 3244:INI:H, 3386:INI:M]

K. Banking During 1959: According to a Reserve Bank of India statistical survey published on August 4, banking activity in the country during 1959 registered "a further all-round increase."

The survey pointed out that deposits, investments and advances of non-scheduled banks increased during the year reversing the trend of earlier two years, though the number of their offices declined further.

It disclosed that the impressive growth in assets and the marked increase in advances in particular resulted in larger earnings and consequently in the net profits of scheduled banks. The total current operating earnings of Indian scheduled banks rose by Rs. 11.4 crores to Rs. 33.2 crores compared with a rise of Rs. 10 crores in 1958. Their current operating expenses also showed an increase of Rs. 8.1 crores to Rs. 69.2 crores, compared with a rise of Rs. 12.3 crores in 1958. As a result, the net profits of these banks increased by Rs. 3.2 crores to Rs. 13.7 crores in 1959 against a decline of Rs. 2.0 crores to Rs. 10.3 crores in 1958.

As regards foreign scheduled banks, a small decline of Rs. 0.7 crore in the current operating earnings was more than offset by a decline of Rs. 1.2 crores in the current operating expenses, resulting in a small increase in their net profits by Rs. 0.5 crore to Rs. 2.6 crores.

The number of scheduled banks' offices in the Indian Union increased by 291 to 326, compared with a rise of 356 in 1958 and 309 in 1957.

The net increase in the offices of the State Bank of India was 111.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3386:INI:M]

L. Madras Legislature — Governor's Address: In his address to the joint session of the Madras Legislature in Madras on August 5, the State Governor, Mr. Bishnuram Medhi, said that in respect of the language to be used in offices and institutions of the Central Government, the formula of prolonged bilingualism had been accepted, as put forward by the Madras Government in consultation with the leaders of all political parties in the State. That Hindi and English would be used side by side was a matter of satisfaction to the State Government.

The decision on the language to be used in offices and institutions in the State was one for the State Government to take and it had already been declared that Tamil was the official language. Steps were being taken to implement the decision according to a phased programme.

He hoped that the basis of all-party unity, which had strengthened the State Government's stand and ensured a satisfactory settlement of the vexed issue, would be preserved.

Among other points made by the Governor was the statement that most of the physical targets set in the Second Five-Year Plan had been achieved and even exceeded by about Rs. 29 crores; that the State Government had drawn the attention of the planners at the Centre about the need for a balanced regional dispersal of new industries by locating in

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

Madras State numerous fabricating industries based on new steel.

He then gave a detailed picture of industrial development in the State and said that their major endeavour should be to establish a steel unit, making use of Salem iron-ore and Neyveli lignite on which East German experts had given an encouraging report. A committee of the Central Government was already going into the question of including it in the Third Five-Year Plan.

Erection work on the fertilizer factory at Neyveli was progressing satisfactorily. The share structure of the new paper industry in Mettur had been finalized. A licence had been obtained for a 10,000-ton aluminium plant at Salem and the promoters were now settling details of collaboration with an Italian firm. Preliminary arrangements to establish a raw film plant with French participation near Ootacamund were going on smoothly.

A surgical instruments plant was planned with Russian participation as also an earth-moving machinery plant with US participation and a fertilizer plant with British participation.

(The Hindu, Madras)

[Prev. ref. 2504:INI:G]

IRAN

A. Air Agreement With India: An Agreement between India and Iran for the operation of air services between the two countries was signed at Tehran on August 3.

Mr. T. N. Kaul, Ambassador of India, signed on behalf of the Government of India and Mr. Abbas Aram, Minister for Foreign Affairs, signed on behalf of the Government of Iran.

The Agreement, a Government of India official Press Note said, was designed to promote the development of air traffic between India and Iran.

Under it, the airline to be designated by the Government of India is entitled to touch Iran at Tehran or Abadan and proceed, if desired, to points beyond Iran, in both directions.

Similarly, the airline designated by the Government of Iran is entitled to touch India at Delhi or Bombay and proceed, if desired, to points beyond India, in both directions.

(The Times of India, Bombay)

[Prev. ref. 3384:INI:C]

ASIA OUTSIDE ASIA

SUMMARY: Resumption Of 10-Nation Disarmament Conference—New Russian Plan—Western Objections—Break-up Of Conference—New Western Plan—Statements By Mr. N. Khruschev, US Government, Mr. Harold Macmillan, Mr. D. Hammarskjoeld, Mr. Nehru And Col. G. A. Nasser.

A. Resumption Of 10-Nation Disarmament Conference: The 10-nation Disarmament Conference, which was recessed on the eve of the abortive 'Summit' Conference on April 30 in the hope of guidance from 'Summit' leaders, was resumed in Geneva on June 7.

The Soviet delegate, Mr. Valerian Zorin, presented the new Soviet disarmament plan, which was released in Moscow on June 3 (see below).

While presenting the new Soviet plan, Mr. Zorin rejected President Eisenhower's "Open Skies" proposal "as international espionage" and said that spy-plane photography only helped aggressors.

In the past, the Western countries had always argued at great length about the necessity of controls in any disarmament programme, and, in the new Russian plan, he said, the readiness of the Soviet Union to have controls with disarmament had been clearly shown. Any international control organization should be within the framework of UN and should come into existence with a Disarmament Treaty.

Speaking for the West, the US delegate, Mr. Frederick Eaton, said that some clarification of various aspects of the Soviet proposals would be necessary.

At a news conference later in the day, Mr. Zorin was asked whether the Soviet Union still insisted that agreement should be reached on an entire disarmament programme before any control measures were put into effect.

He replied: "Partial measures of control or otherwise will not save the situation; a more radical solution to the problem is needed."

The text of the new Soviet disarmament proposals was circulated by UN on June 3 as an official document at the request of the Permanent Soviet Representative at UN, Mr. Arkady Sobolev.

Sources at UN Headquarters described the proposals as "a clear attempt by Russians to come closer to the Western position."

New Soviet Plan:

The Soviet disarmament proposals as released in Moscow on June 3 and presented in the 10-nation Disarmament Conference in Geneva on June 7 were as follows:

"On September 19, 1959, the Soviet Government put forward for consideration by UN a proposal for general and complete disarmament. It submitted that proposal proceeding from a firm conviction that the complete disarmament of all States and elimination of all means of war constitute the most efficient and—under the existing conditions—the most practicable way to prevent the out-break of a rocket and nuclear war, so disastrous for nations, and to ensure a lasting peace on the earth.

"The balance of power obtained at present in the world when an aggressor is not able to unleash a war against peace-loving States with impunity, the destructive power, without parallel in the history of mankind, of the modern weapons which are able to effect a quick annihilation of whole States, the feasibility of almost instantaneous delivery of such weapons to any point on the globe—all these factors make war as a means of solving international arguments an obvious madness. The peaceful co-existence of States with different social systems, which the Soviet Union, as well as other Socialist countries, have always been championing, is a real fact. Peaceful co-existence, however, cannot be durable enough and peace cannot be considered to be reliably secured as long as the arms race is being continued, as long as States have at their disposal the means to attack other countries with lightning speed and possess gigantic stockpiles of weapons, nuclear weapons included.

"The Soviet Government, invariably upholding its proposal for general and complete disarmament as one consistent with the great goal of ensuring a durable peace on earth, in which all nations barring none are interested, at the same time is prepared to take into consideration any constructive observations and wishes of other participants in the negotiations that are conducive to the achievement of an Agreement on the practical realization of disarmament.

"In the course of the negotiations, an opinion was expressed by some Powers, particularly by France, that disarmament should be started with the prohibition and destruction of the means of delivering to targets nuclear, chemical and biological weapons such as war missiles, military aircraft, naval vessels and so on, and at the same time the necessity for the simultaneous liquidation by States of their military bases on foreign territories was taken into account.

"The Government of USSR is still of the opinion that the order of carrying out disarmament measures stipulated in its proposal of September 18, 1959 is fully consistent with the goal of the practical realization of general and complete disarmament. Nevertheless, trying to facilitate in every possible way an early achievement of Agreement on this problem in the interests of ensuring a lasting and durable peace among all States, the Soviet Government is again prepared to take steps forward to meet the Western Powers and to agree on a different sequence of carrying out disarmament measures, if that sequence is more acceptable to the Western Powers.

"Being an ardent champion of the earliest deliverance of mankind from the threat of a rocket and nuclear war, the Soviet Government proposes that Agreement be reached to begin the process of general and complete disarmament by the prohibition and destruction, under international control, at the first stage, of all means of carrying nuclear weapons to targets with the simultaneous liquidation of military bases on foreign territories.

"When war missiles of all ranges, military aircraft, submarines and surface naval vessels, artillery capable of firing nuclear shells and all other means of delivering to targets weapons of mass destruction are eliminated and States do not have armed forces and military installations beyond their national borders, one country's attack against another with atomic and hydrogen weapons will become practically impossible. Being desirous to reach this goal, the Soviet Union expresses its willingness to begin disarmament by the destruction of all means of delivering nuclear weapons to targets, notwithstanding its generally recognized superiority in the most modern and effective means of that kind, namely, in inter-continental ballistic missiles.

"In this case, during the next, second stage of the disarmament programme, such measures could be carried out as banning nuclear, biological and chemical weapons, destroying all their stocks and terminating their further manufacture. The menace of a nuclear war in whatever form would be removed for good. At the same time, a considerable reduction of armed forces and conventional armaments of States would be carried out.

"The third stage would mark the completion of general and complete disarmament, the disbanding of all armies, war ministries, general staffs, the abolition of military service and of military training of the youth, the complete cessation of appropriating funds for military purposes. It is proposed that all this disarmament programme shall be implemented on the basis of an international Treaty in the course of a definite period of time—within four years or during another period agreed upon, and under effective international control.

"In the course of discussing the question of general and complete disarmament in international bodies, a great deal of attention has been drawn to the question of measures to be taken for ensuring the peace and maintaining international law and order in the relations between States in conditions of general and complete disarmament. The Soviet Government proposes that the States, parties to the Treaty, should jointly examine this question in detail so that in the course of the implementation of the third and final stage there would be taken necessary measures in accordance with the UN Charter for the maintenance of peace in conditions of general and complete disarmament, including the obligation by States to place, when necessary, police (militia) detachments at the disposal of the Security Council to ensure the keeping of the peace. Naturally, such police (militia) detachments should be used exclusively for the maintenance of peace among nations and not for the suppression of peoples who are struggling for their independence and social progress, and not for interference in the internal affairs of States.

CC-0. In Public Domain. Gurukul Kangri Collection, Haridwar

Digitized by Arya Samaj Foundation Chennai and eGangotri

"It is proposed that all disarmament measures be implemented under strict international control from beginning to end. For this purpose, the parties to the Treaty shall set up an international control organization whose scope of competence will include all disarmament measures and will expand as these measures will be assuming a still more comprehensive and far-reaching nature. In accordance with the above-stated, the Soviet Government submits the draft basic provisions of a Treaty on general and complete disarmament.

Provisions Of A Treaty On General And Complete Disarmament:

"The Governments of the States, members of the 10-Nation Committee on Disarmament, set up in 1959, being guided by the resolution of the 14th session of the UN General Assembly of November 20, 1959 on general and complete disarmament, in the interests of saving mankind from the threat of a new war and in the interests of securing stable and inviolable peace on earth, recognize it as necessary to proceed without delay to the practical solution of the task of general and complete disarmament, and have resolved to this end to work out a Treaty on general and complete disarmament, which will include the following basic provisions:

"(1) General and complete disarmament envisages:

"The disbandment of all armed forces of States and the prohibition of their re-establishment in any form whatever;

"The prohibition and destruction of all stockpiles of and the cessation of the manufacture of all kinds of armaments, including atomic, hydrogen, chemical, bacteriological and other types of weapons of mass destruction;

"The destruction of all means for delivering the weapons of mass destruction to targets;

"The liquidation of all kinds of military bases, the withdrawal and disbandment of all foreign troops stationed in the territory of any State;

"The abolition of all kinds of military service of citizens;

"The termination of military training of the population and the abolition of all military educational institutions;

"The abolition of war ministries, general staffs and their local agencies, as well as all other military and para-military establishments and organizations;

"The discontinuance of the appropriation of funds for military purposes whether from State budgets or from public organizations and private individuals.

"After the completion of general and complete disarmament, the States shall retain at their disposal only strictly limited contingents of police (militia), the size of which shall be agreed upon for each country and which shall be equipped with small fire-arms and intended for the maintenance of internal order and the protection of personal security of citizens.

"(2) General and complete disarmament shall be implemented by all States at one and the same strictly defined time which shall be agreed upon; and the disarmament process shall be carried out gradually, by three consecutive stages, having in mind that at no stage shall a State obtain military advantages, flowing from the course of disarmament, over other States. For the consideration of the question of other States joining the Agreement on general and complete disarmament, a conference shall be held with all countries participating.

"(3) All disarmament measures, from beginning to end, shall be carried out under strict and effective international control, that is:

"(a) Immediately after the signing of the Treaty, a Preparatory Commission shall be set up, whose task will be to implement practical measures for establishing an international organization of control over general and complete disarmament;

"(b) A control organization shall be set up within the framework of UN when the Treaty comes into force. It shall consist of all States, parties to the Treaty, and their representatives shall meet periodically for conferences to consider questions related to the carrying out of effective control over disarmament. The Conference shall elect a Control Council consisting of permanent and non-permanent members, which shall have its own local agencies. The Control Council shall consist of representatives of socialist countries, representatives of States that participate now in the Western military and political alliances, and representatives of neutral countries. Barring cases specially agreed upon, decisions in the Control Council shall be taken by a two-thirds majority vote on questions of essence, and on questions of procedure—by a simple majority vote.

"(c) The Control Council shall effect practical guidance of the control system, work out instructions as well as make timely analyses and processing of the reports it shall receive. States shall submit the information on their armed forces and armaments to the Control Council.

"(d) The Control organization shall have in all countries (parties to the Agreement) its own personnel, recruited on the international basis with the principle of just geographical distribution taken into consideration and in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty. The Control organization shall place its inspectors on the territories of States in such a way as to enable them to start exercising their functions the moment States begin the implementation of measures in the field of disarmament. Each party to the Treaty shall undertake to ensure timely and unrestricted access to inspectors and inspection teams within its territory to any point where disarmament measures to be verified will be effected, or to any area where on-the-spot inspection of such measures will be carried out. With this purpose, parties to the Treaty shall, at the expense of the Control organization, make all the necessary means of transportation available to the personnel of the Control organization for travelling within their territory.

"(e) The Control organization personnel shall enjoy on the territory of each party to the Treaty such privileges and immunity as are necessary for independent and unrestricted implementation of control over the fulfilment of the Disarmament Treaty.

"(f) All expenditures of the Control organization shall be covered at the expense of the States, parties to the treaty. The scale of the contributions of States shall be fixed in the text of the Treaty on general and complete disarmament. The Control organization shall, at each stage, have powers with regard to the scope and nature of measures in the field of disarmament.

"The basic measures in the disarmament held are distributed by three stages of the programme of general and complete disarmament in the following way:

The first stage:

"(1) All means of delivering nuclear weapons shall be removed from the armed forces of States and destroyed, and their manufacture shall be stopped. They include: strategic and tactical missiles, pilotless planes of all types, all military aircraft capable of delivering nuclear weapons; surface naval vessels that can be used as carriers of nuclear weapons; submarines of all classes and types; all artillery systems as well as other means that can be used as carriers of atomic and hydrogen weapons.

"(2) All foreign troops shall be withdrawn from alien territories to within their national frontiers. Foreign military bases and depots of all kinds, both relinquished after the withdrawal of troops and alternate ones, shall be abolished.

"(3) From the very beginning of the first stage and until after the final destruction of all means of delivering nuclear weapons, the putting into orbit or the placing in outer space of special devices, the crossing by naval vessels of the limits of their territorial waters and the flights beyond their national territory by military aircraft capable of carrying weapons of mass destruction, shall be prohibited.

"(4) The launching of rockets shall be carried out solely for peaceful purposes and in accordance with predetermined and mutually agreed criteria and shall be accompanied by agreed measures of verification including the inspection on the sites of launching such rockets.

"(5) States having at their disposal nuclear weapons shall undertake not to transfer such weapons or information necessary for the manufacture thereof to the States which do not possess such weapons. At the same time, the States possessing no nuclear weapon shall undertake to refrain from the manufacture of such weapons.

"(6) Accordingly, States shall reduce their military expenditures.

